TO LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Blondin Is Sentenced For Murder of His Wife

WITHDREW HIS EXCEPTIONS

Intends to Appeal For Executive Clemency Through Medium of Newly Discovered Evidence—Trial Has Cost About $25,000

Boston, Jan. 1.—Without a quiver or a motion to indicate that he realized the position in which he was placed, Joseph W. Blondin, convicted of murder in the second degree of killing his wife, received his sentence of life imprisonment in state prison from Judge Stevens yesterday afternoon, after having formally waived the exceptions taken at the trial by his counsel.

The court room was crowded with spectators when, shortly after 4 o'clock, the name of Blondin was called by Clerk Manning and the familiar form soon appeared in the door of the detention room. Attorney General Parker and Assistant District Attorney McLaughlin, the prosecuting officers, were in attendance, as were the prisoner's counsel, Messrs. Morrison and Owens. When the prisoner had entered the cage, Judge Stevens said to Mr. Morrison, "Do I understand that the prisoner desires to waive his exceptions and take sentence now?"

"Yes, your honor," replied Mr. Morrison."

"Let him do it himself in open court so that the record may be made," said the judge to Clerk Manning, handing him the papers.

"Do you waive your exceptions, Blondin?" the clerk asked.

"Yes, sir," responded the prisoner in a firm voice.

Attorney General Parker then arose and addressed the court briefly, saying that the commonwealth waived for sentence, and that as the law provided a life sentence for murder in the second degree there was no need of saying more.

Then at the command of the clerk, Blondin stood up and the former read the sentence of the court to life imprisonment.

Blondin took his sentence coolly, and when it had been pronounced walked sprightly from the cage to the dock and before he was taken to prison held a short conversation with his counsel in the detention room.

It is understood that Blondin's counsel intends to appeal to Governor Bates for executive clemency rather than take a chance with a jury again, and he will through the medium of newly discovered evidence endeavor to prove the innocence of Blondin.

The newly discovered evidence relates entirely, it is said, to the trunk in which the government alleged Blondin placed the body of his wife after the awful crime had been committed, and transported it to Chelmsford, where it was dismembered. The girl to whom the trunk belongs, according to the defence, bears the first name of Annie. She had been in the house on Green street where the murder was alleged to have been committed for some time, and on the day that the trunk, the prosecution alleged, was taken from the house at the instigation of Blondin, an expressman left the house with Annie's trunk. As only one trunk was taken from the house that day, the defence feels confident Blondin finally will be freed, the contention now being that no murder was committed at the Green street house.

The conviction of Blondin has cost the state of Massachusetts, the counties of Suffolk and Middlesex, more than $25,000, and it is said when all the bills are paid it will prove to have been one of the most expensive murder cases New England has ever had.

There have been trips to the province of Quebec, to Nova Scotia, to New York state and to various parts of the country by officers hunting for Blondin, which cost a great many hundred dollars, and there is a bill for Professor Wood of Harvard for expert services not yet given out, which will amount to more than all the other experts in the case received. Suffolk and Middlesex counties will each pay half the bill.

Among the smaller items of state police expenses are about $100 in telegrams, $100 for printing circulars and over $100 for postage. In witness fees alone, it is estimated $1200 was spent.

New Plan to Explore Sahara

Paris, Jan. 1.—MM. de Buraux and De Saint-Victor embarked at Marseilles yesterday for Tunis, where they propose to send up two small balloons for the purpose of ascertaining whether the winds which prevail in winter will carry the airships across the Sahara desert. If this experiment is successful the two explorers propose to attempt to cross the unexplored portion of the desert in a balloon.

SETBACK FOR POLICE

In Attempt to Connect Miss Richardson With Purchase of Poison

Concord, N. H., Jan. 1.—The efforts of Chief of Police Sackett of Revere, Mass., to trace the purchaser of half an ounce of arsenic at Green's drug store in Littleton, N. H., on Sept. 10, 1901, brought him to this city last night. Von C. Wheet, a drug clerk in Green's store at the time of the alleged sale, when shown the poison register, told the chief that the initials V. C. W., which appear on the entry of the sale and opposite the name of "Richardson" the supposed purchaser, were not in his writing. He also told Chief Sackett that he had no recollection of making the sale, and furthermore never knew Miss Catherine Richardson.

Chief Sackett arrived from Littleton, where he had secured the register earlier in the day, last night and hunted up Wheet, who has a store here. Wheet examined the book very carefully, and then told the chief that while the initials were his, the writing was different. He told Sackett at the time the sale was made Green had also in his employ at the store Harold Aldrich, 16 years old, who was not supposed to sell any poison.

After their interview last night, neither Sackett nor Wheet would give any opinion as to who could have written the initials.

Decision Legalizing Picketing

Cincinnati, Jan. 1.—Judge Smith handed down a decision yesterday in which he concedes to striking workmen the right to picket a factory when they are seeking to accomplish a lawful purpose and do not in any manner intimidate or coerce non-strikers. Strikers are allowed to have one picket at the Eureka foundry, who may peacefully persuade workmen to leave their employment and advance arguments to workmen if they choose to hear such. If the workmen do not care to meet the picket or listen to his arguments they are not to be molested.

Archduke's Punishment

Montreux, Switzerland, Jan. 1.—Archduke Leopold Ferdinand, brother of the Crown Princess of Saxony, in an interview yesterday, confirmed the report that Emperor Francis Joseph had written to notify him that he had been expelled from the army, deprived of his pension, excluded from Austria and ordered to become the subject of another country. The archduke, however, declared that he had only accepted two proposals, namely, his expulsion from the army and from the Order of the Golden Fleece.

Dramatic Midnight Scene

Cleveland, Jan. 1.—The lights in the Chamber of Commerce were turned out just before midnight last night with the exception of the chamber's emblem in electric lights, which contained the figures 1902. Immediately the 500 men present sang "Auld Lang Syne."

Bill of a Million Uncollectable

Santa Fe, N. M., Jan. 1.—The creditors of Santa Fe county have refused to compromise, at 60 percent, the $1,000,000 debt of the county, one of the principal bondholders declining to enter into the compromise, although all the others had been willing. As the county's taxable assessment is only $2,000,000, the debt is practically uncollectable. It was incurred to aid the building of railroads into Santa Fe.

LITTLETON MYSTERY SOLVED.

Aged Mr. Hartwell Perished Not More Than Half a Mile From Home—No Foul Play.

Littleton, Mass., Jan. 1.—The body of Seth E. Hartwell, the aged Littleton citizen who disappeared from his home here on Christmas day, was found yesterday afternoon in a field not far from his home. The body was discovered at about 3 o'clock by Constable Reed, and in accordance with an arrangement by the selectmen the fact was promptly made known to the community by the ringing of the church bells.

The coroner decided that death was due to exposure to the storm of Christmas night, and that an autopsy would not be needed. The body was taken to his home to await the disposition of relatives.

Hartwell, who was 74 years of age and who lived alone, was missed by the persons who cared for his home on Christmas forenoon. When he was not located as the day passed, and a snowstorm having set in, systematic search was made, but no trace was found. The severity of the storm during the evening caused those who were trying to find the man to give up the effort and it was believed that he had wandered away and perished in the snow. Some, however, thought that he might have gone to Boston by train or team and there was a report that he had been seen in that city.

Constable Reed did not accept this view and daily since Christmas he has prosecuted search about the territory near Hartwell's house. Yesterday, in the corner of a field where a board fence had barred his progress, Reed found the body. The spot was not more than half a mile from where the man had lived, but was in a locality which showed that Hartwell must have been bewildered and had walked about until he fell from exhaustion, and death followed.

Money For Fishing Crew

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 1.—For towing the abandoned Standard oil barge No. 48 to a point where a tugboat picked her up, Captain Davis of the fishing schooner Blanche has received $2500. Each member of the crew of the Blanche was given $79.68. Fire on board the barge, resulting from an explosion, forced the Blanche to drop her. The explosion was caused by one of the crew of the schooner who had been placed on board. He was blown to pieces.

Lockwood, son of a London physician, and at one time a candidate for the clergy in England, confessed himself a thief in the superior court yesterday, and in doing so pleaded so eloquently as well as dramatically for a light sentence that the court postponed final action until today. Lockwood was convicted of stealing $1000 worth of books from the firm by which he was employed.

Wound Up With a Seizure

Portland, Me., Jan. 1.—The Prohibition shrievalty regime in Cumberland county, which came in with the installation of the late Rev. Samuel F. Sheriff Dunn and his seizing force signalized their retirement by seizing 15 barrels of ale in a railroad yard last night.

Perry's Friends to the Rescue

Boston, Jan. 1.—A gathering of colored people last night planned to raise a fund to be used for the defence of George L. O. Perry, the alleged "Jack, the Slugger," who is held in Cambridge jail for the grand jury on the charge of murder of Miss McPhee. Rev. Simon Drew heads the movement, but he did not read, as many expected, an alleged declaration of innocence from Perry.

Victim of Peculiar Accident

Middletown, Conn., Jan. 1.—Herman C. Birdsey, aged 60, a farmer, drove from his home yesterday for the purpose of carrying home his daughter, who is employed in a factory. Some boys coasting down hill crashed into his carriage and he was thrown to the ground. When picked up it was found that his neck had been broken. Death was probably instantaneous.

McLeod, to prison.

PLACED ON FILE.

No Prosecution on One Indictment Against F. E. Betts.

Frederick E. Betts will not be prosecuted, says the Post, on the indictment accusing him of stealing certain certificates of stock of the Adams Express Company which belonged to Mary E. Ross. The defendant has made full restitution, $2500, the value of the stock, and as the woman acknowledges satisfaction the authorities felt no further concern in the matter. District Attorney Stevens placed the indictment on file Wednesday so that ends the prosecution.

Betts was a member of J. M. Fisher & Co., stock brokers. An indictment is pending against him in the United States courts for violation of postal laws.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The other Boston papers will not admit the wisdom of Publisher Munsey's policy of banishing the advertising from the first page of the Boston Journal, and rather than follow in his line are determined to show just how reckless they can be and are giving more of their first pages to advertising than ever before.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ Outside of Boston the police systems of this part of the state are pretty poor. The way in which one man, who went about the suburbs, knocking down women on the streets at night, mangaged to terrorize the public for months with perfect safety to himself tells its own story. The thing might have been as bad today as it ever was, if the state police had not been called in. A smart burglar can operate in the suburbs for months without being caught, unless he puts himself carelessly in the way of arrest.—Boston Advertiser.

The comments of the Waltham Free Press on the above fling are to the point. Few individual members of the Boston police accomplish as much as members of police forces in suburban cities. The Free Press says:

"The self-sufficiency of the editor of the Advertiser in view of the scores of untraceable murders and the hundreds of unpunished minor crimes which have occurred in Boston within his memory and ours is amazing. Man for man, the police officer of the suburbs can easily hold his own with those of Boston. The same issue contained a report of a burglar who robbed a house, chloroformed a girl, and escaped. The very State Police he mentions reside miles away from Boston. He goes on to say that in the suburbs the men in charge go home at 6 P. M., but he fails to say that as a rule they leave behind them a ranking officer who is at the head of the night force. By the way, are Boston's Police Commissioners on duty the whole 24 hours? One might infer such conditions from the Advertiser's conceited editorial."

Monday Evening Club.

The first meeting of the Monday Evening club for the season will be held in the Atlantic Memorial Congregational church next Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Will S. Munro, professor of psychology and pedagogy in the State Normal school at Westfield, will speak on "Crime and its causes." Mr. G. Arthur Gray of Atlantic, will speak on "The life of a commercial traveller." Miss Adelaide Griggs, contralto and Mr. John Manning, pianist are on the musical program.

Voted not to refer to next council.

Councilman Freeman offered amendment, making the date of notes March 1.

The order was then defeated on yeas and nays 10 to 10 as follows:

YEAS—Adams, Elcock, Faxon, Freeman, Hadlock, Newcomb, Nichols, Nickerson, Thompson and Whiton.—10.

NAYS—Bass, Diack, Fallon, Gassett, Hughes, Langelier, Piper, Smith and Stewart—10.

ABSENT—Polk.

NOT VOTING—President Alden.

Later the adverse note on the nuisance order was reconsidered, when it was referred to the next City Council.

FREIGHT RAILWAY.

A public hearing was held on the petition of the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. for a location for a freight railroad from the shipyard to the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R.

Thomas A. Watson, president of the company, said the road was absolutely necessary if we are to increase our business. We are now employing 2000 men with a pay roll of from $20,000 to $25,000 per week. With the present method of transportation we can not increase, with the railroad there would be no limit to the size our plant. Bids are to be opened next week in Washington for another battleship costing $4,000,000,00. It would be useless for us to bid for this vessel unless railroad connection was secured. There are also other industries whose coming here depends upon this railroad. At present we must do heavy carting over the streets. We ask to cross the streets at grade. If we should be required to seperate the grades the expense would be prohibited. For a long time there would be but one train a day, and some days none. At present our own locomotive could do the work. Later we hope to equip the line with electricity Under the law the City Council could impose restrictions but he hoped they would not impose impossible ones.

In reply to Councilman Nickerson Mr. Watson said, to go under Quincy avenue would cost 25 per cent. and possibly 50 per cent. more. He did not think $20,000 would raise Quincy avenue. We would have to stand the whole expense of building the road.

In reply to Councilman Nichols, Mr. Watson said it would be more expensive to build a trestle over Quincy avenue than to raise the street. They could not have any heavy grade on account of the heavily loaded cars. A trestle would add $30,000 to cost.

In reply to Councilman Whiton, Mr. Watson said one train a day would take care of the freight for the Fore River and for the Tube works. One train a day would be sufficient for the next two years. He did not think $20,000 would cover the cost of raising Quincy avenue.

In reply to Councilman Langelier, Mr. Watson said, before we could get other industries to locate here, it was necessary to guarantee freight connections.

Councilman Langelier asked if City and street railway stood part of the expense of raising Quincy avenue would it not be better to separate grade.

Mr. Watson replied that it depended upon how much of the expense the city would stand. He did not think the street railway could be made to pay any part of it.

Councilman Thompson asked if the company would give a bond to separate the grades on Quincy avenue in five years if necessary.

Mr. Watson replied that personally he would. If we thought we could not have the railroad we would not bid for the new battleship. We are now as large as it is economical for us to grow without railroad connection.

Conncilman Bass asked why the company asked the Council for a location over Quincy avenue when it is a State road.

Mr. Watson. It would be no use for us to go to the Massachusetts Highway Commission unless Quincy is willing we should cross. We should like to have the City Council grant us what right they have. We are willing to take our chances with the Highway Commission and Railroad Commissioners.

Councilman Langelier asked why the petition to Council was delayed until the last month of year, and was told that it was presented the same day the last land for route was purchased.

Councilman Whiton asked if it wasn't a great risk to purchase land dependent on location being granted at grade, and was told that Fore River company often took such risks.

Councilman Fallon asked what rate of

FORE RIVER BALL.

Over One Hundred Couple Dance Out Old Year at Music Hall.

The employes of the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. held their second annual concert and ball Wednesday evening. The weather was all that could be desired and the attendance was unusually large. The proceeds are to be used toward a free bed at the City Hospital for employes of the company, and a good sum will be netted.

The order of dances were pretty souvenirs. On the first page was a picture of Miss Elsie Macomber who christened the Des Moines when launched.

From 8 to 9 o'clock there was a promenade concert by the orchestra. Then came the grand march which was led by Mr. Herbert F. Stackhouse and Miss Nellie Kelley. Over one hundred couples participated in the march. Mr. Stackhouse had charge of the floor and was assisted by a large corps of aids. At midnight Alex. E. Nash served supper.

Watched Out Year.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Hayden of River street entertained the Jolly Sixteen Whist club Wednesday evening, and they watched the old year out and new in. Prizes for the best scores were awarded Mrs. Frank Stoddard, vase; Mrs. Will Hayden, handkerchief; Mr. Will Hayden, pair of slippers; Mr. Phelan, cut glass dish; Mr. Gomez, white apron.

At 11 o'clock a banquet was served consisting of oysters, salads, sandwiches, cake, cocoa and frappe, after which dancing and a general good time was enjoyed until the wee small hours of the New Year, 1903.

Foreign Coal.

A barge containing 500 tons of Lancaster coal arrived at the wharf of Patch & Son at Quincy Point today. This is an English coal and will probably be sold for about $11 per ton.

—Mrs. Emma Means of Holbrook committed suicide on Monday by hanging. She was 55 years of age, and the widow of John Means.

FREIGHT RAILROAD.

speed was desired, and President Watson replied as slow as Council desires.

W. G. A. Pattee appeared for the Quincy & Boston street railway in favor of the petition. He thought that large industries like those which have located at Quincy Neck were of great benefit to the city and should be encouraged. They increase our population and wealth. The street railway should be the most concerned, but under certain restrictions which should be imposed, his company would not oppose. Trains on the freight railroad should be operated slow; should come to a stop before crossing streets and await signal and street railway should be compensated for expense it was put to.

COUNCILMAN THOMPSON
Reelected for 1903.

Councilman Whiton asked if Mr. Pattee favored because of benefit the Street Railroad were to receive, and Mr. Pattee replied he knew of no benefits.

Councilman Langelier asked if Street Railway would also be willing to stop its cars before crossing freight railroad. Mr. Pattee thought it would be an unnecessary burden.

Councilman Nickerson asked if in his opinion, could the grade crossing be prevented at outlay of $20,000, it should not be done. Mr. Pattee replied, not on a street so little travelled.

W. S. Pinkham appeared in favor of petition. As Quincy avenue was a State Highway, the state and not the city would be liable for any accident which might happen.

The city had no authority to change grade of a State highway. If freight railroad was elevated to go over Quincy avenue it would not be of any benefit to abutters with wharves on Hayward's creek.

Councilman Nickerson asked if he was positive city had nothing to say as to separation of grade crossings. Mr. Pinkham admitted that he did not think State Highway Commission would grant a location without permission of city.

Councilman Whiton said: You admit then that there is some liability of accident. Mr. Pinkham replied: Not one-tenth the danger that now existed where street railway crosses busy streets. Here Council may impose regulations as to time of day railroad may be used, speed, etc.

Councilman Thompson—Could State Highway Commission grant location without permit of Quincy. Mr. Pinkham did not know but did not think they would.

Councilman Bass asked—Do you appear, Mr. Pinkham, as attorney or citizen.

Mr. Pinkham—As attorney for Fore River Co., but as citizen I can give opinion.

Councilman Bass—If location was granted now, would not city later be liable for expense of abolishing grade crossing.

Mr. Pinkham—If it was it would be a small amount compared with benefits received.

President Alden—Was there not a law that no railroad could in the future be constructed in this state to cross a street at grade.

Mr. Pinkham—Do not know of any such law. Thought he should if it was so.

Howard Rogers of the Crystal Spring Ice Co. was the only remonstrant, and he said he did not wish to obstruct, the Ship company, but the proposed route passed between his ice house and his ice pond, and he had not been consulted. He hoped Council would not be hasty, but would take time to examine plans.

Councilman Faxon queried if city had any jurisdiction except at street crossing.

President Alden ruled the whole location in Quincy to be under consideration.

Councilman Bass asked—Do you own land between your ice house and ice pond.

Mr. Rogers thought his company did.

Councilman Bass—Then Fore River Co. had not acquired land.

Rogers—No.

Councilman Whiton asked if there was a right of way there.

Rogers—There was once a right of way for quarry purposes.

The hearing closed at 9 o'clock, having lasted just one hour.

Councilman Newcomb moved that when the Council adjourn it be to Saturday evening.

Councilman Whiton asked why.

Councilman Newcomb said it was his purpose to introduce an order this evening granting location to freight railroad, which would be referred to the Street Committee. They could report Saturday when order might be passed.

Councilman Nickerson opposed and Councilman Fallon, Nichol, Whiton and Newcomb favored.

The motion relative to adjournment prevailed.

The petition for location for freight railroad was taken from table and Councilman Newcomb offered order granting same. Read and referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Newcomb also offered regulations governing speed, etc. on freight railroad. Read once and referred to Committee on Streets.

OTHER BUSINESS.

Councilman Freeman offered an order for transfer of $60 from Board of Health to collection of garbage. Voted.

Two applications for soldiers' relief were granted.

The order making assessment upon abutters for sidewalks constructed was passed.

Councilman Whiton offered order transfering $750 from street lighting and $400 from advertising, printing and stationary to snow account of 1902. Read once.

An auctioneer's license was granted Frank Fessenden Crane.

Adjourned at 9.30 to meet Saturday evening, Jan. 3.

More Warships.

"The German navy of today owes its magnitude to a carefully conducted campaign of education of the masses of the empire by the German Navy League and to the firm stand taken by the Kaiser himself," said Rear Admiral George C. Remey in a Washington dispatch of Wednesday to the Herald. Continuing he said:

"Do I think we need a very much larger navy? Certainly, and I say it with all unselfish heartiness, for I shall go upon the retired list in a few months. We want battleships, armored cruisers and the multiplicity of lighter craft that go to make the sum of an efficient navy, and we need them upon such a scale that the older ships shall be replaced as rapidly as they cease to be strictly up-to-date fighting machines.

"Battleships are the unite of naval strength—war-time naval strength at least—and we need double the number now mentioned on our list as built, building or projected. The armored cruiser, mighty as she now is, is not the peer by long odds of the battleship. I should like to see Congress make provision for eight or ten of the biggest of armored ships, and I should not want to see guns and armor skimped for the sake of extravagant speed."

Ford--Ryan Wedding.

Miss Katherine Cecelia Ryan, daughof the late James Ryan of Packard's lane, and Mr. Dennis Joseph Ford were united in marriage Wednesday evening at St. John's church. The ceremony was at 6 o'clock and was performed by Rev. F. A. Friguglietti.

Miss Mary Agnes Ryan of Quincy was bridesmaid, and Mr. Thomas F. Ford of Philadelphia best man. The ushers were Mr. James Ryan, Mr. John Ryan, Mr. John Ford and Mr. John Lane, all of Quincy.

The bride wore a blue broadcloth gown, white satin waist with white lace trimmings; and the bridesmaid wore blue broadcloth with gun metal waist with pink chiffon trimmings.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride, No. 18 Packard's lane. Mr. and Mrs. Ford were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Besong. Guests were present from Boston, Haverhill, Brockton and Lynn.

Fifty-Three Candidates.

The officers of Manet encampment of Odd Fellows will visit Uphams Corner, Dorchester, tomorrow evening, and assist in working the Patriarchal and Golden Rule degrees on 53 candidates of William Ellison encampment, which has recently moved to a new location and is having a phenomenal growth.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johnanna Soderham, of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

BADGES FOR BALLS.

Gorgeous Styles In Vogue on the East Side In New York.

One of the most necessary adjuncts is the equipment of badges. For an average ball about forty of these are required, and they are made up on a scale of magnificence that evidently appeals to the east side committeeman. The floor manager and his assistant have the most elaborate, rivaling even that of the president of the association under whose auspices the festivities are given, says the New York Mail and Express. The secretaries, corresponding and financial; the treasurer, the chairman of the committee of arrangements and his assistants are all provided for, as well as the sergeant-at-arms and the marshal.

These badges are from two to four inches in diameter, of pink, white, blue and green silk ribbon, with tinsel galore, and on the rosette in the center the initials of the association and the rank of the wearer. The badges for the sergeants-at-arms and marshal have miniature policeman's clubs as an additional decoration.

It is the custom to place these badges in a frame and exhibit them in some favored window, flanked on either side by the cards announcing the ball itself. Many a youthful chest swells with pride as its owner sees in the window before him the decoration that will indicate that for one evening at least he will be "in de real push, see?"

Paderewski's Distinction.

There was a day when Paderewski's English was not fluent. One evening before a choice company in his elegant apartments in New York he was showing a few highly flattered callers how to do this, that and t'other on the keys of his grand piano, explaining in bad English as he went. Of course the man was present who is ever ready to supply a word when a speaker hesitates. The famous artist, landing with both hands as if he had just dropped from the ceiling, exclaimed, "Harmony!" All applauded the perfect concord. He shot down again, like a trip-hammer, and would have exclaimed again, but the word refused to come. "What you call—er—er"— "Discord," put in the supplier of words. Paderewski's hair stood straight out, and his face was white and red with anger. Jumping up from the stool, he sputtered: "Deescort! No! With me a deescort iss eempossible!" He would not be persuaded to touch the instrument again that night. The unintentional insult struck deep.

Queer Goldfish.

Beautiful and most interesting of all goldfish is a native of Japan, and it is noted for the beauty of its tail and the abnormal length of its fins.

The tail resembles a delicate veil, and the fins are developed to such an extent that it is impossible for the fish to make rapid progress in the water.

It is therefore solely on account of its beauty that it is prized and because in this respect it differs widely from other varieties of goldfish, such as the "telescope fish," the eyes of which bulge out of the head in most unsightly fashion; the "celestial eyed fish," which is also uncomely because its eyes are bullet shaped and are ever turned skyward, and the "egg fish," which is so called because its body is somewhat amorphous, but resembles an egg more than anything else.

His Last Exception.

Some time after the closing hour of a large eastern bank which makes a specialty of the accounts of wealthy women an elegantly dressed woman attempted vigorously to open the door.

"Shall I let her in?" asked the janitor.

"Yes; we'll make an exception in her case," replied the teller, who was rather impressed by her appearance.

"I should like to open an account," she said, looking at the teller through her lorgnette.

"For how much, madam?"

"About seventy-five," she answered.

The teller made out a book for $75. The woman handed him 75 cents. That was the last time the cashier ever made an exception.—Youth's Companion.

Appreciative.

A housekeeper who has been employing a colored washerwoman for several months was surprised to see her appear last week in a hat trimmed heavily with crape.

"Why, Julia," she asked, "is any of your family dead?"

"No, no," was the reply, "but one of my best customers gave me this hat, and I didn't want her to think I don't 'preciate nothin'."

More to His Taste.

Mrs. Young (proudly)—The landlord was here today. I gave him the month's rent and showed him the baby.

Young (who was kept awake last night)—It would have been better, my dear, if you had given him the baby and shown him the month's rent.

Never Needed Vindication.

"You were never compelled to ask for a vindication?"

"A vindication?" echoed Senator Sorghum scornfully. "I should say not. My motto is, 'Don't get caught in the first place.'"—Washington Star.

Her Little Joke.

"Henry," she exclaimed as he came home to dinner, "I heard something this morning that opened my eyes."

"What was it?" he demanded excitedly.

"The alarm clock."—Scraps.

So He Gets Around.

Ethel—Gracious, Mabel, why do you lace so awfully whenever Cholly Lovesick comes around?

Mabel—Oh, the poor fellow's arm is so short.—Smart Set.

OBLIGATIONS OF CHINA

Will Have to Be Fulfilled on a Silver Basis

SECOND PAYMENT IS DUE

Large Portion Goes For Missionary Claims For Damages Arising From Boxer Outbreak—Large In Number and Not Modest In Demands

Washington, Jan. 1.—The state department has been officially advised through its fiscal agents in China that the second instalment of the Chinese indemnity fund, which falls due today, must be paid on a silver basis. This result has been anticipated. The first instalment of the indemnity, which was due July 1 last, was likewise paid on a silver basis, the nations receiving the money reserving the right to reclaim the difference between the silver and gold basis. Therefore the department will today have placed to its credit $496,098, for it has without hesitation decided to accept the payment on the basis proposed.

Some idea of the extra charge that would be imposed on China did she yield to the almost general demand of the powers for payment of these indemnities on a gold basis may be gathered from the fact that the Chinese tael, which was the basis of the calculation of the indebtedness, was worth 74 cents at the time the agreement was signed in Pekin, while it is now worth only 61 cents.

The impression prevails here among persons who have taken part in these settlements that the indemnities demanded by the powers are far beyond China's ability. She may for a year or two borrow enough money from various internal sources to pay the instalments falling due every six months, but in a short time the powers will be compelled, at the risk of losing everything, to come to a readjustment of the whole indebtedness, either by submitting the case to arbitration at The Hague, which China urgently desires, or by a mutual agreement between the creditor nations.

Most of the first instalment paid to the United States last July, and amounting to nearly $500,000, was in payment of missionary claims for damages arising from the Boxer outbreak. The department adopted the plan of paying out 25 percent of each large claim. This absorbed nearly all of the first instalment. By this method something like two years will be required for the settlement of the claims. It is said at the state department, where many of these cases were handled (and the records of the American commission show that the same statement was true as to the claims presented in China), that probably never in the history of the department has there been so many heavy claims presented to the attention of a settlement commission as these coming from the missionaries as a result of the Boxer uprising.

The commission has cut into these with a ruthless hand. The claims were common to organizations and individuals. In one case a claim was submitted amounting to $250,000 for mission property destroyed. Reliable affidavits show that $100,000 is a generous estimate for the property. In individual cases missionaries put in claims for jewelry and articles of luxury.

By a curious adjustment, the commission, while allowing some of these claims with liberality, has placed a very low valuation on human life. Assuming a murdered missionary of the age of 50 to be capable of 10 more years' work at the rate of $400 per year, it would award an indemnity of about $4000 to his or her heirs. The state department, which is the reviewing authority in these cases, probably will raise the allowances, but it may still further cut down the claims for personal property losses.

Leniency of United States

Pekin, Jan. 1.—The ministers here of the foreign powers have telegraphed their governments the refusal of China to pay the international indemnity in gold notes, and have discussed the matter among themselves. It is proposed to inform the Chinese government that failure to fulfill the obligations provided in the protocol will entail grave consequences.

The policy of the United States presents an obstacle in the way of delivering a join note to China on the matter, and the present difficulty is generally attributed to the encouragement given the Chinese by the American government's endorsement of their arguments. The Chinese are content to await developments, believing that the powers will find it so difficult to agree on a course of action that the present deadlock will be prolonged indefinitely.

Cannibals Feast on Human Flesh

Brussels, Jan. 1.—The Congo administration has received news that Lieutenant de Magnee and his party, who were in charge of Port Bruni, on the frontier of Uganda, were attacked by a cannibal tribe June 14 last and that the entire party was murdered and eaten.

High Wages For Railway Employes

New York, Jan. 1.—The Metropolitan Street Railway company has announced an increase in the wages of its motormen and conductors. The pay of the men will be regulated by their terms of service. The management of the road claims the new scale will be higher than that of any similar corporation in the country.

Railway Employes In Smashup

Little Rock, Jan. 1.—Thirty railroad employes were injured, four perhaps fatally, in a wreck here yesterday. A work train was backing toward a crossing when a light switch engine started across the track ahead. The engineer applied the emergency brakes, but four cars broke loose, striking the switch engine. The 200 men on the cars jumped, but 30 were caught and crushed.

Cash For Volcano Sufferers

Kingston, B. W. I., Jan. 1.—Captain Young, commissioner of the imperial relief fund, started yesterday on his return to England, having completed the distribution of compensation for the general losses to distressed laborers, peasants and settlers. About $150,000 of the fund has already been expended.

ARBITRATION EXCLUDED

In German Demands Amounting to $300,000

A GUARANTEE OF PAYMENT

Will Be Insisted Upon, Though Venezuela Need Not Settle In Cash at Present—Castro's Reply to Powers' Proposal Received at Washington

Berlin, Jan. 1.—The German government's reservations in agreeing to submit the Venezuelan claims to arbitration continue to be undisclosed in their entirety. But, from statements appearing today, it seems to be confirmed that Germany may exclude from the claims which are subject to arbitration demands amounting to $300,000 for seizure of property and outrages on the persons of German subjects under circumstances which are here deemed so clear that it is useless to call in arbitrators.

The payment of this sum will not be demanded in cash at present, but sufficient guarantee of the payment will be insisted upon. Great Britain's preferred claims are equivalent in amount, $300,000, hence the statements made abroad that Germany is asking more than Great Britain are incorrect.

Germany waives an apology for what are here called "diplomatic insults," asking only material reparation.

The Lokal Anzeiger, the only German newspaper having a special correspondent at Caracas, prints a dispatch from the Venezuelan capital, dated Dec. 29, relating the correspondent's experience in interviewing President Castro. He found him at General Alcantara's estate at La Victoria, dancing at noonday.

General Alcantara, who was waiting with a bundle of dispatches, remarked to the correspondent that it "would not do to interrupt the president's pleasure, even with state business," but the correspondent says he spoke to the president betwen dances and "after a conversational reconnaisance," inquired if he intended to give the powers satisfaction. "Why, No," replied the president. "I am the one demanding satisfaction for insults."

"At this remark," the correspondent continues, "a lady clapped the president on the back and said: 'That's the way to talk, old boy.'"

TEXT NOT GIVEN OUT

Venezuela's Reply to Suggestion of Arbitration Signifies Acceptance

Washington, Jan. 1.—The answer of President Castro to the proposal of the allies to submit to the arbitration of The Hague tribunal the Venezuelan difficulties, has reached Washington through Minister Bowen. The answer amounts to a general acceptance of the principles of the proposition, President Castro being willing to submit his case to the arbitration of fair and impartial authorities. The details of the answer will not be published here in advance of its reception by the European allied powers, and in fact they may be withheld entirely from publication on the ground that the answer really concerns those powers.

The answer is being prepared at the state department for transmission to Europe. As it is quite long and undoubtedly will require careful consideration by the foreign offices at London, Berlin and Rome, it is not expected that any further steps toward a final settlement can be taken for a day or two. The feeling here, however, based on a knowledge of Castro's position, is that his answer practically clears the way for the submission of the case to arbitration. The answer has given great satisfaction here.

Schooner Slipped Away In Darkness

La Guaira, Jan. 1.—An Italian cruiser last night chased a big Venezuelan schooner off this port. The pursuit was seen from here. Under cover of darkness the schooner managed to get away.

Albany, Jan. 1.—Lawrence Stevens of Middleburg was here yesterday on his way home, with his two children, 12 and 6 years old, whom he had located at Skippers, Va., whither his wife took them when she eloped two years ago with George Rion. Recently the husband learned where they were. He began proceedings for divorce, went to Virginia and rescued his children. Rion is now in jail awaiting action by the grand jury. The wife was left to take care of herself.

To Look After Disabled Brethren

Peoria, Ills., Jan. 1.—The referendum vote of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen on the $25,000 appropriation for the erection of a home for aged and disabled railway employes resulted in its passage by 10,000 majority. The trainmen and conductors have appropriated $25,000 each and the total of $75,000 will be used in the purchase of ground and the erection of a suitable building.

Higher Wages For Thousands

Connellsville, Pa., Jan. 1.—Fifteen thousand miners and coke workers of the Connellsville, Lower Connellsville and Latrobe regions got a 10 percent wage advance for a New Year's gift. The independent concerns followed the example set by the H. C. Frick Coke company and virtually the same scale will go into effect all over the coking country.

COAL SPECULATORS

Responsible For Exorbitant Prices For That Commodity

Boston, Jan. 1.—Coal speculators tried to drive a sharp bargain with Boston coal dealers yesterday, but were unsuccessful. They offered a cargo of anthracite coal at $14 a ton. This incident brought out numerous inquiries of dealers if speculating in coal in this fashion was being done and several replied that it was, one quoting the fact that he was recently offered a cargo of hard coal at $16 a ton, free on board at New York.

A coal dealer who had just returned from New York and Philadelphia is quoted as saying that he found coal to be very scarce there, and New England purchasers are in the hands of speculators.

In regard to water transportation the shipping reports indicate a greater offering of tonnage, with a shading of prices. This may be in view of the big fleet of foreign craft chartered to bring Welsh coal. The sending of these steamers, most of which are "tramps," is causing a feeling of uneasiness among the regular lines, as the natural result of this additional tonnage being thrown upon the market will be to still further reduce rates.

COUSINS USED ARSENIC

May Have Important Bearing on Richardson Case

DIDN'T SIGN GREEN'S BOOK

One, a Horse Trainer, Used Poison to Brace Animals Up In Races—Another Says He Bought Deadly Stuff to Drive Ants From Refrigerator

Littleton, N. H., Jan. 2.—An admission that may have a very important bearing upon the case of Miss Catherine V. Richardson, arrested at Revere, Mass., on the charge of attempting to murder her mother by poisoning her, was made last night by R. M. Richardson, a second cousin of Catherine, who resides here and is a horse trainer by occupation. Richardson has stated heretofore that he knew nothing about the purchase of poison at Green's drug store and the signature for the same in Green's book.

When questioned again about it last night, he complacently remarked that he didn't know but he had bought the poison himself. He remembered that on the day after, Sept. 11, he went to St. Johnsbury with a string of horses to the fair. On such occasions he always bought a supply of arsenic, which he administered to the animals during the race for the purpose of bracing them up. He often had obtained the poison without signing for it and as he was in a hurry that day he knew he did not sign for it. It was his candid opinion, he said, that he bought the poison.

Frank Richardson, an own cousin of Catherine, a carriage manufacturer of Littleton, also said last night that it was possible that he may have bought the arsenic, as he had often bought the poison to drive ants from his refrigerator. He said it was easy and would not be considered unusual for a woman to have made the purchase, as arsenic was used by many families for that purpose. If he made the purchase, he had not signed it, and he was certain that his wife had not bought any.

The initials of the signature V. C. W. look as if written by a woman, and there is great anxiety here to have the mystery regarding the writer of them cleared up. An effort was made to get a statement regarding this matter from Mr. Green, proprietor of the drug store, but he went on a hunting trip yesterday morning and has not returned.

There has been considerable talk to the effect that there would be no money forthcoming for Miss Richardson's defense, but her cousin Frank stated last night that if a guardian is appointed for her on Jan. 12, as petitioned for, there was no question whatever but that he would furnish whatever money is needed for the purpose.

Fish Men Favor Reciprocity

Boston, Jan. 2.—A meeting of the fish trade has been called for this afternoon to discuss the Hay-Bond treaty and its bearing upon the fish trade of the country. The meeting is called by men who favor the treaty and who wish to send a delegation to Washington in favor of ratification of the treaty. President Treat of the Boston fish bureau says the fishing trade in this country never was so prosperous as it was during the last five years, when there was reciprocity between the United States and Newfoundland.

Dr Michael's Sudden Death

Springfield, O., Jan. 2.—Rev. Dr J. B. Michael, formerly president of Monmouth college, Monmouth, Ills., fell dead in the pulpit of a Presbyterian church near Xenia last evening. He graduated from the Xenia Theological seminary in 1865 and in 1870 was elected president of Monmouth, a position he held for 20 years.

"GENTLEMAN BURGLAR"

Gets Five-Year Sentence For Stealing $3000 Worth of Books

Boston, Jan. 2.—Samuel D. Lockwood, the educated burglar, who was brought before Judge Stevens yesterday on continuance from Wednesday of the case against him charging the larceny of $3000 worth of books from Baich Bros., was given a sentence of not more than seven nor less than five years in state prison.

Before pronouncing sentence, Judge Stevens said: "Lockwood is evidently a man of education, he is evidently a man of ability, he is a man of good presence. He has been engaged in a criminal career of life for over 15 months and his theft was not an isolated case. It is possible that he may have lived an honest life in the past, but men who life an honest life to the middle age do not as a rule at such time of life turn out to do criminal acts of this nature."

Lockwood had on Thursday made an eloquent and impassioned appeal for acquittal.

Lorimer Matter Still Unsettled

Boston, Jan. 2.—The executive committee of Tremont Temple church did not have a conference with Dr. Lorimer last night regarding his acceptance of the pastorate, as had been expected. The committee met, but adjourned before the Lorimer matter was brought up. At its previous meeting the executive committee voted 21 to 18 against calling Dr. Lorimer, while 68½ percent of the church members cast their votes in his favor.

Explosion, Fire and Death

Stoughton, Mass., Jan. 2.—A dust explosion in a drier, one of the machines used in preparing shoddy material, produced a fire which destroyed the factory of the Stoughton Mills company yesterday and burned to death Thomas Dowden. The property loss is $35,000. The fire broke out at 4 o'clock, and it spread so quickly that the 25 employes had to move lively to get out. Dowden was caught on the upper floor.

Old Landmark to Be Remodelled

Boston, Jan. 2.—One of Boston's most interesting of historic landmarks, the Old State House on Washington street, is to be modernized by transformation into a station for the new East Boston subway. A contract was awarded yesterday for remodelling it, and while its quaint exterior character will not be altered, the interior will be entirely changed. The work is to be finished by July 1.

Girls Took Big Jumps

Bristol, Conn., Jan. 2.—Fire yesterday afternoon caused $12,000 damage to the stockenette factory of N. L. Birege Sons & Co. The blaze caused a panic among the girls employed on the upper floors. Five of the girls jumped 2½ stories to the ground, but only one of them was injured. Winnie Busker, 19 years old, sustained a broken leg and a sprained ankle.

Saved From Terrible Death

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 2.—Mrs. Carrie Thurston, who owns a home on Tucker street and occupied the upper tenement, was rescued from death by burning last night by two men who saw a fire in the house and forced an entrance. The fire started in some unexplainable manner in a room adjoining Mrs. Thurston's chamber after she had retired.

Six Hundred Men Out

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 2.—The strike of the carriage makers to enforce their demands for a nine-hour day and a 12 percent advance in wages is in full effect, and although the factories have been kept open, only six out of the 600 union men are at work. A few non-union men have remained at their benches in each factory.

Foul Play Not Suspected

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 2.—The body of James K. Scudder, who had been missing since Dec. 16, was found yesterday in Moody's pond, northwest of the city. It is supposed that while walking along the bank of the pond he fell in. There is no suspicion of foul play, as $20 was found in one of his pockets.

New Champion With Rifle

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 2.—H. M. Pope, the rifle shot of this city, broke the 50 and 100 shot world's records here yesterday on the standard American target, 200 yards, off-hand. He scored 463 in 50 shots and 908 in 100 shots. The former records were 462 and 900.

Robber Got Away With $1230

Woodstock, Conn., Jan. 2.—When Thomas Hedges, a farmer and lumber merchant, went to his desk yesterday he discovered that $1230 had been stolen while the family was away from home. A bank book and several checks were not touched by the burglar.

COAL MAY BE HIGHER.

Independent Operators Said to be Breaking Contracts.

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 2.—Some additional light was shed on the Boston coal situation yesterday by the manager of one of the largest independent coal mining companies here, who said that the railroad companies are not receiving anything like the reported amounts of coal from the independents. He stated that while the railroad companies claimed to be shipping 90 percent of the coal to Boston, he doubted that they were reaching more than 65 or 70 percent. A large number of the independents have broken their contracts to deliver coal to the railroad companies for $3.75 a ton, as they can get more than twice that sum and will pay the railroads for shipping it to New York.

A point which has escaped attention is the fact that these independent contracts call for the payment by the companies of 65 percent of the selling price at tidewater, and the independents set up the claim that the companies are acting as selling agents for them and should obtain the best possible price in New York, instead of paying the percentage of the arbitrary $5 rate. This leaves the companies in the position of being liable to be sued by the independents if they insist upon the performance of their contracts, and may explain the seeming indifference of the railroad companies to the action of the independents in deserting the "line business" to the coal-operating railroads.

At any rate it is learned that one of the independent operators in Scranton had a bid for coal at the mines, by a New York speculator, at the rate of $7 a ton. Local consumers are being supplied by the People's Coal company, which succeeded the Oxford company during the strike, at a rate of from $3.25 to $5 a ton delivered. Several people are doing a profitable business here by buying small lots of coal at the mines and hauling it away to load cars for New York, although the companies do not sanction this business.

In spite of the fact that the coal companies announced that they would work yesterday, it was a holiday all through the Scranton region. It is expected that within three or four days, however, conditions will get back to normal, but the loss of a day's output means a great deal to the districts where there is a scarcity of coal.

An effort was made by all the coal operators to work their collieries yesterday, but it met with ill success. At each colliery the foreman went around Wednesday and gave notice to all hands that the company was very desirous of working, that the relieving of the coal famine might not be retarded. Some men reported at every mine, but it was only in a few instances that enough reported to make a start.

The Dalaware, Lackawanna and Western company got four of its 19 collieries started, but at noon they had to shut down, the hands, particularly the slate pickers, refusing to continue. The Delaware and Hudson got two of its 22 places started, but they worked only a few hours. The Erie started two places, and one of them ran all day. None of the 13 Ontario and Western or of the eight Temple Iron company's collieries even made a start.

Plenty of Coal In Boston Harbor

Boston, Jan. 2.—The Post says: From a thorough and searching investigation, made by Post reporters yesterday, it was found that 54 vessels of all kinds, carrying 69,000 tons of coal, are now in Boston harbor, 47 being at docks and seven anchored in the stream. The position of every one of these craft was accurately taken and charted down by a Post artist. It is claimed that the 46,111 tons of anthracite included in the total of 69,900 tons would, if promptly placed on the market, fully relieve the stringency in the coal situation.

One Result of Coal Famine

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 2.—The wharf property of Pardee & Young, one of the largest coal firms here, was sold yesterday, supposedly to a company to be known as the Consumers' Coal company. The sum said to have been paid is $70,000. The sale is of interest by reason of the numerous reports of late that coal yards were to be established on the co-operative plan.

She Knew How to Handle Gun

Deatsville, Ala., Jan. 2.—Mrs. B. Lane yesterday shot and killed John Watkins, a negro ex-convict, at the home of her father. Watkins had entered the house, supposedly with the intention of robbery. Discovered by Mrs. Lane, he fired upon her, but missed. Mrs. Lane then emptied both barrels of a shotgun into the negro's body, killing him instantly.

Mrs Kiehl Again Arrested

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 2.—Mrs. Maude Kiehl and her mother, Mrs. Addie Fenner, were arrested yesterday on warrants charging them with the murder of William Kiehl, husband of Mrs. Kiehl. Several months ago Mrs. Kiehl was accused of poisoning Adam Kiehl, her brother-in-law, to prevent his marriage to another woman. The examination caused widespread interest owing to the youth and beauty of the widow. She was freed. The officials then began an investigation into the death of the girl's husband, who expired some time before his brother Adam, under almost similar circumstances.

Royalty May Visit Ancients

Boston, Jan. 2.—Lord Roberts of Kandahar will be the guest of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company of Boston next September. There is a possibility of the Prince of Wales and his uncle, the Duke of Connaught, coming, they to be accompanied by the Earl of Denbigh, who is lieutenant colonel of the Honourable Artillery company of London. Captain Olys of the Ancients has received a letter from England in which Lord Roberts accepts the invitation to be a guest of the Ancients, and mention is made of the possibility of also having the royal guests.

Church Broke Contract

Sioux City, Ia., Jan. 2.—Archbishop Deane of Dubuque has been defeated in the suit brought by C. J. Sherman and John Hanfeldt to recover $2430, which the plaintiffs' subscribed to help build a church at Williams. Judge Dyer holds that they were entitled to recover this amount with interest. The plaintiffs made their subscriptions conditional upon a dual-language-speaking priest being sent to Williams. Their contention that the church did not keep its part of the contract is upheld.

Wants Filipino Independence

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 2.—Jacob G. Schurman, president of Cornell university, spoke last night to 1300 members of the Nebraska Teachers' association on the subject "Our Philippine Policy." His address in part was a reiteration of his views heretofore expressed, but he probably was more outspoken in his declaration for the ultimate independence of the islands.

Pretender Close to Fez

London, Jan. 2.—A dispatch to The Times from Tangier says a courier from Fez has arrived there bringing a letter dated Dec. 26, saying that the pretender was then four hours from Fez. All available troops had left the capital to defend the approaches of the city. The Christians in Fez were all reported to be safe.

Fell From Top of Building

Boston, Jan. 2.—Carl G. A. Carlson, a Swede, aged 40, who had been here but a short time and was working to get money to bring his wife and children to this country and had almost enough, was working near the top of a building yesterday, when he slipped and fell 50 feet to the ground and was killed.

Fair weather has generally prevailed. The temperature changes have been generally unimportant. In New England the temperature is 8 to 10 degrees above the seasonal average. It will rain in southern New England.

Looked Like a War Scene

Evanston, Wyo., Jan. 2.—The rush for claims in the Uintah oil fields continues and from the present outlook not more than a week will elapse before the locating will have been completed. So far as known there has been no blood shed, although shots have been exchanged in many cases. Fires, marking the corners of claims, were lighted by the thousands last night and these, together with hundreds of locaters camped near them, presented the appearance of a bivouac at war.

Stiletto Instead of Handshake

Rutland, Vt., Jan. 2.—Joseph Flocco was in a store in the Italian settlement late last night when a man named Cioffi and a friend entered. The men soon got into a heated argument. Finally Cioffi reached out his hand, asking Flocco to shake and make up, and as the latter made a move to do so, Cioffi jumped forward and plunged a stiletto into his body. Cioffi escaped and Flocco is dying.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Notice to Heating Contractors.

Good Afternoon.

Thanks, Mayor Bryant.

All efforts to break the coal combine should be applauded and encouraged.

Inauguration day number of Daily Ledger tomorrow.

Those people who are very much against organization of labor, should turn their attention to organized capital, which appears to be a greater evil. The Coal club which is said to include the Quincy dealers, is pushing our people pretty hard.

A break in the coal prices of Quincy is good news, and nothing which a Mayor of a city can do at this time is of more moment. Mayor Bryant has purchased first grade of Franklin coal and had it shipped to Quincy, partly by rail, and although it is said that the charges by rail are prohibitive, the Mayor offers the coal at the rate of $9 per ton.

This price is about one-half what is charged by some dealers of Boston and vicinity who buy their coal at old contract prices, and shows that exorbitant profits are being made.

The prices charged by the coal dealers are a severe tax upon prosperous business men, and are so high that the poor have had to suffer more from the cold this year than ever before. Many families in the city have no coal whatever in their houses.

The success of Mayor Bryant shows that it is possible for coal dealers to obtain coal and to sell it at good profit at a much smaller figure than they quote today. They should be forced to reduce prices.

Drift of Opinion.

☞A citizen has no more right to be neglectful of the interest of the civic whole in which he is a member, than a parent of child has to be neglectful of the interests of the domestic whole in which he is a member. There is the same quality of unchristian disregard involved in both cases, and whether a man lets his state or city shift for itself or whether he lets his family shift for itself, in the one instance as well as in the other, he is false to his corporate duty and is a despicable shirk.—Rev. C. H. Parkhurst.

☞To the passer-by there is probably no one feature which lends more character to the general aspect of the house than do the windows. Windows are at once the eyes and the smile which light up the architectural face of a dwelling. Through the saving grace of well-designed and well-placed windows the humblest house may assume a charm all its own. They attract unconsciously, and by contrast, dignify even the plainest portions of the house. The successful home-builder must wisely consider the distribution, placing and character of his windows. Moreover, every window should receive double consideration in each of these respects, for it must look well both outside and inside.—Country Life in America.

—Now is the time to pay your new year's bills, and save the collectors trouble. If you pay what you owe, you will enable others to cancel their debts, and they in turn will put others in a position to pay up, so that the paying out of a dollar will be utilized to its full value.

BREAK IN PRICE OF COAL.

Mayor Bryant Gives Quincy a New Year's Greeting--Coal at $9.00 per Ton.

We are pleased to announce that through the personal efforts of Mayor Bryant the city has secured, direct from the mining companies, about 100 tons of high grade "Franklin" anthracite coal,

For some time past, Mayor Bryant has not been satisfied with the situation in Quincy and the prices and coal deliveries of the local dealers. These dealers were filling some of the city orders at 60 cents per hundred pounds, but since the early part of December they have positively declined to deliver a single pound of hard coal at this price, even when the city teams were placed at their disposal free of charge. The dealers have, however, been supplying hard coal to their private customers.

Under these conditions the Mayor sent a personal representative, Mr. A. F. Schenkelberger, to New York and Philadelphia to interview the heads of the coal companies. Mr. Schenkelberger made two trips to Philadelphia, as a result of which he has been able to secure about 100 tons of coal, one half of which consists of egg size suitable for stove, the other half of broken coal suitable for furnace. Two cars of the coal arrived this morning and are being unloaded at the city yard, Quincy Adams.

By order of the Mayor, City Messenger Tirrell is prepared to deliver this coal in 100 pound lots, and in no case to exceed 200 pounds to one buyer, at 45 cents a hundred pounds. This quality of coal is being sold here today at from $14 to $15 a ton. The coal will be delivered by city carts and the price to the people will be exactly what it costs the city.

The Mayor is to be commended for his energy and his efforts to relieve an embarrasing situation.

ON A NEW BEAT.

A New Years Greeting Not Looked For.

Officer Ferguson, who was Thursday night transferred to the Brewers corner beat, had a lively tussle with a party of Finns early in the evening, during which one of the party, Jacob Jacobson, whom the officer had arrested for drunkenness, made an assault on the officer and threatened to kill him. He struck the officer in the face and kicked him in the stomach and shins and it was only after the free use of a club that the officer subdued him.

It was about 8 o'clock when the officer was called to quell a drunken disturbance on Station street. After entering the house, Jacobson who appeared to be the cause of the disturbance, jumped through the second story window. It was while in the street the fellow gouged a junk out of the officer's finger, scratched his face and kicked him in the stomach. The officer used his club on the fellow's head before he was subdued. In court this morning Jacobson was fined $3 for drunkenness, and $10 for assault.

☞The eighth annual exhibition of the Boston Poultry Association will be held in Mechanics Building, Boston, from January 13 to 17 inclusive.

The poultry department will be in charge of T. Farrar Rackham. In the pet stock department there will be a choice exhibit of Belgian hares, rabbits, calves, fancy mice, fancy rats, cage birds and parrots.

The special poultry prizes are the best ever offered. The Massachusetts society for Promoting Agriculture offers $200 on poultry and eggs, and a special ribbon for best colored and shaped birds in regular classes.

Meanness of Brown.

Green—Brown told an acquaintance of mine that he could have beat my time and married you himself if he had wanted to.

Mrs. Green—The idea! I wonder why he didn't do it, then?

Green—Oh, I can readily understand why he didn't. He had a grudge against me.—Chicago News.

—Fall River has the highest birth rate of any city in the country whose population is 30,000 or more.

TWO BIRTHS DAILY.

The Quincy Average in Recent Years—Interesting Figures.

Three canvassers were sent out by City Clerk Harlow Jan. 1 to take during the month the birth census of Quincy for 1902. W. J. Parker makes the rounds in Wards One and Two, Henry W. French in Wards Three and Four, and George S. Baker in Wards Five and Six.

The vital statistics of the city as summarized below for twelve years afford an interesting study:

Year.	Births.	Deaths.	Marriages.
In 1890,	550	379	159
In 1891,	647	320	189
In 1892,	612	318	189
In 1893,	727	375	219
In 1894,	660	380	186
In 1895,	655	363	191
In 1896,	741	366	215
In 1897,	723	368	198
In 1898,	795	383	244
In 1899,	712	387	211
In 1900,	756	365	234
In 1901,	750	343	227

Although the population of the city increased from 16,726 in 1890 to 23,899 in 1900, there were less deaths in the latter year than in the former. For the twelve years the deaths have ranged between 318 and 387 per year, showing the city to be very free from epidemics and remarkably healthy, the death rate of 1901 being only 14 per 1000.

The number of marriages does not vary greatly, but there were more contracts solemnized in 1898 and 1900 than in 1901. The year 1901 however, shows an increase of 68 over 1890.

—A twenty-four story hotel is to be erected in New York city and it may be decided to make it a thirty-story one before actual work is begun on the superstructure. In less than ten years we may expect forty and fifty-story buildings in the metropolis if the fad for sky-scrapers continues as it has during the past decade.—Portsmouth Journal.

SURPRISE PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. John Robbie the Victims.

Thursday evening, Jan. 1, a party brimful of fun and frolic called on Mr. and Mrs. John Robbie at their home on Goddard street. The visit was not at the request of the worthy pair who had the peace of their home circle so abruptly broken, but they nevertheless accepted the situation and hastened to give place and comfort to all who were there.

After greetings and considerable jollying Mr. James Malcolm, speaking for the party, presented to Mr. and Mrs. Robbie a magnificent hall stand of quartered oak and brass mountings. Mr. Malcolm's speech was most appropriate and was replied to by Mr. Robbie in a very appreciative and feeling manner.

Set speeches and dry talk on the price of coal was not the chief object of those who so unceremoniously made themselves possessors for a few hours of Mr. and Mrs. Robbie's home, a night of mirth and general good cheer was the purpose, and by two o'clock all were convinced that the object had been fully attained, every one present was made happy for the time being, and will have recollections of the event which will make them glad many a day to come.

Among those who distinguished themselves as vocalists for the entertainment of the company were: Mr. Pratt, Mr. Tutten, and Mr. D. T. Drummond. Choruses were sung by the whole gathering. Games that made one's sides ache with laughter were gone through. Dancing for those whose feet were light and supple was indulged in to the music of violin and piano under the fingers of John Black and George Thompson.

Refreshments to the taste of old and young were in abundance and often and tastefully served. The ladies had a specialty given to them with their cake which caused no end of amusement.

All things come to an end, however, and when the guests bade Mr. and Mrs. Robbie good bye it was with hopes that all might meet again for another such night.

The guests included:

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Hall, Mr. and Mrs. William Farquharson, Charles Clark, Mr. Ed Marnock, Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Drummond, Mr. and Mrs. Grassick, Mr. and Mrs. James Malcolm, Mr. Tutten, Mr. George Mavers, James McLeod, Mr. George Knox, Mr. and Mrs. John McKay.

Mr. and Mrs. William Birnie, Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Diack, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Morrison, Mr. H. Nicol, Mr. and Mrs. William Pratt, Mr. George Clark, Mr. and Mrs. William Fyfe, Mr. Daniel Choughlan, Mr. and Mrs. Alex McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. John Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Falkner, Mr. A. Cowe, Mr. and Mrs. William Mitchell, Miss Maggie Hall, Miss Robina Hall, and Miss Nellie Drummond.

Miss Ada Malcolm, Mr. John Black, Mr. George Thomas, Mrs. McLeod, Miss May Trumgold, Mrs. Trumgold, Mr. L. Dunham, Mrs. A. D. Smith, Miss Maggie Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ross, Miss Mary Nicolson and a few others.

A delegation of Rural lodge of Masons will act as pall bearers at the funeral of John Page this afternoon.

Commissioner Knowlton advertises today for bids for heating and ventilating system at the new school building at Quincy Point.

It will be observed that for six years previous to 1902 the number of births ranged between 600 and 700 but there were 200 more in 1901 than in 1890.

Mr. J. D. Eltinge, who has appeared in Quincy Music hall, was one of the leading female characters in "High Jinks" at Brookline, Thursday evening.

The officers of Hodenasaunee tribe of Red Men were installed Thursday evening by Deputy Great Sachem George Flowers and suite of Massopoag tribe of Campello.

Up to noon City Messenger Tirrell had received nearly fifty orders for Mayor Bryant's coal. Most of the purchasers took two bags, the limit that will be sold to one person at one time.

Rev. C. W. Briggs will lecture on conditions in the Philippines in the Wollaston Baptist church Sunday evening at 7.30. Mr. Briggs has lately returned from the Islands and his knowledge of the case is first hand.

It seems as though the calendars are prettier than ever this year. Mr. Charles H. Brooks of the Hancock market is distributing to his patrons a particularly attractive one, from a painting by J. G. Brown, entitled Heels Over Head. The original was exhibited at the World's Fair at Chicago. Those familiar with Brown's groups of street urchins will appreciate Mr. Brook's calendar. It is artistically mounted on a green card with green cord, and the pad is white printed in green.

WATER RECEIPTS.

The City Now Has 5,000 Takers Who Pay $80,000 Annually.

Quincy has now 5000 water takers, that number having been reached on the last day of the old year. The semi-annual bills sent out this week aggregate about $40,000 and comes into the city at a very ecceptable time to prevent borrowing at the beginning of the new year.

The receipts for water during 1902 were upwards of $75,000 and are expected to go over $80,000 in 1903.

The expenses for water are now about $95,000.00 as follows:

Maintenance,	$10,000.00
Interest,	29,811.13
Maturing debt,	32,500.00
Metropolitan assessment,	22,004.38

The new construction each year is about the same as the maturing debt, and is covered by that item.

New Year's Party.

Among the many parties held on New Year's eveniag, that given by Mr. and Mrs. Bowman of Intervale street, South Quincy, was one of the most enjoyable. Many friends of the couple helped to pass the last few hours of the old year, by a constant round of pleasure. Refreshments were served and singing, games and dancing were indulged in, and passersby could not fail to notice that all was joy within. At the dawn of the New Year, all bade good-night, and many good wishes to each other.

The following were present:

Mr. and Mrs. George Bowman, Mr. R. C. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. A. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Howie, Mr. and Mrs. D. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. D. Cramond, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Allen, Mr. and Mrs. J. McKay, Mrs. John Michael, Mr. White, Miss Marion Henderson, Miss Bessie Miller, Miss Mary Dackers, Miss Lizzie Gordon, Miss Katie Ross, Miss Lizzie Bissett, Miss Jessie Rennie, Miss Belle Hadden, Miss Belle Michael, Miss Henrietta Rennie, Miss Margaret Michael, Mr. John Hutchinson, Mr. John Killgour, Mr. J. MOCK COUNCIL.

Why Not a Little Fun at Last Meeting Tomorrow Night.

Mock sessions of City Councils and Legislatures prove popular on the closing night, and might be a happy diversion for the Quincy legislators Saturday night after the more serious business of the evening and the year.

Should the suggestion meet with favor an ideal candidate for President would be Councilman Fallon, the Representative-elect, who would then have a chance to get back on Representative-elect Freeman and also President Alden. Chief of Police Hayden should be present so that "Pete" could keep President Alden "absolutely" to the question or eject him.

It is not necessary that the Clerk should be a Councilman, therefore we would respectfully nominate Galen Bowditch, Esq.

Some investigations as to the votes of members during the past year are needed, and with Mr. Fallon in the chair, we should get at bottom facts. I move you Mr. President that we go into a committee of the whole. A.

Quincy's Win.

The Quincys kept up their long string of victories Thursday evening when they defeated the Arcadians of Dorchester on the Granite street alleys. Gallagher was high man of the evening with a fine total of 270, closely followed by White with 265. Glynn rolled high man for the visitors with 258. Quincy won two out of three, and on grand totals 1272 to 1549.

North Quincys Lead.

The Norfolk County league games at billiards pool, whist and bowling Thursday night were between the Braintree and North Quincy clubs at the former's rooms. As a result North Quincy won six out of the nine points.

North Quincy won both games of billiards but fell down on pool, the Braintrees winning both games.

At whist North Quincy won one game by one point, and Braintree one game by four points.

Braintree which is usually strong on bowling put up a poor game, North Quincy winning all three strings.

Next Thursday the Braintrees play the Granite City club in Quincy.

Police on New Beats.

There was a slight shake up in the Police department Thursday night, the following changes being made:

Officer Bradley from the Brewers corner beat to Wollaston.

Officer Ferguson from Wollaston to Brewers corner.

Officer Lyons from Norfolk Downs to Atlantic.

Officer McCarthy from Atlantic to Norfolk Downs.

SILVER WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. William Newall Entertain Many Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. William Newall, a well known and popular couple, celebrated their twenty-fifth marriage anniversary Thursday evening at their home on Hodges avenue. Over one hundred invitations were issued to relatives, friends and neighbors and there were few who did not respond. They came laden with gifts and best wishes for the future health and happiness.

The reception was entirely informal and all were bidden to make themselves at home. During the evening there were piano solos by Miss Lizzie Curley, Miss Susie and Miss Louisa Holloron, and vocal solos by Edmund DeFault, Peter Colligan and Miss Ella Pitts.

Then an adjournment was made to the upper floor where there was dancing music being furnished by Mr. Robinson and Miss Curley.

While the festivities were at their zenith the guests were bidden to the dining room where a wedding supper was served.

Mr. Newall, who is a machinist employed at the Tubular Rivet Works, was born in Worcester and is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Newall. Mrs. Newall was Martha, daughter of Michael and Ellen Welsh of Uxbridge. Their marriage was solomonized at Uxbridge Jan. 1, 1878, by Rev. Fr. Robinson.

Their honeymoon was passed in Whitingsville and Worcester. They moved to Quincy in 1884 and have been residents of this city ever since. Nine children have been born to them, three sons and six daughters. Of this family two sons and five daughters are now living.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johnanna Soderham, of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

Made Chopping Block of Welnig

Buffalo, Jan. 2.—It took Jack O'Brien 12 rounds to dispose of Al Welnig at Fort Erie yesterday. The contest was one sided all through. O'Brien literally cut Weinig's face to ribbons, closed both eyes and wore him down until he was unable to protect himself or do damage to his opponent.

Earthquake In Costa Rica

San Jose, C. R., Jan. 2.—A severe shock of earthquake was felt here yesterday. The weather was stormy at the time. The shock is believed to have originated from the volcano of Irazu. It followed the same direction as the shocks felt here Dec. 18.

CHINAMAN AT A TELEPHONE

Celestial Gets the Worth of His Money Every Time.

"A Chinaman at the telephone is a funny thing," remarked a long distance telephone operator in the Denver News a few days ago. "You see, it is impossible to tell whether one person or half a dozen are talking, and we often become mixed up in listening to them. When one is speaking, it seems as if half a dozen are talking, and we often imagine the wires are out of order. To make matters worse the Chinese delight in talking as fast as possible, and we never know whether the Chinaman at this end of the wire is talking or if it is the one at the other end. After the conversation is ended the Chink walks out of the booth with a self satisfied smile on his face and pays for a three minutes' talk. We have lately discovered that he invariably says as much during that time as could have been said by a white man in fifteen minutes."

To be sure, the telephone company is not really "out" anything by the transaction, as it is paid by the minute; but, nevertheless, in the case of Chinamen, the company would be the gainer by charging for volume instead of time. A Chinaman always begins his talk in pidgin English. He says: "Hello. Is this Sam Ling. I bettee you don't know—yi hi ki yi he yay bo benno ne," and so on, and it sounds on the wires as if several persons were at work.

Switched the Train.

A certain judge is much given to meditating upon his work while walking along the street, and his acquaintances and friends recognize his air of abstraction, pass him by with a friendly nod and never mind if he does not appear to notice the salutation. A little colored newsboy not familiar with this peculiarity of the judge accosted him one day with persistent appeals:

"Buy the mornin' news, boss. Have a paper, boss."

The judge waved the tiny mite of humanity aside and went on abstractedly, his mind engrossed with the case that was to come up that day in the court to which he was on the way. The dusky newsboy was not easily evaded, and he kept pace with the judge, shouting his paper cry at frequent intervals. At last the judge stopped and, grabbing his youthful tormentor by the shoulder, he said in his most severe manner:

"How dare you interrupt me when I am following out a line of argument? Don't you ever speak to me when I am pursuing a train of thought."

The small boy looked up in surprise and said in a most apologetic tone:

"Befor' de Lord, massa, I didn't know you was tryin' to cotch a train. Excus' me."—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Nose.

Nothing is more rare than a really perfect nose—that is, one which unites harmony of form, correctness of proportion and proper affinity with the other features.

The following are, according to the rules of art, the conditions requisite to the beauty of this organ:

The nose should have the same length as the forehead and have a slight depression at its root. From its root to its extremity it should follow a perfectly straight line and come exactly over the center of the upper lip. The bridge of the nose, parallel on both sides, should be a little wider in the center. The tip should be neither too thin nor too fleshy, and its lower outline neither narrow nor too wide. The lobes must be gracefully defined by a slight depression. Seen sideways, the lower part of the nose will have but a third of its total length.

His One Regret.

A fare was being rattled through a Dublin suburb on a rickety jaunting car drawn by a no less rickety horse. Having proceeded some distance, the horse, owing to apparent old age and sheer exhaustion, fell, never to rise again. The fare was very profuse in his sympathies toward the driver, who, however, appeared to take the whole thing very coolly and explained:

"It's just like this with me, your honor. I don't regret the old brute a bit. He was bad from the start. But, somehow or other, I can't help thinking of the beautiful feed of oats I gave him this morning."

The Power of a Tip.

Experienced Traveler (at railway restaurant)—When did that man at the other table give his order?

Waiter—'Bout ten minutes ago, sir.

"What did he order?"

"Beefsteak and potatoes, sir."

"How much did he tip you?"

"Sixpence, sir."

"Well, here's a shilling. Cook him another steak and bring me his."

"Yes, sir."—London Telegraph.

Too Much Like Work.

"It's terrible to be sleepy so much of the time," said Meandering Mike.

"Why don't you go to sleep?" rejoined Plodding Pete. "You might as well."

"Dat's where you're wrong. If dere is anyt'ing I dreads, it's goin' to sleep. I might dream I was workin'."—Washington Star.

Irene's Opportunity.

Willie—What makes you come to our house so often, Mr. Hankinson? Do you want to marry our Irene?

Miss Irene (taken by surprise, but realizing with rare presence of mind that Mr. Hankinson has to say something now)—Willie, you impertinent boy, leave the room!

Usually the opportunities that come to a man are those that knock on his door on a cold morning and he has to go out in his bare feet and coax in.—Atchison Globe.

A PRELUDE TO THE MARITAL KISS

[Original.]

Blakely Wharton came home early expecting to find his wife at the door to give him a kiss, as was her daily custom. He was disappointed. Going into her boudoir he threw himself on a lounge for awhile, then concluded that he would write a letter. In the boudoir was an antique desk in which Mrs. Wharton kept her papers and her correspondence. Sitting at this desk Mr. Wharton penned his epistle, addressed it and set about hunting for a stamp. In the effort, opening and shutting tiny drawers, punching here and there, suddenly he was astonished to see a drawer fly open from a place where he had never known there was a drawer. In the bottom were several papers. Taking one up, he read:

Dearest—I was not able to come to you on Munday, as my Horse had gone lame. I will see you as soon as possible, but I cannot tell exactly what day.

GEORGE.

"Can it be from one of Laura's old lovers? She's had this desk for twenty years and doubtless has used this drawer. Upon my word, I never supposed my wife could have associated with—had a lover who would spell horse with a capital H and Monday with a u."

He glanced at the next paper:

Dearest—I was frightened today at meeting you in company with a Stranger, especially since I have heard reports about you. Do relieve my anxiety as soon as possible. G.

The next had been addressed on the back, but the name had been erased:

Dearest—You say that you still love me, but that fate separates us forever. Is it possible that you can think of marriage with another? YOUR LOVER.

At this point Blakely began to devour the missives greedily and with terrible anxiety. Some of them had dates and other features to give a meager information about them, but he was too eager to get the story to notice anything except the facts stated. The next note was postmarked, but to this Blakely was oblivious:

Oh, my darling, how can you submit to this tyranny? You know you are my Wife in the sight of God, and yet you are going to marry another Man, stabbing me and him at the same time. Turn before it is too late. YOUR HUSBAND.

Blakely's heart seemed suddenly to freeze. "O God!" he moaned and, sinking on a lounge, buried his face in the cushions. In this position his wife found him a few minutes later. Surmising that he had fallen asleep, she went to him and, sitting on the sofa beside him, put her arms about him.

"Go away!" he cried.

"Why, Blakely, what's the matter?"

"Go away, I tell you! I have discovered all."

"Great heavens! What all?"

"Bigamist!"

By this time Blakely Wharton was standing in the center of the floor, glaring like a lion.

"Oh, Blakely, what does this attack mean? Be calm. You have been overstrained by the loss of your suit in court, but the appeal will be decided in your favor. Do lie down and let me pet you."

"And you have been living with me ten years, the wife of another man! You were not even married to the first. He calls it a marriage 'in the sight of God.' We all know what that means."

The wife stepped to the electric button.

"What are you going to do?" cried her husband.

"Send for the doctor, the police, somebody, anybody. I can't take care of you alone."

"Hold! I am as sane as you. I sat at your desk to write a note. Accidentally a drawer flew open, and I found notes that you have been treasuring, hiding where you supposed they would never come to light. They prove conclusively that when you married me you were the wife of another, an 'in the sight of God' wife at that."

"I never knew of that drawer."

The notes were either on the desk or on the floor. Mrs. Wharton gathered them up and ran them hastily over. Then her brow lowered. For the first time since their marriage her husband saw her angry.

"Blakely, you are a fool!"

Her action warned Mr. Wharton that perhaps he might have been hasty.

"Do you suppose anybody nowadays spells nouns with capitals?"

"I didn't know anybody ever did."

"Or Monday with a u?"

"I noticed that. I thought you—I mean the fellow—must have been uneducated."

"Did you notice these dates?"

"No; I was too cut up."

"Do you suppose I'm a hundred and twenty-five years old?"

"No, my dear. You're only thirty-two."

"Thirty-one. If this note was for me, I must be a century and a quarter old, for it was written in 1777."

"You don't mean it!"

"And this postmark on the back—do you suppose a man even ten years ago would have written me a letter and sent it through the post without the envelope?"

"Why, no."

Mrs. Wharton started to leave the room. "My love," called her husband, "you have forgotten something."

"What?"

"That which you usually give me at the door."

Mrs. Wharton made no reply, continuing on her way upstairs.

Wharton had fallen into error within a few minutes. It required a few hours to do away with the effects. It was not till 10 o'clock that night that Mrs. Wharton was sufficiently appeased to give him the marital kiss.

SPIRIT OF MILITARISM

Its Growth In United States May Change Whole World's History

Vienna, Jan. 2.—In the course of an exhaustive review of the history of the world, contributed to The Neue Freie Presse by Max Nordau, the writer deeply deplores the growth of military imperialism in the United States and says that by the admission of the spirit of militarism, which was formerly rigorously excluded, America is raising obstacles to the entrance of emigrants whose only capital is their strong working arms.

Speaking of the future of the new world, M. Nordau says the opening of the Panama canal under American ownership will mark the beginning of a new epoch. The tragic stage of the world's history, which, in ancient times, centered in the Mediterranean, and which moved in the naval ages to the Atlantic, will then be transferred to the Pacific ocean.

At first the Anglo-Saxon element will seek to drive out the German and French flags floating over single points in the Pacific ocean; then the struggle will be carried further to the Asiatic coast, where Anglo-Saxons and Russians will have to decide the momentous world question of whether eastern and southern Asia shall remain British or Russian. To this forecast M. Nordau adds:

"One can only imagine with horror what such a gigantic struggle of nations and races will signify."

Oil of Rattlesnakes.

In Pennsylvania the oil of rattlesnakes is preserved most carefully as a liniment especially good for sore joints and for rheumatism. In procuring the oil the dead snake is nailed head and tail to a board and cut open. The fat is taken out and laid upon a cloth in the hot sun, from which the filtered oil drips into a jar. From fear that the reptile may have bitten itself the clear oil is tested by dropping a portion of it into milk. If it floats in one globule, it is regarded as unaffected; if, on the other hand, it breaks into beads and curdles the milk, it is judged to be poisonous and thrown away.

He Knew Some Costly Ones.

In order to discourage the use of objectionable words, says the Chicago Post, the father had evolved a system of fines, somewhat after this fashion:

Hang it, 1 cent.
Darn it, 2 cents.
Gosh, 3 cents.
Gosh darn it, 5 cents.

The boy who was to be reformed by this method studied the tariff with considerable interest, but it was some time before he spoke.

"Well," he said at last, "I guess I know some words that would cost a quarter!"

To Clean Nickel Clocks.

Cheap nickel clocks that have proved their convenience through much popular use play tricks with their timekeeping occasionally for want of cleaning. This fault may be quickly remedied with naphtha. The backs should be unscrewed and the works taken out and immersed in the fluid, a treatment that will speedily restore their service unless some more radical defect than dust is the trouble.

For a bad taste in the mouth take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price 25 cents. Warranted to cure. For sale by all Druggists.

Castro Looks to Them For Solution of Difficulties

POWERS HAVE HIS REPLY

Substantially an Unqualified Acceptance of Proposals to Arbitrate—Question Now Is What Shall Be Done With the Blockade

Caracas, Jan. 2.—The correspondent of The Associated Press saw President Castro yesterday afternoon. The chief executive declares he wants only fair treatment. It was clear from what President Castro said at the interview that he believes it would be very easy to reach a full settlement of the entire controversy.

President Castro said to the correspondent: "If a settlement is not reached it will be because a settlement forms no part of the plan of the allies. In this case the prolongation of the present situation would be disastrous for all concerned. The solution of the present difficulty depends more on the allied powers than on Venezuela."

The president was questioned as to whether or not he would renounce the presidency, and if it was his purpose to make a change in the present cabinet. He replied: "People are at liberty to talk whatever nonsense they want to. I will make a change in the cabinet when the present serious question is ended."

Proposals Fully Accepted

Berlin, Jan. 2.—President Castro's reply to the powers, through Minister Bowen, is substantially an unqualified acceptance of their proposals to arbitrate and the accompanying conditions.

The foreign office here received his answer yesterday and is satisfied with its spirit. A further interchange of views, preparatory to signing the protocol, will take place in Washington. The only really important question to be settled is, what shall be done with the blockade? A continuance of the blockade is relied upon to hasten the conclusion of the arbitration preliminaries, especially on the part of Venezuela.

Pleased at Hay's Course

Rome, Jan. 2.—At the New Year's diplomatic reception Foreign Minister Prinetti and Ambassador Meyer exchanged congratulations over the anticipated settlement by arbitration of the Venezuelan troubles. Signor Prinetti expressed his appreciation of the attitude of the United States and his satisfaction at the state department's action throughout the affair.

England Hears of Acceptance

London, Jan. 2.—Mr. White, United States charge of affairs, delivered to the foreign office yesterday the note of Secretary Hay announcing President Castro's acceptance of the proposal that the Venezuelan claims be arbitrated by the international court at The Hague.

The Belgian and Dutch Claims

Brussels, Jan. 2.—It is said here that an arrangement has been concluded with Great Britain and Germany to submit the Belgian and Dutch claims against Venezuela to the international peace court at The Hague at the same time the Anglo-American claims against the South American republic are taken to that tribunal.

Stirred Up Bad Feeling

La Guaira, Jan. 2.—The former Venezuelan gunboat Zumbador, now transformed into a British warship, arrived here at noon yesterday, and caused considerable indignation among the people ashore, who looked upon her arrival here under the British flag, especially on New Year's day, as adding insult to injury. The Italian armed cruiser Carlos Alberto arrived here yesterday afternoon.

General's Views Were Personal

Berlin, Jan. 2.—The Tagliche Rundschau denies that the recent article by General Von Boguslawski, advocating resistance to the Monroe doctrine, was inspired. The paper says that the general, being retired, does not have to get the permission of the government to express his views publicly. He is one of the editors of The Rundschau.

Working Hours Curtailed

Knoxville, Jan. 2.—The Riverside woolen mills and the Knoxville woolen mills of this city announce a reduction of hours for their employes from 11 to 10 hours a day, without cutting wages. The mills employ about 900 people. The initiative was taken by C. L. Parham, of the Riverside mills, who is issuing an appeal to all textile industries in the south to take similar action.

Promises to Enforce Law

Rumford Falls, Me., Jan. 2.—The following, attributed to Sheriff Flint, defines the intention of the new administration on enforcement of the prohibitory law: "A clean, impartial and vigorous administration, more especially directed against violent and dangerous crimes and criminals, including rumsellers and keepers of gambling resorts, and other nuisances."

PLAGUE STRICKEN CITY

Five Thousand Persons Have Fled In Terror From Mazatlan, Mex

Mazatlan, Mex., Jan. 2.—There is no longer the slightest doubt that the disease now afflicting this city is genuine Asiatic plague, for microscopic investigation proves that bubonic pest baccili are in the blood of those afflicted with the disease.

The plague has grown virulent within the last 48 hours, and the alarm, which had begun in some measure to abate, has returned with increased strength. The people are fleeing from the city at the rate of 300 a day and some 5000 persons have gone already. More than 50 percent of the persons attacked are women.

The news of the recrudescence of the plague at this port has reached the interior towns of the state and is causing a panic. Sanitary cordons of armed men have been placed around the towns to prevent the entrance of any one from this place.

Hints From King Leopold

Brussels, Jan. 2.—King Leopold made a curious response to the president of parliament yesterday. He alluded to the initiative he himself had taken upon many occasions, notably in China, and asked the chamber to continue to show the same blind confidence in him that it had always done and continued: "Thanks to the close union between the king and the legislative chambers, we shall be able to achieve things which cannot be explained at this moment, but of which the people will understand the bearing only by the results." His majesty's remarks are supposed to point to some new development of Belgian interests in China, and possibly in the Congo Free State.

A Veto on Favoritism

Fort Scott, Kas., Jan. 2.—An order to the effect that no relative of an official shall be employed in a position subordinate to that official on the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain systems, went into operation yesterday. The order has resulted in a number of changes.

HARMLESS AS MILK

Look out what you put into the child's stomach! Children are especially sensitive to the action of medicine. But you need never fear Scott's Emulsion. That is one reason why it is so popular as a children's medicine.

"As harmless as milk"—that is saying a good deal. But we may go even further and say that Scott's Emulsion will stay on the child's stomach when milk will not.

A little added to the milk in baby's bottle and a little after meals for older children is just the right thing for the weak and sickly ones.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

CHOWFA'S LOVE NOTES

Siamese Prince's Wooing of an American Actress.

SENT HER MANY WARM VERSES.

Love Letters Recent Royal Visitor to the United States Is Said to Have Written to Miss Mabelle Gilman While He Was at College In England.

The passionate press agent for Mabelle Gilman has broken into that actress' writing desk and stolen therefrom a packet of letters, and the other day he gave to the world the love letters of the Prince of Siam, says the New York Tribune. Miss Gilman, who is called Tcherno Okaya by her Siamese swain, was sorry—quite grieved, in fact—that the letters had got out. She could not understand how the press agent dared to take them without her permission.

The prince, by the bye, has left the country and is well on his way to Siam. The wise heads may take this fact for what it is worth.

The Prince of Siam first met Miss Gilman in London, when she was there with "The Belle of New York" and "a dangerous rival of Edna May in the affections of royalty" (the phrase is a bubble from the lips of her press agent). Their friendship seems to have inspired the crown prince to pour forth verse that if quantity counted should have won for him the Newdigate prize. Letters from him to her in 1901 bear the seal of Christ college, Oxford, and in all of them are inclosed verses, sometimes two or three separate poems. On the backs of the photographs he sent her he was more moderate, contenting himself with quoting from the poems of other men. If the letters themselves did not furnish proof of the genuineness of the story, the fact that these quotations are from Lovelace, Carew, S. T. Coleridge and Omar the Tentmaker would at once put them beyond the invention of Miss Gilman's press agent.

The first of the letters made public is dated from the Siamese legation, London, in December, 1900, and begins "My Dear Miss Gilman."

One year later, writing from Oxford, he opens as follows:

My "Tcherno Okaya"—I hope you know what this means by now, for you should have got the book I sent you the other day. But in case of accidents I had best explain that "Tcherno Okaya" is Russian and, being translated, means "sparkling eyes." Who deserves the name better than you?

This he signs "Bijou."

In this letter the verse begins. It is funny how Oxford affects people, as Sue used to remark to Jude. The poem inclosed is called "The Prince's Reverie" and consists of five quatrains modeled on the Rubaiyat and prefaced by the famous quatrain beginning "Ah, love, could you and I with him conspire," which the prince misquotes, though Mabelle probably didn't know it. His problem seems to be something like that which faces the hero of "Alt Heidelberg," for he sings, after three prefatory and ardent stanzas:

Ah, love, if only thou wert born princess
Or else myself were only something less
Than that which I am now—of rank so high—
Oh, then we two might know such happiness!

The best hours of my life away have flown,
But I am so thankful that I have known
The best and sweetest joy upon this earth
And that once I did call thee, love, my own.

M. V.

Writing from Washington in October of the present year he again reverts to verse for consolation, the shadow of coming parting cast across the paper. The poem is of four stanzas, wherein he goes Lovelace, who furnishes the model, one better. The poem closes as follows:

Ah, would I go, were it not such
As Lovelace sang of yore—
"I could not love thee, dear, so much, Loved I not honor more?"

At the Bijou theater the other night Miss Gilman said she might some day visit Siam, but, on the whole, she considered America good enough for her. In reply to the question put to her by an unabashed reporter whether or not the prince proposed, she replied, "What would you have done?"

This seemed to admit of but one answer, and she was allowed to make her entrance on the stage, where she could be heard singing, "Oh, listen to the mocking bird."

Result of Senator Clark's Rich Gift.

Representative Bowersock of Kansas recently received a letter that made him pause, says a Washington special to the New York World. His son wrote it. With the letter was a newspaper clipping reciting how Senator Clark of Montana would give $1,000,000 to his first grandson, born a few days ago. The letter said:

"Dear Father—This plan worked in Senator Clark's case. Why not try it yourself?"

"I am inclined to the opinion that Senator Clark has established a bad precedent," said Mr. Bowersock.

Seven New Poisons.

Professor Julius Schlotterback, professor of pharmacognosy in the University of Michigan, has discovered seven new poisons, says a dispatch to the Chicago Tribune from Ann Arbor, Mich. Three of them are made from the Allegheny vine. He has named two of the poisons adlumine and adlurnidine, and one is still unnamed. From the calandine poppy he has extracted the fourth and fifth poisons, called stylophine and disphylline, and from the Japanese calandine the poison bacconidine and one yet unnamed.

Washington, Jan. 2.—A cable message from Honolulu via the newly laid Pacific cable was received at the White House shortly before 3 o'clock this morning. San Francisco, Jan. 2.—The first message from Honolulu over the Pacific cable was received here at 11:03 last night. The signals were perfect at both ends. The speed was fast but the operators have not figured out the rate at which the earliest messages were exchanged. The first message was from Governor Dole to President Roosevelt. The text was withheld, pending receipt of the message by the president in person.

The minister conveyed these greetings to President Roosevelt. There was a felicitious exchange of compliments, and President Roosevelt requested Minister Quesada to convey to the Cuban people the wishes of himself and the people of the United States for the happiness and prosperity of the Cuban people and of President Palma.

GET STRONG

Vinol Makes Weak People Strong.

WE GUARANTEE IT WILL DO SO.

WE KNOW OF NO TONIC OR REBUILDER LIKE IT.

Vinol does create strength.

We know that and have proved it in many instances.

The reason Vinol rejuvenates and strengthens a person is that it acts directly upon the stomach, strengthening and toning up this great vital organ and enabling it to obtain for itself, from the food that is taken into it, the elements which are required to make firm healthy flesh and muscle tissue, sound bone structure and pure healthy blood.

Vinol does this in a scientific way and is enabled to do it because it contains, dissolved in a delicate mild wine, in a highly concentrated state, the active principles of cod-liver oil.

Vinol does not contain any of the grease that formerly characterized cod-liver oil, hence is free from all the objectionable features which made it impossible for patients to take or retain that vile-smelling remedy into their stomach.

Vinol in its favorable action upon the stomach and other organs of the body acts also in a beneficial way upon the nerves and brain, and will be found to be invaluable to brain workers as well as body workers.

The following letter is from a well-known authoress. It reads as follows:

"I wish to acknowledge the receipt of the Vinol and testify to its great benefits. Since taking it I am much improved in health, and during the intense heat of last August I should not have been able to continue in my literary work if it had not been for the strengthening properties of Vinol. Yours in gratitude."—ELLA STARR, 106 W. 82d St., N. Y. City.

We wish any one suffering from weakness, a demoralized condition of the nerves, or a susceptibility to wasting diseases, to call on us and hear what we have to say in regard to Vinol.

Try it on our recommendation, and if you find it does not do everything we claim for it, we will gladly refund to you the amount you have paid us.

The Social Realm.

Let me go where'er I will,
I hear a sky-born music still
It sounds from all things old,
It sounds from all things young;
From all that's fair, from all that's foul,
Peals out a cheerful song.
It is not only in the rose,
It is not only in the bird,
Not only where the rainbow glows,
Nor in the song of women heard;
But in the darkest, meanest things
There always, always something sings.
'Tis not in the high stars alone,
Nor in the cups of budding flowers,
Nor in the redbreast's mellow tone,
Nor in the bow that smiles in showers;
But in the mud and scum of things
There always, always something sings.
—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

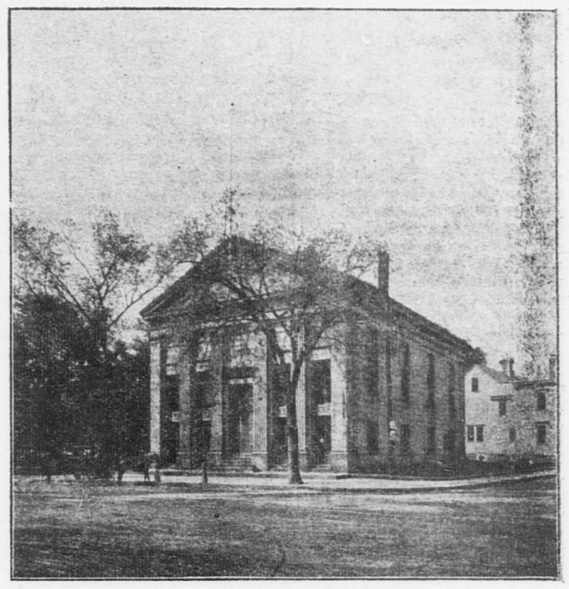
NEW CITY GOVERNMENT.

Next Monday Will Be Inauguration Day---The Program to be Observed.



CITY HALL, QUINCY.

The fifteenth year of City government will be inaugurated at 12 o'clock, noon, on Monday. The exercises will not differ materially from other years. Much interest, however, is always manifested in these occasions by the citizens and a large attendance is expected.

A few seconds before the hour of 12 a procession headed by City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell will enter the Council chamber by the rear stairway.

Following the City Messenger will be City Clerk James F. Harlow, who will administer the oath of office to the Mayor, and the members of the City Council, Rev. Frank W. Pratt of the Wollaston Unitarian church and Mayor-elect Charles M. Bryant.

The exercises will open with prayer by Rev. Mr. Pratt, which will be followed by the administering of the oath to the Mayor and Councilmen.

Mayor Bryant will then read his inaugural address which he promises will not be long.

City Clerk Harlow will then preside until a President of the Council is elected which will be by roll call and requires a majority vote. As there is no known contest, Charles H. Alden will doubtless be unanimously re-elected.

Then comes the election of a Clerk of Council, Clerk of Committees, City Auditor, City Messenger, and two trustees of the City Hospital.

As far as known there is no contest for any of the offices to be filled by the City Council, and doubtless the present efficient officials will be reelected.

The last routine matter will be the drawing for seats, after which the City Council will be ready for business.

A loan order in anticipation of taxes is usually offered at this meeting, and an order for the printing of the annual City Book.

A year ago Mayor Bryant announced the larger part of his appointments inauguration day. While no hint has been thrown out that he will do the same this year it would not be at all surprising should he do so.

Success for the city in 1903 and prosperity to its people.

THE NEW CITY COUNCIL.

A new City Council will be inaugurated on Monday next. Seventeen of the 23 members are experienced men; 2 of the number enter their fifth year, 3 their fourth year, 6 their third year, 6 their second year, and 6 their first year.

Who enters the City Council of 1903 as a member at-large, is a Quincy boy, and is also one of the youngest members. He was born in West Quincy May 11, 1876, and has always made Quincy his home.

His early education was obtained in the public schools and at the High school. He then entered the Burdett Business college and took a year's course.

Completing his education he was employed for a number of years as bookkeeper for F. E. Carr & Co., and E. C. Willison. Six years ago he became associated with his father, W. F. Loud, the well-known contractor. The office of Councilman is the first public position he has ever held, yet it may prove the stepping stone to an honorable political career.

He is a member of Rural lodge of Masons, St. Steephns chapter, South Shore Commandery of Knights Templars, Aleppo Temple of Mystic Shrine and the Granite City Club.

CHARLES H. HARDWICK,

The new councilman from Ward One was born in Quincy Oct. 4, 1872, and has always made this city his home.

INTO A YAWNING CHASM

Buildings In Mining Town Dropped From the Street

PEOPLE ALL FLED IN TIME

To Escape Death In Ruins of Hotel and Other Structures—Accident Due to Caving In of Abandoned Workings In a Colliery

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 3.—Abandoned workings of the Eddy Creek colliery of the Delaware and Hudson company, beneath the very heart of the town of Olyphant, caved in yesterday afternoon and engulfed four frame buildings, covering an aggregate ground space of 6600 square feet.

The settling was gradual and people in the affected territory escaped without being immediately endangered. A gang of men and boys who were at work in the mine beyond the fall encountered a flooded "dip," or depression in a vein, in making their way out by a circuitous route, and had to swim from one rise to the other. No one either above or below ground, however, sustained any injury.

At 3 o'clock the settling began. At 3:30 it was no longer perceptible. In the intervening half hour O'Brien's three-story hotel, Mrs. Evans' double dwelling, Mrs. Ackerly's double store building and a one-story barber shop were a mound of debris in the yawning pile, with the uppermost part of the mound 40 feet below the surface. O'Brien's hotel, which plunged first into the opening, has entirely disappeared. A few houses are projecting over the edge of the pit. The vein that caved is 115 feet below the surface.

The settling started in the street just in front of the hotel property. The brick street pavement was seen to be working and the telegraph poles and trees along the curb were wobbling. The cause was at once apparent and the alarm given to all the neighborhood. Some attempt was made at saving the contents of the buildings, but the rapidly increasing size of the opening in the street put a stop to this and everyone fled from the neighborhood.

Twenty minutes after the disturbance was first noticed the opening had widened until it reached all the way across the street and half way beneath the O'Brien hotel. Then, with a terrific crash, the hotel pitched forward, turned completely about and landed on [illegible] of the abyss. [illegible] ing double [illegible] ll over the [illegible] on the ruins [illegible] double store [illegible] barber shop [illegible] m about the same time and piled themselves, broken and twisted, on the other debris. The property damage is estimated at $30,000.

District Superintendent Bennett of the Delaware and Hudson company, who went into the mine and with a party of other officials made an examination, reports that the settling has ceased.

Workings which caved in were in the uppermost part of the worked-out veins. The timbers, it is explained by the company officials, supported a thin roof of rock, which in turn supported stratas of quicksand and gravel extending to the surface. The timbers rotted, the roof gave way and all above them sunk into the pit.

For Relief of Passengers

New York, Jan. 3.—The state board of railroad commissioners, which has been conducting hearings on jamming in "L" cars, directs that 300 extra cars be placed in service within three months; that the so-called rush hour service be continued from early morning until midnight, and that third tracks be built on certain lines and streets.

Audience Snubbed Our Anthem

London, Jan. 3.—A large audience welcomed the reappearance of Sousa and his band in London last night. At the beginning of the program the band broke out with "God Save the King" and the whole audience stood up, but when, without stopping, the music merged into "The Star Spangled Banner," the majority of those present sat down.

Danger In Toy Pistols

Norfolk, Jan. 3.—The list of fatalities from lockjaw caused by powder burns from toy pistols on Christmas day has reached a total of six, while several other children are being treated for injuries from the same cause. Mayor Riddick has ordered the police to confiscate all toy pistols found in the possession of children.

Away Out of Her Course

Halifax, Jan. 3.—A cable from Captain Manthorn of the schooner Severn announces the Severn's arrival at St. Thomas, W. I. The Severn left New York for Weymouth, N. S., on Nov. 28, and probably was carried to the southward during heavy gales.

Deaf Mute Until Just Before Death

Jackson, Tenn., Jan. 3.—Clara Ware, aged 10, died yesterday. She was deaf and dumb and was never known to have uttered an intelligible word until a few hours before her death, when she called upon members of the family to come to her.

Bret Hart Was Not Rich

London, Jan. 3.—Letters of administration of the estate of the late Bret Hart have been granted. The total value of the estate is placed at $1800.

MURDER CHARGED

Lelia Manson and George Wilson Suspected of Administering Poison

Ashford, Conn., Jan. 3.—After a hearing before Justice of the Peace Knowlton at Warrenville yesterday, Mrs. Leila Manson and George Wilson of this town were held without bonds for the superior court on the charge of murder in the first degree. They are accused of having caused the death of Wilson's mother, Mrs. Julia Wilson, by administering poison. As the next term of the superior court will not be held until March the prisoners will remain in jail at Brooklyn until that time.

Neither of the accused was represented by counsel yesterday, and beyond the declaration "not guilty," neither took any active part in the proceedings in the court. They listened to the testimony of the witnesses presented by State Attorney Hunter, the man maintaining an impassive attitude through most of the ordeal, while the woman evinced the deepest interest.

Serious Wreck at Ayer

Ayer, Mass., Jan. 3.—A passenger train ran into an open switch at a siding near Ayer station yesterday where freight cars are stored, causing perhaps fatal injuries to two trainmen, smashing one freight car to splinters and wrecking the pilot and front of the passenger engine. Baggage Master William Balcom sustained concussion of the brain, a severe rupture and a bad cut on the back of the head. Express Messenger Hall had his arm broken and leg injured and was injured internally.

Hay-Bond Treaty Favored

Boston, Jan. 3.—At a meeting of the Boston fish trade yesterday to discuss the proposed Hay-Bond treaty in its relation to the fish interests, a motion was adopted that it was the sense of the meeting that the treaty should be adopted, and a committee was appointed to select a delegate to press the matter at Washington. It was declared that such a treaty would not harm Gloucester, and would be of great benefit to Boston and New England.

Socialists' Cure For Coal Famine

Boston, Jan. 3.—Under the auspices of the Boston central committee of the Socialist party a large gathering was held in Faneuil hall last night, addressed by prominent Socialists, at which resolutions were passed placing the responsibility for the coal famine upon the private ownership of the means of fuel production, distribution and supply, and demanding ownership by the people of municipal fuel yards, railroads and coal mines.

Classed as Prize Fight

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 3.—Vigorous prosecution will follow the management of the Duane-Bolan contest held in this city Thursday night. The bout is held to be a prize fight. Detectives in the employ of the State Law and Order league and a retired New Haven clergyman witnessed the contests from the audience. "Black Fitzsimmons" was knocked out in the fourth round after having been brutally punished.

Used Hatchet on Wife

Boston, Jan. 3.—Robert T. Gregg, who attacked his wife with a hatchet at their home Dec. 16, was charged with assault with intent to commit murder yesterday. Mrs. Gregg, who has been confined in the city hospital since the assault, appeared as a witness. A quarrel over money matters was the cause of the trouble. Judge Bolster held Gregg in bonds of $5000 for his appearance before the grand jury.

Maine's Fine Financial Showing

Augusta, Me., Jan. 3.—The state treasurer has completed the balancing of his books for the pear 1902 and finds that the cash on hand aggregates $438,892.68, a gain of $140,955.51 over the balance of last year and $240,013.67 more than was in the treasury Jan. 1, 1901. Besides this, the treasurer has paid $386,000 in temporary loans and $120,000 on the funded debt of the state.

Carriage Factories Still Open

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 3.—No material change has occurred in the carriage makers' strike. Most of the factories are open and some departments are running. The union intercepted three men who had come to town yesterday looking for work, and paid their fares to other places. The manufacturers appear to be satisfied with conditions.

Labor and the Militia

New Haven, Jan. 3.—In resigning his commission as first lieutenant of Company E, Second regiment, C. N. G., Robert L. Walker, Jr., announces that he took this action because it was not consistent with his views as a member of a labor union to belond to the militia. Lieutenant Walker is secretary of the Car Builders' union in this city.

Three Score Years In Ministry

Somerville, Mass., Jan. 3.—Rev. S. F. Cummings died at his home here yesterday, aged 88. He was born in Greene, Me., and for over 60 years was a member of the Methodist ministry, but for 35 years past had been agent of the New England home for little wanderers in Boston. He leaves no family.

Determined Attempt at Suicide

Waltham, Mass., Jan. 3.—John Bergenson, 42 years old, while despondent, drank a quantity of kerosene oil yesterday and when that failed to kill him he severed the arteries in his throat. He is very weak from loss of blood, but it is thought that he will recover.

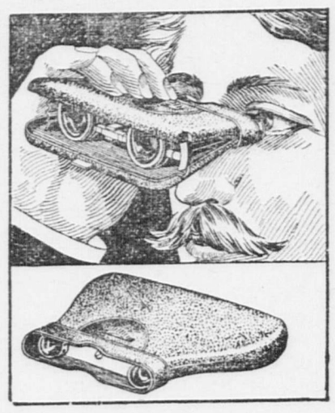
Bankruptcy Recommended

Providence, Jan. 3.—The creditors of the Riverside Coal and Lumber company held a meeting here yesterday and voted that the company be requested to go into bankruptcy. The liabilities amount to about $40,000, with assets of probably half that sum.

UNIQUE INVENTIONS

M. L. Petit of France has just invented a very ingenious field or opera glass, one that closes like an ordinary pocketbook with a clasp and occupies no more room in the pocket.

The apparatus, according to a description in La Nature, is composed of a flat and light frame which has the eye pieces fixed to its upper portion.



FOLDING GLASS.

These eye pieces slide by means of a setting screw. On the lower portion of the frame are fixed the object glasses mounted on a pivot, which follows the line passing through their centers, thus allowing them to swing around their axes so that they may be brought to occupy a position that is perpendicular to the plane of the frame or, on the contrary, to place them in the plane of the frame, according as the glass is open or closed.

OXYGEN FOR FISH FRY.

Ingenious Swiss Devise a Very Clever Invention.

Lack of oxygen causes the death of fish fry rapidly in transportation for the purpose of planting in foreign waters, as fish commissioners often learn. For a long time the device of constantly supplying fresh water by an attendant has been adopted, and sometimes, says a writer in the Brooklyn Eagle, when the fish fry must be taken a long distance entirely new water must be supplied to the tanks. Max Kern and Alfred Wiget, residents of Switzerland, have invented a means of supplying the necessary oxygen to the water by passing into the water either air or the constituent thereof which is necessary to the maintenance of life.

Attached to the transport vessel that contains the fish are two cylinders containing air or oxygen, which is compressed in one cylinder until the pressure reaches the proper power, as shown on a gauge at the top. Before this air or oxygen is introduced into the water it is transferred to the other cylinder to reduce its pressure, flowing from this reservoir to a pipe leading to the bottom of the water tank. The air bubbles slowly from the bottom of this tank, from the perforations in the second pipe, and mingles with the water, thus giving the needed oxygen to preserve the fish fry.

The air may be compressed by means of a small pump mounted on the side of the tank and in this way enabling the attendant to recharge the cylinder as the pressure decreases.

Remedy For Smoke Nuisance.

A newly discovered remedy for the smoke nuisance that is attracting some attention in England is the injection into the furnace of minute quantities of nitrate of soda (in solution) with sufficient air to insure combustion of the gases. In addition to the disappearance of smoke, there is said to be an increased efficiency of combustion to the amount of 20 per cent. The cost of this device is figured at from 6 to 8 cents per ton of coal burned.

ENGINEERING

A small army of experts and laborers is at work establishing the plant of the Atlanta company on the Chattahoochee river, and one of the finest dams in the world is planned, says the New York Post. The building of the plant will call for the expenditure of $1,500,000. The dam will be built of concrete, will be about 1,100 feet from shore to shore, 50 feet high and 65 feet wide at the base, tapering to about 14 feet at the top. It is expected that the work of establishing the plant will consume between eighteen and twenty-four months.

To build a structure of such magnitude will, of course, take time. Cofferdams will be constructed as the work proceeds, and a new plan of construction will be in force. All of the work on the dam will be done from overhead. Three cable systems are to be established, and the material will be transported over these cables to the points where needed. One of the cable lines is now working, another is in course of construction and the third will be put into working order at once. No matter whether the water is high or low in the river, the work will go forward, because the cable systems will prevent delays. Freshets will have no effect on the work.

The electrical plant will be able to generate from 11,000 to 15,000 horsepower of current, and after additional machinery has been installed 20,000 horsepower will doubtless be attained. The machinery has been contracted for, and just as soon as the dam and power house are completed it will be put in place.

FATAL WORDS.

The Slip That Doomed Major Andre and Saved West Point.

At Tarrytown there is a monument surmounted by a bronze figure ever on duty that marks the spot where on Sept. 23, 1780, a man sprang, as it were, out of the ground, seized the bridle of the traveler's horse and at the same instant demanded a halt. Two other men joined the first, and to these three the traveler offered the authority for John Anderson to pass on public business and signed by the major general commanding West Point.

For one moment the pass sufficed. Then there was doubt. In that moment of hesitation the traveler's eyes rested upon a coat that one of the men wore which he had obtained while a prisoner not long before, and, recognizing the garb of the Hessian soldiers attached to the British army, the traveler concluded hastily that he had fallen among friends instead of foes. "I see you belong to the army down below, as I do," he remarked, with a slight gesture of the head toward the river.

Fatal words! They sealed the doom of Adjutant Major General John Andre of the British army. He was quickly dismounted and searched without result, and still there was delay. Some latent sense of required vigilance incited these humble militiamen to renewed search of the traveler's person. West Point was saved.

A Horse's Sense of Smell.

A horse will leave musty hay untouched in his bin, however hungry. He will not drink of water objectionable to his questioning sniff or from a bucket which some odor makes offensive, however thirsty. His intelligent nostril will widen, quiver and query over the daintiest bit offered by the fairest of hands, with coaxings that would make a mortal shut his eyes and swallow a mouthful at a gulp. A mare is never satisfied by either sight or whinny that her colt is really her own until she has a certified nasal proof of the fact. A blind horse, now living will not allow the approach of any stranger without showing signs of anger not safely to be disregarded. The distinction is evidently made by his sense of smell and at a considerable distance. Blind horses, as a rule, will gallop wildly about a pasture without striking the surrounding fence. The sense of smell informs them of its proximity. Others will, when loosened from the stable, go direct to the gate or bars opened to their accustomed feeding grounds and when desiring to return, after hours of careless wandering, will distinguish one outlet and patiently await its opening.—St. James Gazette.

English Style Dinners.

In the endeavor to be like the English in some of their ways, curious customs are started in France. For instance, among the middle classes, when a special dinner is given in the "English style" the length of the dining table is loaded with immense dishes, their shape and form each indicating their contents, in the same way as the rounded cover of a cheese dish, in the form of a cheese, tells its own story. One of these dishes will be butter colored, and rounded knobs, representative of plain boiled potatoes, will ornament the cover; another of green and white will have raised cabbage leaves running over, while yet another is all in ridges, indicative of a bundle of asparagus.

The wells of the dishes themselves are all treated in the same way, and the coloring, roughly speaking, is correct.

Good Substitute.

"Father, I should like to try one of these systems of physical exercise that are advertised in the papers. They are cheap, and you don't need any apparatus."

"I'll furnish you with one, my son, that I tried with great success when I was a young man, and I'll warrant it to be as good as any in the market."

"Could I take it here at home?"

"Yes; that is one of its chief merits."

"Any apparatus necessary?"

"Yes, but it's quite simple. I'll furnish it."

"Can I take it in my room?"

"No; you take it out at the woodpile. You will find the apparatus there, all ready for you, my son."—Chicago Tribune.

W. S. Gilbert's Career.

It is said that W. S. Gilbert was meant for the bar, and his father was reluctant to see him turning in other directions. "If you would only stick to it," said the elder Gilbert, "you might become lord chancellor."

"So I might," answered the author of the "Pinafore" to be, "and if I stick to the theaters I may become Sheridan. One's as likely as the other, and of the two I prefer Sheridan."

That was a preference lucky for the lovers of the stage.

Mrs. Brown (the girl's former mistress)—You need not be in the least alarmed. She is perfectly honest. All the time she was with me I never knew her to take a thing—not even my advice as to how things should be done.

FRAUGHT WITH DANGER

Details of Cable Ship's Exciting Voyage to Honolulu

HAD MEMORABLE STRUGGLE

Against Adverse Winds and Waves to Bring Hitherto Isolated Community Two Thousand Miles Nearer the Parent Continent

Honolulu, Jan. 3.—The voyage of the cable ship Silvertown, which laid the first section of the submarine cable that is to connect the United States with its insular possessions in the Pacific and eventually with the continent of Asia, was eventful and at times unpleasantly exciting. Twelve hours out from San Francisco the ship was beset by bad weather, which continued, with the exception of one day, to the end of the voyage. Variable winds, that at times approached the velocity of gales, and heavy seas, retarded progress and endangered the safety of the cable. In fact every adverse condition that is usually encountered in the laying of a cable was met with. At times the task was almost hazardous.

On Dec. 15 the vessel ran into a squall of wind and rain that came out of the west. Steering a southwesterly course the Silvertown offered a broad beam to the storm. Soon the vessel was rolling in a manner most dangerous to the cable. Towards evening the rain ceased, but the storm continued unabated throughout the night.

These were anxious hours for the men charged with the safety of the cable. Two courses were open, either to keep on the true course or to cut and buoy the line. Both were fraught with danger. A deviation from the course was obviously out of the question, as much for the reason that such action would not have lessened the strain upon the cable as the more important consideration of the waste of time and the danger of getting into unknown depths. To cut and buoy the cable would have been equally dangerous.

All chances were carefully weighed and the vessel's bow was kept to the southwest. Tuesday, the 16th, brought no improvement in the weather conditions. The wind continued to blow great blasts from the west and the seas constantly bombarded the big ship's starboard beam.

At times the ship rolled terribly and it seemed that the great strain would prove disastrous to the cable. Under ordinary conditions the line is paid out 7 percent faster than the speed of the vessel. This was increased during the storm to 10 percent. Even with this concession the strain was terrific. As the ship lifted and lurched the great drum around which the strand was passing would almost cease to revolve one moment, only to resume with a rush the next, rendering the life of the men in the tanks in danger.

The dynomometer regulating the speed of the line and the strain was fluctuating wildly at such times, rushing from an indicated strain of two tons or less up to four and even five tons. The breaking strain is 8 3-4 tons, and a failure to relieve the strain promptly meant disaster, as the loss of that line in 2500 fathoms would have resulted in a long and serious delay in the completion of the work of laying the cable, as well as being a most expensive happening to that contracting company. Rare good judgment in the handling of both the ship and the cable at these critical times averted an accident.

Throughout Monday night and until Tuesday noon, when the wind abated in force, the ship's officers and crew and the cable staff were on duty without rest or sleep. Great relief was expressed when the apparently critical situation was passed.

On Friday the first section of the cable, measuring 929 nautical miles, was finished, and the vessel was stopped at 8 p. m. to make the change to the after tank, containing the second section.

This interesting and hazardous operation was successfully carried out in a little more than an hour, and progress was resumed. As the vessel grew lighter the rolling increased. The character of the cargo and the ponderous deck machinery made her particularly susceptible to the onslaught of the seas. For 24 hours ending at noon Sunday, the 21st, 217 knots of cable were laid. The day was notable for two things, the crossing of the Vancouver-Australian cable at 4 o'clock in the morning and the receipt of the first batch of news from San Francisco. This latter consisted of brief bulletins of President Roosevelt's appointment as arbitrator in the Venezuelan controversy, the train wreck at Byron, Cal., the capture of the Humberts in Madrid, Marconi's latest claims in wireless telegraphy discoveries and some minor items.

Tuesday, the 23d, opened with stormy weather. Flurries of rain and heavy seas again brought danger to the crew.

From Tuesday noon to Wednesday night, the deepest water was crossed, averaging 3000 fathoms. Christmas day was not a pleasant one and the custom of celebrating the day was postponed to a more propitious time. The wind increased to a velocity greater than experienced on Monday and Tuesday. Just before midnight a final change of tanks was made, the after tank being emptied of its 996 miles of cable and the bight transferred to the forward tank. The change was made extremely hazardous, owing to the tossing and rolling of the now almost empty vessel.

Throughout the day a gale blew, with the end of the deep sea cable in sight, and with it the necessity of cutting or buoying the end. An anxious night was passed by all on board. Many of the officers were tossed about and thrown upon the deck. After 8 o'clock in the evening the Silverton's speed was reduced in order to bring her to a suitable buoying place toward daylight. Between 2 and 3 o'clock three soundings were taken, and preparations were made to buoy the sea end.

The operation proved a most difficult one, as the vessel at times rolled to the angle of 45 degrees. It was with difficulty that the line was made fast to the cable and the end buoyed. Word was given to cut the line at 5:20, and as the six-inch Manila hawser was cut with the knife, it parted with a snap. So great was the strain upon it that friction caused it to take fire as it passed over the sheaves at the stern and the sparks scattered about the deck in a pyrotechnic display. The buoy was jerked overboard with terrific force, but quickly righted itself.

The cable was safely buoyed in 450 fathoms of water. A marked buoy was dropped as near as possible to the cable buoy and the vessel stood by until 8 o'clock in order to get the bearings. She then proceeded to Honolulu, where she arrived at noon on Dec. 26.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Indications Point to Remarkable Prosperity In All Branches

New York, Jan. 3.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Despite the interruption of a holiday, taking of inventories, preparation of annual reports and all the other disturbing elements incidental to the closing of the old year and inauguration of the new, the past week has been far from dull. Consumers were not perceptibly lessening purchases, while the approach of higher freight rates accelerated shipment of goods. Transporting facilities continue utterly inadequate, the pressing need for fuel diverting rolling stock from other classes of freight. At a few fortunate points the supply of coal has increased, but generally the deliveries are only a small fraction of the quantity desired. New wage scales have become effective, largely enhancing the purchasing power of the people, which must be reflected in an increased demand for commodities. The new year opens with every prospect of exceptional activity in all branches of business.

No new features have developed in the footwear situation, prices remaining firm and order books full. Factories will resume vigorous activity as soon as inventories and annual repairs are concluded.

Textile mills are busy, with only a hand to mouth home demand for cotton goods, but export buying for China continues large. Since the movement began a few weeks ago, about 100,000 bales of sheetings and drills have been taken. Overcoatings attract most attention in the woolen goods division.

Australia Hard Up For Flour

Washington, Jan. 2.—Two hundred thousand tons of breadstuffs must be imported from wheat producing centres to Australia during the coming season to meet harvest deficiencies, says United States Consul Goding, at Newcastle, in a report to the state department. The consul says the price of California flour has risen so greatly that the effect will be to divert a good deal of trade to Canada.

But One Man Unscathed

Santiago, Jan. 3.—Seven Italian peddlers became involved in a drunken brawl here last night and fought desperately with knives and revolvers. Two of the men were killed instantly, two died later, the fifth was fatally and the sixth man seriously wounded. The seventh man, who did most of the killing, was not hurt. The men concerned were brothers and cousins.

British Blockade Prizes

La Guaira, Jan. 3.—British gunboat Zumbador, formerly the Venezuela war vessel of that name, left here for Trinidad yesterday, towing four schooners and three sloops captured by the British since the blockade began. She is to return here for other prizes.

Newly Discovered Riches In Africa

London, Jan. 3.—It seems to be beyond question, cables the Johannesburg correspondent of The Daily Mail, that large and enormously rich diamond fields exist north of Pretoria.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johnanna Soderham, of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

☞It is perhaps true that a few old gentlemen try to persuade themselves that for a few years more they may stammer out some old-fashioned sentences which defame God in despising man. But, really, the world of the new century, whether on the throne of the Pope or in the appeal of the comeouter, owns God as our Father, knows he is at hand, and asks him for everything. Stated very simply, it would be fair to say that the real religion of today is the religion of the Lord's prayer. — "Memories of a hundred Years," by E. E. Hale.

DOCTORS IN CHINA.

They Feast Themselves Before They Physic Their Patients.

When a man in China becomes ill, his family sends for a doctor, and as no Chinese physician of established reputation will walk to a patient a carriage or a donkey must be sent to fetch him.

As soon as he reaches the house he is conducted into the best room and is entertained with tea, brandy and sweetmeats; or, if he has come a good distance, with a meal of several courses. No matter how ill his patient may be he will not approach him until he has thoroughly refreshed himself in this manner.

When at last he goes to his bedside, he first asks the patient if he is still able to eat, and he next examines his pulse. After the patient has bared his entire forearm the physician places his finger on the pulse and for several moments does not utter a word. Sometimes only one of his fingers and at other times all of them are employed at this work. When he breaks his silence, he describes minutely the disease from which the patient is suffering and writes a prescription.

Then the doctor takes his leave, promising to call again if necessary. He receives, as a rule, no fee for this service, but if he is a druggist he charges a large price for the medicine, or if he is not a druggist he receives a satisfactory commission from the one who prepares it. Moreover, the patient, if he recovers, generally gives him a handsome present.

If the Bible Perished?

If every complete copy of the Bible were destroyed, would it be possible of reproduction by ministers, theologians and others?

The probability is that it would, even if, as the question supposes, all the type kept up by the various printers of Bibles and Testaments and prayer books were also destroyed. In the first place, such a vast number of commentaries have been published in different languages on various portions of the Bible that it would almost be possible to reconstruct the Scriptures from them, and such deficiencies as existed would be supplied by ancient writings, mainly controversial works, which reproduce the text very fully. Sermons, homilies and kindred works would also be of great assistance, and such deficiencies as might still remain would certainly be supplied from the memories of the vast numbers of Biblical students who have studied the Scriptures in so many different languages.—London Answers.

Would Make Mummies.

No reason exists, says a foreign journal, why persons should not keep their beloved ones with them after death, since their bodies can very easily be mummified. The ancient Egyptians, it continues, were experts at this art, and a close study of some of their mummies shows how they did the work.

The body is placed in a boiler which contains chloride of calcium and which is heated to 125 degrees and after remaining there for a certain time is taken out and steeped for twenty-four hours in a cold solution of sulphate of sodium. By that time it is transformed into a perfect mummy, and the mourning relatives or friends can safely take it home and install it in a place of honor.

Women In New Zealand.

A man with daughters need not feel ashamed in New Zealand. He's a political power, a big man in the district in which he resides. All women over twenty-one years of age can vote, so the man with many daughters often decides a closely contested election. Then, again, women are much sought after matrimonially, for they are outnumbered by the men two to one. There is no need for a woman becoming an old maid. The women are good dressers, and the styles are as nearly up to date as those of London and New York.

Sea Talk.

Bobby—You have always shown a predilection for sea tales, haven't you? I know you always used to be reading them when we were in college.

Dicky—Yes; and I still like them as much as ever. By the way, on that sea voyage I took last year I was much astonished to find how unfamiliar the sailors were with sea language. They didn't talk a bit like the sailor the books tell about.—Boston Transcript.

Plenty of Thought.

"Auntie," said the judge to the battered lady of color, "did your husband strike you with malice aforethought?"

"'Deed he didn't, jedge," was the indignant reply. "He didn't hit me wid that mallet afore he thought. He'd been figgerin' on dat er long time, jedge; 'deed he had."—Baltimore News.

An Easy Problem.

The beggar had a notice up, "Deaf and Dumb," and the passing philanthropist stopped in front of him.

"I'd like to give this man something," he said to his companion, "but how am I to know that he is deaf and dumb?"

"Read the notice, sir," whispered the beggar cautiously.—Chums.

Rubbing It In.

He—If you wefuse me, I shall put a bullet thwough my bwain.

She—The idea! How could you?

He—I suppose you think I'm talking like a cwazy man?

She—Oh, no, like a sharpshooter.—Philadelphia Press.

Great After Dinner Speech.

Winks—And who made the speech?

Spunger—Goodley. He said, "Let me have the check, please, waiter."—Philadelphia Record.

Good Afternoon.

Quincy is envied by residents of other cities some of whom have paid over $20 per ton for coal delivered.

Few people realize how much suffering there is in Quincy over the scarcity of coal and what a Godsend it was that Mayor Bryant was able to get what coal he did. Several cases of destitution have been brought to light by the teamsters who are engaged in delivering bags of coal.

One case was of a family who had a young child that was seriously ill and not a thing in the house to burn. Another case brought to light this morning was where the driver of a team found a woman in sore distress for the lack of fuel. There was not a stick of wood, a piece of coal or a drop of kerosene oil in the house, and the woman was found seated in the middle of a blanket wrapped about her trying to keep warm while waiting for the delivery of the bag of coal that she had purchased of the city.

When such cases as these arise in this mild weather, what must the suffering be when cold weather comes. It must cause people to regret that a thousand or more tons of coal was sent away from Quincy a few months ago to New York and Boston parties, instead of being held for home trade.

Faxon Gave Coal.

The work of Mayor Bryant in securing coal for the citizens of Quincy causes Henry H. Faxon to rise up and say that the Mayor is not the only person who ever did anything in that line. He further remarks that he has had some experience himself in that line, and that while Mayor Bryant gives the coal at cost he gave his free and paid for the carting besides. This was way back in the years 1872, 1873 and 1874. In these three years Mr. Faxon gave to the poor of Quincy 61 tons of coal. In telling this story Mr. Faxon added that he did not give it in two-hundred pound lots but a ton at a time to each person.

New Governor.

The inauguration of Governor-elect Bates will take place in the house of representatives chamber at 12 m., Thursday, next. Invitations to the exercises have been issued. The galleries will probably be open at 10 a. m., or soon after, as the seasons of the house and senate, which include much preliminary matter, announcement of votes, appointment of committees of notification and organization of a joint session, usually meet by adjournment at 11 a. m.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Good-by to the old calendar, which told us when the Fourth of July and Christmas were coming, never took a day off, but hung around in the office all through vacation days, kept the run of the tides for us and saw the new moon a year ahead. Gone out with the old year, to give place to something up-to-date. We shall have to depend on a new authority when we need to consult the fire-alarm that covered your back.—Lynn Item.

FERGUSON OUT.

He Resigns from Police Force After 16 Years' Service.

The Police department appears to be furnishing the surprises just at present and now all eyes are being turned that way to see what will happen next.

The first surprise came Thursday night when several patrolmen were transferred to new beats. Among those to be changed was Officer Thomas F. Ferguson who was transferred from the Wollaston to the Brewers Corner beat. He had a warm time the first night on his new beat with a drunken Finn during which he received severe bruises.

Last night when the men lined up for roll call Officer Ferguson gave the officers a surprise by stepping from the line and informing the chief that he was through with the Police department, as he did not care to serve any longer.

Chief Hayden informed him that a resignation in that form could not be accepted. Officer Ferguson replied that he would tender his formal resignation Saturday.

Officer Ferguson has been on the police force for sixteen years. In 1898 and 1900 he served as special or liquor officer.

While Officer Ferguson gives no reason for resigning it is stated that he regarded his transfer from Wollaston to Brewers corner a reflection upon him. Mayor Bryant however states that no reflection was intended, but that the transfer was more a commendation of his ability.

A Successful Artist.

The Paris edition of the New York Herald of recent date in a column devoted to the American art association in Paris, has a word to say about Harry Moore, son of Mr. John Moore of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company, which cannot fail to be pleasant reading to his many friends here. It says in part: "Mr. H. W. Moore recently sent an important work to England, it having been purchased by a well-known engineer residing in London.

The picture was entitled: "Le Tapis Vert," and was a wonderfully attractive portrayal of the famous lawn at Versailles. His new picture in his studio on the rue Boissonade is a stirring bit of dune and sea, framing a party of pirates burying a treasure chest. Their ship rides at anchor in the offing. The picture is full of romance and spirit and shows the artist in his happiest vein."

Mr. Moore is popular in the artist colony and is a member of the committee to arrange for the new house of the Association, which, when ready will be one of the most attractive places of rendezvouse for artists and students. The interior embellishment of the house has been undertaken by Mr. Moore. With only three years' experience Mr. Moore has done much good work and we expect much more of him in the future.

A Christian Woman.

Mrs. Catherine McCalder, who departed this life at the ripe old age of 91 years and six months on December 26, is mourned by a host of friends. She died at the home of her son William, No. 4 Marsh street, with whom she had lived in this city for sixteen years, and was cared for by her loving daughter.

She was born in Prince Edwards Island in 1811, and her parents who came from Scotland were among its first settlers.

Her husband died in 1869 and the care of the family devolved entirely upon her. On her son William coming to this country she continued to make her home with him until her death.

She possessed a strong, thoughtful mind well stored with knowledge, was an intensely earnest Christian and was very pronounced in her opinions against all war.

After an illness of ten days, in which she suffered much in Christian resignation, she passed away triumphant in the faith and peace in which she had so long lived.

The Rev. James Todd, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church, conducted the funeral services Monday, Dec. 29, and special reference to her consistent Christian life as an example to all.

Up to the present time North Quincy leads at billiards and bowling, Braintree at pool, and the Granite City at whist. On totals North Quincy leads with 11 points, Granite City second with 11 points and Braintree third with 9 points.

Mayor's Coal in Great Demand.

City Teams Will Make Deliveries Sunday.

In the lot of coal purchased by Mayor Bryant was fifty tons of furnace coal. This arrived at South Quincy yesterday and will be delivered to the School Committee at cost landed in South Quincy, namely $7.79 per ton.

A few days ago 125 tons was offered to the School committee by Messrs. Sheppard & Sons at $13.50 a ton. The offer, however, has not been accepted.

The question citizens are now asking is, if the Mayor can purchase coal direct from the mines and have it landed in Quincy at a low cost, why the coal dealers can not do the same?

It is worthy of note to mention that the expenses of the messenger sent to Philadelphia were paid by the Mayor out of his own pocket.

City Messenger Tirrell was kept busy all day yesterday and until late in the evening booking orders for coal. Most of those who gave him orders purchased the limit, that is two bags, and were only sorry that they could not puchase a ton or more at the same price. Nearly two hundred orders were received yesterday, and today the receipts may be larger.

There was a perfect jam about the City Messenger's office at City Hall all the morning and so great did the rush of orders become that it became necessary for him to have assistance. At the rate orders were being received up to noon it is probable that the whole supply will be sold by night.

Many of the orders received are from people who are actually suffering for want of coal, and to relieve this suffering Mayor Bryant has given orders to have all the city teams at work Sunday delivering bags of coal.

Before noon today all the coal had been sold, and no more orders will be taken at present. More coal is expected early next week.

The funeral of John Page, who died from injuries received the day before Christmas, was held yesterday afternoon from his late residence on Washington street. The services were of a simple nature and were conducted by Rev. Edwin N. Hardy. Rural lodge was represented by Charles H. Johnson, Charles Sampson, Arthur W. Stetson and J. Francis Merrill who acted as pall bearers.

Week of Prayer.

The union services during the week of prayer will be held at Wollaston as follows:

Monday at 3 P. M., for ladies in Congregational church.

Tuesday, at 7.45, in Methodist church.

Wednesday at 7.45, in Baptist church.

Thursday at 7.45, in Congregational church.

Friday at 8.45 in Baptist church.

Ironize Your Blood With the new iron tonic Peptiron, and you will have good color.

Iron in the blood unites with oxygen in the lungs, and the two together make the blood red.

The more iron, the more color.

Peptiron is a radical cure for anemia and paleness, whatever the cause of the trouble; and while it puts iron into the blood and color into the face, it puts strength into the nerves and builds up the whole system.

It is agreeable to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, and you can be sure it will not constipate you nor injure your teeth.

Call for Pept-iron.

Among the first to take Pept-iron was a young lady employed in a Lowell office. She writes: "I have now been taking Peptiron for about a month, and am sure it is doing me good. There is no question about it, for the pallor of countenance has changed to the rosy tint of health. I am not so nervous, and work turns off more easily."

Peptiron

Peptiron is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolote-coated pills at 50c. or $1 per box. By C. I. HOOD CO., proprietors Hood's Sarsaparilla, Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.

NEW CITY GOVERNMENT.

COUNCILMAN-ELECT JOHNSON.

in the granite business with C. H. Hardwick & Co., one of the oldest and most successful granite firms in Quincy. In 1901 he entered the Boston University Law school and is a student there at present.

While in college he became interested in political subjects and made a specialty of political economy, history, constitutional history, psychology, sociology, etc., as it was impressed upon the students that it was their duty to take an active interest in politics with a view to establish them on an ethical basis, and to train themselves so that, should occasion offer they might help to put our towns and cities business on a scientific and business-like basis.

Such a training will be of benefit to Councilman Hardwick as he enters upon the first stage of his political career, and also to the city.

He is prominently identified with college societies being vice president of the Bigelow, and Quiz clubs of Boston University, also a member of the Atlantic Monday Evening club, the Wollaston Unity club and the Quincy People's Union.

JAMES F. CLEVERLY

Of Ward Two will enter the City Council of 1903 with the experience of one year, as he served in the Council of 1900. That year he was a member of the Committees on Legislative Matters, Health and Poor, State and Military Aid.

He is a Quincy boy and was born Jan. 11, 1878, making him the youngest member. He was educated in the public schools and at the High school. He then attended the Normal Art school where he completed his education.

Leaving school he entered the employ of Cumner Jones & Co., clothiers and tailors' trimmings, of Boston, with whom he is at present.

COUNCILMAN-ELECT LOUD.

JULIUS JOHNSON,

The new Republican Councilman from Ward Three is a well known carpenter and builder. He was born in Sweden, May 23, 1860. He received his education in the public schools of his native town and then served his time at his trade.

He came to America in 1887, landing in Boston. He remained in Boston about two months and then came to Quincy where he has since resided. Since coming to Quincy he has followed the business of carpenter and builder and has built upwards of one hundred houses in Quincy alone.

The office of Councilman is the first public position he has ever held. Mr. Johnson is married and resides on Centre street. He is a prominent member of the Swedish Baptist church.

JOHN J. REARDON,

The new Councilman from Ward Four, is a young man well and favorably known in West Quincy and should prove a valuable member. He was born in West Quincy, June 3, 1873, and has always made Quincy his home.

His education was obtained in the public schools, graduating from the Willard school in 1887 and from the High school in 1890.

He is employed as a travelling salesman for Bower & Bartlett, a Boston importing firm of tea, coffee and molasses. He has been a member of the St. Mary's M. R. & T. A. S. for twelve years, two of which he served as its president. He is also a member of the Ward Four Democratic Committee for 1903.

RICHARD H. WALSH.

One of the two new Democratic members of the City Council from Ward Four, was born in Ireland, but came to this country with his parents when eight years of age, and settled in Quincy where he has since resided.

He received his education in our public schools graduating from the Willard school. He learned the trade of a granite cutter which trade he is still employed at.

When a boy he joined the St. Mary's C. T. A. society and is at present one of its board of trustees. He is also a member of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters.

He is also affiliated with the Granite Cutters' Union, and was a member of the conference which made the settlement under which the men are now working. He is also a member of the conference committee who are now holding meetings on the proposed new bill of prices.

He has always taken an active interest in athletics, especially base ball, and is at present chairman of the West Quincy Base Ball Association. He is about 39 years of age.

CHARLES A. McFARLAND,

The new member of the City Council from Ward Five, is a native of Watertown, although he has resided in Wollaston for a number of years. He was born Dec. 20, 1859, and came to Wollaston in 1874.

Graduating from the Quincy schools, he took a position as clerk in a wholesale Boston store. In the mean time he took up the study of architectural work. In 1882 he became associated with his father under the firm name of J. Farland & Son, architects and builders. In 1893 they enlarged their business by adding machinery and opening a store at Wollaston with a full line of builders' hardware.

He is a member of John Hancock lodge of Odd Fellows, a director in the Wollaston Co-operative Bank, and a member of the Master Builders' Association.

☞The eighth annual exhibition of the Boston Poultry Association will be held in Mechanics Building, Boston, from January 13 to 17 inclusive.

The poultry department will be in charge of T. Farrar Rackham. In the pet stock department there will be a choice exhibit of Belgian hares, rabbits, calves, fancy mice, fancy rats, cage birds and parrots.

The special poultry prizes are the best ever offered. The Massachusetts society for Promoting Agriculture offers $200 on poultry and eggs, and a special ribbon for best colored and shaped birds in regular classes.

Matinee Whist.

Mrs. Beatrice Porterfield entertained nine tables at whist yesterday afternoon at her home on Granite street. Prizes were awarded as follows: Mrs. Davidson, pair pillow slips; Mrs. C. Mitchell, jardiniere stand; Mrs. E. Marnock, needle case; Mrs. G. Phillips, salad dish; Mrs. G. Sprague, bureau cushion; Mrs. Wm. Westland, china plate; Mrs. Mavers, needle book; consolation, Mrs. Annie Pratt, china pitcher.

—In Sharon, oak wood is advertised for sale at five dollars per cord, delivered.

MILTON.

The death of Arthur M. Gardner, Dec. 24, in California, cast a gloom over a large circle of friends in East Milton with whom he was very popular, for it was but a few weeks before that they had bid him godspeed as he left for California in search of health. Mr. Gardner was a mason and builder by trade, but was perhaps best known as a collector of antique articles, and his late residence in East Milton contains many rare articles, not the least among which is the original model of Bunker Hill monument. He was a prominent member of the Thursday Evening club, and often entertained the members at their meetings.

A union service of the Mission and St. Michael's churches will be held Sunday afternoon at Ellsworth hall, when Rev. Mr. Reese will give a talk on Christmas, illustrated with the stereopticon.

As a result of the resignation of Superintendent Loree of the Columbus Division of the Pan-Handle and the subsequent promotion of several engineers to be superintendents, several other changes on the Pittsburg, Logansport and Erie and Ashtabula division have been made in the engineering department. HER RED LETTER DAY

By NANCY VINCENT M'CLELLAND

Copyright, 1901, by Nancy Vincent McClelland

"Ten, twenty," the man at the cashier's window counted, "and the $5 that you wanted all in quarters, Miss Pemberton."

"Thank you," said Miss Pemberton absentmindedly. She folded up the crackling notes to fit her mouse colored pocketbook, regarding the two small piles of silver on the counter before her with a faint, amused smile. There was one mint used piece among them that glistened white and bright by the side of the tarnished faces of the others. It caught the girl's attention, and with a sudden impulse she separated it from its family and held it back eagerly to the cashier.

"Would you," she asked him, flushing slightly—"could you give me all new quarters like this? I have a particular reason for wanting them shiny and bright."

He acquiesced with ready good humor.

Miss Pemberton thanked him again, put the bright quarters into a little velvet chatelaine bag that hung at her side and said a cheery good morning as she went out of the bank. Her face was dimpling, and her step fell so light that the old man at the window pulsed with a throb of sympathy for her youth, her prettiness and her girlish enthusiasm.

It was Easter Monday. Although spring was in the sunshine, sullen whiffs of winter still lingered in the shadows and lurked around the corners. A blooming pink rose nodded airy greetings from Miss Pemberton's golden head in spite of the fact that her hands were hidden in a sable skin.

"Lady, buy a pa-per?"

It was a small professional whine that was pattering along by her side.

Miss Pemberton looked down, and another one of her irrepressible smiles cropped out in the corners of her face.

"No," she said discouragingly, making a very apparent effort to be severe; "I can't buy papers from any one who asks me like that. Some time if you come up to me and say in a cheerful, honest voice, 'Buy a paper, lady?'"—her own voice was bubbling over with mirth—"why, very probably I shall get one from you, but so long as you"—

The boy jumped ahead of her, whisked off his cap, straightened up and chirped out such a brisk imitation of her own tones that she gurgled with delight.

"Buy a paper, lady?" he grinned, his teeth flashing in appreciation of the maneuver.

Miss Pemberton stopped and put one of her clean quarters into his grimy hand.

"Yes," she said, laughing; "I shall have to get one now, and you may keep the change."

"Hully gee!" exclaimed the youngster, standing stock still where she left him and staring after the slight figure with a News tucked under its arm. "Don't have to sell no more papers today 'less I wants to! That's what I calls bein' a millionaire!"

It was really, however, the mendicants whom she had meant to favor that morning. She knew them all and had pitied them a score of times—those miserable creatures who haunted the same street places day after day. She knew that the next one she met would be an old man and his wife, who stood there arm in arm through every change of weather. A little soberly she went up to the old couple and laid a shining quarter in each of the outstretched hands.

As she escaped from their peering eyes and fervent blessings she encountered a friend. "Good morning," she bowed.

But Mrs. Harrower was not to be put off with such a cursory greeting. She was a member of the Associated Bureau of Charities, and she had seen Miss Pemberton almsgiving.

"My dear," she said rebukingly, detaining the girl in the middle of the sidewalk, "you really oughtn't to waste your money like that."

"I suppose not," laughed Miss Pemberton.

"They are not deserving; truly not," her friend insisted. "After the Italian woman farther down street, who sits all day with a drugged child on her knee, they are the greatest frauds in the city."

"I suppose so," said Miss Pemberton again, aloud. To herself she thought wickedly, "What would she say if she knew it was 50 cents?"

Mrs. Harrower spoke very seriously.

"It is just such as you that make the trouble," she said. "You give indiscreetly. You are encouragers of pauperism and crime."

All Miss Pemberton's dimples broke out rebelliously. She looked very unrepentant.

"But, you see," she cried merrily, stretching her hand to the other woman in farewell—"you see, you don't understand. I'm not normally such a wicked person. Today it's different. I'll tell you about it some time. Goodby!"

She was gone with a flash of a smile that showed thorough enjoyment of the situation. It lasted until she stood in front of the Italian woman with the drugged child on her knees and let another of the new quarters fall with a soft, deliberate thud into the baby's lap.

The little black violet vender, who never by chance has a flower less than forty-eight hours old; the patriotic musician who bestirs the feet of the passing throng to keep time with the cornet, the legless man who sits on a small platform and wheels himself incessantly [illegible] the sidewalk and the blind woman who sings plaintive English ballads the day long became, all of them, Miss Pemberton's beneficiaries. As her velvet purse gradually emptied itself into their hands her face grew fuller of pleasure. It was a sunburst of a face when Barton met it at Twelfth street.

"May I walk up with you?" he asked, as he released her hand, in the tone of a man who is sure of his answer.

"Indeed, yes," she said happily. "What are you doing?"

"Going uptown for lunch. And you?"

"I? Oh, I," said Miss Pemberton, laughing up at him—"I have been celebrating, Barton. Don't you know, I always said that on the day when—the day"—

"The day," suggested Barton.

"I should get a lot of small money," continued Miss Pemberton, acknowledging his assistance with only an instant's heightened color, "and go shopping and give a coin to every beggar I met? Don't you remember? Well, that's what I have been doing this morning."

He looked down at her indulgently. "Foolish child!" he smiled.

"I met Mrs. Harrower," the girl bubbled, "and she called me worse than that—encourager of pauperism and crime. Am I really such a dreadful thing, Barton?"

"You know what I think you are," answered the man, and for a moment she was strangely silent.

They had about reached the corner of Broad street when Miss Pemberton made a hurried dash away from him toward an old negro who was standing on the curb, tapping it with his cane and waiting for a kindly hand to guide him across the street. Her quarter tinkled into his tin cup just as some person took his arm on the other side, and she went back to Barton with a look of contentment on her face.

"There," she said, "I have only one left now."

Barton, without making reply, smiled over her head and bowed to somebody.

"If you please, Lady Bountiful," said a courteous voice behind her, "can't you spare a bit for another old man?"

Miss Pemberton turned, laughed and put her hand into the one that was held out to her.

"You shall have it for a lucky piece," she answered. "It's the very last one of them."

"What does all this mean?" demanded the old friend who stood there, looking at the silver she had left on his palm. "Why this sudden welling out of human kindness and human help?"

They all laughed.

"You see, it's a celebration," explained the girl hesitatingly.

"Yes," supplemented Barton, "whether you know it or not, old friend, today is a great day."

The two young people looked at one another, and Miss Pemberton's cheeks went as pink as the rose in her hat.

"Ah," said the old friend with a glimmer of comprehension. "How stupid I am! Barton, my boy"—there was a sterling ring of pleasure in his voice and he took the young fellow's hand in a hearty grip—"I truly congratulate you. I don't know of any two people in the world who are better suited to each other"—

Miss Pemberton glanced around consciously at the passersby.

"Hush!" she said in pretty confusion. "It isn't to be announced until the dinner tonight."

A Frolicsome Pheasant.

One season the keeper of an English park made a pet of a young cock, which became so completely tamed that even after taking up his abode in the cover he would, at the familiar call, cautiously emerge, compare the general appearance of the man with the voice and, being satisfied as to his identity, walk quickly toward him ready for the usual frolic. The keeper would imitate that peculiar whirring sound of the bird and make a sidewise lunge. At the same time the young pheasant would raise his wings and dart forward and backward before his advancing and retreating opponent and, watching his chance, dive at the keeper's hat and knock it upon the ground, then, turning swiftly, make for the cover, his vanishing figure presenting a ridiculous appearance of inward and stifled laughter.

This same cock, which was rather remarkable for the unusual expanse of white round his neck, afforded the keeper much amusement one day in a conversation with the cowman, who wanted to know if all that white was "natural." "No," Taylor replied, taking advantage of the other's ignorance; "I catch him every Saturday night and change his collar." "There," exclaimed the exultant cowman. "I told my wife it couldn't grow that way!"—Century.

Generalship and Book Knowledge.

The greatest soldier that ever lived—Alexander of Macedon—though he slept with Homer under his pillow, had probably never seen a book on military art, and though Von Moltke was a student, we may be permitted to doubt if Marlborough ever was. He read only Shakespeare zealously.

Certainly in our time no able man who wanted a chief for any great undertaking of any kind would dream of asking the limits of his reading or would be able to avoid a silent prejudice against a candidate, partly unreasonable, but partly also the result of a traditionary experience, if he knew that he was in any special degree a student of books. He would think him a man apt to be misled. Indeed, in one great condition of efficiency, perhaps in practice the greatest of all conditions, we should assign to unread men—we do not mean uneducated men, but men who never voluntarily open books—a definite superiority. They are apt to choose men better. Soldiers who do not read make no mistake about their general.—London Spectator.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 4—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—How to get a fresh start.—Eph. iv, 22-32.

Life has its times of serious reckoning. There are moments specially appropriate for considering our ways and for taking heed to God's testimonies. One of these seasons specially adapted to retrospection and resolution is the beginning of a new year. The year begins anew—why should not we? If there have been mistakes in the past, if blots have been made upon pages of past record, why should not the mistakes be relegated to the past, the blots erased and a new record be opened, a new start made? This is the reasoning of thousands, with the result that at the beginning of every new year efforts are made to avoid the errors of the past and to make life to some extent what it ought to be.

What the results of a changed life should be may be stated with absolute certainty. We should "cease to do evil and learn to do well." We should "put off the old man and put on the new man." The liar should give up lying and speak the truth; the thief should abandon stealing and go to work; "all bitterness and wrath and anger and clamor and evil speaking [should] be put away, with all malice," and in their stead we should "be kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake has forgiven us." Two elements are herein involved. Evil must be abandoned, but that is not all; it must be replaced by good. Vices must be superseded by virtues, bad deeds by good ones.

But how can this be done? This is the important question. How can a man get started right in a new, a changed, life? Everything depends upon the answer to this inquiry, and it can be answered in but one way. It cannot be done by human resolutions, but by divine regeneration. Regeneration and not personal reformation is the necessary prerequisite to a new life. Human resolution ofttimes accomplishes much, but it cannot go to the root of the matter. Sin is a disease of the heart that manifests itself in the life. To be completely eradicated therefore the heart must be changed. The man who really wants to lead a new life must have a new heart. He must "be renewed in the spirit of his mind." This God alone can do, but He is able and willing to do it in every case where there is an anxious desire to have it done. The man that wants to give up a sinful life and to lead a righteous one need only pray, "Create in me a clean heart," and God will hear his prayer and a changed heart will be the starting point of a transformed life.

BIBLE READINGS.

Deut. xi, 26-28; Eccl. xii, 13, 14; Isa. i, 16-20; lv, 6, 7; Ps. li, 1-10; John iii, 1-8; Rom. xii, 1, 2, 9-21; Eph. v, 15-21; Col. iv, 5, 6; Rev. xxii, 12.

A Christian Endeavor Catechism.

A good friend of the movement has prepared the following, which he styles "A Christian Endeavor Catechism." It answers concisely some questions many times asked by those less familiar with the society:

When was the first society of Christian Endeavor established? Feb. 2, 1881.

Where and by whom? In Williston church, Portland, Me., by Rev. F. E. Clark.

For what purpose? For the sake of training a large number of young converts for the duties of church membership.

What is now the purpose of the society? The same as at the beginning—to train young people for the duties of the church. Each society is in some local church and in no sense outside. It exists simply to make the young people loyal and efficient members of the church of Christ. It is the church training the young.

In what denominations is it found? In about the same proportions in all the great evangelical denominations and in all their subdivisions. Wherever it has been established longest it is most fully indorsed by pastor and churches.

Secretary Eberman's Tours.

A most inspiring summary is that of Field Secretary Eberman's southern, eastern and western tours, occupying the first 208 days of this year and carrying him into Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine, District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas, Louisiana, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia, New York, New Jersey, Kansas, Arkansas, Indiana and Pennsylvania, a distance of 14,517 miles. He spoke at 337 meetings before audiences that aggregated 53,160 persons.

Quiz Box.

[Any question may be asked that pertains to any phase of Christian Endeavor work. Address Lock Box 674, Binghamton, N. Y.]

23. K., Connecticut.—Dr. Clark is not only a regular contributor to the Christian Endeavor World, but a frequent writer for the leading weekly and monthly publications of the day. He is also the author of many books, several on travel having had a particularly large sale.

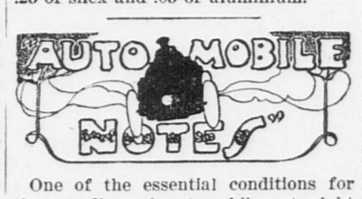
24. V. F., New Hampshire.—It is impossible in the brief confines of this department to attempt to answer other than strictly Christian Endeavor questions.

At present there are four districts in Turkey in which any one who so desires may enter into the business of meerschaum mining simply by paying the Ottoman government the sum demanded for a license—namely, 5 piasters. These districts are Sari-Sou, Sepetdji, Geikli and Menlon. The 5,000 miners already engaged in this industry are Kurds and Persians, and all of them work according to the most primitive methods. They are formed into gangs composed of fifteen men at the most under the authority of a section boss.

The first work done, says the Revue Scientifique, consists of sinking a well until the miners come to a reddish clay soil, which indicates the presence of the meerschaum, this latter being found at a depth varying from ten to 200 feet. The meerschaum appears in the form of round lumps, more or less irregular in form, the size of which rarely exceeds thirty or forty cubic centimeters and the usual size of which is about that of an apple or a walnut.

When they reach the bed, the miners dig horizontal galleries through the red clay, and, as there is no direction or plan pursued, the gangs frequently meet each other. The work is carried on night and day by means of petroleum lamps, the blocks of meerschaum being brought to the surface still imbedded in their matrix. On the weekly sale day the workmen meet and sell their goods to the "luledjis," or pipe manufacturers of Eskichehir. The blocks are then taken to the town and washed, after which they are cut into suitable pieces while the matter is still very soft. Sorting and classing are then proceeded with, and the "luledjis" in their turn sell their purchases to the larger dealers, who export the meerschaum, carefully enveloped in cotton wadding.

Meerschaum is composed of about 70 per cent of carbonate of magnesia, .25 of silex and .05 of aluminium.



One of the essential conditions for the speeding of automobiles at night is the proper lighting of the road. Ordinary side lanterns are inadequate, and therefore headlights which throw bright rays in advance of the vehicle must be used. Acetylene is well adapted for obtaining a brilliant light. It is by no means uncommon to see carriages provided with two searchlights, placed at the right and at the left of the vehicle. Such lights, says a writer in the Scientific American, should have a common generator.

The generator of the Bleriot light may be regarded as a typical example of the generators usually employed. It requires the employment of a special chemical compound of carbide and glucose, which is called by its inventors, Messrs. Letang and Serpollet, "acetylithe." The compound has the great advantage over ordinary carbide of being less sensitive to moisture and of not leaving any solid residuum. In order to introduce it into the lantern without difficulty the generator is made in the form of a cylinder which slips into the receptacle behind the reflector when the cover of the searchlight has been raised.

The generator is charged by unscrewing the cover, B. When this is lifted, it draws with it the cylinder, C, which contains the basket that holds the carbide. The bottom of the basket is perforated and furnished with vertical partitions, S, which prevent the carbide from packing too solidly and facilitate the access of the water. The generator cylinder terminates on top in a gas conducting tube, A, into which is introduced a tin cartridge containing ordinary carbide between two plugs of wadding and which serves as a purifier. The gas is obliged to pass through this tube before escaping by the cock, R, and in so doing it is purified. The water is poured into the cylinder, E, up to the proper level, after which the generator cylinder is put in place and the cover screwed on.

Temperature of Insects.

A Russian naturalist has made a series of measurements by a thermo electric method of the temperature of insects. The temperature of the human body is essentially the same in the tropics and in the polar zones. Under usual conditions the temperature of an insect rises with that of the surrounding air, only more slowly. When the insect begins to move, its temperature rises, and it continues to rise until the motion ceases. At 102.2 F. heat paralysis sets in, which ceases, however, as the temperature falls. Below 31 F. insects are without motion. For one species, Saturnia pyri, the highest temperature compatible with life is at 115 degrees F. This is about the temperature that is fatal to vegetable life.

TOILET TIPS.

Don't go to bed without brushing the teeth.

Of the mineral acids as skin whiteners only one is of service—hydrochloric. It is well to start with a weak solution, say 1 per cent.

To whiten and soften the skin parboil a few medium sized potatoes, remove the skins and use them as you would a piece of soap for washing the hands.

A bit of pumice stone is to be found on the dressing table of most women these days and is invaluable in removing all traces of grime on finger tips or around the nails.

Two drops of camphor on your toothbrush will give your mouth the freshest, cleanest feeling imaginable, will make your gums rosy and absolutely prevent anything like cold sores or affections of your tongue.

The water of the toilet must be soft. If possible use distilled water. A little borax or a few drops of ammonia will soften hard water, but habitual use of either is not advisable, too dry a skin being the result. A water softener is better.

Oriental Rugs.

In buying antique or modern oriental rugs there is a trick of the trade to be looked out for. Many old rugs are so touched before displayed for sale that the home furnisher is easily deceived into thinking she is purchasing perfectly genuine goods. This is accomplished by the crafty oriental by various processes. He shaves the upper surface of the weave, removing the worn, faded part and of course lessening the wearing powers of the rug, or he retints the upper surface with water colors. A rug frequently shaved is easily recognized by thinness and lack of body. To ascertain that the rug you have in view has not been touched up with pigments have it sent home on approval and before deciding to buy it take a clean, soft muslin rag, dip in clear water, wring out well and with it go gently over the surface of the rug. If the rug shows signs of coloring matter, a deduction may be drawn. This treatment will not injure a good rug in any way. It will be found an efficient means of detecting cheats.—Good Housekeeping.

The Ideal Nursery.

In an article on "An Ideal Nursery," by Carrie May Ashton, in the Mothers' Journal, it is urged that children be made so happy in the nursery that they will be made happy twenty years hence by the memory of it. A large, light, sunny room is a perfect delight to most children and makes them stronger mentally, morally and physically. Simplicity should be the keynote here and harmony throughout the furnishings. Tint the walls or use a plain ingrain paper of a soft tan color or sage green, which makes an admirable background for pictures. A hardwood floor, with a large rug, is easy to keep clean and preferable from a sanitary point of view. Low bookcases filled with the children's books should be found here; also a place for their specimens, a writing desk, a comfortable couch and plenty of chairs. There should be an abundance of cupboard space, with deep drawers in a closet opening out of this room sufficient for each child, where games, toys and other treasures can be carefully stowed away.

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medinineas directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. For sale by all druggists.

A FORCED RESIGNATION

Of Mississippi Postmaster Receives President's Attention

GAVE GREAT SATISFACTION

But Threats of Physical Violence Led to Tender of Resignation, Which Is Not Accepted—Color Line Drawn to Extreme Limits—Postoffice Closed

Washington, Jan. 3.—At the cabinet meeting yesterday the president discussed the features of the case of Mrs. Cox, postmaster at Indianola, Miss. It was decided finally to issue a formal statement concerning the case. Secretary Cortelyou, for the president, made public the following:

"The postmaster at Indianola, Miss., is Mrs. Minnie M. Cox, a colored woman. She served three years as postmaster under President Harrison. When President McKinley came in she was again appointed, in 1897, nearly six years ago.

"Her character and standing in the community are indorsed by the best and most reputable people in the town. Among those on her bond is the present Democratic state senator from the district, together with the leading backer of Indianola and an ex-state senator from the district, also a Democrat. The postmaster and her husband own from $10,000 to $15,000 worth of property in Sunflower county. The reports of postoffice inspectors who have investigated the office from time to time show that she has given the utmost satisfaction to all the patrons of the office; that she is at all times courteous, faithful, competent and honest in the discharge of her duties. Her moral standing in the community is of the highest. Her reputation is of the best. Few offices of this grade in any state are conducted better.

"The postmaster recently forwarded her resignation, to take effect on Jan. 1, but the report of inspectors and information received from various reputable white citizens of the town and neighborhood show that the resignation was forced by a brutal and lawless element purely upon the ground of her color, and was obtained under terror of threats of physical violence. The mayor of the town and the sheriff of the county both told the postoffice inspectors that if she refused to resign they could not be answerable for her safety, although at the same time not one word was said against her management of the office.

On Jan. 1 the bondsmen of the postmaster telegraphed that the postoffice was closed; that the postmaster claimed that her resignation was in the president's hands, to take effect Jan. 1, and that there had been no advice of the appointment of her successor. The telegram closed with this statement: 'Prompt action necessary for relief of business interests.'

"In the view of the president the relief of the business interests which are being injured solely by the action of the lawless elements of the town is wholly secondary to the preservation of law and order and the assertion of the fundamental principle that this government will not connive at or tolerate wrong and outrage of such flagrant character.

"By direction of the president the following telegram was sent by the postmaster general to the bondsmen:

"'The postmaster's resignation has been received, but not accepted. In view of the fact that the office at Indianola is closed all mail addressed to that office will be forwarded to Greenville.'

"The papers in the case have been sent to the attorney general for action."

European Present For Roosevelt

Paris, Jan. 3.—A proposal has been made to present a piece of sculpture to President Roosevelt in recognition of his services in the cause of international arbitration. The idea to make this gift to the American president is an outgrowth of the Venezuelan affair and his attitude on that issue. The funds for the purpose probably will be raised by private subscription among European advocates of peace.

Failure of Fuel Oil Supply

New Orleans, Jan. 3.—New Orleans is now without a supply of fuel oil, and all the furnaces recently converted to the use of oil burners are being changed back so that coal may be used. The only concern in this city supplying fuel oil has notified customers that it no longer can supply oil to them, being unable to get sufficient oil from Beaumont.

Chinese Ship Brought Plague

Washington, Jan. 3.—Consular advices from Mazatlan, Mex., relative to the outbreak of the bubonic plague, state that the disease was brought over on a Chinese ship arriving there on Dec. 15. Every precaution will be taken to prevent the entrance of the plague into this country.

One Man Downed Three

McCurtain, I. T., Jan. 3.—Three United States deputy marshalls were shot by an unknown man who resisted arrest at Coal Creek yesterday. One was instantly killed and the others seriously wounded. The man who fired the shots escaped.

Papal Encyclical on Duelling

Rome, Jan. 3.—The pope is about to issue an encyclical against the practice of duelling. He will appeal to all Christian governments to suppress the practice, which is described as a survival of the middle ages.

WITH TERRIFIC IMPACT

Engines Crash Together In Vermont, Killing Engineers and Firemen

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 3.—A wild engine on the Rutland railroad crashed into a north bound flyer from New York last night at Shelburne. The crews of both engines were killed and a brakeman who was riding on the wild engine was probably fatally hurt and nearly every one of the flyer's crew were injured more or less seriously. No passenger was seriously hurt, although all were shaken up and some were bruised by being thrown against seats from the shock of the impact. The dead are:

Dennis Mahoney, engineer of the flyer; R. Cowey, engineer of the wild engine; James Fitzpatrick and D. N. Chase, firemen. John Cochran, brakeman, is dying.

The cause of the accident is not definitely known, but Dr. Webb, president of the road, says that he believes that Engineer Cowey, who had charge of the wild engine, probably thought that the flyer would be late, as it had been for a number of nights, but last night the flyer was on schedule time, and met the wild engine about one mile north of Shelburne station.

The impact of the collision was terrific and only the heaviness of the flyer prevented a disaster. As it was, both engines were totally demolished, the boiler of one exploding with a terrific report an instant after the collision. The scene of the wreck was a sharp curve, around which it is impossible for an engineer to see. Around this curve came the wild engine, and it is very evident that neither engine crew had a chance to jump, for their bodies, mangled out of all resemblance, were found in the ruins of the engines.

The passengers on the train tell different stories of the experience at the moment of the collision. Some say that they did not hear the emergency brakes take hold, and others say that there was a great shock.

Hoar Bill Aimed at Trusts

Washington, Jan. 3.—Senator Hoar has completed and yesterday made public his anti-trust bill. The bill prohibits stock watering, prevents fraudulent corporations from doing business and does not permit overcapitalization. The fullest publicity consistent with safeguarding private interests is provided. Not only the great trusts, but all corporations, are brought under the provisions of the law. To enable the attorney general to have the necessary funds for the employment of assistants to properly carry the law into effect an appropriation of $500,000 is carried by the bill.

Raids on Counterfeiters

Philadelphia, Jan. 3.—Secret Service Agent Griffin, accompanied by several operatives, yesterday raided a counterfeiters' plant at Norristown and captured Tony Julian, his wife and his mother, a cousin and two other Italians. The prisoners were brought to the city and held for a hearing Monday. Secret service operatives believe that Italians captured in the raid at Wilmington, Del., yesterday were working in conjunction with the Norristown counterfeiters.

Back to Patrol Duty

New York, Jan. 3.—Police Commissioner Greene issued an order yesterday ordering all the "plain clothes" men on the force to report to their captains in the various precincts in uniform. By this order 262 men are ordered to duty as patrolmen, and each one is transferred to a new precinct. This action, it is understood, is taken with a view of breaking up the system of blackmail which is alleged to exist in the department.

Appointment Meets Approval

Panama, Jan. 3.—Dr. Duran, the newly appointed governor of Panama, assumed the duties of his office yesterday afternoon. The appointment in succession to General Salazar indicates a new political attitude on the part of the government and a policy of conciliation. The appointment has been well received in all circles, and especially by the foreigners.

No General Naturalization For Jews

Bucharest, Jan. 3.—The statement sent out Dec. 27 to the effect that the Roumanian senate had agreed to the naturalization of Jews in Roumania was erroneous. The discussion in the senate that day arose over the petition for naturalization of an individual Jew, and did not concern the naturalization of Jews in general. The petitioners' request was granted.

Asking For Four Dollars a Day

Pittsburg, Jan. 3.—The local union of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers sent out copies of a new wage scale to the manufacturers in this district yesterday. The scale calls for an advance from 47½ to 50 cents an hour for an eight-hour day, and provides for apprentices.

Dishonest Cuban Postmaster

Washington, Jan. 2.—A cablegram announces the arrest of Rafael Rodriguez, postmaster at Coamo, P. R., on the charge of embezzlement of government funds, amount not stated, and the stealing of about $565 while in transit.

Remarkable Flow of Oil

Zanesville, O., Jan. 3.—The Ohio Fuel Supply company has just drilled in the largest gas well ever struck in Ohio. The new well is in Licking county and has a daily capacity of 14,000,000 cubic feet.

WHERE PEOPLE SEE PEOPLE

F Street In Washington Is a Famous Promenade.

"I believe that F street, in Washington, is the greatest place in the world for people to stroll up and down the thoroughfare and scan each other," said a close observer, who has traveled considerably, as he himself walked along the well known street. "It seems to be understood here," he continued, "that promptly at 4 o'clock, when the weather is pleasant, there should be a general promenade. If a woman's or man's dress takes well on F street, it is safe to say that the attire will pass muster anywhere. As to the variety of dress—well, you may see anything on F street from the stylishly dressed millionaire's daughter or wife to the schoolgirl. Many of the upper class of young ladies who have carriages at their disposal very often dismiss their coachman when shopping on F street and walk from store to store simply to mingle with the crowd and get a look at the other people.

"F street certainly beats all the other cities for this amusement," he said in conclusion, "and, although I have only been here a short time, the fever has already struck me, and every day at 4 p. m. I feel a desire come over me to dress up and start in at Fifteenth street and walk along F street and back again."—Washington Post.

A Pretty Bad Imitation.

A certain well known Bostonian is an enthusiastic Yale man and in college was a member of the glee club and was famous for his yodel, which was fearless and ear piercing. While on a shooting trip in the west a classmate in the party, remembering this accomplishment when it was reported that the guide was from Switzerland, said one night as they were smoking around the campfire:

"Jack, give us a yodel as you did in college. The guide will appreciate it."

And Jack yodeled with a strength and brilliancy never before equaled at a concert or "on the fence." After the air was again at rest and the frightened animals afar off had plucked up courage enough to stop running, the classmate said to the guide:

"Pfeiffer, doesn't that make you homesick?"

And the genuine Switzer responded, "No, only sick."—New York Times.

Willow Trees In America.

The weeping willow tree came to America through the medium of Alexander Pope, the poet, who planted a willow twig on the banks of the Thames at his Twickenham villa. The twig came to him in a box of figs sent from Smyrna by a friend who had lost all in the south sea bubble and had gone to that distant land to recoup his fortunes. A young British officer who came to Boston with the army to crush the rebellion of the American colonies brought with him a twig from Pope's now beautiful willow tree, intending to plant it in America when he should comfortably settle down on lands confiscated from the conquered Americans. The young officer, disappointed in these expectations, gave his willow twig, wrapped in oil silk, to John Parke Custis, Mrs. Washington's son, who planted it on his Abingdon estate, in Virginia. It thrived and became the progenitor of all our willow trees.

Ask "Why?"

If boys could learn at school all about education, that would only leave them very dull persons. The object of their education at school is to give boys mental alertness and an eternal curiosity, and its real test is whether it leaves them always saying to themselves, "Why?" I do not know whether you have ever thought about it, but all the great discoveries of the world have come because some one has asked that question. The records of industry show nothing more clearly than that all real mental skill depends on asking questions. The answer is sure to follow. The real mental capacity is not displayed by the man who answers the question, but by the man who asks it.—Bishop Creighton's "Thoughts on Education."

To Rest His Eyes.

The people who quit reading "just to rest their eyes" might take a hint by inference from the reply made by an old Mississippi illiterate. A passing man found him apparently deeply interested in a paper.

On looking close it became apparent that his paper was upside down, and he was asked forthwith why he held it thus.

His reply almost knocked the questioner out. It was:

"Just to rest my eyes!"—Kansas City Independent.

Browning.

Browning loaned Lord Coleridge one of his works to read, and afterward, meeting the poet, the lord chief justice said to him: "What I could understand I heartily admired, and parts ought to be immortal. But as to much of it I really could not tell whether I admired it or not, because for the life of me I could not understand it."

Browning replied, "If a reader of your caliber understands 10 per cent of what I write, I think I ought to be content."

A Bullseye.

"I'm afraid my remarks this morning hit you rather hard," said the Rev. Dr. Scorum, who had observed Mr. Gayman leave in the midst of the sermon.

"What led you to jump at that conclusion?" asked Mr. Gayman rather haughtily.

"I noticed you jumped before the conclusion."—Catholic Standard and Times.

In Korea a serviceable umbrella costs about 12 cents. The covering is of oiled paper.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Salt is excellent in removing dirt from marble top furniture.

A bedroom should never be damp, and a saucer of slaked lime in it will prevent this annoyance.

To clean gutta percha rub it with a mixture of soap and powdered charcoal and polish it with a dry cloth.

The smell of fresh paint can be removed by leaving in the room all night a pail of water containing several sliced onions.

Linen shades will look almost new when cleaned by stretching them on a table and rubbing them with powdered bath brick, applied with a piece of flannel.

The newest and prettiest tea trays are oblong, with brass or wooden handles and a glass bottom which may be removed to admit a piece of burnt leather or rich fabric, racing print or other decoration.

Glass is being used in the manufacture of bathtubs. The glass is about three inches thick and annealed to make the tub durable. The effect is clean and beautiful. The idea is a German one and is rapidly gaining favor in this country.

Natural Grace.

Every woman wants to be graceful. Awkwardness is beauty's greatest foe, and, although its possessor may have a pretty face, still she is placed at a decided disadvantage. Her lack of ease is painfully apparent, giving her personality an incompleteness that is far from pleasing. A great French writer once said, "Grace is more beautiful than beauty." Beauty is something that is purely physical, while grace is a combination of the qualities of tact, amiability, common sense and refinement, all producing a charming impression, says Julia Teresa Butler in the Pittsburg Observer. The principal quality of grace is good taste. The conversation of the woman with the truly cultivated mind will be naturally easy and pleasing, for she will avoid incongruities of speech. The manner and actions will reveal simplicity and good breeding, and her attire will always be in accordance with her surroundings.

The Medicine Closet.

The bathroom closet is usually crowded with bottles and packages, but it does not often have exactly the assortment of medicines and appliances called for in emergencies. Clear out the old stuff, half emptied bottles, etc., once in awhile and see that there are always on hand the simple remedies most often needed in the family. Ammonia, witch hazel, sweet oil and limewater should be there and a 1 per cent solution of carbolic acid with which to bathe wounds and scratches. If a cut is first bathed in carbolic and then painted with collodion, there will be little bleeding. The sweet oil and limewater which the druggist will mix in exactly the right proportions is the best of remedies for a burn. Add to these a ten cent box of absorbent cotton, a roll of antiseptic bandages and a hot water bag, and the closet will be ready for ordinary accidents.

Hygiene.

Drinking much at mealtimes retards digestion of solids. A little good soup before a meal is as good as a tonic to impart vigor to digestion. One ladleful is enough. A small cup of coffee at the end of the meal is better than taking a mouthful of hot fluid after every bite. Coffee acts on the intestines and heart. Tea stimulates the brain and kidneys. It is more often adulterated than coffee and is often astringent from being steeped too long. "Boiled tea is poison" is a very good sentence to keep constantly in mind if you are fond of tea yourself or are making it for others. An astringent delays digestion. Green tea is very astringent.

Marriage as a Profession.

Marriage for a girl is undoubtedly a profession, and a profession which requires an education. She must recognize how much depends upon her health and the health of those committed to her care; how much depends on her being a careful manageress of her household and of the money put into her hands for use for the welfare of others. Above all, she should be taught that wives and mothers are made, not born, and no girl should attempt to marry without having received some instruction in the science of housekeeping and of making money go as far as it possibly can.

Attractive Kitchens.

A well known woman, who makes the distinction between homekeeping and housekeeping, calls the kitchen the heart of the home and insists that after its simple fashion it should be as attractive as any other room. In this day of cheap wall papers she suggests frequent papering three or four times yearly, greatly preferring the bright variety and cleanliness thus secured to any advantages resulting from the use of paint, which is more expensive to renew and more laborious to keep clean.

Flannels.

It is a mistake to iron flannels. If pulled out evenly while on the line, so that they dry in good shape, and if when dry they are folded and put in the bottom of the clothes basket and the other clothes piled on them, they will be smoothed enough to suit anybody but a crank. Hot irons take the life out of flannel.

Oil Baths.

An oil bath is often very beneficial to a fragile child or adult. After a warm bath dip the fingers in a cup of sweet oil and go over the entire surface of the body, using only as much oil as the skin will take up. This will often fatten a thin, scrawny child or an adult.

Popular Fore River Man.

The engineering drafting division of the Fore River Co. attended in body yesterday the funeral of Mr. Emile A. Brodie, a capably and very popular fellow employe. Mr. Brodie died at his residence on Edison park, on Wednesday of typhoid fever after an illness of four weeks duration. He was born in Calendonia, New York, and was 27 years of age.

Mr. Brodie commenced work as draughtsman at the Fore River works in 1899, and several floral tributes from fellow employes testified appreciation. These included a huge wreath of American Beauty roses.

Old Colony Lease.

Some who read in a Boston daily this morning that papers were prepared for the lease of the Old Colony street railway to the Boston elevated, thought the Boston company had gobbled up the Quincy system, but Supt. Reynolds informs the Ledger that this is not the case; that the lease relates only to that part of the Old Colony system which lies in the West Roxbury or Roslindale district of Boston, where the people have clamored for five cent service and are to meet with success.

Light Is the Record Holder, With Electricity Second.

The fastest traveler known is light, which flashes through space at the rate of 186,300 miles a second. It covers a distance equal to seven and a half times the circumference of the earth while one can count four.

Electricity ranks next in speed to light. Under the most favorable circumstances its velocity is the same as that of light, but in practical telegraphy, says a writer in the Philadelphia Record, owing to resistance which it has to overcome, it lags a little behind light.

Comets sometimes travel pretty fast. When they are at a great distance from the sun, toward which they are drawn by its attraction, they jog along rather leisurely, but as they approach the sun they move faster and faster, like a wheel which is rolling down a hill, and if they pass very close to the sun they may whisk by it at a speed of more than 300 miles a second.

The earth travels in its orbit round the sun at the rate of over eighteen miles a second. Meteors sometimes plunge into the earth's atmosphere with a velocity of over forty miles a second, and many of the stars are known to be traveling in various directions even more rapidly than that.

Sound travels in water 4,900 feet in one second, in air 1,090 feet. A minie ball leaves the muzzle of the rifle with a speed of 1,200 feet a second. A cannon ball may start on its flight with a speed anywhere from 700 to 2,000 feet a second, according to the size of the gun.

WEIGHT OF THE BRAIN.

The Masculine Organ Heavier Than That of Woman.

M. Marchand has investigated the brains of 1,173 persons immediately after death. The weight of the brain is influenced by the disease. Diphtheria, for example, increases the weight. The brains of newborn boys weigh on an average 371 grains, of newborn girls 361. At the end of the first year the figures are: Boys, 967; girls, 893. By the end of the third year the weight of the brain has tripled, and from this epoch it increases very slowly, especially with girls. It attains its greatest weight at about nineteen and one-half years for men and at about seventeen for women.

The average weight of the brain of an adult male is 1,400 grams, of an adult female 1,275 grams. The reduction of weight due to senile atrophy commences with men about the eightieth year, with women about the seventieth year. We may recall for comparison the following facts: The heaviest brain on record is that of the novelist Turgeneff, 2,120 grains. One of the lightest is that of Gambetta, 1,160 grams.

The weight of the brain is thus one factor, and only one, in the comparison of different men and of different sexes.

Neuralgia, says a writer in La Nature, is sometimes caused by a lesion or functional trouble of the nervous centers and sometimes by an inflammation of the nerve or peripheric neuritis, but whatever may be the cause all neuralgia is characterized by pains the violence and intensity of which we all know more or less. There is no form of illness which is more rebellious to treatment, and in certain very painful cases it has been necessary to perform grave surgical operations. Here is a new and very ingenious mode of treatment, discovered by Dr. Cordier, a surgeon of the hospitals of Lyons, which is based on the fact that in certain cases of troublesome sciatica the elongation of the nerve has not only been advised, but practiced, the nerve, after having been quickly stripped of its coverings, being raised and drawn in such a way as to stretch its fibers.

Inspired by this idea, M. Cordier thought that in treating in the same way the peripheric network, the smaller nervous ramifications, one would succeed in easing the pain. To obtain the distention of the nervous network he has recourse to gaseous injections and to insufflations of air, which are simple to make, painless and harmless. In this procedure we have a great advance over the elongation which necessitates a real operation under anæsthetics.

The needle used in ordinary hypodermic injections is sufficient to make the insufflations of air, and a rubber ball can serve as an insufflator, but it is better to take a little bellows like that of the Potain apparatus, and as the air contains but few microbes it may be injected in its native state. To reassure the timid, however, it is easy to place between the rubber bulb and the needle a glass filled with sterilized wadding, which will arrest, if there be need of such, all microbic life, and in this connection it is useless to insist on the absolute necessity of the aseptic condition of the needle, of the skin and of the hands of the operator.

The needle is buried in the cellular, subcutaneous tissue, and a certain quantity of air, variable according to the locality, is slowly injected, following which there is formed a ball, the result of the distention of the skin. This distention is not painful, the patient having merely a slight tingling and a disagreeable impressing of puffing. To bring about the real distention and the elongation of the fine nervous terminations M. Cordier recommends that, the air ball once obtained, a vigorous massage should ensue in order that the air may be diffused.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Next week at the Castle Square Theatre will see a production of a play that was famous with the last generation for more than a decade, "The Romance of a Poor Young Man." Under this title an original drama of Octave Feuillet's was adapted for the American stage by Messrs. Pierrepont Edwards and Lester Wallack, some forty years ago, and the success of the play in Paris was duplicated in all the large cities of this country. It was a great favorite with the Boston Museum patrons for ten years or more and its revivals afforded many of the great actors of the past an opportunity of appearing here in the title part. The story deals with the experiences of Manuel, Marquis deChampcey, and the action passes in the city of Paris and the Province of Brittany. The plot is of fascinating interest and is most skilfully developed. The leading characters have been cast as follows: Manuel, John Craig; Doctor Desmarets, James L. Seeley; Mons. de Bovannes, John Sainpolis; Madame Laroque, Cordelia MacDonald; Marguerite, Lillian Lawrence; Mlle. Helouin, Jane Irving; Madame Aubrey, Leonora Bradley; Louise Vanberges, Mabel Colcord.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The week commencing Jan. 5, 1903, a change in the opening hours will occur at Keith's, from noon, as at present to 12.30 and the performance will begin at 1 o'clock, lasting for 4 hours and 45 minutes, without a repetition. The show is one of the most attractive offered this winter, with the noted traveler and lecturer, John Bowker, in one of his charming travelogues, as the central attraction. Mr. Bowker will contribute a 20-minute travelogue entitled "Contrastal," which will be beautifully illustrated. Other entertainers announced to appear are: Mr. and Mrs. Clay Clement, in a screamingly funny comedy sketch, "The Baron's Love Story," John and Bertha Gleason, the neatest step dancers in vaudeville; Matthews and Harris, in their amusburlesque farce, "Adam the Second;" Forester and Floyd, character conversational comedians; Amory and Blair, pantomimic acrobatic comedians; Rapoli, a marvelous juggler and Latina, a beautiful acrobatic contortionist.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

Large audiences continue to throng the Boston Music Hall and the present week has been no exception to the general rule. The class of attractions booked at Music Hall are of the sort that meets with the approval of the public and none but the very best grade of attraction is presented. The Sunday night concerts, too, are instrumental in packing the theatre to the doors, and the talent at these concerts is the very best obtainable. The attraction booked for next week, commencing on Monday afternoon, is that well known pastoral comedy of strong heart interest, entitled, "The Two Sisters." The scenes, incidents and characters of Denman Thompson and George W. Ryer's "The Two Sisters," are taken from real life. Every community has counterparts of them, and intelligent audiences will readily recognize features with which they are familiar, and the humor and application of which they will readily understand. The distinguished authors are rather proud of this play and withheld it from the stage for five seasons, until its present manager gave them ample assurance that its current production should have every possible advantage that capital and experienced management could give it.

MAYOR'S ADDRESS.

Recommends That City Buy Coal Direct from the Mines.

A Clear Statement of the Financial Condition of the City.

Recommends Reduction of Department Appropriations to Keep Tax Rate Down.

Gentlemen of the Council:

It is customary on this occasion when the newly elected Mayor and Councilmen are inaugurated into office, for the Mayor to express his views on such matters as in his judgment should receive the early attention of the legislative branch of the city government.

The city, like any other corporation, before embarking upon any improvement, must first consider its resources and its liabilities. It is therefore my duty first to call your attention to what is usually regarded as the most uninteresting part of the Mayor's inaugural—the figures pertaining to the city's financial condition. These, however, are of the first importance for your careful consideration, and in my opinion, you should as completely master the story which they tell as you should thoroughly understand the provisions of our city charter, before embarking upon your duties for this year.

FINANCIAL CONDITION.

The financial condition of the city of Quincy has always been good, and is even better today than it has been but although our resources this year are greater than they were last, you must bear in mind that the growth of the city in every direction brings with it the inevitable increase of expenses in the cost of running the various departments.

This year we should practice the most rigid economy in making appropriations for the running the different departments. Our debt on Dec. 31, 1901, was $1,566,635.64. Our debt on December 31, 1902, was $1,650,840.35, showing an increase of $88,204.71, as shown by the following statement:

THE TAX RATE.

The increase in debt is entirely due to the necessity of last year's Council making appropriations for permanent improvements which could not longer be delayed, such as $55,000 for the new Washington school house: $13,000 for remodeling City Hall; $6,000 for the Houghs Neck fire station, and also $60,000 for the extension of our sewerage system. It is obvious that if these improvements had not been made, a large decrease in the debt would have resulted.

The municipal debt falling due in 1903 is not materially larger than what we were obliged to pay during the year 1902. In 1902 the debt maturing was $66,685.64, in 1903 it is $70,540.35.

Our tax rate last year was $17.40 and although this is the lowest that it has been for six years, I believe that if possible it ought not to be increased for the ensuing year. You will observe that the maturing debt being slightly larger, it will be impossible for us to keep our tax rate down or reduce the same unless we curtail our expenses in our appropriations for the budget for the running of the different departments of the city. I shall myself carefully scrutinize all the estimates of the city officers in their requests for their annual appropriation, and invite you to do the same when the annual budget is presented to you for consideration.

HON. CHARLES MERTOUN BRYANT
Who for the second time took oath today as Mayor of the City of Presidents.

POLICE DEPARTMENT.

During the past year the Police department has worked under different conditions than heretofore. The adoption of the signal system and the inauguration of the patrol wagon has in my opinion been of the utmost benefit to the department and has greatly increased its efficiency to say nothing of its having been a valuable aid to the physicians as an ambulance for the conveyance of injured persons to the hospital.

In previous years officers making arrests both in the day and night time have hired carriages for the conveyance of prisoners to the police station, the cost of which has eventually come out of the city, that is to say, these charges have always been deducted from the fines imposed, which would otherwise come to the city.

Furthermore, I believe that in many cases arrests have not been made by reason of the difficulty in getting prisoners to the police station from outlying districts. At the present time an officer can easily take his man to the box and send a signal for the patrol wagon.

A statement of the receipts paid to City Treasurer by the court for the the last three years illustrates what I have said. In 1900 the receipts for fines were $376.29; in 1901 they were $667.71 and in 1902 they were $2,002.15. This shows an increase for one year of about $1,400.

The department, however, is not yet where it should be, and this is largely due to the fact that we have not enough officers. The present force consists of fourteen men, and with this number we are unable at the present time to detail more than one man for day duty in the entire city. This is not as it should be. The city, as you know, is made up of many large villages, all of which are some distance from our centre, and one man cannot properly protect them in the day time.

I would therefore strongly recommend that the police ordinance be changed increasing the officers by at least two men, and I believe this would enable the department to do much better work.

CITY FORESTER.

Last year, in my inaugural, I called attention to the necessity of appointing a City Forester, who should combine the duties of his office with that of Inspector of Wires. During the last year, with good reason, there have been many protests entered because of the depredation to shade trees by corporations erecting and stringing wires within our city limits. In my opinion there should be established an office of City Forester and Inspector of Wires, and I should prefer to have him act under the direction and intruction of the Board of Park Commissioners.

This board would be interested more than any other in seeing that the city's shade trees were properly cared for.

The Inspector's duty would be to supervise personally the erection of all poles and wires located in the city.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

The present ordinance and regulations governing the Board of Health were first passed when the city was not more than half its present size so far as population is concerned, and the people have been educated during the last ten years on the subject of sanitary arrangements to a point where they rightly demand much more from the Board of Health than they previously required.

During the last two years we have suffered an epidemic of smallpox, which the present Board of Health has handled in a manner that is highly commendable to all its members, and at a cost very much less per patient than in many other cities and towns. I am sorry to say that some persons in our city appear not to have fully appreciated the good work which they have done in this respect.

There has been much criticism against the board on the question of public dumps, but those criticising have not stopped to consider the conditions that here prevail in regard to this sewerage matter.

It should be borne in mind that the geological formation of Quincy is such that it is difficult, if not well-nigh impossible, to obtain proper dumping ground for vault matter. The superstructure of Quincy is granite or rock, and any vault matter emptied upon the ground is very apt to remain on the surface and not percolate through the soil. Therefore, wherever public dumps are located in this city they are bound to be objectionable.

The first of the year we were confronted with this situation: There have been two places found available for dumping, one on Valley street, and the other located off Quincy avenue.

The one on Valley street existed in pursuance of a private license given one of our citizens, and was located not far from the Square. Various complaints had been made on account of its existence at this place, and this year it was decided by the Board of Health not to grant a new license for its continuance.

The location off Quincy avenue was in the woods in an outlying part of the city, and had existed there for some years, and by reason of the nature of the soil, as I have stated before, it was at times objectionable to the people nearby, although in my opinion it was not a menace at any time to the public health.

I therefore took the matter up with the Board of Health and the Sewerage Commissioners, and it was decided to build two dumping places for sewerage matter of the character mentioned to connect with the public sewer, one in South Quincy, and one near Wollas

By this system a tank is pu into which the sewerage matter charged, and after being subjec disintegration by streams of water, is carried away through pipes to the main sewer.

It is proposed during the present year to erect one other building in another portion of the city, and I believe that this new arrrangement will do away with the objectionable features of the old system which have annoyed the people residing in the localities complained of.

Previous Council have from time to time received petitions for the removal of ashes, and I believe that if the Council will purchase the necessary horses and appliances to be used in the collection of ashes as well as the collection of cesspool and vault matter, all to be done under the supervision of the Board of Health, the ashes can be removed without any cost to the citizens, and the vault and cesspool matter can be taken care of at less expense to the householders than under the present contract system, and I therefore ask

Good Afternoon.

With 49 constables appointed by the Mayor today, as well as the permanent police force, the city should be safe.

The sunshine today is a good omen for the city government of 1903 inaugurated today. Give us a good business-like administration, gentlemen, having in mind always the best interests of the taxpayers.

Success in crowning the efforts of the Fore River Ship and Engine Company. The official trial of the Macdonough more than met the speed requirement, and the Quincy City Council has granted the company a location for railroad connection with the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. May the company continue to grow and flourish, and attract other large industries to Quincy.

The City Council of 1902 died hard. Its tenacity to life was shown by the fact that it held two meetings last week and prolonged both. No votes of thanks were extended or bouquets thrown, and no mock session enjoyed. The final meeting was the most serious of the year, and the President and members exhibited more independence than usual.

Mayor Bryant's second inaugural address is worthy of a careful reading. His Honor does not recommend a single special appropriation but rather a retrenchment in department expenditure that the tax rate may not be increased. The municipal, water and sewer debts of the city were increased during 1902, but His Honor maintains that the improvements obtained could not longer be delayed. The suggestion that the city buy coal for all departments at wholesale, is a good one, and also the creation of the office of inspector of wires combined with city forester. Further comments will be made on the address from time to time.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ When the Standard oil company takes advantage of the coal famine to double the price of last year who will praise Rockefeller when he tosses another million into the lap of his pet university?—Mary A. Livermore.

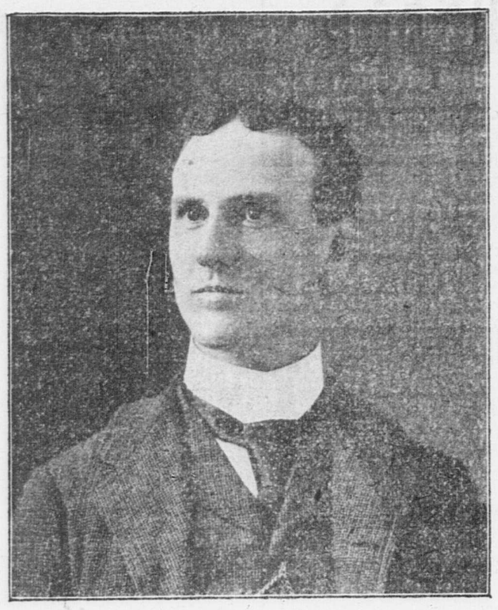
☞ Whatever else may be said of the government which Mr. Croker [illegible] no member of it is preparing [illegible] age of the kind he is living, for no member of it is working for "his own pocket all the time." That is why Mr. Croker has so low an opinion of its intelligence and capacity. When its members shall have finished their terms of service not one of them will have "saved" enough to buy an estate in England or a house in Fifth avenue, or a stud of race horses worth from $50,000 to $250,000, or even one bull pup at $1000. Small wonder Mr. Croker "despidges of 'em." Why, they have not even a boss over them who is getting rich!—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Has He Resigned?

The resignation of Officer Ferguson raises the question as to who will receive the appointment to fill the vacancy. The vacancy must be filled from the civil service list and the three names at the head of the list are Frank A. Burrell, Edward Johnson and John A. McAloon.

PRESIDENT ALDEN REELECTED.

The City Council of 1903 Organizes With the Officers of Last Year.



The usual large number of citizens gathered at City Hall this noon to witness the inauguration of Charles M. Bryant as Mayor for a second term.

The desk of the Mayor and President was adorned with two handsome bouquets of cut flowers.

Aside from this the only desk to have decoration was that of Councilman-at-large Arthur W. Loud. Shortly after the services had been commenced, admiring friends caused a handsome basket of cut flowers, bearing an additional decoration of a pale pink bow, to be placed upon his desk.

Promptly at the hour of 12 City Messenger Tirrell entered the City Council chamber followed by City Clerk Harlow, Mayor Bryant and Rev. Edwin N. Hardy, pastor of Bethany Congregational church.

Rev. Mr. Hardy offered prayer, following which City Clerk Harlow administered the oath of office first to Mayor Bryant and then to the members of the City Council of 1903.

Mayor Bryant was then introduced and delivered his inaugural address which required just twelve minutes. It will be found in full on the first page of this issue.

The roll call of the City Council was then made and the City Council proceeded to organization which was affected without friction. Councilman Gassett and Whiton were absent.

The organization of the City Council was unanimous as follows:

President, Charles H. Alden.
Clerk of Council, Christopher A. Spear.
City Auditor, George A. Sidelinger.
City Messenger, Harry W. Tirrell.
Clerk of Committees, Christopher A. Spear.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johnanna Soderham, of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

Washington Keeping Tabs

Washington, Jan. 5.—The aggressive movements of the Venezuelan revolutionists are being watched closely here. Late unofficial advices indicating great activity on the part of the rebels and reporting a manacing movement toward Caracas give the impression that President Castro's position is critical. It had been confidently hoped there would be a cessation of the hostilities against the government so that there might be prompt action with respect to arbitration of the claims against Venezuela by the European allies.

MODESTY OF GERMANS

Would Have Us "Stand Good" For Venezuela

SCOFF AT MONROE DOCTRINE

Declaration That No European State Has Never Even Recognized It, or Will Do So—Doubt as to What Regulations Result From It

Berlin, Jan. 5.—Several newspapers, in their yearly political reviews, devote much attention to Venezuela and the Monroe doctrine. The Vossische Zeitung (Independent Liberal) regards Germany's proceedings against Venezuela as entirely within the limits of international law.

"Whoever has a claim against another," says this journal, "tries to collect it, whether they be private individuals or nations. If anybody disputes our right to compel payment of the Venezuelan claims we must ask that person if he be willing to pay the debt himself, or give guarantees therefor. If so the matter speedily could be settled; but, if this other person is unwilling to give such guarantees, his objections do not concern us. The United States could settle the trouble between Germany and Venezuela in a moment if it would stand good for the payment of our claims; but the United States is unwilling to take this step and we cannot demand that it do so. In this case the United States should not hinder Germany from pursuing the course that is deemed expedient."

The Vossische Zeitung refers to what it calls the "wild noise" in a portion of the American press which declares that Germany has no right under the Monroe doctrine to take forcible action in Venezuela, and that Germany has not even recognized the Monroe doctrine. "The latter assertion is correct," says the journal. "No other European state ever recognized this doctrine, and we believe no European country will ever do so. The Monroe doctrine is not adapted to become a subject of diplomatic negotiation, and the document hardly exists in which this doctrine is laid before any European power with the request that this power make a declaration thereon."

After reciting the history and the origin of the framer of the doctrine, the paper asserts that the right of intervention claimed by the Holy alliance has long since been abandoned. The countries of South America have been in a chronic state of revolution, yet nobody in Europe dreams of intervention. The disastrous issue of Napoleon's attempt in Mexico renders it probable that no European state will ever repeat the effort to establish itself in the western hemisphere.

"Later interpretations of the Monroe doctrine," continues The Vossische Zeitung, "do not involve the defined hegemony of the United States over Central and South America. The United States claims suzerainty over these countries with the right of intervention, but denies to European countries the right to interfere in their political affairs. How far such suzerainty extends and what rights and obligations result from it has never been cleared up. Neither have the Central and South American states recognized this suzerainty, but they have decidedly rejected it, owing to its repulsion of the Romanic and Germanic races. No European state has made any concession in this respect, and finally the United States itself has given no clear statement of its aims.

"The Monroe doctrine does not belong to international law, but to conjectural politics. It binds nobody and endows nobody with rights. Germany has no obligation to recognize and no occasion to dispute the Monroe doctrine. The South American states stand toward Germany as sovereign nations; they have all the rights and all the obligations of sovereign states, and having such obligations they must pay their debts.

"Germany will establish its claims considerately in form and energetically in action."

The Taeglische Rundschu complains that the hard realist, the Yankee, does not appreciate courtesies like the visit of Prince Henry and the gift of the statue of Frederick the Great, "but blows a few notes into the rusty and hoarse Monroe trumpet, and Germany must let that impudent trickster, President Castro, alone while he laughs in his fist."

Steamer Partners Fall Out

SUNDAY COAL.

Hundreds of Bags Delivered by City and Suffering Relieved.

The city teams were at work all day Sunday delivering coal purchased by Mayor Bryant. The teams commenced their work early and succeeded in delivering from 250 to 300 bags.

Sunday morning F. C. Douglass of the Machinists' union, called upon Mayor Bryant and said if any more help was wanted to assist in the distribution of coal, that the members of his union would volunteer their services.

The Mayor reports that during Sunday a gentleman who had pneumonia in his family, called at his residence. He said he was all out of coal, and was unable to obtain any. The Mayor told him that although the city's supply was exhausted, he should have some, and he did within two hours.

The Mayor is expecting more coal daily, and orders will be booked, and money refunded in event of any delay.

Prodigal Son Modernized.

There was a very impressive and interesting service at the United Presbyterian church on Sunday. A large congregation greeted the pastor to hear the sermon on the "Prodigal Son Modernized."

He spoke of the mistake of the father in dividing his estate between the boys and then depending upon them for a home. He spoke of why he went into a far country probably to get away from the advice of parents about how to do things; and second to sow his wild oats, and in that connection gave some forcible illustrations of how men reap just what they sow in the spiritual world as in the natural world.

He spoke of how he came to himself and decided to return to his fathers house and of the fact that a little reflection on where we are going and the ultimate end of a life of sin will lead us to do like the prodical. Emphasized the thought of the father's love and welcome, as representing God in his welcome of sinners as being the great purpose of the parable.

The meetings each evening will be held at 7.30 and strangers are welcome.

On Tuesday, 2.30 P. M. there will be a meetsng of the Women's Missionary Society at the Methodist Parsonage, 78 Lincoln avenue, Wollaston.

Mrs. NcAnarney.

It was with genuine regret that it was learned this morning that Mrs. John W. McAnarney had passed away during the night. Her death while not unexpected is no less a severe shock to a large circle of friends.

Mrs. McAnarney has been seriously ill for several weeks, and although everything possible was done for her, medical skill was unavailing.

Mrs. McAnarney was before her marriage Mary E. Webb, and a daughter of the late William Webb, and her marriage which took place at St. John's church on the evening of Sept. 15, 1897, was one of the society events of that year. In May, 1900, a little daughter was born to them and their cup of happiness seemed complete.

Mr. and Mrs. McAnarney were very devoted to each other, and her always pleasing manner won for her a host of friends who extend to the bereaved husband their sincere sympathy.

The project of a Day Nursery in Quincy is by no means a new one. The matter was under consideration here as much as ten years ago, but never went further than being pronounced a necessity. It has reached a point today where it cannot be merely an acknowledged need, but must be met. A meeting will be called for sometime next week, the place, day and hour to be announced through the local press. To this all will be invited who are in the least interested in the matter, and those who are at present indifferent will be particularly requested to attend to hear details of the need and the progress toward meeting it.

SINE DIE.

City Council of 1902 Has a Busy Night.

Location Granted the Freight R. R.

City Treasurer and City Clerk to Get Less Salary.

The last meeting of the City Council of 1902 was held Saturday night and it proved to be the most interesting one of the year.

Councilman Adams was the only absentee.

WOODWARD FUND.

Mayor Bryant sent a communication asking that the ordinance concerning the management of the Woodward Fund be so amended that those who received a salary from the city should not receive any compensation for service on that board. Also that the ordinance concerning city salaries be amended so that the salary of the City Clerk and City Treasurer should be $1,400 each instead of $1,200.

Laid on the table until later.

REPORT OF COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Ordinances reported reference to the next Council of the ordinance prohibiting the use of sling shots, etc. Accepted.

The Committee on Streets reported reference to the next Council on the petition for lights on Johnson avenue. Accepted.

FREIGHT RAILROAD.

The Committee on Streets reported a substitute order granting the Fore River Co. a location for a freight railroad.

The substitute order provided that all crossings at grade may be revoked at any time if public safety required after a public hearing; that the city shall be held harmless for all damages in maintainance of said track; that the city shall be reimbursed for any change of grade; that street crossings shall be paved between the tracks and for a distance of ten feet outside the rails; that the Mayor and Council may make regulations as to power and speed, and may order such changes in tracks as necessary, the expense to be born by the company.

The report was accepted and after taking its second reading the question was on final passage of the order.

In reply to Councilman Piper, the City Solicitor said that the City Council could revoke the location after a public hearing and that the Fore River Co. could not get an injunction stopping it. That the Council had full power.

Councilman Piper spoke against the order. He could not vote to have the railroad cross at grade as all grade crossings were dangerous. It is a matter of dollars and cents to the company but to the public it means life.

Councilman Whiton opposed. The travelling public have some rights. The time will come when some one will get hurt. There was a big scheme behind this to extend tracks across Washington street. He would be willing the city should bear part of expense of abolishing grade.

Councilman Fallon believed we should give the company all the encouragement possible. He hoped members would be broad minded and vote for the order.

Councilman Nickerson opposed. He did not believe it was a burden to the company to expend $25,000 to change the grade. He hoped matter would go to next Council.

City Solicitor Blackmur stated that the first order gave an irrevokable franchise, but the present order made it possible to revoke location at any time.

Councilman Freeman favored order. He cited the Union Freight railroad in Boston where they never had an accident. They handled from 125 to 150 cars a day. He believed is encouraging all industries. It will mean the bringing of other large industries to our borders.

Councilman Nichols favored the order. He did not believe there would be any special danger. We are inclined to magnify danger. It is something we can regulate at any time. He would not favor grade crossings for steam roads where many trains were run but this was different.

The order was then passed by the following vote:

YEAS—Bass, Diack, Elcock, Fallon, Faxon, Freeman, Gassett, Hadlock, Hughes, Langelier, Meyer, Newcomb, Nichols, Smith, Stewart and Thompson—16.

NAYS—Nickerson, Piper, Polk and Whiton—4

ABSENT—Adams.

NOT VOTING—Alden.

REGULATIONS.

The Committee on Streets reported regulations for operating the Fore River freight railroad which were that the motive power should be steam; speed at street crossings, not over 3 miles per hour; trains shall come to full stop before crossing streets, and a flagman shall precede trains.

Order passed.

TRANSFERS, ETC.

The Committee on Finance reported reference to the next Council on the communications relative to bill for changing police signal box, and on the electric light contract. Accepted.

The Committee on Finance reported an order transfering $60 to collection of garbage. Passed.

The Committee on Finance reported an order transfering $750 from street lights to removal of snow. Passed. Councilman Bass voting no.

While this order was under debate the Mayor stated that every petition for lights sent him by the Council had been ordered in but company had not put them all in as yet.

MAYOR TAKES STAND.

The order granting Telephone Co. location for 37 poles on West street was taken from the table.

Mayor Bryant said the company had slashed trees and had agreed to settle claim of abutter but had not done it. He should refuse to sign order until it did.

Councilman Newcomb stated he had received a letter from party whose trees were damaged saying his claim had been settled.

The order was referred to the next Council by a vote of 11 to 5.

Councilman Faxon offered an order paying the Taunton Insane Asylum $42.71 for board of Quincy patient. Voted.

SALARY QUESTION.

The communication relative to salary of City Treasurer and City Clerk was taken from the table.

Councilman Freeman offered an order amending the Ordinance concerning salaries increasing the salary of the City Treasurer from $1200 to $1400.

Councilman Faxon thought an injustice was being done the Treasurer as he now received $1600 with Woodward. He moved to make it $1600.

Mayor Bryant said he disapproved of the Managers of the Woodward Fund receiving any salary. The City Treasurer had been receiving $400 from this fund. The object was to increase his salary to $1400 and change the ordinance relative to managing the Woodward Fund so that no member of that board should receive a salary. He further said he should appoint no one City Treasurer who would not agree not to take a salary from the fund.

Councilman Piper thought the Woodward Fund as well able to pay its officers as the city.

Councilman Bass believed the matter should have gone to a committee. He moved reference to next Council.

Councilman Whiton thought it too bad the Treasurer should lose $400.

Motion to refer to next Council was lost.

President Alden said he should rule that the order in its present form could not pass as it involved an expenditure of more than $300.

The amendment of Councilman Faxon, making an increase of $400 was lost.

A motion that the order for $200 increase take its second reading was lost by a vote of 10 to 7.

Councilman Freeman offered an amendment to the ordinance concerning the management of the Woodward Fund, providing managers should receive no salary.

The Council refused to suspend the rules that the order might pass.

The vote not to suspend the rules in favor of the order relative to increase for City Treasurer was reconsidered.

The rules were suspended by a vote of 12 to 5 and the order took its second reading.

A motion by Councilman Faxon to increase the amount of salary to $1500 was lost.

Councilman Freeman moved the order for $1400 take its final passage.

President Alden ruled the motion out of order.

Councilman Freeman appealed.

City Solicitor Blackmur stated that an order involving an appropriation of more than $300 could not be passed, but thought this order involved an increase of only $200.

President Alden asked the clerk if he ever knew an order increasing salaries to be passed at the meeting offered.

Clerk Spear said that he did not.

The Council sustained the President by a vote of 8 to 8.

Adjourned at 9.50.

Reunion at High School.

The Quincy High School Alumni Association having become a thing of the past the recent graduates have taken up the matter and it is proposed to hold reunions every year. The first of these reunions was held Saturday evening by the classes of 1900, 1901 and 1902.

The reunion was held at High School hall which was very prettily decorated with evergreen for the occasion. There was an informal reception during which old acquaintances were renewed. Then there came an hour's entertainment by the Glee, Banjo and Mandolin clubs of the Institute of Technology, who rendered the following interesting program:

Glee Club,	Bachelors' Club
Banjo Club,	The Idolizers
Tenor Solo,	by Mr. Higgins.
Mandolin Club,	Prince of Pilsen
Glee Club,	They Ki-sed
Banjo Club,	Diana

At the close of the entertainment there was dancing until 11.30, music being furnished by Richardson's orchestra.

The executive committee in charge were: J. Brooks Keyes, '00; Gordon Gannett, '01; Ray Brown, '02.

She Frightened Him.

Mrs. F. T. Wood of Standish avenue gave her husband and the police a good scare Sunday.

It appears that she had some words with her husband Saturday, and threatened to take her life. She showed him a bottle of carbolic acid, but after a struggle he took the poison away from her. She left the house saying that she would procure some in Boston.

Mr. Wood sent word to the Boston police to hold his wife when she arrived at Neponset. The officers were on hand but she did not show up.

She arrived in Wollaston late Sunday evening and upon her arrival was immediately held up by an officer and a corps of newspaper men. She admitted having poison in her possession, but said she had only tried to frighten her husband.

He said she had quarrelled with her husband because he would not come home earlier nights. She further said that she heard the officers were after her so she came home.

SULTAN'S SHREWD MOVE

Blocks Pretender's Plans and Puts an End to Moroccan Uprising

Tangier, Jan. 5.—According to official news received here from Fez, the adroit move of the sultan in bringing his brother, Mulai Mohammed, to the capital has attained the desired object of depriving the pretender to the throne of his prestige, and the latter has retired, discredited, to Taza. He has been deserted by a number of local tribes, who dispersed to make sure of their booty. Buhamara, the pretender, having claimed the intention of enthroning Mulai Mohammed, his rebellion has no longer any reason for continuance, as the sultan has publicly reconciled himself with his brother and Mulai Mohammed has made a solemn entry into Fez, acclaimed by the populace.

The sultan has announced the appointment of Mulai Mohammed as governor of the province of Fez, thus disproving the rumors that Mulai Mohammed aspired to the throne. When this had been done the tribes around Fez swore fidelity to the sultan and denounced Buhamara as an impostor whom they would prevent from coming to Fez.

All immediate danger has disappeared. The routes from Fez to the coast are open. It is said the sultan is now preparing a large expedition with the intention of crushing the rebellion.

Convict's Plans Went Awry

Trenton, Jan. 5.—Thomas Doyle, who is serving a 20-year term in the New Jersey state prison for murder, was being taken to breakfast just before 6 o'clock yesterday morning when he slipped from the line and escaped to the yard. By scaling the wall of small buildings he finally reached the roof of the main building. Doyle had secreted in his clothing a rope about 20 feet long with which he intended to lower himself to the top of the prison wall and thence to the street. While crawling over the roof Doyle was discovered by Keeper Clayton, who operates a searchlight located in the prison tower, and Doyle was captured.

The Saxon Court Scandal

Vienna, Jan. 5.—Reports have been received here from sources closely connected with the court of Saxony concerning a possible reconciliation between the Crown Princess of Saxony and her husband. The family of the crown prince are especially concerned with the future of the princess' unborn child, desiring its birth to occur under conditions permitting of proper identification, and to prevent possible substitution, which it is supposed the princess might attempt if the crown prince's family attempted to claim the child.

The Irish Land Problem

London, Jan. 5.—The Irish land conference has issued a voluminous report of its deliberations in which it is declared that the only satisfactory settlement of the existing land question is the substitution of an occupying, or proprietary, ownership of land for the existing dual ownership. The report recommends that the settlement should be made between the owner and the occupier, subject to the necessary investigation by the state as to title, rental and security.

Cuban Crookedness

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 5.—Mayor Egozcue of this city has been arrested and is held on a $5000 bail on the charge of destroying the records of the city water receipts which constituted the only evidence of alleged extensive peculations and embezzlements. The peculations are said to range from $6000 to $43,000 and misappropriations of other funds are also alleged.

Says Appointments Are Legal

Albany, Jan. 5.—Governor Odell's attention was called last night to the report of an attack upon certain of his judicial designations by Justice Hatch of Buffalo. He refused to discuss the matter further than by saying that all of his appointments and designations had been made in accordance with constitutional authority.

Not an Administration Measure

Washington, Jan. 5.—It is asserted on high authority that any statement that Senator Hoar's bill is an administration measure is a mistake. So far as can be ascertained it embodies simply his own views. The attorney general had no hand in its preparation and in fact had never seen it until its publication.

Will Give Disease Chance to Spread

Louisville, Jan. 5.—Three negro prisoners infected with smallpox escaped from the county jail here by removing a window from the tower, or third story of the building, where they had been placed to separate them from the other prisoners. They are still at large.

King George's End Near

Dresden, Jan. 5.—The German specialists who were called to attend the King of Saxony have issued a bulletin declaring his condition to be critical. It is believed that there is little hope of the king living more than a few days.

Still Fleeing From Mazatlan

Mazatlan, Mex., Jan. 5.—There is some abatement in the virulence of the plague. The people still continue to flee from the city and this may spread the disease in neighboring towns where the refugees have found new homes.

The Weather Forecast

CONDITIONS AGAINST HER

But New Torpedo Boat Destroyer Exceeded Contract Requirements

Boston, Jan. 5.—After waiting for two days for good weather the torpedo boat destroyer MacDonough, built by the Fore River Ship and Engine company, Quincy, was successfully speeded over a measured mile off Provincetown yesterday. She exceeded her contract requirement of 28 knots, making one leg at a rate of 28.56. The best two runs over the mile averaged 28.02, which was the speed which gained her acceptance by the government board.

The trial was so encouraging that at its conclusion it was decided to try an endurance run of one hour at continued speed of 26 knots. This was attempted on the trip back to Boston, across Cape Cod bay, but after three-quarters of the time had been consumed a small valve blew out, and the trial was postponed.

The high speed trial was made under somewhat adverse conditions, there being a heavy cross sea and considerable wind. At the conclusion some of the government officials did not hesitate to say that had the run been made under the conditions usually attending government trials, the boat would have gone well over 29 knots.

Three Suicides at Boston

Boston, Jan. 5.—Two men took their lives in lodging houses yesterday because of despondency and a woman was found dead in bed in a Hanover street hotel under circumstances indicating suicide. William Graffe, a German, 68 years old, becoming despondent on account of failure to secure work, shot himself, and Frank Stone, a waiter, 22 years old, swallowed a dose of carbolic acid. Nettie Colsen, aged 28, was founded dead in bed in a Hanover street hotel. People who knew her state that she had expressed intention of suicide.

Boy Used Rifle Carelessly

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 5.—George Caswell, 15, yesterday shot and seriously wounded Philip Schort, a Russian Jew, with a rifle, and the latter's injuries may result fatally. Caswell is under arrest and claims that the shooting was accidental. Schort and his employer, a junk dealer, both of whom had previously had some trouble with Caswell, were standing at a window in the closed door of a barn when, they say, Caswell deliberately shot at them. The police are of the opinion that the rifle was discharged accidentally.

Norris, a Congregational minister, while driving to Burrville yesterday afternoon to preach to his congregation in that town, was struck and instantly killed by a train. Mr. Norris was in a covered carriage and drove upon the railroad crossing without noticing the approach of the train. The horse was also killed. Mr. Norris was 57 years old and had been located in this vicinity for many years. He is survived by two daughters.

MINERS WELL TREATED

According to Markle Answer to Demands of Employes

THEIR TESTIMONY DENIED

Claim That Arbitration Agreement Was Broken by Workmen—Why Some Were Evicted After Strike Was Declared Off

Philadelphia, Jan. 5.—The answer of G. B. Markle & Co., independent coal operators, to the demands of the miners, was made public here yesterday. It was written by John Markle, managing partner of the firm. The statement is, in part, as follows:

"The firm employs about 2400 men, and many of its employes reside in the villages of Freeland and Hazleton. The lessees erected and own all the improvements upon the property, including breakers, stores, shops and tenement houses.

"From the time of my first connection with the business, in 1880, there have always been a resident physician and assistant physicians upon the property until recently, with the exception of a short interval. The firm selected the head physician, who chose his assistants, and we collected 75 cents a month from the married men and 50 cents a month from the single men over 21. The amount collected was paid over to the physician. This arrangement was not compulsory upon the men or families.

"Stores for the sale of general merchandise and of miners' supplies have always been maintained upon the property, and have been and are an accommodation to the men and their families. The men have never been required to deal there.

"By the terms of the coal leases G. B. Markle & Co. are required to pay all the taxes upon the property. The taxes paid by the coal operators constitute the largest portion of the taxes collected in the county."

Continuing, the answer says a sliding scale basis of labor had been agreed upon in 1875 and had from that time been generally in force in the Lehigh region. In September, 1897, a committee of miners presented certain demands to the firm. An agreement was then in existence between the company and men to settle differences by arbitration. The company replied to the demands and received no further communication from the miners. Work at the mines continued uninterrupted until the latter part of 1900, when John Mitchell made his headquarters at Hazleton and endeavored to organize the Markle employes.

In September, 1900, another list of grievances was furnished the firm, the company's answer being that if the men were not satisfied with the reply the officials would be willing to arbitrate. The next communication from the men demanded arbitration, but the committee selected by the employes reported that the latter had broken their agreement with the company by striking before their grievances had been submitted to arbitration. Finally, on Oct. 27, 1900, a committee of the men applied to the firm for an adjustment of the differences. This was accomplished and on Oct. 29 work was resumed at the mines.

The answer further states: "Between 1900 and 1902 many requests were made for the correction of alleged grievances, which were all taken up and considered and acted upon; but not either individually nor collectively, orally or in writing, did the men make any complaint in reference to the method of collecting the dues for the doctors or the priests, nor was our attention called to any defect in respect to ventilation, unfair treatment at the store, nor as to the size of the cars, nor as to the slope cleaning, or the docking, until April, 1902; and we had every reason to believe that, taken as a whole, the men were entirely satisfied with the conditions of their employment.

"In the course of the hearings at Scranton complaint was made of the size of the cars, but in reality the size has not been changed, as will be proved by the testimony of the builders, who will be produced. It was also alleged that the docking was excessive, but the accountant will testify that it was less than 2 percent. Objection was also made that the full 10 percent advance was not given. The manner in which the advance was computed was repeatedly explained to the men, and it will be shown by the expert accountant that it was correctly calculated.

"As we had not been parties to the correspondence under which the anthracite strike commission was appointed and the strike declared off, we were not willing to permit our men to return to work without a distinct understanding that they would abide by the award to be made by the commission. We were then informed that some of the men objected, upon the ground that the men should be taken back in a body, and the rumor was started to the effect that they would be required to sign an ironclad agreement, as a condition of going to work. Pickets were stationed in the neighborhood of the office and along the lines of the road to prevent the men from coming to the office, where they might have learned the truth and arranged for a resumption of work.

"Meanwhile I had been informed that the same men who had been making trouble during the strike were taking a leading part in intimidating and threatening any one coming to the office and returning to work under the conditions specified. On the morning of Oct. 27, 1902, I ordered notice to give up possession of the houses to be served upon 12 men who had been active in preventing the men from resuming work. No attempt was made to collect the arrears of rent which had accrued during the strike, and the parties were evicted on Nov. 6, 1902."

The earnings of the evicted men for the year 1901, according to the statement, varied from $350 to $1000.

The answer further states that the father of the boy—Chipple—was killed as a result of his own negligence. He was not indebted to the firm at the time of his death. His earnings for the previous six months, from February to July inclusive, amounted to $330. Mrs. Chipple paid nothing on account of rent or coal.

Attached to the answer are several exhibits, one of which is a statement showing the earnings of certain contract miners during 11½ months, including 11 of the highest earners and five of the lowest, the highest receiving $4000 and the lowest $400.

This Week In Congress

Washington, Jan. 5.—Many of the senators who left Washington for the Christmas holidays are still absent, and when business was resumed today there was not a very full attendance. Before the week is far advanced, however, the senate again will be in regular working order. During the present week and probably for some time to come the omnibus statehood bill will be the chief topic of discussion on the floor.

No complete program is mapped out for the house for the week. The leaders are very anxious to force the appropriation bills ahead as rapidly as possible. The Indian bill is on the calendar and headway is making in committee with the postoffice, diplomatic and consular District of Columbia bills. The latter at least, will be reported to the house before the end of the week.

Topsy Will Kill No More

New York, Jan. 5.—Several hundred spectators witnessed the execution by electricity at Coney Island yesterday of Topsy, an elephant who had killed three men and had recently become unmanageable. Immediately after 200 grains of cyanide of potassium had been administered, concealed in a carrot, a current of 6600 volts was turned on through copper plates on which the animal stood. At the end of 10 seconds the elephant was pronounced to be dead. An autopsy showed that the poison had not had time to take effect.

Engines Came Together

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 5.—Two extra trains, one a long freight and the other a passenger train returning from Rutland with persons who went there to attend the funeral of Engineer Mahoney, who was killed in the collision of Friday afternoon, collided in the railroad yard here last night. Both engines were damaged. All the passengers were shaken up, but only one was injured, and he not seriously.

FEEDS ONE—STARVES OTHER

Feeds the body—starves the microbes! That is what Scott's Emulsion does in consumption.

We can't expect to understand all about these germs and microbes the doctors talk of. They say that one kind causes consumption. Consumption microbes feed on weak lungs. Perhaps that's so.

At any rate we know that Scott's Emulsion has a peculiar action on the lungs which gives the lungs new life and vigor. Healthy lungs starve the microbes out.

Life for the lungs and flesh for the body, that is what the consumptive has a right to expect from Scott's Emulsion. An ideal food and tonic for any form of wasting disease.

MAYOR'S ADDRESS.

you to provide the necessary appropriation for a system which will be self-supporting.

FUEL FOR THE CITY.

The distress of our people at the present time occasioned by their inability to procure fuel, except occasionally at prohibitive prices, has led me to investigate the question as to whether or not it will be advisable for the city to make provision to purchase its own coal and wood in large quantities in the future.

We already own property at Quincy Adams, formerly used by the Water department, upon which there is a siding connecting with the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, and there is situated on the property a building in which a certain amount of coal can be stored.

The city uses about 2,000 tons of coal per year. This includes the amount consumed at the schoolhouses, public buildings, hose houses, and that distributed by the Poor department.

If the duty of purchasing coal for all of these departments were imposed upon one officer of the city government, it would enable us to buy in large quantities at a considerable saving in cost.

Heretofore the School Department has advertised each year in the Quincy papers for coal, which has brought bids from none but Quincy dealers. Of course that department did not have the facilities for the transporting of coal or storing it, but if the city government undertook to deal with the supply of fuel for the entire city on a systematic basis, I believe it would have no difficulty in purchasing its coal outside the state at a considerable saving, and could distribute same with the city teams.

It may be necessary for you to make a small appropriation to carry out certain plans, which I shall later submit to you, in reference to enabling us to receive coal at tide water.

I would also call your attention to the fact that there will probably be something done in the way of securing legislation to enable cities and towns to borrow money for the establishment of municipal coal yards.

It may be that it will take several years to secure such legislation, but in the meantime if we equip ourselves with the means of furnishing coal for various departments, we shall be in a position temporarily to supply our inhabitants in cases of emergency, such as we are now facing.

CONCLUSION.

Finally, members of the Council, it is obvious that not only the best but the only way of achieving a successful administration of the city's affairs is by intelligent co-operation; not alone the executive with the legislative, but each member of your body with the others.

It is my political experience (which has been fairly long and continuous) an almost unknown thing that a member of Council supports a measure from a selfish or mean motive, although in the heat of argument it is not uncommon to have this alleged. I would urge to each a wider tolerance of the opinion of the other as the best attitude of accomplishing a harmony of results.

Personally, I invite each member of this body, whether in or out of session, to confer with me unreservedly about any measure contemplated or in process of enactment, believing that the frank, mutual discussion of position is the surest guarantee against misunderstanding.

In the coming year let us unite in our common purpose of accomplishing the solution of all municipal problems as they occur, with confidence in each other, and to this purpose I pledge my most earnest endeavor.

A Hub Sunday Incident

Boston, Jan. 5.—A riot was nearly precipitated in the North End yesterday by the arrest of 24 persons in enforcing the ordinances forbidding loitering on the streets. The friends of the prisoners charge that the officers used undue violence. A mob surged about the officers and for a time their lives seemed in danger, but they were reinforced by a detail from the station and the streets were cleared. Most of those arrested were Italians.

Strike Crisis This Week

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 5.—The crisis in the carriage workers' strike is expected to come early this week. The manufacturers have made efforts to get workmen from out of town, and it is reported that a number of men will arrive to fill the strikers' places. Electric car lines and railway stations are being watched by pickets, and they announce that all peaceful means will be used to prevent strike breakers from going to work.

Terrible Sight For Children

Naugatuck, Conn., Jan. 5.—August Weinert, 35 years old, sent his little daughter to a drug store yesterday to purchase some carbolic acid. When the child returned he locked her, with his three other children, in a closet, and drank the acid. He then released the children and when they discovered what their father had done they ran for assistance. Two doctors worked over the man for some time but he died two hours later.

Boy Robbers Caught In the Act

Nashua, N. H., Jan. 5.—When Henry Jeanette went to his grocery store last night to look after the fire he found Edward Winn, aged 14, and James O'Neil, aged 10, in the act of rifling the money drawer. The boys were given in charge of a policeman. There have been numerous small breaks during the past few weeks, and the police believe that in the little fellows they have the guilty ones.

Strike on Vermont Railway

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 5.—The conductors and motormen on the Barre and Montpelier street railway have struck because their demands for 20 cents an hour and a 10-hour day were refused by the company. Twenty-two men are out. The company offered a scale of $10 a week to one-year men, $11 to two-year men and $12 to three-year men.

DR KINNEY'S TESTIMONY

Relating to Alleged Poisoning of Mrs Richardson

DEFENSE SCORES A POINT

By Securing Admission That Patient Was Mildly Insane and Had Called Attention to Alleged Changes of Medicine—About White Powders

Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 6.—The principal evidence which led the Revere police officials to arrest, on Christmas eve, Miss Catherine V. Richardson, formerly of Littleton, N. H., on a charge of attempting to murder her mother, Mrs. Harley C. Richardson, was laid before Judge Bosson in the district court yesterday in the testimony of Dr. Eunice Kinney, who attended Mrs. Richardson.

The main feature of Dr. Kinney's testimony were the accounts of the three occasions when she was called to see Mrs. Richardson while the latter was suffering from what Dr. Kinney diagnosed as arsenical poisoning; an instance in which Dr. Kinney herself was made similarly sick after tasting of medicine at the Richardsons; and finally the finding during a personal search by a woman representative of the Revere police of a small druggist's envelope containing two powders in Miss Catherine Richardson's stocking. This last named discovery was made immediately after Miss Richardson's arrest by Chief Sackett, and was followed by Miss Richardson's fainting.

The government has not yet shown whether or not these powders were white arsenic, although one of them has been subjected to a chemical analysis. The envelope, however, was marked in pencil "10 gr. Sodium Bromide."

Dr. Kinney was put through a severe cross-examination by Mr. Bartlett, counsel for Miss Richardson, during which she made a few contradictory statements and a number of admissions, but the substantial portion of her direct testimony was in fairly good condition when the court adjourned. Mr. Bartlett, however, will continue his attack on this testimony today.

Dr. Kinney proved rather a difficult witness to examine, for she continually explained her answers and many were thrown out as expressing opinion. Nevertheless she gave her testimony with evident care. The most telling point made by the defense was that of obtaining from Dr. Kinney an admission that Mrs. Richardson was evidently mildly insane, and rambling in her statements, which admission came directly after Dr. Kinney's testimony that it was Mrs. Richardson who called her attention to changes being made in the medicine which Dr. Kinney had left for her.

During the time in which Mrs. Richardson was under Dr. Kinney's care, from Dec. 12 to Dec. 25, the latter visited her on an average of twice a day. On the first occasion, Dec. 12, the call was by telephone, and it was then that Dr. Kinney found her suffering from burning in the throat and stomach and retching. Although Dr. Kinney believed then that Mrs. Richardson's illness was due to arsenic, she admitted under cross-examination that she did not give her the usual antidote.

She told Miss Catherine Richardson that the symptoms were arsenical, and the latter said it was strange that every time they attempted to change their boarding place her mother was always taken sick, and her brother also.

Five days later, Mrs. Richardson had another attack, and two days later a third. Between those times she was able to be dressed. On Dec. 12, or between Mrs. Richardson's second and third illnesses, Miss Richardson was also taken sick with the same symptoms, and Dr. Kinney was hastily called. Miss Richardson told the doctor she must have taken the wrong medicine.

Shortly after this Dr. Kinney came into the room suddenly, and found Miss Richardson giving medicine to her mother. This medicine did not look like that which Dr. Kinney had left the day before, so she tasted of it. She said it was brackish and that three hours afterwards she was very sick. She treated herself for arsenical poisoning.

Finally there came the report to the police, which was followed by Miss Richardson's arrest and the search of her person by Mrs. Rollins, a representative of the authorities. The discovery of the powders was the result. Dr. Kinney did not say what these powders were, and as yet this evidence remains hidden.

The cross-examination was at times quite technical. Dr. Kinney admitted that after seeing symptoms of arsenical poisoning in these instances she did not take anything for analysis until she had been treating Mrs. Richardson for 11 days.

Then a small quantity of urine was taken, but it was lost by accident. A second quantity was turned over to the police. Dr. Kinney declared that her suspicions were not aroused until after she herself had been made sick, as she claimed, by the medicine. She stoutly declared that her medicines had frequently been changed. She admitted that Miss Richardson had told her that her mother had similar attacks before Dec. 12, and that she did not know that the family had other medical advice while she herself was in attendance on Mrs. Richardson.

With this last admission the day's hearing closed, and further cross-examination was postponed until today.

FIFTEEN SHIPS SEIZED

Berlin Paper Condemns Action at Puerto Cabello

REBELS ATTACK A CITY

But Forced to Abandon the Field With Fifty-Seven Killed In a Four-Hours' Battle on Sunday—Financial Panic at Caracas Is Checked

Berlin, Jan. 6.—Commodore Scheder telegraphs that the Germans seized 15 large Venezuelan sailing vessels at Puerto Cabello Saturday. The prizes were towed by the warships Stosch and Restaurador to Los Roques, where they remain under guard.

The captured vessel being private property The Vossiche Zeitung condemns the action of the commodore as barbarous, "although legal under international maritime practice;" says it supposes the German government disapproves of the seizures and quotes Chancellor Von Buelow's statements made in his speech in the reichstag Jan. 19, 1900, when he said:

"The German empire would not refuse its consent and support if a prospect presented itself for a more precise definition through international agreement of the controverted points of maritime law than has hitherto prevailed."

The chancellor's declaration referred also to private property rights during a naval war and he added: "Maritime law is still very elastic and under the existing circumstances might too often decide rights at sea. In other words, the standpoint of force has not yet been overmastered by the standpoint of justice."

Revolutionists Retreated

Caracas, Jan. 6.—Fourteen hundred revolutionists under Generals Ramos and Penalosa attacked 800 government troops under the command of General Acosta Sunday morning at a point near Guatire. After four hours' fighting the revolutionists abandoned the field and the town of Guatire. They had 57 men killed and many wounded. One of their guns was captured. A prisoner captured by the government forces is authority for the statement that the revolutionists still lack ammunition.

About 1500 revolutionists are reported to be marching on Caracas.

The answers from the powers to President Castro's counter-proposition in the matter of referring the Venezuelan issues to The Hague tribunal have not yet been received here. They are awaited with considerable anxiety.

The financial panic here has been momentarily arrested by an agreement between the leading traders of Caracas, La Guaira, Valencia and Puerto Cabello and the Bank of Venezuela. The traders have agreed to accept the bank's notes in payment of all accounts. The run on the bank has ceased.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johnanna Soderham, of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

Mayor Bryant's assurance that he will endeavor to prevent any increase in the tax rate is commendable, and an effort should also be made to reduce the debt of city, both municipal, park and water and if wise the sewer debt. The maturing municipal debt of 1903, according to the Mayor's inaugural is $70,540.35, and as no pressing public improvements were mentioned in the address, it should be easy to keep the new notes well within this amount, and every dollar inside will reduce the municipal debt just so much.

The park debt will be reduced $1,000 this year as in the past, and beginning next year $2,000 a year will be paid. The interest on the park debt has each year amounted to more than the notes maturing, being $1,720 in 1901, $1,680 in 1902, and $1,640 this year. According to the method adopted for payment, our playgrounds are very expensive.

The maturing water debt this year is $33,500, and the debt should be reduced at least $3,350, and the department would not be crippled if $15,000 or $22,500 instead of $30,000 was appropriated this year for extensions and construction.

The maturing sewer debt is about $15,000 this year, and there is a good sized balance from the special sewer appropriation of $80,000 in 1902. The sewer assessments will not much longer be large enough to meet the cost of maintenance and maturing sewer debt, so the City Council will be wise if it goes slow in increasing the sewer debt until it finds out just how the city is situated. It will soon be necessary to include in current expenses an appropriation for sewer maintenance, and to raise by taxation the amounts needed for maturing sewer debt and interest.

The burden of most of the inaugural addresses in Massachusetts cities on Monday was the heavy mortgages placed on cities, the maturing debt and interesting requiring altogether too large a part of the tax rate. The situation in municipal government is really serious, and very discouraging to taxpayers. We commend a careful reading of the financial part of the address of Mayor Collins of Boston.

A daily paper on shipboard is among the possibilities of wireless telegraphy, and is already contemplated. Next!

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Many occupations have diseases which are more or less incidental to them, and literature is not exempt. The two most prevalent literary maladies are writer's cramp and swelled head. The unfortunate thing about writer's cramp is that it is never cured. The unfortunate thing about swelled head is that it never kills.—New York Sun.

☞ If the incoming city fathers will pay close attention to the financial statement of the past year and get at the lessons in municipal economy which it teaches, they will profit fully as much as by any inaugural address that was ever delivered on a first day of January.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ We read history upside down, we see contemporaneous society with astigmatic eyes, if we do not know that what the world is longing for is the manifestation of the sons of God. The foundations of human society are not brains, nor beauty, nor power, nor position, but righteousness. — Dr. Winchester Donald.

RACE HORSE SPEED.

Capt. Arthur Crowley of the new steel seven-masted schooner Thomas W. Lawson, is now making Boston with nearly 8,000 tons of soft coal on board, and third trip since she was launched at Quincy, the other trips being from Philadelphia and Baltimore. His brother, Captain Elmer Crowley, is in charge of the new fiver T. Charlton Henry, on her first trip to Boston or any other port with cargo since launching. She is also bound to Boston with coal from Norfolk, and Captain Arthur will try out the Henry with the Lawson considered the swiftest of her class afloat. Much interest will be centered upon the arrival of the vessels in port. It will be a good-natured race up the coast and the one in the Henry will try his skill against his brother. These vessels passed out at Fortress Monroe Saturday, and will come ahead at race horse speed, as the wind was fresh from the southwest in that part of the coast.

REFORMATION.

Crime and Causes Discussed by an Expert.

Before Monday Evening Club.

Music Also a Feature of the Meeting.

The Atlantic Monday evening club had an auspicious opening Monday evening, being favored with an address on "Crime and its Causes," by Will S. Monroe, A. B., Professor of Psychology and Pedagogy in the State Normal School at Westfield.

He spoke of the treatment of criminals in former times and its being considered necessary to punish them in revenge, while today the effort is to bring order into their lives. He mentioned the classes of political criminals, criminals by passion, occasional, professional and instinctive criminals, and felt sure that the reformatories were doing a great work in reclaiming from a savage state the disordered minds of the inmates.

The speaker felt that education was a great reforming element and assured the audience that there was the largest percentage of illiteracy in the criminal class. At the same time that education was an important factor, the necessity of having a trade or the knowledge of something by which to earn a living was equally important and should be a part of the reformatory training.

He presented an encouraging outlook and suggested an intermediate school between the parental and reformatory similar to the English school which is called the industrial school and where the inmate is educated to become a self-supporting citizen rather than an expense in a penal institution. The audience was very attentive, which is enough to say that the speaker was very interesting.

Mr. G. Arthur Gray of Atlantic convulsed the club with a facetious address on "The Commercial Traveller" giving numerous realistic narrations of his own experiences.

Miss Adelaide Griggs of the Park Street quartette sang, "I Said to the Wind of the South" by Chadwick, "Auf Wiedersel" — Nims, "Rainbow"—Edna Park, and "Love is a Bubble"—Allitsen, and responded to an encore.

Mr. John Manning of Boston accompanied Miss Griggs at the piano and also played a piano solo. Miss Griggs was in fine voice and her selections were very pleasing. Mr. Manning's solo was also thoroughly enjoyed.

The audience was a large one occupying all the pews and requiring extra settees to be brought in.

Mrs. Ellis Smith had charge of the social intermission and Mr. W. Jay Sanborn was the music committee.

At the next meeting, January 19, Mrs. Charles Park, a Radcliffe graduate, will address the club on "Woman Suffrage" and Miss Alice Stone Blackwell will conduct a "Question Box."

IN DARKNESS.

Copeland Street Fire Cuts Off West Quincy Lights.

West Quincy was in darkness Monday night, owing to the burning of the wires by the fire in the shoe store of Patrick Cain at 51 Copeland street. The fire is said to have been caused by the overturning of a lamp. The fire thus started spread rapidly and when the fire department arrived in response to an alarm from Box 43 at 5 o'clock, the building, which is a one story affair, was a mass of flames which were bursting out all over it. A line of poles carrying electric light and telephone wires runs directly in front of the building, and the fire was so hot that they were burned off. Word was sent to the electric light station and the current shut off.

The fire had gained such headway that the building was badly gutted before the fire was extinguished.

Bill of Prices.

Reports from the two committees considering the proposed changes in the bill of prices of the stone cutters, are that they are making good progress, and the committee have already agreed upon some of the matters and expect to finish their work before the twentieth.

Cellar Contract.

W. F. Loud has the contract for the foundation for the new school building at Quincy Point, and will commence excavating for the cellar this week. Work on the building will be rushed as soon as spring opens.

VIEWS OF MAYORS.

Most of the Executives Deplore the Big City Debt.

I am opposed to a fictitious or inflated valuation. I think it more honest to have the taxation represent the cost to the city of carrying on its business than by a stroke of the pen to raise valuations.—Mayor Buttrick of Melrose.

Let us reverse the practice of some years, which has been to increase our running expenses much faster than the gain in income would warrant.—Mayor Davis of Beverly.

Somerville must prepare herself for a ceaseless struggle with her financial problem. Many of the burdens which we bear are inherited from the fathers, and we must not place upon posterity greater burdens than it can bear. The estimated borrowing capacity of the city Jan. 1, 1903, was $149,000.—Mayor Glines of Somerville.

A building in every way desirable for a City Hall can be erected at a cost not to exceed $75,000.—Mayor Morse of Marlboro.

It would appear to be a logical conclusion that, after enterprises have the use of the public facilities without cost, through the period of infancy, and have from the general patronage of the public acquired a place of stability and financial success, I maintain that some percentage of the profits of such enterprises might well be used to lessen the burden of taxation of our people. In my opinion a suitable provision might readily be incorporated in such grants as we may be asked to make as would eventually result in some small way in remunerating the city for the valuable privileges granted.—Mayor Sisson of Pittsfield.

Men to make good officers must be temperate and sincere in the performance of their duties. The police department are paid to prevent crime and preserve order and we should have no place for the officer who cannot see evidence of crime which the ordinary citizen can observe. If the law is being broken the public expect these men to report the same, and if no effort is made in this direction, then only one conclusion can be drawn, and that is, that the officer is not attending to his duty and should be discharged. This is on the same principal that any employe is discharged who is too negligent to do the work that his employer hires him for.—Mayor Tolman of Gloucester.

As in two former inaugural addresses I declare my firm belief in, and adherence to, the principles of the Socialist party. Events of the past have demonstrated and events of the present are demonstrating, day by day, that the competitive system is doomed to pass away, as have other systems of government, and be followed by the co-operative commonwealth, the brotherhood of man, the era so long looked forward to of peace on earth. That the tools of modern industry are rapidly concentrating into the hands of a few to the detriment of the many is a fact becoming more and more plain to the citizenship of our land with each succeeding day. Society, which creates and operates all the means of modern industry, should own and operate those industries for the good of society as a whole, and the trust and the department store are teaching our people the necessity for such ownership.

The theory of reducing the working day from 15 hours to 12, from 12 to 10, and from 10 to eight, is that substantially the same amount of work will be done in eight hours, covering the whole period of years of wage earners' lives, as would be performed if they worked a larger number of hours. From all that I have seen, and all that I can learn, and especially in the criticisms that come to me from innumerable citizens, I am convinced that many of our city employes have not caught the enterprising spirit that should be manifested by the eight-hour a-day worker, and that they are accomplishing far less work than than they are in honor bound to give the city, and still more in justice to their fellow workmen whose taxes they are receiving in wages.—Mayor Fletcher of Worcester.

Superior Civil Court.

The civil season of the Norfolk Superior court came in at Dedham on Monday, with Edward R. Blanchard, Stephen H. Edwards, George W. Jones, George O'Brien and Dennis Sugrue of Quincy on the jury. The trial list was the longest but one in the history of the court, containing 285 cases.

There are 5 cases against the city of Quincy, 30 against the Old Colony street railway, 24 against the Boston Elevated, 18 against the State, 10 against the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., etc.

The funeral of Mrs. John W. McAnarney will be held Wednesday at 9 A. M. from St. Johns church.

The members of Miss Elcock's physical training class hold their reception and dance in Music hall this week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Briggs have been visiting Mr. Briggs' mother on Appleton street, during the past week.

Miss M. Elizabeth Bates who has been at home for the holidays, returned Sunday evening to take up her duties at Swarthmore college.

Many citizens were heard at the inaugural Monday to comment favorably upon the great improvement in City Hall since the remodelling.

The games in the Norfolk County League tournament this week will be played Thursday night at the Granite City club rooms between that club and the Braintrees.

A woman's meeting was held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Wollaston Congregational church; subject, "Present day opportunities of women for Christian service."

There were five tables of whist, prizes for highest scores being won by Miss Staniford and Miss Ethel Hill, Mr. Charles Hoxie and Mr. Clifford Snow. The house was profusely trimmed with mistletoe which provoked a great deal of fun during the evening.

Religion in Philippines.

The Rev. C. N. Briggs, a missionary recently returned from the Philippines gave an interesting address at the Wollaston Baptist church Sunday evening. He told how ready the Filipinos were to become Protestants when the Americans came in 1898. A vivid picture was drawn of the first Baptist chapel in the Iliolo province, a bamboo affair made to seat 200, but owing to the great multitude who thronged to hear preaching in English, Spanish and the native dialect, stripped of benches and walls, consisting merely of a roof and its supports. The speaker mentioned the opposition of the Catholic priests with their mediaeval ideas and methods and the continued growth of the Protestant church. Mr. Robbins will be sent by the Baptist Board of Missions to this new field.

Secretary Lynch.

Matthew W. Lynch, a well known East Weymouth grocer, died Monday of pneumonia after a brief illness. He was prominently identified with the Old Colony Grocers' Association and has been one of its officers for several years.

TWO OFF DUTY.

Officer Ferguson's Resignation Accepted by Chief Hayden.

There has been some questions asked as to whether Officer Ferguson has resigned as a member of the police force. Chief Hayden when seen this morning said that the officer had turned over to him his kit and twisters and other articles carried by an officer and tendered his resignation. Chief Hayden further said that he had accepted his resignation and had notified the Mayor to that effect, and that a special officer was covering the Brewers corner beat until the Mayor filled the vacancy.

Officer Curtin is on the Brewers Corner beat, and Officer Boutin is covering Wollaston during the enforced vacation of Officer Bradley.

Officer Bradley has been suspended for two weeks for failing to pull in his boxes. The officer's excuse was that he was taken sick and went home.

It has been the rule of the department that an officer should pull the boxes on his beat at certain intervals through the night; that is, he should place the hand in the box at his number and pull the hook which registers the box number, time and officer's number on a strip of paper at the central station. The telephone call was not used unless the officer desired to speak to the officer in chage of the station.

A new rule, however, has gone into effect which obliges the officer after 10 o'clock P. M. to use the telephone when ringing in his duty calls, so that the officer at the station may know who it is that pulls the box.

Special Police.

Mayor Bryant has appointed the following as special police. In the list it will be noticed that the name of John A. McAloon who was the third man on the civil service list is omitted:

Frank E. Burrell, John A. O'Brien, Henry F. Corbett, Claes A. Broberg, Edward J. Curtain, Patrick J. Kelliher, Hiram A. Hayden, Patrick A. Milford, John F. Donovan, James P. Landers, James P. Denward, Charles T. Crooker, Malcolm J.Stewart, Edward Johnson, John P. Reddington, John Bowton, Jr., David L. Gordon, James M Conway, Michael T. Donovan and Henry W. Thorn.

The Forgetmenot.

Everybody knows the pretty little forgetmenot and likes the flower more perhaps because of its name than its beauty. How was it so called? The Germans account for it by quite a pathetic romance. It seems that once upon a time a knight and a lady were walking by the bank of the Danube when the latter asked her "gallant gay" to pluck for her a tiny blue flower which she saw growing in the stream. No sooner said than done, but the knight, overbalancing, fell into the river and, owing to the slippery nature of the bank and the weight of his own armor, was carried away by the current. As he threw the flowers ashore to his lady he cried out with his last breath, "Vergiss mein nicht!" ("Forget me not.") And ever since the flower has been looked upon as the emblem of fidelity.

London Police Methods.

This is the modus operandi of London's police: Two citizens engage in a street fight; crowd gathers to see the mill; four "bobbies" appear, working their way through the press with a "by your leave" or "kindly let me pass;" they have neither billies nor guns. Two seize each combatant, leading him aside with no rough hands and arguing thus in chiding tones: "Aren't ye 'shamed o' ye'self? What's the good o' fightin'? Leave scraps to dogs. Now, run along an' behave ye'self. There's a good chap." These words are accompanied by a pat on the shoulder and a gentle shove away from the scene of conflict. Rarely is there an arrest. A brutal clubbing is unknown. The London police are peacemakers.—New York Press.

Moslem Etiquette.

All true Moslems when eating must begin with salt and finish with vinegar. If they begin with salt, they will escape the contagion of seventy diseases. If they finish with vinegar, their worldly prosperity will continue to increase. The host is in etiquette bound to be the first to start eating and the last to leave off. Tooth picking is considered an act of grace in the true Moslem, for the angel Gabriel is reported to have brought a toothpick from heaven for the prophet after every meal. The priests recite certain passages of the Koran before and after lunch and dinner, and also before drinking water at any hour of the day.

A New Clerical Order.

An Oxford correspondent writes: "A friend of mine, a rector in this neighborhood, told me the other day the following: He was preparing some boys for confirmation and asked one of them what were the three orders in the Church of England, to which he received the reply, 'Bishops, priests and demons,' and on my friend making him repeat his answer to see if he had mistaken him the same reply was made."—Westminster Gazette.

Then He Got Mad.

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Gallacher, "it was funny enough to make a donkey laugh. I laughed till I cried." And then, as he saw a smile go round the room, he grew red in the face and went away angry.—London Tit-Bits.

Some people seem to think you ought to pay rent for the place you occupy in their daily thoughts.—Chicago News.

HISTORICAL PAPER

And Music and Meeting of Daughters of Revolution.

It is always a pleasure for the members of Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to meet with Mrs. Elisha Thayer of Crescent avenue, South Braintree, and on Monday afternoon there was a full attendance of members at her home. Mrs. Thayer was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Charles F. Sprague, Mrs. F. Eugene Dyer, and Mrs. S. J. Wilde, all of South Braintree, and active in the patriotic work of the chapter.

Mr. Frank A. Bates, who is following in the footsteps of his father, Samuel A. Bates, the historian, has given considerable time to historical study of Braintree and its early settlers, gave a most interesting paper on "Braintree During the Revolution." He was listened to attentively and his praise of the women of the Revolution was much appreciated by their descendants of today.

He said they checked the tears caused at the parting of husband, son or sweetheart, and set to work to support the family. They tilled the fields, cared for the cattle, and even melted the pewter dishes from off their tables to furnish bullets to drive away their oppressors.

Braintree was slow to wake up to the troubles of her country, as there were many loyalists in her midst, but when once aroused she did her duty faithfully. She contributed 671 soldiers; 28 went on the ill-fated expedition to Canada in 1776; 17 to Rhode Island in 1776-8; 54 to New York, and the rest served as coast guards.

No battles or even skirmishes were ever fought in Braintree, although the town saw considerable fighting in Boston harbor.

Mr. Bates claimed three Presidents from Braintree, viz: John Adams and John Quincy Adams, and John Hancock, first president of the Continental Congress, something that no other town in the country can boast of.

The paper was full of interesting anecdotes and facts, but space will not permit of lengthy excerpts. Mr. Bates was heartily applauded at the close of his paper, and during the informal reception later in the afternoon the ladies showed their appreciation of his paper by personally discussing with him some of the subjects to which he had alluded.

Besides the paper by Mr. Bates there was singing by Mrs. Albert E. Avery of East Braintree, who sang several solos, her sweet contralto voice captivating the ladies who heartily encored her selections.

A social hour followed, refreshments being served by the hostesses. All the members declared it one of the pleasantest meetings of the season.

A KING'S POEM.

Autograph Verses by James I. In a Book Owned In Boston.

An interesting volume in the Boston Public library is Montaigne's "Essays," printed early in the seventeenth century, which was owned by James I., the English king who was so largely responsible for the publication of the accepted version of the Holy Bible. The book is the first English translation of the great French author and was made by John Florio, a friend of many of the famous Elizabethan writers, including Shakespeare himself, who drew several suggestions from its pages for well known passages in his plays.

The Boston library copy has a modern binding, but the ancient fly leaf is preserved on which is written the following poem, in King James' autograph:

Here lyeth I nakit to the anatomie
Of my fraill hairt, o humane devitie
O trust the Almychtie, lyk the Almychtie's word
O put on me thy robe as guhylom lord
Thou putest once more me in thy blest beliefe
And in my souill thy secretst law engrave.

The queer words and quaint spelling are characteristic of early Scotch poetry, which King James, as a Scotchman himself, took great delight in writing, and perhaps the average reader will have no more difficulty in deciphering the royal meaning than in making out a page in a modern Scotch dialect novel.

Liquid Oxygen.

Liquid oxygen when first formed is milky in appearance owing to the presence of some impurity which may be removed by passing it through ordinary filter paper. When pure, it is of a pale blue color, which, however, is not due, as some have thought, to the presence of liquid ozone, which is of a dark blue color. Liquid oxygen is a nonconductor of electricity, but is strongly magnetic. It may be lifted from a cup by presenting the poles of a strong electro magnet. It seems to have very slight chemical activity, since it will extinguish a lighted match and has no action on a piece of phosphorus dropped into it. It is well known that the A and B lines of the solar spectrum are due to oxygen, and from experiments on the top of Mont Blanc it is thought they are largely if not wholly due to the oxygen in the earth's atmosphere. Professor Dewar showed that these lines come out very strong when liquid oxygen is interposed in the path of the rays from an electric lamp.

Castro Says He Will Not Give Up Reins of Office

MONEY SCARCE AT CARACAS

Bank of Venezuela Finds Itself Hard Pushed and Closes Its Doors—Course Pursued by Allied Powers at La Guira Causes Adverse Comment

Caracas, Jan. 5.—The report that President Castro purposes to abdicate, or resign the presidency of Venezuela, is untrue. The correspondent of The Associated Press saw the president with regard to this matter yesterday. The president laughed when questioned, and then said thoughtfully:

"You are at liberty to say that I have fought during two years to retain the supreme power which was invested in me by the people of Venezuela. I will no more abdicate than I will resign. The Matos revolution, without assistance from foreign powers, will soon be a past story."

There was a financial panic at Caracas Saturday afternoon. A large number of small traders and private depositors went together to the office of the Bank of Venezuela for the purpose of exchanging the bank's notes for silver. The bank refused to exchange more than $20 worth of notes for any one person and at 4 o'clock in the afternoon closed its doors.

The panic continues. Bills issued by the bank are now selling for 80 percent of their face value. The leading firms at Caracas, notwithstanding the present situation, have presented no notes for redemption, as they are all interested in supporting the bank.

The course pursued by the allied powers in maintaining the blockade of La Guaira has caused astonishment among the foreign residents of this city. When the Dutch steamer Frins Willem V arrived off La Guaira to take on board the European mails, the authorities at La Guaira sent the mail out in a small boat. This boat was stopped by the British cruiser on blockade and the mail bags were taken on board the warship. The postal clerks who were in the small boat say the mail bags, notwithstanding their protests, were opened on board the cruiser.

La Guira Custom House Closed

La Guaira, Jan. 5.—Half of the clerks employed in the custom house here and all the members of the coast guard service at La Guaira have been discharged; this means cutting off the revenue of 60 or more families. The La Guaira custom house was closed today. About 800 stevedores are at present without employment and rioting is feared. The government will doubtless have to employ urgent measures to maintain quiet.

The captain of the British cruiser Tribune has sent a message to the prefect of this port, commending the behavior of the Venezuelan authorities up to the present time, but saying he would hold the prefect responsible for any injury to the persons or property of British, German and Italian subjects.

Rev. Mr. Wilson's Book.

The following review is from The Beacon, and is said to have been written by Mrs. W. T. Babcock of Quincy.

The Rev. Mr. Wilson has done a most excellent piece of work in putting in permanent and connected form "the patriotic visions and achievements" of Sir Harry Vane, the Rev. John Wheelwright, the Hoars, the Adamses, the Quincys and the Hancocks. It is an account that will be of interest to all Americans, although the scene of action is largely confined to the present city of Quincy and the town of Braintree.

Mr. Wilson's pen is very graceful one and the chapter devoted to Dorothy Q. and other Dorothy's is delightful, giving many a glimise of girlhood in old times. The Colonial Colonels gives the beginigs of the Quincy's in this country, and the chapter entitled The Great Advocates of Independence is the first of three of the most interesting in the entire volume. Tutor Flynt is very appropriately a part of this history, and is reprinted from the New England magazines, where it found a host of appreciative readers.

The sub-title of Mr. Wilson's book is Quincy, its Famous Group of Patriots, Their Deeds, Homes and Descendants, and the last chapter is entitled Perambulation of Quincy, the reverend and genial author quoting Sir Walter Besant as authority for this final local touch. These few pages of modern Quincy will doubtless be of but general interest, but will become more valuable with the passing years, if the youth of Quincy live up to the traditions of the old town.

The Rev. Mr. Wilson in spite of his duties and distractions as pastor of a city parish, has labored faithfully and successfully to make this record of the beginnings of a new world. His contemporaries are greatly indebted to him and future men and women will praise him for this chronicle of persons and events so closely connected with the early history of the republic.

QUEEREST OF LAWSUITS.

A Highwayman Sued His Partner For His Share of Spoils.

Perhaps the most remarkable suit ever brought is on the records of the court of the exchequer in England. It was filed on Oct. 3, 1725, and it sets forth very clearly that John Everit and Joseph Williams were highway robbers.

In its succinct legal phrases the complaint says that the men formed a partnership for the purpose of carrying on business as highwaymen. It was mighty profitable, as was shown by the fact that Everit sued Williams for the equivalent of $5,000, "being for moneys wrongfully appropriated to defendant's private purse."

This was the amount in dispute after the partnership had lasted only a year. Then Everit claimed that he discovered that his partner had not made a fair division of the spoils.

The action was adjudged to be a gross contempt of court, and the plaintiff was ordered to pay all costs, while the solicitors who served the writ were fined. One of the solicitors, a man named Wreathcock, refused to pay the fine and was sent to prison for six months. Both plaintiff and defendant to the action were subsequently hanged, one at Tyburn and the other at Maidstone.

Trivial Causes of Wars.

History records one war that was caused by a glass of water—the war of the Spanish succession. A lady, Mrs. Masham, a celebrated court beauty, was carrying a glass of water when she was obstructed by the Marquis de Torey. A slight scuffle ensued, and the water was spilled. The marquis lost his temper, and bad feeling ensued between the English and French courts, with the ultimate result that war was declared. The campaign cost France many severe battles—viz, Blenheim, 1704; Ramillies, 1707; Audenardi, 1708, and Malplaquit, 1709.

Fully as absurd in its origin was the war that took place during the commonwealth of Modena. A soldier stole a bucket from a public well belonging to the state of Bologna. Although the value of the article did not exceed a few pennies, the incident was the signal for a fierce and prolonged war. Henry, the king of Sardinia, assisted the Modenese to retain the bucket, and in one of the subsequent battles he was made a prisoner. The bucket is still exhibited in the tower of the cathedral of Modena.

Uncle Isrul's Foresight.

Uncle Isrul Trask was one of those thrifty Yankees who, his neighbors averred, would squeeze a dollar "till the eagle on it hollered" before allowing it to leave his pocket. He was a shopkeeper in a small way, but his business had not proved in the long run so profitable as his several matrimonial ventures, which had been three times celebrated. Soon after the last event of the kind had been solemnized, one of his intimates rallied him with:

"Well, Uncle Isrul, heard's how you'd be'n an' done it ag'in. How'd you make out this time? Pooty well, as usual, hey?"

"Well, neighbor," drawled Uncle Isrul, in his soft and saintly way, "I did pooty well, 's you may say, pooty well. Ye-es, Hetty's a godly woman, neighbor; a godly woman—with a leetle prop'ty!"—New York Times.

How Fruits Act.

The Medicine Brief thus summarizes the various uses of fruit in relieving diseased conditions of the body. The list is worth keeping. Under the category of laxatives, oranges, figs, tamarinds, prunes, mulberries, dates, nectarines and plums may be included. Pomegranates, cranberries, blackberries, sumac berries, dewberries, raspberries, barberries, quinces, pears, wild cherries and medlars are astringent. Grapes, peaches, strawberries, whortleberries, prickly pears, black currants and melon seeds are diuretics. Gooseberries, red and white currants, pumpkins and melons are refrigerants. Lemons, limes and apples are stomach sedatives.

The Gardener Bird.

The highest development of the decorative instinct in animals is found in the gardener bird (amblyornis). This plain looking native of New Guinea builds its nest on the ground, spreads moss before it and over this green carpet scatters bright berries, flowers and insects. As the flowers wither they are replaced by fresh ones. The whole establishment serves only as a sort of pleasure resort.

A Sensitive Point.

"Isn't it a great satisfaction to be able to assist those who call on you for help in the struggle of life?"

"It would be," answered Mr. Cumrox, "if you could be sure some of your beneficiaries weren't laughing at you behind your back and calling you an easy mark."—Washington Star.

Progressive.

"Are you having a pleasant time?" asked a lady of a little miss at a fashionable children's party.

"Delightful, thanks."

"And will your papa and mamma come later?"

"Oh, dear, no; papa and mamma and I don't belong to the same set."

Does It Himself.

"They say some blind people can actually distinguish colors by the sense of touch."

"That's nothing; there are times when I feel blue myself."—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

EVENING COIFFURE.

The Low Coil Finds Comparatively Few Wearers.

There is immense variety in the coiffure, but despite the lowering of the collar the low type of hairdressing has comparatively few followers. It is seen mostly in the evening. The tucked in pompadour arrangement with a cue at the back has been too extensively patronized to be much in favor with the smart woman, and it is certainly a fashion which lacks distinction when not completed by a handsome picture hat.

There is very little novelty in decorations for the hair, and the little wreaths of small flowers or foliage are still popular. The geisha arrangement of flowers is rather heavy. A cluster of rosebuds or violets with two or three wires headed by well cut stones which quiver with every movement has many admirers, and the wisp of tulle still has its adherents.

The coronet combs worn in front of the coil suggest the modified tiara, and the newest side and the back combs are thickly incrusted with gems.

A smart evening cloak is shown in the cut. It is made of pearl gray bengaline silk and maltese lace, with a lining of accordion plaited chiffon and lace.

NOW IN GOOD HANDS

But Senator Hoar Fears For Future of Corporations

CAN MAKE OR PREVENT WAR

Neither Removal of Tariff From Trust-Made Articles or Government Ownership of Great Labor Employing Interests Will Remedy Trust Evils—Thinks His Own Bill Will Eventually Solve the Problem

Washington, Jan. 6.—In the senate today Senator Hoar made a long and interesting speech devoted entirely to the question of trusts. He assumed that all thoughtful men are agreed as to the necessity of legislation for the control of trusts. He said that as yet there had been only apprehension and alarm, but no serious injury, except in the case of the recent coal strike, on account of trusts. Still there is, he said, actual peril, and it is none the less real because it involves only the future and not the present.

The senator took up the discussion of the effect of the control of vast wealth by individuals, saying that in such a system there was much to threaten Republican liberty. Most of the vast fortunes of the present day had been accumulated within 30 years.

"Is there anything to render it unlikely," he asked, "that if one of these vast fortunes has grown from a hundred thousand to a hundred million or a thousand million in 30 years, that in the hands of the next possessor in another 30 or 50 years the hundred million may become a hundred thousand million or the thousand million a thousand thousand million? Is there anything to stop the accumulation of these snowballs? Cannot the same power and business ability and capital that can control all the petroleum in the country by and by control all the coal? Can it not control the railroad and the ocean-carrying trade? Can it not buy up and hold in one man's grasp the agricultural and grazing lands of new and great states and the coal mines and silver mines and copper mines?"

But, great as were the possibilities of the accumulation of great wealth by individuals he did not find in such accumulation the same peril that is found in corporate control of such wealth. This was true, he said, because the natural man dies and his estate is distributed under the law, while the corporation lives forever. "It never goes through the probate court," he said. "Its internal transactions are kept secret. It is not zealous for its own honor or reputation, except so far as its honor or reputation is essential to its getting money. It has no soul and no conscience. In general the men who are most powerful in its management can, if they see fit, avoid responsibility to public opinion. They always expect to avoid personal liability for obligations."

The senator said that now the great corporations are in good hands, but suppose some Napoleon of finance should come into the control of a thousand million dollars, would not that possibility be real public danger? Such a power can make wars or its can prevent wars. It can threaten a community with a coal famine or a wheat famine and it can execute its threat. He had no fear but that the American people could meet such emergencies, but it were better to forestall them.

Dwelling especially on the want of competition, he said: "There is one central power alone with which the skilled workman must deal and one dominant will to which he must submit. There may be a little help for him by joining a labor union where he gets the advantage of associated strength on his side, but the labor union knows no difference between excellence and the reverse. The inefficient man and the lazy man and the dull man must stand on one dead level with the brightest and keenest and most ingenious of his comrades."

Mr. Hoar said that many as were the evils in the great combinations of capital some of them would be counterbalanced by corresponding advantages, and added: "I confess I like to see Pierpont Morgan buying up great lines of ocean steamships. I like to hear of foreign potentates and principalities and powers bowing down when he visits the continent of Europe. We need great individual power if we are to rival foreign nations in the great matters which they also control by individual power. But it will be a bad bargain if we buy the dominion of the continent or the empire of the sea at the cost of American local public sentiment."

Mr. Hoar said that he did not agree with those who think they find an adequate remedy for the evils of the trusts in the removal of the tariff from all the trust made articles. He announced his opposition to government ownership of great labor employing industries, including coal mines and railroads. Socialism, he said, furnishes no remedy, but would be quite as bad. Socialism may do for China or for Turkey, but it will never be a Yankee remedy. We had no permanent danger to fear from that source.

Speaking of corporations Mr. Hoar said no power less than that of the entire nation is capable of dealing with them. The question was the most important that had come up for a long time, "for," said he, "we are to deal not only with foreign commerce, but with that compared with which the foreign commerce of the world is but a drop in the bucket—the domestic commerce of the United States."

This commerce is, he continued, in the hands of the great corporations and it is properly in their hands. Their work might be beneficent as well as otherwise, and for this reason congress should go slowly and carefully in devising a remedy for the ills, lest it should bring on others which might be worse. Two important steps already had been taken in the passage of the interstate commerce law and the Sherman anti-trust law, but while both measures had proved efficacious they had fallen short of the requirements. The anti-trust law had accomplished even more than its friends had expected of it, but there had been, he said, much disappointment over the failure of the supreme court adequately to interpret the phrase "in restraint of trade," as applied to combinations of business interests.

Discussing the accomplishments under that law, Mr. Hoar said that the attorney general had gone far already under it to break up a monopoly which affected the whole freight and passenger traffic of the northwest, another affecting the cotton trade of the south and another, the price of beef, a prime article of food. He believed that congress had power to go further on the lines indicated by Attorney General Knox in his Pittsburg speech and the enactment of a law on the general lines of his bill he thought would be only another step in the direction of the anti-trust law. His bill he considered tentative and experimental. But it was safe and could be modified.

We should proceed safely step by step. The measure, he said, is based entirely on the theory that congress can impose on a corporation created by any state such obligations as it shall think fit and reasonable as a condition for its being permitted to engage in commerce with foreign nations and among the several states. He then presented the following outline of the restrictions imposed by his bill on corporations:

First, publicity in the conduct of their business and the constitution of their organization; second, the power to stop their business altogether if they violate the laws enacted by congress; third, strict penalties on them and their officers for such violations; fourth, personal liability for all debts, obligations and wrong doings of the directors, officers and agents unless the laws be fully complied with. This liability is secured by requiring the personal consent to the provisions of this bill and acceptance of all its obligations by such officers, directors and agents before they enter upon office.

As to the effect of the measure in case it should become a law, he said: "If this bill shall become a law, and prove effective, no corporation engaging in the commerce which is within the jurisdiction of congress can keep its condition a secret. No such corporation can do business on fictitious capital or watered stock. No corporation can oppress any rival, whether corporate or individual, by any unlawful practices. If it does it will be on the condition that every one of its managers become personally liable for its debts and its torts, and will be liable also to heavy criminal liability. This bill depends for its validity on the constitutional powers of congress to regulate international and interstate commerce."

Sensational Court Incident

San Francisco, Jan. 6.—In the trial of Truxton Beale and Thomas Williams, jointly charged with shooting Editor Marriott, Williams, who is president of the California Jockey club, was on the stand yesterday, and was asked by the prosecuting attorney if he was armed. Williams, in reply, produced a revolver, which he said was the one used in self-defense against Marriott. In response to a second question if he carried further arms, Williams produced a large dagger. The court took possession of the weapons.

INVITE WARFARE

Moros Defy Americans and Call Them "Hogs That Eat Hogs"

Washington, Jan. 6.—"Swine who eat swine," is the latest compliment tendered American soldiers in Mindanao by the Sultan of Bacolod and the panadungan of that place. These two Filipinos of the Moro tribe have caused the American troops no little annoyance by their guerilla warfare. The following is an example of the letters received at the war department in the last Philippine mail. It was sent to the American officers in Mindanao from the sultan and the panadungan of Bacalod:

"We want war if you do not get out of here and go back to the sea, because neither the Sultan of Bacolod nor the panadungan wants to be your friend. Within this month we want the war to begin and if you do not want it you are a lot of cowardly rascals.

"Follow our Mohammedan religion.

"Do not look for the Mausers, for we have them. They were captured by Bantuas and Buarsing, people of the Sultan of Bacolod.

"We send our regards to the four generals and their vermin. If you do not want to go from here, come to this place and the sultan and panadungan will take care of you, for you are a lot of hogs that eat hogs and in not presenting yourselves at Bacolod look out, for we shall go to fight you."

Another Case of Colorphobia

Washington, Jan. 6.—Postmaster General Payne has received information that a posse of white citizens at Boeuf River, La., on Sunday night ordered Charles Jackson, a negro mail carrier, not to return with the mail on his route and threatened him with death in case he did not heed their injunction. The reason given by the posse was the color of the carrier. A postoffice inspector has been ordered to make a thorough investigation.

A LAWYER'S STORY

Says Dying Client Told Him She Was the Victim of a Conspiracy

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 6.—When Mrs. Mary Sturtevant died last Saturday, the circumstances were such that an investigation was ordered, indications of arsenical poisoning having been found. That afternoon an autopsy was performed and the stomach and the organs removed and sent to Professor Wood of Harvard college for examination. There the matter rested until yesterday, when Lawyer Gilday informed the police regarding a statement made to him by Mrs. Sturtevant last Thursday in which, after saying that she was on her death bed and knowing that she had but a few hours to live, she wanted to say that she was the victim of a conspiracy and that there was some one who wanted to get her out of the way.

Mr. Gilday, who had been summoned by Mrs. Sturtevant to draw up her will, stated that although she was very ill at the time she made the statement, her mind seemed to be perfectly clear.

BRONCHITIS

We Know is Hard to Control.

Our Vinol is Making a Wonderful Record in Curing This Dangerous Disease.

CALL AND LET US TELL YOU ABOUT IT.

Here is a letter that has just come to our attention. It will interest people suffering from bronchial troubles. It is from Mr. Geo. W. Brown, of So. Hanover, N. H., and reads as follows:

"I have suffered with bronchial troubles for over a year; tried two doctors and have taken three or four kinds of medicine, none of which did me any good. At times I was so hoarse I could not speak. Then I heard of Vinol. After taking three bottles of it my voice has perfectly returned to me. I can see that in a short time I will be all right. When I began to take it I was very weak, but it has built me up and given me a good appetite."

This is what Vinol always does. This is the way Vinol accomplishes its mission of doing good.

Vinol, as we wish every one to know, owes its power of accomplishing the cures that it effects to the fact that it contains the most wonderful medicinal elements known to science for the cure of all wasting diseases, as well as being in itself a marvelous tonic. These medicinal properties exist and have heretofore been found only in cod-liver oil. Vinol contains these elements. For by a scientific process the necessary curative properties of the cod-liver oil have been separated from the fat and grease which formerly made cod-liver oil preparations so objectionable.

As long as Vinol does not contain any of the vile-smelling oil, and is prepared by combining the sought-after properties with a delicate table wine, it is a most delicious and palatable preparation.

We know of what we speak when we recommend Vinol, and because we do know that Vinol does all we claim for it, we unhesitatingly endorse it, and guarantee at any time to refund the money paid for the remedy if you are not satisfied it will do all we claim for it.

Miss Richardson So Stated In Talk With Police.

WISHED MOTHER WAS DEAD

According to Testimony of a Professional Nurse—Woman Tells of Finding Powders Which May Form Important Part of Government's Case

Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 7.—Just before the close of the hearing in the district court yesterday on the Revere officials' charge against Miss Catherine V. Richardson of attempting to poison her mother, Chief Sackett, who has been in charge of the case, testified that Miss Richardson repeatedly denied that she had ever bought arsenic, had ever given her mother arsenic, or that she had arsenic in the house.

Previously in the trial, evidence had been submitted of the discovery in Miss Richardson's stocking of an envelope containing two papers such as powders are usually wrapped in. The prosecution has yet to show that these powders were white arsenic.

One other point which was brought out yesterday was Mrs. Richardson's remark to her daughter, that she believed she did not have many days to live. "I wish to God you were dead," was given as Miss Richardson's reply. Still it was admitted that Mrs. Richardson is mildly insane, and as if to substantiate this came her removal yesterday while the trial was in progress to a local institution after she had been particularly violent in the house where the alleged attempt on her life had been made.

Of the witnesses heard yesterday, Chief Sackett was by far the most important. It was he who arrested Miss Richardson, who warned her of her rights immediately afterwards, but who, nevertheless, had a long conversation with her, during which she denied any knowledge of arsenic, its uses, or its effects on the human system.

The chief also said that he talked with Miss Richardson about her father, and ascertained that he left $12,000 life insurance, which was equally divided between her brother, her mother and herself. She said she had $6000 left.

The trial opened yesterday with Dr. Kinney, who attended Mrs. Richardson, and who believed that she had discovered evidences of arsenical poisoning, still on the stand. As on Monday, a most rigid cross-examination by Attorney Bartlett in behalf of Miss Richardson failed to shake her evidence to any great degree. In fact, it seemed the purpose of the defense to amplify her direct testimony, rather than to involve her in contradictory statements.

Dr. Kinney was followed by one of her professional companions, Mrs. Laird, whom she installed at the Richardson house as a nurse. It was Mrs. Laird who overheard Mrs. Richardson say to her daughter: "Catherine, I have not many days to live," and Catherine's reply: "I wish to God you were dead." Mrs. Richardson also said, "Yes, I think you do, Kate."

Mrs. Laird also said that she saw Miss Richardson prepare some beef juice for her mother, and stir into it a teaspoonful of dark red fluid. After taking the beef juice, Mrs. Richardson was quite sick. Still Mrs. Richardson was never sick enough to require the nurse sitting up with her nights.

The third witness of the day was Mrs. Rollins, the wife of a Revere police officer, who was called by her husband to search Miss Richardson after her arrest. After going through her clothing, Mrs. Rollins finally reached the stocking on the right leg. Pulling it half down, she discovered a pocketbook. In it was a bankbook, some money, a mileage book and four small white folded papers, such as druggists use in putting up powders. Farther down in the stocking Mrs. Rollins said she found a letter and finally, near the ankle, a small druggist's envelope, containing two other folded powder papers. One of them, however, appeared to have been folded hastily, and not with the usual regularity.

Miss Richardson fainted after these were brought to light, but on reviving cried out that they must not take the powders as they were her bromide. "Still, you can do anything you wish," she added.

Mrs. Rollins gave these papers to her husband, Officer Rollins, who immediately after took the witness stand, and stated that when he looked into the envelope he saw a number of white crystals about the size of the head of a pin. It is expected that the result of the analysis of these srystals and the contents of the folded papers will form an important part of the government's evidence in the case.

Does Not Expect to Testify

Concord, N. H., Jan. 7.—Von C. Wheet, the druggist, formerly employed in Littleton, N. H., has received no summons to attend the Catherine V. Richardson hearing and does not anticipate that he will be a witness in the case.

PROPOSALS AGREED TO

England and Germany Reply In Regard to the Venezuelan Dispute

Washington, Jan. 7.—Secretary Hay yesterday received the British answer to President Castro's latest proposal relative to arbitration. The note is interlocutory, but in substance states that if Venezuela wishes a conference to submit the differences between the two countries to arbitration Great Britain will accede. The conditions attached vary slightly from the original British proposition.

Later in the day a separate response to President Castro's last proposal came from Germany. In many respects it was similar to that from Great Britain, and like that, it named certain conditions regarding the matters under consideration on which an understanding will have to be reached before the case is submitted to arbitration.

Germany's answer, like that of Great Britain, has been sent to President Castro through the intermediary of Minister Bowen at Caracas. If the latter conditions suggested by the two allies are accepted by Castro—and the hope among officials here is that they may be—it is expected that a meeting will be held in Washington between Minister Bowen, representing the government of Venezuela, and the ambassadors of Great Britain, Germany and others of the allies to prepare a basis on which the arbitration of the issues between the interested parties shall proceed.

CATTLE LAWS UNFAIR.

A Movement Among Farmers to Secure Full Value for Cows Killed.

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 7.—The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Farmers and Cattle Owners' association was held in this city yesterday. Dr. Salmon, chief of the national bureau of animal industry, and Dr. Austin Peters, head of the state bureau of animal industry, were present.

The foot and mouth disease was the chief topic of discussion and a determined effort will be made by the association to induce the legislature to make an appropriation to compensate owners in full for the loss they have sustained by the slaughter of their herds. The federal authorities allow cattle owners 70 percent of the value of all animals killed and the state will be asked to make an appropriation sufficient to relieve them from the 30 percent loss they would otherwise be subjected to. From figures presented by Dr. Salmon an appropriation by the state of about $30,000 will be necessary for this purpose.

The association unanimously adopted the secretary's suggestion that the usual association dinner be dispensed with in order that the treasury may be saved for legislative work this year, for it was generally admitted that the existing cattle laws in Massachusetts are so unfair, arbitrary and dangerous to the farmers that they must be changed and the association must go before the legislature at the incoming session in behalf of such action.

Good Afternoon.

Shall we say Mayor Bryant or Commodore Bryant this year?

Illustrated fashion hints by Judic Chollet are now a daily feature of the Ledger, and will usually be found on the first column of the fourth page.

An important feature of the report of the Boston Elevated for the year is that contracts have been made with the Boston & Suburban and Boston & Worcester street railway companies by which the cars of those companies will be taken by the Elevated company's conductor's and motormen at outlying surface terminals, brought to intown points of that system, and then returned to the points where they were taken. This arrangement will make it unnecessary for passengers who come and go in these cars to change cars when they reach the ends of our tracks, says the report.

If the people of Worcester and all the towns west of Boston can reach Boston without change of cars, why should not the people of the city of Quincy and the South Shore? Should the one-track freight railroad at Neponset stand longer in the way. It is only an excuse and a pretty poor one at that. Away with bugaboos. For years the people of all the towns north of Boston have been taken into Boston without change of cars, and for a five cent fare. Quincy does not ask for a five cent fare, but wishes to escape pneumonia by exposure at Neponset. Lynn, and even Marblehead, a little town of less than 8,000 people and 17 miles from Boston, have through cars into the Boston subway. Mr. Mayor and members of the City Council it is up to you.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ One of our enthusiastic contemporaries announces that the proposition of the steel trust to its employes puts the office boy at $3 a week on the plane of the president with his $100,000 a year—that is, the president can invest in stock of the company out of his earnings, and the office boy can invest in the stock out of his earnings also. What the office boy thinks about it is not recorded; but his view would doubtless be at least as interesting as that of the newspaper.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ The man who lives in the city where the newspapers are good for anything, cannot afford to let a day go by without at least glancing over the headlines to see what is happening. If he does, he will miss something that he ought to know, something that will interest him. People in these days are eager to know and to discuss all the latest affairs of nation, state and town. Not to be fairly well booked on the occurrences of the day is to write one's self down, in the opinion of the general public, as a man who is without interest in life and who is "slow." And one might as well be dead as to be "slow!"—Brockton Enterprise.

☞ Mr. G. Damon of 8 Wharf street, this city, has been awarded a Free Tuition contract by the Correspondence Institute of America, Scranton, Pa. This contract entitles the holder to a free mail course in either Illustrating, Ad-Writing, Journalism, Proofreading, Bookkeeping, Stenography, Practical Electricity or Electrical Engineering. As Mr. Damon already had one of these contracts he will be glad to transfer the extra one to any worthy person interested.

BID TOO HIGH.

The Fore River Company Will Not Get

New Contract for Cruisers.

Six Other Shipyards After the Two Warships.

The Fore River Ship Co. of this city bid $4,578,000 for one of the two new cruiser contracts opened Tuesday, but instead of being the lowest was one of the highest bidders, and the prospects are that the company will not receive the contract, but no decision has been reached. As the Quincy company already has eight millions of contracts now on hand including two battleships the works will not be idle.

A Washington special to the Herald says: Keen competition among seven prominent ship building firms developed when bids for the construction of the new armored cruisers, Tennessee and Washington were opened at the Navy department today.

The bids all came between $4,000,000 and $4,600,000 for each ship, but there are so many conditions and alternatives suggested by the bidders that the result will not be known until the naval board of construction has considered the bids on Thursday.

On the face of the matter it looks as though William Cramp & Sons of Philadelphia had the best chance of success.

The specifications provide for two first class armored cruisers of 14,500 tons displacement, not less than 21.5 knots speed and not less than 23,000 indicated horse power. Here are the bids submitted:

Newport News Ship Building Company—One ship in 42 months on department's designs for $4,325,000.

Fore River Ship & Engine Works of Quincy, Mass.,—One ship in 42 months on department's designs for $4,578,000.

Bath Iron Works—One ship in 42 months on department's designs for $4,500,000.

Union Iron Works of San Francisco—One ship in 42 months, $4,365,000.

On account of the higher cost of lumber and material on the Pacific coast, the bid of the Union Iron Works and of Moran Bros. at Seattle will be allowed 4 per cent. advantage in comparison with other bids.

New York Ship Building Company, Camden, N. J.—One ship in 42 months, department's designs, for $4,250,000. Two ships, same class, $4,150,000 each, to be delivered in 40 and 42 months. Same company, on its own designs, providing for 22-knot ships, to be delivered in 40 and 42 months, $4,280,000 each.

In connection with this bid a letter was submitted demanding an allowance of 25,000-horse power.

Moran Bros. & Co. of Seattle—One ship in 42 months for $4,397,000.

William Cramp & Sons of Philadelphia—One ship on department's designs, 39 months, $4,200,000. Same company on its own designs, ships to be delivered in 36 and 39 months, and to be of 22 knots speed, one ship for $4,100,000, two ships on same plans for $4,000,000 each. Same company, on plans of its own providing for the use of steam turbines and Niclause water tube boilers, $4,100,000 for one and $4,000,000 each.

Consideration of the Cramps' bid will probably evoke lively discussion in the naval board of construction. Rear Admiral Melville is opposed to the Niclause type of boiler. This boiler is a favorite of the Cramps, and was installed on the battleship Maine. It was also installed on the Russian battleship Variag, built by the Cramps.

The Cramps propose in their bid to build, for $4,000,000 each, two ships with these boilers, of an improved type and with improved steam turbines of American manufacture. Further than this, the Cramps propose to build these ships in 36 and 39 months, respectively a much shorter period than that proposed by the other bidders. This is a factor of considerable weight.

A noticeable feature of the bidding was the fact that the Union Iron Works, which is the principal company which merged itself into the United States Ship Building Company, commonly known as the ship building trust, did not bid low enough to be considered a likely recipient of the reward.

The New York Ship Building Company of Camden, N. J., is a new firm. Its bid was accompanied with the demand that it be allowed a 25,000-horse power to gain the specified speed of 21.5 knots. The board of construction has already decided on less than 25,000-horse power.

—There is now a post office at the South Terminal station, Boston.

PIERCE WANTED.

Several Charges of Forgery Against Him at Clinton.

David Waldo Pierce, who was recently arrested by the police of Baltimore, Md., for alleged evading of hotel charges, will be brought back to Clinton says a special dispatch to the Herald from that city, to answer to a charge of forgery if the local police can secure him.

On Oct. 3 a man whom nearly half a dozen Clinton people have declared was Pierce came to Clinton. He formerly visited here and was known to several people, most of whom he visited. He called at the residence of William A. Wischart and talked with the ladies of the family, who give a perfect description of him. Later he called at the Morgan and conversed with the proprietor, and then he went to the jewelry store of J. F. Bartlett, by whom his parents were known.

He talked for some time, and then, seeing a gold watch in a show case, he said it was just the kind of a watch he was looking for, and asked Mr. Bartlett to take his check for it. Mr. Bartlett decided not to.

At the drug store of Henry A. Burdett, former postmaster, the man talked for some time, and then said he wanted to draw a check and asked for a blank one. Mr. Burdett's check book was produced, and it was thought that he tore out but one, but later it was found he took two.

Two weeks later the checks came back to the First National Bank signed by fictitious names. One read, "Pay Miss Mabel Parker $11, and the second, Pay Louise Howard $16." These checks had been taken to Rutland, Vt., and on Oct. 8 had been cashed by merchants in that city for the woman who indorsed the checks as Miss Mabel Parker and Miss Louise Howard, respectively.

Pierce also went to the store of Charles Bowman, and, after talking of several people known to both, got Mr. Bowman to cash a check for him for $23, drawn on the First National Bank of Elizabeth, N. J., and signed "C. K. Franklin." He indorsed it "W. Price" and the check was deposited by Mr. Bowman in the local bank. Later it came back from Elizabeth, with the statement: "Franklin not known; no funds."

A photograph of Pierce was received by the police today, and several people who saw the man on Oct. 3 declare the identification complete.

IN A DILEMMA.

Difficulty in Removing Masonic Goats to New Hall.

It is said that the frame work in front of Hotel Greenleaf is for the purpose of getting out the goats belonging to the Masons who occupy the attic. Rural lodge recently voted to move into new quarters, but finds that since it moved into the Greenleaf block in 1876 that the stairways have been remodelled so that there are several sharp turns and narrow passages which make it impossible to remove the goats as all twelve of them must go tandem in a straight line at all times.

It is further said that the goats will be taken out after midnight on or before the full moon, when the craft will be called from labor to refreshments.

MUSIC AND FLOWERS

Notable This Morning at Funeral of Mrs. McAnarney.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary E., wife of John W. McAnarney, Esq., was held this morning at 9 o'clock from St. John's church. There was a large attendance, among those present being members of the Norfolk County Bar, and delegations from the Royal Arcanum, A. O. H., and Knights of Columbus. There was a very large number of beautiful floral pieces.

Solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated with Rev. Julian E. Johnstone as celebrant, Rev. John J. Casey as deacon, Rev. William T. Deasy of Randolph as sub-deacon, and Rev. Walter F. Fagan of Chelsea, as master of ceremonies.

Schmidt's mass was sung by the choir assisted by a quartette composed of Miss Anna C. Westervelt, soprano; Mrs. Annette W. McMunn, contralto; Dr. Leon F. Brine, bass; and Michael J. Dwyer, tenor. Miss Gertrude Murphy presided as organist.

At the offertory the quartette sang "Quando Corpus Morietus" from Rassini's "Stabat Mater." After the consecration, Mr. Michael J. Dwyer sang "Pie Jesu" and after the assolution Dr. Leon F. Brine sang "Only Waiting."

The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery where the clergy preformed the committal service. The bearers were Thomas M. McAnarney, Henry McDonnell, Henry DeCoste, Thomas Johnston, William Neagle and W. J. Sheahan.

COL. A. H. GOETTING.

Tendered a banquet last night by Republican State Committee and ex-members for twelve years.

Granite Manufacturer Dead.

James N. White, one of Quincy's veteran granite manufacturers, died at his home on Copeland street, Tuesday, after an illness of several month's duration. Mr. White was educated in the public schools of Quincy. After graduating he served his time as a granite cutter and worked at that trade some time. He then went into business for himself, his sons later being admitted to the firm, which of late years has been known as J. N. White & Sons. Some few weeks ago, owing to his illness, the firm was dissolved by his withdrawing from the firm.

Mr. White was 61 years of age and leaves five sons and five daughters. He is also survived by his mother, who is one of the oldest residents in Quincy.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of 120 Broadway, New York, of which Mr. James F. Burke is the Quincy agent, has issued some pretty calendars. It is in six cards, two months to a card and illustrates the flag history of our country. The first shows the flag of today, and is followed by the first national flag June 14, 1777; the pine tree flag of the navy 1776; the first union flag Jan. 2, 1776; the liberty flag 1775 and the rattlesnake flag of 1775, all displayed by the typical American girl, beautifully gowned.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johnanna Soderham, of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

TODAY'S COURT.

Thomas Phelan was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Case continued until next Wednesday.

John E. Buckett was arraigned for being a stubborn child at Cohasset. Case continued until Feb. 5.

January Magazines.

The January number of the New England Magazine opens with an article on "Boston's Playground System, by Joseph Lee, whose connection with many of the public philanthropies of Boston is guarantee of its accuracy. The evolution of the playground, from what its name pure and simple implies, to the supervised athletic field, gymnasium, and outdoor kindergarten that shall wield a correct mental and moral influence over the city youth, is a problem as yet only partly solved, but what progress the city of Boston has already made and hopes to gain in the future is interestingly shown by text and illustrations.

Country Life in America for January stands first among the large and beautiful magazines of the month. It has to do with many things that interest the country lover at this season, and leading articles are about "Crocodile and Alligator Hunting," Following the Hounds," "Camping in the Snow," as well as timely matters of the greenhouse and country homemaking, all illustrated with large and superb pictures.

SYMMES' HOLE.

The Peculiar Theory That Was Once Advanced by a Scientist.

Probably the oddest idea ever for a moment entertained by a scientist was that of John Cleves Symmes concerning the condition of the interior of our globe. Symmes was a jurist, a scientist, or, as the French would say, a "savant," of international reputation, an explorer "on his own hook" and an all round man of letters, yet one would think that some of his ideas must have originated with the king of Bedlam. He believed and lectured before learned college societies in support of his views that the earth consists of from five to seven hollow concentric spheres and that at the poles there is a round opening entirely through each of the several spheres.

According to this queer theory, these spheres are placed one inside the other, like a nest of crockery ware, with an open space of a few hundred miles between each. Furthermore, he believed that both the outside and the inside of each of these bubblelike spheres are inhabited, which would give not less than ten and probably fourteen "theaters of action" instead of the one habitable surface with which we are all acquainted to a greater or lesser degree. Symmes lived for many years near Newport, Ky.

The Glass We Eat.

"How much glass do you suppose you consume daily?" a physician asked of one of his patients the other day, says the Philadelphia Record, and then went on, in response to the other's interrogative look: "It is a fact that we all swallow each day more or less glass, the manufacturers not yet having reached the point where their product is impervious to the action of fluids. He who drinks beer consumes the most glass. A chemical analysis of any bottled beer inevitably reveals some of glass' constituents. But the water drinker, too, swallows his share. In a carafe or in a glass pitcher have you never noticed the odd line which marks the level that the water has had? Well, that line shows how the water has changed the appearance of the glass slightly by absorbing some of its components. And so every day, when we drink beer or water or milk, we consume a little glass. But it does us no harm. I have yet to hear of any disease that it has ever caused."

Horses With Four White Feet.

In France and I believe in European countries it is a most ominous sign for a rider, and especially a soldier, to want a horse with four white feet. The famous general Lasalle, who was very superstitious upon this point, never knowingly mounted such a horse. The day of his death, after several ominous events which had happened to him that day, such as a broken mirror, a broken pipe, the picture of his wife broken at the very moment when he went to look at it for the last time, he mounted a horse not his own without glancing at the feet. The horse had the unlucky signs. Mounted upon this horse, he was struck by a shot fired at a moment when fighting had ceased by a Croat among the prisoners just taken at the battle of Wagram.

On the other hand, these four white feet are a mark and token of consideration with the orientals, who do not fail to mention the fact in the pedigrees of their horses.

What Is Said About Ears.

You never saw a poet or a painter with large, coarse ears that stand out from the head like extended wings. That kind of an auricular appendage betokens coarseness of mind. A long, narrow ear that lies flat to the head is a sign of pugnacity. Never trust a man with a thin, waferlike ear. He was born a hypocrite, if not a thief. A very small ear betokens a trifling mind, lacking decision. Ears set very high on the head indicate narrowness of mind. A large, well shaped ear that does not spread itself to the breeze is indicative of generousness. Most of the world compellers had large ears and well developed noses. Although there are so many millions of people in the world, no two pairs of ears are alike. Each has a marked individuality.

Military Salutes.

Of military salutes, raising the right hand to the head is generally believed to have originated from the days of the tournament, when knights filed past the throne of the queen of beauty, and, by way of compliment, raised their hands to their brows to imply that her beauty was too dazzling for unshaded eyes to gaze upon. The officer's salute with the sword has a double meaning. The first position, with the hilt opposite the lips, is a repetition of the crusader's action in kissing the cross hilt of his sword in token of faith and fealty, while lowering the point afterward implies either submission or friendship, meaning in either case that it is no longer necessary to stand on guard.

Evading a Law.

When Ben Butler was a young lawyer, the selectmen of Lowell, then a town, issued a mandate that all dogs should wear muzzles. The next morning Ben walked downtown, followed by his big Newfoundland dog, with a very small muzzle tied to the end of its tail. Ben remarked, "My dog is wearing a muzzle."

Followed Orders.

"Max, did you peel the apple that I gave you before you ate it, as I told you to?"

"Yes, ma."

"That's a good boy! What did you do with the peel?"

"Ate it!"

The first day a man is a guest, the second a burden, the third a pest.—Laboulaye.

OUT OF DOOR GARMENTS.

Smart Carriage Wraps—Fur Lined Coats.

The fur day and evening wraps are anything if not classic, and the effect of Greek and Roman draperies is aimed at in the manipulations of velvets and furs.

Some very lovely carriage wraps are made in cloth, but cloth is no longer represented by hard and serviceable fabrics. It has a beautiful and supple finish, which renders it most becoming as well as warm and cozy. In these wraps the pale pastel shades are much in evidence.

One wrap recently seen was of pale cream cloth lined with emerald green satin. It had a big collar of green panne, decorated with black and white bobs, and showed inner frills of lace and accordion plaited green chiffon. It was cut in the form of a coat of three-quarter length, stitched and strapped.

Some of the cloths, which have long hairy surfaces somewhat like zibeline, are smart for wraps.

Many warm and at the same time elegant coats are lined with squirrel, but the collar need not be necessarily of the same fur.

The garment in the cut follows this idea. It is of gray cloth lined with squirrel, but having a sable collar.

OPEN AND FAIR FIELD

Will Give Small Enterprises Advantage Over Monopolies

TRANSPORTATION POWER

Should Be Vested In the Federal Courts, With Additional Provision to Reach Concerns Which Wantonly Seek to Destroy Competition—Trust Views as Endorsed by President

Washington, Jan. 7.—The following abstract of the attorney general's recommendations regarding trusts and combinations, which were made public at some length yesterday, was given out at the White House last night. It represents the general attitude of the administration on this subject and was authorized by the president:

The people do not desire the business of the country to be interfered with beyond the regulation necessary to control combinations where they act improperly and to correct any tendency towards monopoly. In this country, where money is cheap and abundant and within the reach of keen and capable men, monopoly will be impossible if competition is kept free. Small enterprises have certain advantages over large combinations and will live and thrive if assured of an open and fair field. Rebates and discriminatory rates constitute one of the chief restrictions on competition. They unjustly swell the earnings of favored concerns and, supporting a vast volume of capital stock which represents nothing but unfair advantage over rivals, contribute largely to the upbuilding of monopoly.

The situation respecting transportation discriminations and the entry of independent capital into new industries has lately been improved. It is known that the amount of capital embarked in independent enterprises in the past two years at least equals the total capital of the great combinations formed within the previous 12 years. With assurance against predatory competition, this improvement will continue. Individual industrial experience with the certainty of secure employment of capital may be trusted to compete effectively with such selfish combinations as are not formed for sound economic reasons, but merely in order to capitalize the country's prosperity for the benefit of their promoters. The existence of most of these combinations has not increased the productive capacity of the country; they have merely acquired the ownership of pre-existing industries.

Legislation should be directed against those who give and receive advantages enabling discrimination in prices as against competitors. This should take the form of penalizing the transportation of goods. Federal courts should be given the power to restrain such transportation. The present law is not sufficient to meet existing conditions. The operation of any law on the subject should be limited to common carriers subject to the act to regulate commerce. An additional provision should be made to reach corporations, combinations and associations which produce and manufacture wholly within a state, but whose products or sales enter into interstate commerce. It should relate, first, to such concerns as fatten on rebates in transportation, and, second, to concerns which sell below the general price of a commodity, or wantonly seek to destroy competition.

There should be a comprehensive plan to enable the government to get at all the facts bearing upon the organization and practices of concerns engaged in interstate commerce, not with a view to hampering any legitimate business of such concerns, but in order to be in position to take action if necessary.

To this end a commission or a special bureau in the proposed department of commerce should be created, whose duty it should be to investigate the operations of concerns engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, to gather information and data enabling it to make recommendations for additional legislation to report to the president. This would be a first step in securing publicity. This commission should have authority to inquire into the management of any concern doing an interstate business whenever it becomes necessary or desirable; it should have the authority to call for reports from them, to compel testimony from all witnesses and by the production of books, papers, etc.

These recommendations are based on the central thought that the first step should be taken by a law aimed at what are certainly known to be unreasonable practices directly restrictive of freedom of commerce and by a law securing some governmental supervision as outlined above. A special act should be passed at once to speed the final decision of cases pending or to be raised under the present anti-trust law, providing for the hearing of such cases by a full bench of circuit judges and for a direct appeal from the circuit courts to the supreme court of the United States.

Sailors Saw Missing Boy

Perth Amboy, N. J., Jan. 7.—Sailors on the schooner Henrietta C. Carlin, now at this port, say that George F. Long, a Derby, Conn., boy, missing from home since July last, was at Norfolk when they landed there in November. He shipped, they say, on the steamer St. Hugo, bound for the Philippines. The picture of the boy, which was in the Sunday papers, was recognized by the crew of the schooner.

A BRITISH PROTEST

Against Permission to Russia to Enter Dardanelles With Destroyers

Berlin, Jan. 7.—The German government declines to associate itself with the protest of Great Britain and Italy to the porte concerning the passage through the Dardanelles into the Black sea of four unarmed Russian torpedo boat destroyers, and it has informed Russia to that effect.

The British note says the passage of the Dardanelles by the torpedo boat destroyers would be a violation of the existing international treaties, and that if Russian warships are thus allowed to use the Dardanelles Great Britain will reserve the right to demand similar privileges. The protest has caused irritation in Russian circles and concern on the part of the Turkish authorities.

What the result of the pour parlers and whether or not any other powers will protest to the porte in the matter is not yet known here.

General Staff For Army

Washington, Jan. 7.—The house yesterday passed the bill for the creation of a general staff for the army by a vote of 153 to 52. By the terms of the bill it becomes the duty of the general staff to prepare plans for the national defense and for the mobilization of the army in time of war, to investigate and report on all questions affecting the efficiency of the service and to render professional aid to the secretary of war and to general officers and other superior commanders.

Alleged Violation of Contract

Seattle, Jan. 7.—An injunction has been served on the Bostonian Opera company by Manager Cort of the Northwestern Theatrical association to prevent that organization sailing from Vancouver Jan. 9 for Australia for a two years' tour. Cort opposed the plan, as the Bostonians were booked in a majority of the 26 theatres under the management of the association. If the Bostonians sail it will be without their baggage or scenery.

British and Boers Dine Together

Pretoria, Jan. 7.—A great banquet given last night in honor of Mr. Chamberlain brought together a notable gathering, including Lord Milner, General Lyttleton, General Baden-Powell and the Boer generals, Delarey and Botha. It was the first occasion since the war that the English generals met their late enemies at table. Toasts to King Edward and the royal family were honored with enthusiasm.

Ordered Home For Repairs

Washington, Jan. 7.—In order that necessary repairs may be at once made to the cruisers San Francisco and Albany and the gunboat Nashville, those vessels have been detached from further service with the squadron of evolution in the Caribbean sea. The San Francisco will be repaired at the Norfolk yard, the Albany and Nashville at the Boston yard.

Was a Self-Made Man

Charleston, Jan. 7.—George W. Williams, president of the Carolina Savings bank, died at his home here yesterday, aged 83. With $10 in his pocket he became a clerk in Augusta, Ga., in 1838, and in two years was taken into partnership. In 1852 he began business here. In his long business career he has divided with his partners $21,000,000 in profits.

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medineas directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. SEVEN TO ONE

From reports received we figure that one bottle of Scott's Emulsion sometimes builds seven times its weight of solid, healthy flesh! Why is this so?

Because Scott's Emulsion is itself the richest and most digestible of foods.

Because Scott's Emulsion gives strong appetite.

Because Scott's Emulsion makes all good food do good—strong stomach—strong digestion.

Because Scott's Emulsion wakes up the dormant system—new life to the tissues—so that the body uses it's food for bone making and flesh building.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

SHERIFF'S EXPERIENCE

During the Coal Strike Related to the Commission

WAGES OF DEPUTY SHERIFFS

Were Paid by Coal Companies—Chairman Gray Expresses Surprise at Such an Un-American Law—Further Testimony of Non-Union Men

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.—Twenty-two men, all but one of whom were employed in and about the coal mines, appeared before the anthracite coal strike commission at its first sessions in this city yesterday, and recited the oft-told tales of alleged persecution they and others underwent during the late coal strike because they chose to work rather than join the strikers. The single exception was Charles H. Schadt, sheriff of Lackawanna county, and his presence on the stand under cross-examination of President Mitchell of the Miners' union proved to be the principal feature of the day's proceedings.

The sheriff, in direct examination, said that he issued a proclamation shortly after the strike was inaugurated calling upon all persons in the county to keep the peace; that it was difficult to get men to act as deputy sheriffs; that in most cases where there was trouble it was usually over when he or his men arrived; that he attempted to keep the peace in all localities, and that the disturbances became so numerous and serious that he had to call on the governor for troops. He had appealed to Mr. Mitchell, whom he knew quite well, to assist in keeping the peace, and the miners' president promised to do so and in several instances was of material help to the sheriff.

Sheriff Schadt was then turned over to the miners for cross-examination. To the surprise of most persons Mr. Mitchell took up the examination. It was the first time that he had attempted cross-examination to any extent.

In answer to the questions of the mine workers' leader, the sheriff said he had employed about 40 or 50 deputy sheriffs and admitted that they were paid by the coal companies. Led by Mr. Mitchell, he said he could not say that a general state of lawlessness existed in Lackawanna county, but in answer to another query said there was a reign of terror in existence in some localities. He said that as a rule crowds dispersed when he ordered them so to do and that striking mine workers whom he knew obeyed his orders the same as other persons. He also admitted that the second contingent of troops sent into his county was ordered there without his request.

This appeared to satisfy President Mitchell and General Wilson took the witness in hand and asked him why the county should not pay the deputy sheriffs. The sheriff replied that the companies had made the request for protection and counsel for the witness explained that it was the law in Pennsylvania that the company asking for protection was compelled to pay for it.

This explanation rather surprised Chairman Gray, who said: "I am not familiar with such an un-American law. When the county and the state relinquishes the duty of maintaining and protecting life and property and keeping the peace, then they are open to criticism."

Lyman Croop of Plymouth, a 69-year-old mine worker, was also an interesting witness. He told of having been beaten on several occasions while on his way to work and of having complained to Justice of the Peace Waters of Plymouth, asking for protection, but without success. The squire, he said, would do nothing for him and he could not tell why. Counsel for the miners, in cross-examination, tried to show that the justice of the peace would not act because the witness would not give him sufficient evidence.

Chairman Gray did not place much weight on this, and said: "The justice of the peace deserves all the advertising he got here, pilloried as a justice of the peace who failed to do his duty."

Twice during the proceedings Mr. Darrow, Mitchell's personal attorney, tried to get an admission from witnesses that they did not employ the lawyers representing the non-union men before the commission. The miners claim that the attorneys are employed by the coal companies, virtually giving the operators two submissions before the commission. Counsel for the operators in each case objected to Mr. Darrow's line of examination and the objections were sustained by Chairman Gray for the commission on the ground that it made no difference who was employing the attorneys, so long as the commission got the information it desired.

While the entire day was taken up in hearing the stories told of intimidations, boycotting and personal violence, the commission learned nothing new, the evidence being mostly cumulative.

ATHLETICS IN ENGLAND.

They Arouse Great Enthusiasm and Produce Strange Trophies.

Athletics attract much more attention in England than in America. The people are more enthusiastic, and it is not unusual to see 15,000 or 20,000 people attending the games. There are sports three and five times a week, so that an ambitious runner can fill his trophy room with any number of suitable prizes. An American champion has no idea of the reception that awaits him. The many sports committees attend him, and he is shown the hospitality of the cities.

It is no extraordinary thing to be invited to a dinner in your honor or to stay a few days with the lord mayor of the city. All of these affairs, one must admit, are a great handicap to his training.

The prizes abroad are, as a general rule, very valuable, much more so than in America. They are not wholly confined to silverware, such as cups and the like, but it is nothing extraordinary to see an athlete departing from the races with a sewing machine or hatrack, and in some cases I have seen orders for beds. The lucky competitor, as a rule, can have any article he desires, and, as many British athletes are married, they generally take the most serviceable article.—Arthur F. Duffey in Outing.

Two of a Kind.

"My word, Fitznoodle," said a war office clerk, according to the London Express, to a colleague who sat at the next desk, "just look at that workman on the roof of that building over the way."

"What's the matter with him?" inquired Fitz, glancing through the window at the individual indicated.

"Matter," retorted the other, "why, I've been watching the lazy beggar for the last twenty-five minutes, and he hasn't done a stroke of work all the time."

At the precise moment at which the above conversation occurred a British workingman was addressing his "mate."

"Sy, Bill," he remarked in a tone of deep disgust, "d'ye see that 'ere loafin' war offis clurk in that room darn there? S'elp me, if Hi ain't bin a-watchin' 'im fur nigh on arf a hower, an' the bloomer's done nothin' but stare hout o' the winder the 'ole blessed tyme. That's the sort o' chap as we pys taxes ter keep!"

East Indian Children.

East Indian children from their tenderest years are more carefully trained in certain respects by their mothers than the children of the most civilized peoples. The moment the youngest baby ceases nursing its lips are closed by its mother. If the baby does not keep them closed, she uses mechanical means rigidly and even cruelly. When the baby is put to sleep, it is strapped on to a board, its head slightly raised and its chin lowered, which tends to keep the mouth shut. The result is that when the teeth are forming and making their first appearance they meet and continually feel one another. Thus they take their relative positions and that healthful and pleasing regularity that gives to the American Indian as a race the most manly and beautiful mouths in the world.

Not Much of a Showman.

The showman's little boy had a Noah's ark which he examined with some contempt.

"Say!" he exclaimed at last. "Noah wasn't much of a feller, was he?"

It was suggested to the youngster that Noah succeeded in gathering together a pretty good menagerie.

"Good!" exclaimed the boy scornfully. "Huh! Where's the two headed calf and the six legged goat and the ishthyosaurus and the elegiantopard and the magnicintelope? Why, if Noah set up as a showman in these days he couldn't make expenses."

"He couldn't?"

"Of course he couldn't. Why, say, he didn't have a thing in his ark except animals that actually exist."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Shelley Liked Plums.

The poet Shelley was walking one day in London with a respectable solicitor when Shelley suddenly vanished and soon after as suddenly reappeared. He had entered the shop of a grocer and returned with some plums, which he offered to the attorney with great delight. The man of fact was as much astonished at the offer as Shelley was at his refusal.

Why the Razor Was Dull.

"I wonder what makes my razor so dull," said a man, looking at the blade he had so carefully sharpened only a day or two before.

"Why, father," spoke up little Johnnie, playing marbles on the floor, "it was just beautiful and sharp only this morning when I made my wooden boat with it."

Behind the Scenes.

"Hurry up, Rowland," called the leading lady, "the people are mad because we are keeping them waiting."

"Then I will not go on at all," stormed the heavy tragedian.

"Why not?"

"Because I refuse to play to a madhouse."—Chicago News.

A Self Evident Fact.

"Time was," said the tramp sadly, "when I owned a big plantation."

"You seem to have a good deal of real estate on your hands yet," replied the woman of the house, casting a cold and sarcastic eye upon his grimy paws.—Washington Times.

DYNAMITE RESORTED TO

By Strikers, According to Stories of Non-Union Miners

MEN REMAINING AT WORK

Lived In Dread as Well as Their Relatives—Assaults, Incendiarism and Boycotting Indulged In—Story of a Wedding Under Difficulties

Philadelphia, Jan. 8.—The non-union men continue to occupy the attention of the coal strike commission in presenting evidence of lawlessness in the anthracite coal region during the strike. The testimony yesterday included many acts of violence, from murder down to plain assault and petty larceny. Dynamite played a leading part in the alleged persecution of non union men and their relatives. Five witnesses testified to their houses being more or less seriously damaged by persons, some of them known to be union men, placing the high explosives on the property; other witnesses told of a dam being blown up, one locomotive damaged, steam pipes in two different collieries either broken or damaged by dynamite, bridges and fences damaged by incendiary fires and attempted wrecking of trains.

One youth said he was stabbed, several of the witnesses were boycotted, and several others told of being beaten by crowds and of their houses being stoned. Besides this a young woman told the commission she was dismissed as a school teacher, because her brother chose to work during the strike. A young man testified that he was attacked as he was coming out of church after being married, forcing him to seek refuge in a colliery while his bride got home as best she could, and another witness said he was afraid to attend the funeral of his mother, who had died while he was working behind a colliery stockade. One witness told of having been punished by a mob forcing him to walk 13 miles at the head of a jeering crowd of strikers.

Other testimony was also presented in the endeavor to show that a reign of terror existed in the strike affected territory of the state and that members of the union were largely responsible for it.

While most of the testimony given by the witnesses was of the same character as that heretofore heard by the commission, the arbitrators were greatly interested in each of the 27 stories told on the stand. Many questions were asked the witnesses by the commissioners. Counsel for the miners attempted to break down some of the stories but they did not succeed in shaking their testimony.

The most interesting story of the day was that told by Thomas Washaiski of Hazleton, a clerk for Pardee & Co., who was married on the night of Sept. 16 last. He was at work at the colliery, and his neighbors began to annoy him. On the night of the wedding a small crowd gathered at the Catholic church, and as the bridal party entered the edifice the bride and groom were called "scab." Coming out, after the ceremony, he was assaulted by the waiting crowd. The driver of the carriage was not permitted to take the couple home, and the witness sought refuge in the parochial residence and the bride was escorted home in a trolley car by friends. While in the parochial residence the crowd remained in the vicinity, calling the bridegroom vile names and yelling "scab" at the rector of the church because he had performed the ceremony. Later on, the witness said, he managed to get away from the crowd and spent the night in the colliery, being afraid to go to his home. The bride spent an anxious night, as some unknown persons came to the house and threw stones at the place.

All the commissioners listened to the story with close attention and Chairman Gray's only remark was: "What sort of a community is this, anyway?"

REVIEW OF RETAINERS

One of the Most Striking Scenes In Connection With the Durbar

Delhi, India, Jan. 8.—Viceroy Curzon, Lady Curzon and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught reviewed the retainers of the ruling chiefs in the dubar arena yesterday. The variety of costume and paraphernalia afforded one of the most striking pictures of the durbar festivities. Contingents from all parts of greater India participated, mostly retaining the distinctive features of their customs.

State bards, camel kettledrums, richly caparisoned elephants and horses and agile swordsmen, many shouting battle cries, followed one another in quick succession. A royal elephant carriage, two stories high, showed how the palace ladies accompanied the princes of bygone days.

Almost incalculable wealth of gold and silver was displayed as the seemingly never ending medley of elephants, camels, troops, musicians and carriages, representing the different Indian states, passed and maneuvered before the dais. The elephants carried howdahs and trappings of the purest gold and silver. There were carriages of pure silver and sedan chairs of gold. During temporary stoppages of the procession half a dozen bands played different airs, while the state retainers, clad in mail and armed with lances and swords, yelled their battle cries and fought in the arena.

The Maharajah of Jaipur sent horsemen in complete armor riding on golden saddles and carrying lances with red and white pennons. The Maharao of Kota sent many camels carrying swivel guns, a force of military arcetics and a number of quaint musicians. The camel men of the Maharajah of Alwar wore uniforms of blue and yellow. An elephant carriage, drawn by four elephants, followed the Alwar horsemen who were clad in mail armor and whose horses reared in salute to the royal personages present. An elephant from the state of Datia also saluted the dais, salaaming before it. The shanmen of Burmah carried golden gongs and wore golden helmets. A dwarf from the state of Nabha was followed by a giant 7 feet 10 inches high. The contingent from Kashmir closed the procession.

Run Afoul of a Fighter

Eureka, Nev., Jan. 8.—J. V. Traylor, manager of the York and Nevada Copper company's mine, was attacked yesterday in the company's office at Keystone by 12 men, said to be members of the Miners' union, who intended running him out of town. They threw Traylor down, but he managed to break away and commenced shooting, killing three men and wounding three other members of the party. A strike has been on against the company on account of a reduction in wages ordered by Manager Traylor.

Wreck, Torture and Seven Deaths

Pittsburg, Jan. 8.—As a result of a collision between a passenger train and the rear end of a freight train at Cochrane station last night, seven men are dead, one is dying and five others injured. Almost immediately after the impact, fire from a stove in the smoker communicated to the wreckage and the imprisoned victims were tortured beyond description. All of the victims were badly burned.

Another Alleged Poisoner

Fredericton, N. B., Jan. 8.—The York county grand jury yesterday found a true bill again Mrs. Annie Marsten of Meductic, charged with poisoning her husband, and she was arraigned on charge of murder. She pleaded not guilty. Her trial was postponed until Jan. 27. Bail for the prisoner was refused and she was taken to the county jail.

CHEMIST TESTIFIES.

Found Arsenic With Sodium Bromide in Powder Taken From Miss Richardson's Stocking.

Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 8.—A few minutes before the close of yesterday's hearing in the Richardson poisoning case, Dr. Davenport testified that he had found 40 percent of arsenic in one of the powders which a woman representative of the Revere police had discovered hidden in Miss Catherine V. Richardson's stocking.

Chief Sackett had told the court on Tuesday that Miss Richardson, after her arrest on Christmas eve, had denied three times that she had any arsenic in the room or that she had ever attempted to poison her mother, Mrs. Harley C. Richardson, and going back still farther, it was Dr. Eunice Kinney, who attended Mrs. Richardson from Dec. 12 to the time of the arrest, who told the court that Mrs. Richardson had on three occasions shown decided symptoms of arsenical poisoning.

Dr. Davenport has yet to give the result of the analysis of Mrs. Richardson's urine, and it is expected that that testimony will very nearly conclude the evidence against Miss Richardson. Should the defense waive the right to call witnesses after bringing out the full strength of the government's case, it will be the province of Judge Bosson to decide whether there is sufficient evidence to hold Miss Richardson for the February term of the grand jury.

As on Tuesday, the important evidence in yesterday's hearing did not develope until just before the court adjourned. Up to that time the case dragged perceptibly, although eight witnesses were called by the government. Much of the evidence was cumulative, it appearing to be the government's intention to show a motive or animus.

Two witnesses heard Miss Richardson express a hope or wish for her mother's death; another heard them quarrelling over money affairs, and still another said Mrs. Richardson complained of her treatment by her daughter. One witness heard Catherine swear at her mother. Still, nearly every one admitted that Mrs. Richardson acted strangely, and it appeared to be generally understood that she was mildly insane.

But when Dr. Davenport was called interest in the case at once became intense. Dr. Davenport qualified with many years' experience as a physician and chemist. He produced four envelopes, which he said had been given him by Chief Sackett. They all contained powders, and were numbered and marked. On No. 1 was the inscription: "Found on person by Mrs. Rollins;" on No. 2, "Found in trunk in Southwick's room;" on No. 3, "Found in trunk in front room," and on No. 4, "Found in jewelry box, top tray of first trunk."

Numbers 2, 3 and 4 were dismissed with a few words. Dr. Davenport said he tested all the powders, but found no traces of arsenic.

That left No. 1 to be accounted for. It was this envelope that Mrs. Rollins said she found hidden in Miss Richardson's stocking near the ankle. It was a druggist's envelope, marked "10 Gr. Sodium Bromide," and previously in the day Druggist Palmer of Revere had stated that he gave the envelope to Miss Richardson when she purchased sodium bromide early in December.

But in the envelope were two powder papers, and scattered about the bottom were numerous white crystals. Dr. Davenport said that one of the powders proved to be sodium bromide, and that there was the same ingredient in the other, but mixed with this second powder was white arsenic. He found that the second powder paper contained 15 grains of white powder, of which 6 grains, or 40 percent, was arsenic. He stated that he made five separate tests of the powder, the last for quantity, all of which showed arsenic, the last, the 40 percent. As some of the vapor escaped he estimated that the powder found wrapped in a small white paper and enclosed in the envelope and marked No. 1, "Found on person by Mrs. Rollins," contained about 40 percent of arsenic.

"Do you know of any combination of medicine which combines sodium bromide with arsenic?" was the last question asked the doctor.

"In all my professional practice, I never heard of such a combination," was Dr. Davenport's reply, and then the court adjourned.

The only effect of Dr. Davenport's testimony on the defendant was to cause her to sink down a trifle farther in her chair, while she bit the end of a pencil somewhat nervously.

The government has still three other witnesses to call, after Dr. Davenport concludes his testimony, but the hearing will probably close today.

The people of Massachusetts are to be congratulated that they have a Legislature this year, which has got down to business in the interest of people unusually quick. The people as a whole are not to be trifled with at this time. They have had too much of trusts and exemption from taxation. The Senate on its opening day received an order for a coal investigation, and the House adopted an order for an injunction against the stock watering scheme of the Massachusetts Gas Companies. If the Legislature devotes all its attention along these lines, and does what it can promptly for the relief of the mass of the people it will make a better record than any of its predecessors. There should be some way to stop over capitalization and exemption from taxation. When somebody escapes taxation, the other fellow must pay, and he is always the one who can least afford to pay. The owners of real estate are pretty hard pushed these days, which should not be the case when there is so much prosperity alleged.

☞ The question of the establishment of municipal fuel yards is evidently destined to assume large importance at the coming session of the Legislature. The town of Braintree, the first town to establish a municipal lighting plant under the general law, has petitioned for authority to establish such an institution. BROOM TOLD STORY.

At Masthead of Lawrence on Her Return.

Safe Margin Over Requirement.

Also Put Through Manoevers and Reversed.

Congratulations to the Fore River Ship Company!

The torpedo boat destroyer returned from her final government trial of Wednesday with a broom at her masthead.

The Ledger has already reported the success of the Lawrence in making a maximum speed of 29 knots off Provincetown, but the trial yesterday was to prove her endurance at high speed during an hour's run and her ability to make a short turn and a quick stop.

The weather during the early portion of the day was fair, the cold, dry air being favorable for making steam, and the chop kicked up by the off shore wind proving no serious impediment. The Government trial board were taken aboard at 10 o'clock, and three-quarters of an hour later the Lawrence was flying down the Cape Ann course at a terrific pace, passing in quick succession the snowy hills of the North Shore, and not stopping for breath until she had left the twin lights of Thatcher's Island ten miles astern.

The records of her whirling propellers were read at five-minute intervals, and the best speed was made during the last quarter hour, easily giving her a safe margin over the required number of revolutions.

The trip home was made at an easy 15-knot gait, and when the Lawrence was in smooth water, off Boston Light, the steering and reversing tests were made. After she had marked circles and figure eights in white foam, to show how easily she answered her helm, the signal was given full speed astern and the engines were suddenly reversed. The change brought a momentary murmur from the speeding craft, and fountains of white spray were thrown over the stern, but with a comparatively slight shock the sturdy hull was stopped and sent like a shuttle in the opposite direction.

After cutting a few curves backward it was announced that the trials were concluded and that the Lawrence had qualified for the Government service.

Capt. Train, the chairman of the Naval Trial Board, said that the board would stay in Boston for another day at least, in hopes that the weather would permit the final trials of the Macdonough.

The Macdonough, a sister boat built by the Quincy company went out this morning.

Durer Exhibit.

The painting and drawing of Albrecht Durer, loaned by the Library Art club are now on exhibition for a limited time at the Thomas Crane public library. There are over 100 in all. Albrecht Durer, the most celebrated artist of Germany, was born at Nuremberg, May 21, 1471. He showed great artistic talent at a very early age, and was apprenticed to Wolgemut, the foremost artist of the city. He executed many paintings, but his fame rests very largely on his engravings and drawings, which show an inexhaustible fertility of imagination, as well as artistic skill and indefatigable industry. His subjects ranged from the beauty of a violet to the terrors of the Apocalypse, from the feather of a bird to the Crucifixion. "He was one of the great pioneers of art. There is probably no branch of the fine arts which has not been affected in some way or another by the fact of Durer's existence." He died, greatly lamented April 6, 1528. "His soul was filled with ardent desire for all that was honorable in manner and conduct."

Boston Globe's Free School.

It is not necessary to point out to the people of New England the importance of education. New Englanders have been leaders in every movement for the advancement of learning, and, therefore, should be expected to give enthusiastic welcome and hearty aid to the "Globe's School of Home Study," which will open Monday, Jan. 12, 1903.

It will be conducted within the columns of the Daily Globe by a staff of competent teachers. The most important branches of a common school, a high school, and a business education will be taught. The aim will be to help those who have had no opportunity to learn the rudimentary branches of a common school education and those whose common school education was not completed, as well as all readers of the Boston Daily Globe who wish to review the lessons of their school days. For more ambitious students special departments will be established.

The course for the present will embrace the following studies: "Penmanship," "English Composition." "History Questions," "Geography Questions," "The Best Books and How to Read them."

A VICTORY WON.

Before Contest in Shipbuilding Has Really Begun.

The Maritime News and Review for Jan. 6, says editorially:

"The government is already weakening in the contest between private and public shipbuilding plants over the construction of a modern battleship. Designed as a supreme test between the eight-hour and ten-hour systems, Chief Naval Constructor Bowles has now asked for authority to have the work to be performed in the Brooklyn Navy-Yard done by the piece, thus removing the eight-hour restriction. The primary object of the contest, which was to demonstrate to Congress whether battleships can be built as cheaply and as quickly in public yards as under the contract systems, will never be realized if this authority is granted.

"From the very starting of this contest the odds have, to the impartial onlooker, appeared to be against the government. In the matter of the time required for the work the private yards have an immense advantage, and now the government confesses that it is seriously handicapped in another direction. The confession is, therefore, one of defeat, for the system intended by Congress to be employed in the public yard is to be changed, and all the arguments of the agitators will go for naught.

"The labor unionists would have it—despite the specter of the ill-starred Texas, which will not down—that a battleship could be built as quickly, as well and as cheaply with the men in a navy-yard working eight hours per diem as it could by a private yard where men work ten hours a day and by the piece. They so played upon Congress that the trial was ordered. We said at the time the order was given out that the private yards would demonstrate their superiority; that the navy would find it could not do the work in competition with a contractor, and now we know that what we then said was right, for by changing the terms of the contest the Navy Department will rob it of its competitive features, and the real questions at issue will not be answered. Therein lies the victory for the private contractor—a victory won before the contest has begun."

The Lawson Ahead.

The steel seven-masted schooner, Thomas W. Lawson, Capt. Arthur Crowley, built at Quincy, laden with 7913 tons of coal, the largest cargo she has ever carried, and also the greatest shipment of fuel ever loaded into a sailing vessel, will arrive in port today, says the Globe. She passed north by Chatham at 11.30 Wednesday morning, and was outside of Highland light at 5 last evening, the wind being light from the north, with frequent squalls of snow.

The conditions were unfavorable for the vessel to make a quick run across the bay, but it is expected that one of the tugs which was dispatched below to pick her up, will tow her into the harbor this morning.

The Lawson sailed from Newport News Dec. 31, but on account of a strong northeasterly wind she anchored in Hampton Roads, remaining there until Jan. 3, when she got under way, together with the new five-master, T. Charlton Henry, also bound from Newport News to this port with first cargo of coal, and commanded by a brother of the captain of the Lawson. The Lawson fairly beat the newer craft on the run up the coast, and it is thought she must have come in through the South channel.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Wollaston Foundry Mutual Benefit association was held in Music hall, Atlantic, Tuesday evening and was largely attended. The following gentlemen were elected:

Daniel McGrath, president.
Cornelius M. Duggan, vice president.
William Crump, treasurer.
John F. Sullivan, financial secretary.
Cornelius O'Connell, recording secretary.
D. A. Golden, A. Kingsley and M. S. Sanford, board of directors.
Daniel McGrath, Hugh McGovern, Cornelius Duggan, Bernard Kerrigan, W. A. Andrews, George E. May and William Hayes, entertainment committee.

The report of the treasurer shows the association to be in a first class financial condition, though in existence scarcely a year, and having paid numerous sick benefits since its organization. A death benefit has also been started in connection with the association and a committee appointed to perfect plans for the same; so that at the death of a member his family may receive a sum of money sufficient to tide them over immediate wants. Arrangements were also made to present a minstrel show in the near future.

STOCK WATERING.

The Legislature Orders Injunction Against Mass. Gas Co.

Ex-Mayor Adams of Quincy figures as defendant in the bill in equity brought by Joseph E. Doherty, a taxpayer and comer of gas of Boston in the supreme court yesterday seeking an injunction to restrain an alleged proposed increase of the capital stock of the Massachusetts gas companies from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000, for the purpose of acquiring, as he alleges, the Bay State, the Boston, the South Boston and the Roxbury Gas Light Companies, which are the only companies outside its fold, with the proposed additional $20,000,000 of stock.

He puts his bill upon the ground that the proposed assimilation by the Massachusetts gas companies of these with the New England Gas & Coke Company, the Jamaica Plain, the Dorchester and the Brookline, which he alleges that it has already acquired, will injure him as a gas consumer by preventing a reduction in the price of gas because of the enhanced capital, and will place the several gas companies beyond the regulation and control of the state and of the board of gas and electric light commissioners, as it will place them in a voluntary association, which the Massachusetts gas companies is, and enable them to escape taxation of the stocks. This he put forth upon his information and belief.

Doherty's bill is against Charles Francis Adams 2d, et al., composing the trustees of the Massachusetts gas companies, Kidder, Peabody & Co., J. & W. Seligman & Co., the Old Colony Trust Company and Frederick Tudor, secretary of the trustees.

The adoption of Representative Calendars order in the House Wednesday is along the same lines. It reads:

"Whereas, it is the opinion of this House, as 'the grand inquest of this commonwealth,' that the stock watering or excessive capitalization as employed in the manufacture or distribution of the necessities of life is detrimental to the welfare and happiness of the people, being conducive to the establishment of extortionate rates and charges; and, whereas, the gas properties in and about the city of Boston have been capitalized in a voluntary association, called the Massachusetts Gas Companies, both to escape paying proper taxes to the commonwealth and avoid state supervision as well; and whereas, such large capitalization must prove a burden to the consumer; and, whereas, the above-mentioned voluntary association, the Massachusetts Gas Companies, proposes at a meeting of its shareholders, to be held Jan. 8, 1903, to increase its capital from 300,000 shares to 500,000 shares; in other words, from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000, according to the following notice.

(Here follows a copy of the notice of special meeting issued to the shareholders of the Massachusetts Gas Companies, and signed by Frederick Tudor, secretary." The order then continues:

"Now, therefore, be it ordered that the attorney-general forthwith appear before some justice of the supreme judicial court for an order restraining such association, the Massachusetts Gas Companies, or its shareholders, from taking any such action as is contemplated in the above notice to shareholders, and for such further or other relief in the premises as to said court shall deem meet. And the clerk of this House is hereby directed to immediately notify the attorney-general's office of the passage of this order."

K. of H. Installation.

Wilson's hall was crowded to its full capacity Wednesday evening to witness the installation of the officers of Maple lodge, K. and L. of H., by D. D. G. P. Nellie E. Hallett and suite of Waverley lodge, Charlestown. After the degree was conferred upon one candidate, the following were installed into office:

The next meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club will be held on Tuesday, the 13th, and dinner as heretofore will be served at six-thirty prompt. The meeting will be addressed by Dr. John L. A social dance was held at Faxon hall Wednesday evening by Miss Barnes, Miss Batson and Miss Coffin.

Mayor Bryant has requested the several city departments to forward their annual reports at an early date.

District Deputy Stetson will this evening install the officers of Crescent lodge, I. O. O. F., at East Weymouth.

Billiards, pool, whist and bowling tournament games tonight at the Granite City club rooms between that club and the Braintrees.

The physical training class of Miss Elcock, and their friends enjoyed a dance at Quincy Music hall Wednesday evening.

At the whist tournament of the Granite City club Wednesday evening, prizes were captured by Henry F. Tilden and W. W. Ewell.

Geo. H. Field has sold three houses this week; one on Safford street to Mrs. Hinckley, one on Taylor street to Mrs. Winegar, and one on Willard street to an Italian family.

Work in the stone sheds is a little quiet just at present, owing to the weather. Many orders are however being received, and the outlook for the coming year is good.

At the weekly roll off at the Granite street alleys Wednesday evening, Hartney won the first prize with 283, Gallagher second with 279, and Keene third with 266.

Many orders are being received at City Hall for soft coal in 100 pound bags. No more hard coal has arrived for the relief committee and it is doubtful if any more can be obtained.

Upon inquiry it was found that the men who bought two dollar books of tickets from Atlantic to Boston, Monpay morning, were those who were burning soft coal, while the unpretentious men who counted out eleven cents for a single fare had anthracite to burn in both senses of the word.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johnanna Soderham, of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

GOATS LIKE FORCE.

But Raw Meat Is Said to be Their Principal Diet.

There are some inquires as to why the herd of goats belonging to Rural lodge of Masons are to be removed, before the new hall is complete, but this is probably for the same reason that dealers in hats have already made contracts for straw hats.

Rural lodge probably expects about one hundred new candidates at its first meeting in the new hall, and it is very important that the goats should be in prime of condition. They will probably be well groomed and fed, especially now that beef is much cheaper. Masonic goats, you know, eat raw meat, and occasionally oatmeal, but it is said this herd have a great fondness for Force.

The Trained Woman.

Dr. Edward Alderman, president of Tulane university, Louisiana, has strikingly defined for us the qualities that go to make the "trained woman." In an address to a class of Tulane women graduates Dr. Alderman said that the age called loudly for more trained women. "The trained woman is one who has no 'nerves,' who has a good, strong body, is swift to serve others and who has a mind that wishes to know why things are as they are.

"Such women are needed in the home first of all, for the woman who builds a home is as great as the one who writes an epic poem. The trained woman is needed in society, for at the last the woman is the teacher by the laws of her life and her subtle graces of mind, heart and perception."

Characteristic Worth.

The woman who carries herself well is more apt to command respect than the woman who trudges along with her head inclined forward and her shoulders in a stooping position. The possessor of a graceful, erect carriage unconsciously impresses us as having characteristic worth, says the Pittsburg Observer. There are many noble hearted women who really do themselves injustice by the awkward way they carry themselves. It is very hard for others to see beauty and grace of heart in an unlovely outward appearance. It is the exterior charm of the rose that gives fitting expression to its hidden sweetness.

Are Women Too Restless?

The American woman is restless, dissatisfied. Society, whether among the highest or lowest classes, has driven her toward a destiny that is not normal. The factories are full of old maids. The colleges are full of old maids. The ballrooms in the worldly milieux are full of old maids. For natural obligations are substituted the fictitious duties of clubs, committees, meetings, organizations, professions, a thousand unwomanly occupations.—Everybody's Magazine.

Mutton Fat.

If uncooked mutton fat is soaked in cold water twenty-four hours, then cooked in water, putting a scant quarter teaspoonful of soda to a quart of water, it loses its strong taste and can be used for pastry. Do the same with mutton drippings. All bacon and ham fat should be clarified and kept to fry eggs in.

GEORGE ELIOT.

A Story of the Author and the Manuscript of "Daniel Deronda."

George Eliot was conspicuous as a person who was kindly and sympathetic in a high degree. She was "ever ready to be amused and interested in all that concerned her friends." She had also a keen sense of humor and sometimes made her friends laugh as well as laughed with them. She was solicitous about her manuscripts and was afraid she should lose them. Blackwood had occasion to send her the manuscript of "Daniel Deronda." She would not have it intrusted to the mail, and Mr. Blackwood said he would send it by his footman the next day.

"Oh, don't," the author said. "He might stop at a public house and forget it!"

Mr. Blackwood explained that this footman was a perfectly sober man of high character and went on to praise the man's virtues, but this did not reassure her at all. "If he is the sort of chivalrous Bayard that you describe," she said, "he is just the kind that would stop and help at a fire!"

This was a contingency that Mr. Blackwood could not bear to consider. He promised that some member of his family would bring the manuscript, and next day, in fact, Mr. Blackwood drove over with it.

How Lightning Kills.

The cause of death by lightning is the sudden absorption of the electric current. When a thundercloud which is highly charged with positive electricity hangs over any certain place, the earth beneath it becomes abnormally charged with the negative electric current, and a man, animal or other object standing or lying directly beneath also partakes of the last mentioned influence. If, while the man, animal or other object is in this condition, a discharge takes place from the cloud above, the restoration of the equilibrium will be sudden and violent, or, in language that we can all understand, the negative current from the earth will rush up to join the positive cloud current, and in passing through the object which separates the two currents, if it be an animate thing, will do so with such force as to almost invariably produce instant death.

According to the above, which seems a tenable hypothesis, to say the least, a person is really "struck" by the ground current and not by the forked fury from above at all.

Kant's Relaxations.

The only relaxation Kant, the celebrated German philosopher, allowed himself was a walk, which he invariably took during his life at Konigsberg at about the same hour every afternoon. His usual stroll was along the banks of the Pregel toward the Friedrich's fort, and in these walks he was always a careful observer of the phenomena of nature. He told his friends one day how, as he passed a certain building in his daily walk, he had noticed several young swallows lying dead upon the ground.

On looking up he discovered, as he fancied, that the old birds were actually throwing their young ones out of the nests. It was a season remarkable for the scarcity of insects, and the birds were apparently sacrificing some of their progeny to save the rest. "At this," added Kant, "my intellect was hushed. The only thing to do here was to fall down and worship."—Chambers' Journal.

Repairing a Crown.

What curious old records one comes across sometimes in unexpected ways! Here is one which rather calls to mind certain fairy tales beginning "Once upon a time" and going on to recount extraordinary proceedings quite as if they were the most natural and common things in the world. It has reference to Edward III. and Philippa of Hainault and is kept with other documents at Harwich, their majesties having had at the time a palace at Felixstowe. It runs thus, "For repairing ye queen's crown which ye king threw into ye fire, item 3s. 6d." The points which strike one in this memorandum are the violence of the king's temper and the cheapness of the mending process.

A Doctor With Experience.

One day, while mending the roof of his house, Chodja lost his balance and, falling to the ground, broke a rib. A friend of his went hurriedly for a hakim (doctor).

"Hakim, have you ever fallen from a roof and broken a rib?" was the first question Chodja asked the doctor.

"Thank God, no!" replied the hakim.

"Then go away at once, please," cried Chodja. "I want a doctor who has fallen from a roof and knows what it is!"

The Migratory Crab.

The West Indian migratory crab is the only creature that is born in the sea, matures in fresh waters and passes its adult life on land. Once a year these creatures migrate in thousands from the uplands of Jamaica, deposit their ova in the sea, then migrate to the rivers and streams, pass through a fresh water stage, after which they follow their parents to land until the time comes for them to return to the sea to lay their eggs in turn.

DAINTY TOUCHES.

Handsome Creations Which Show the Latest Trimmings.

Evening dress of the moment is distinguished by an exceeding daintiness. The tiniest of ribbons, the smallest of fringes, traceries of sequins and tassels innumerable may be found decking frocks of chiffon and net, while rufflings of chiffon are essential to the hem of any well made evening dress.

A handsome evening dress recently made was of white mousseline trimmed with stripes of black chantilly lace joined with bands of black velvet ribbon. Frillings of white mousseline decorated the decolletage and formed the twisted bows which did duty as sleeves.

IMPORTED GOWN.

Another more elaborate creation was entirely made of white lace striped with folds of gray and white chiffon, with medallions of white panne and applications of gray velvet edged with chenille. On the bodice was a decoration of yellow roses. Chenille fringes were pendent from the panne ornaments.

An odd and at the same time handsome gown is shown in the picture. It is of heavy ficelle lace over pale green crepe de chine. The full sleeves are of pale green chiffon.

LINES OF HAGUE TREATY

Followed In Senate Move For International Agreement

AGREES TO ARBITRATION

In Controversies Between Republics In Western Hemisphere Which Diplomacy Cannot Settle—Venezuela Not a Participant In the Plan

Washington, Jan. 8.—The senate committee on foreign relations authorized Senator Lodge yesterday to report favorably upon the general international arbitration treaty recommended by the Pan-American conference held at Mexico City last winter. The treaty is on the lines of The Hague treaty, but applies only to the republics of the western hemisphere. It provides a tribunal for settling disputes over boundaries, claims and other matters. The treaty found favor with the committee as another step toward general adoption of the principle of arbitration.

During the executive session of the senate the report of the committee was submitted to the senate, but no action was taken.

By the treaty the contracting parties obligate themselves to submit to the decision of arbitrators all controversies that exist or may arise among them, and which diplomacy cannot settle, provided that in the exclusive judgment of any of the interested nations the controversies do not affect either their independence or the national honor. The treaty provides that when both parties to a controversy can agree to refer the question in dispute to The Hague tribunal it shall be so referred, but that otherwise it shall be referred to a special court. In case a special tribunal is created it is to consist of three members.

There also is a provision to resort to mediation in case of a conflict which promises to lead to war, and in this connection the right to mediation is specifically set forth. The provision on this point is as follows:

"The right to offer the good offices or mediation belongs to powers who are strangers to the conflict, even during the course of hostilities. The exercise of this right shall never be regarded by either of the contending parties as an unfriendly act.

"The part of the mediator consists in reconciling the opposing claims and appeasing the feelings of resentment which may have arisen between the states at variance.

"The functions of the mediator are at an end when once it is declared, either by one of the parties to the dispute or by the mediator himself, that the methods of conciliation proposed by him are not accepted."

A commission of inquiry is authorized in disagreements arising on questions of fact.

An interesting fact in connection with the preparation of the treaty is that the Venezuelan representative in the conference refused, upon the instruction of his government, to participate in the formulation of the document.

Revolution Brewing In Honduras

Panama, Jan. 8.—The threatened revolutionary movement in Honduras is becoming more serious. Manuel Bonilla was elected president of Honduras last October. President Sierra, however, refused to turn over the presidential power to Bonilla and is continuing his efforts to persuade the Honduran congress to declare the election of Bonilla illegal. Bonilla is at present on Amapala island, where he awaits the decision of congress. He has a considerable quantity of munitions of war at his disposal and strong support.

In Congress

Washington, Jan. 8.—The senate yesterday discussed the bill for the reorganization of the militia and also the statehood bill. Neither of the measures was disposed of.

The session of the house yesterday lasted a little more than two hours. The senate bill for the redemption of the silver coinage of the Hawaiian islands and its recoinage into United States coin was passed.

Blizzard In Full Swing

Minneapolis, Jan. 8.—Specials indicate that the blizzard in the Dakotas and northwestern Iowa is one of the severest known. Railway cuts were drifted full and wagon roads blocked over an extensive area. Stock is suffering and there will be severe losses. The wind had a velocity of 60 or 70 miles an hour in many places.

Grip Sticks to Von Hollenben

Will Try to Better Fortunes

New York, Jan. 8.—In the steerage of the steamship Teutonic, which sailed yesterday for Liverpool, were 32 colored men, 12 women and 10 children, who are going to Liberia to settle. They were from Irwin county, Ga. The party has about $2000.

Lynchers Liberated

Lewisburg, Tenn., Jan. 8.—Last midnight 30 masked men released W. P. Hopwood and W. B. Johnson from the Marshall county jail. The prisoners were charged with lynching a negro named John Davis.

GLOUCESTER NOT ALONE

In Her Position Against Ratification of the Hay-Bond Treaty

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 8.—The fishermen of Gloucester are rejoicing over news from Boston that a petition signed by 48 wholesale fish dealers and fishing vessel owners of that city, protesting against the ratification of the Hay-Bond reciprocity treaty, has been forwarded to Senator Lodge at Washington. In the past opponents of the treaty in this city have had to face the argument that Gloucester alone stood against all New England, the fishermen of Boston included, in the position they have taken. Members of the Boston fish trade recently held a meeting and voted to send a representative to Washington to advocate the ratification of the treaty. The opponents of the treaty held firmly to their original position, however, and claimed that the Boston fish interests supporting the treaty represented only the commission merchants and that not one wholesale dealer or fishing vessel owner took part in the meeting.

It is understood here that while many opponents of the treaty among the fishermen of Boston have for some time considered the question of making a concerted move against its ratification, it was not until Tuesday that it was decided to circulate the petition. The 48 men whose names appear in that petition, they claim, include practically all the leading wholesale dealers in Boston, as well as the owners of many fishing vessels sailing from that port.

Purifying Gloucester

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 8.—Following up the plan outlined by Mayor Tolman in his inaugural address, the police have visited all the places in the city where it is suspected that the law is being violated, and notified the proprietors that they must close their places at once. As a result of the order, more than 40 persons who have been engaged in questionable occupation here left the city yesterday afternoon for Boston. Mayor Tolman says that it is his intention to close every questionable place in Gloucester, quietly, if possible, but by strenuous methods if necessary.

Trouble May Be Arbitrated

Maynard, Mass., Jan. 8.—There is no change in the status of the strike at the Assabet mills of the American Woolen company. As yet the local committee has had no conferences with Treasurer Wood, but it is stated that they have reason to believe that he is not averse to having the difficulties settled by arbitration. The men claim that the present style of machinery in use at the mills is mainly responsible for the inability to make good wages. Their pay has averaged from $4 to $9 a week.

A Miraculous Feat.

"It seemed that nothing short of a miracle could save my little daughter from an untimely death," says City Marshall A. H. Malcolm, of Cherokee, Kan. ANSWERS OF POWERS

To Venezuela's Arbitration Proposal Said to Have Caused Depression

Caracas, Jan. 8.—The answers of the powers to President Castro's last proposal relative to arbitration were delivered to President Castro yesterday afternoon by Minister Bowen. A meeting of the cabinet was at once called to consider these communications.

It has been learned from an authoritative source that the answers of the powers have created a feeling of depression in Venezuelan government circles.

All sorts of rumors are current in Caracas concerning President Castro's answer to the communications, but none of them is reliable. Mr. Bowen expects to receive the Venezuelan answer today, when it will be forwarded by him at once to Washington.

The Bank of Venezuela and the bank of Caracas have agreed to advance to President Castro money wherewith to pay the Venezuelan troops during the blockade period.

Washington Library Dedication

Washington, Jan. 8.—A throng of persons of note assembled yesterday to attend the ceremonies of dedication of the Washington public library. The event occurred in the auditorium of the new library, a handsome white marble structure. The participants in the exercises included President Roosevelt, Andrew Carnegie, the donor of the building, and the presidents of the building commission and the board of library trustees. Among those who attended the ceremonies were members of the cabinet, the senate and house of representatives and other people prominent in civil and political life.

Sagasta Beloved by the People

Madrid, Jan. 8.—The funeral of Senor Sagasta yesterday was a remarkable popular demonstration. Behind the lines of troops were crowded masses of the people, mostly of the lower classes. They were silent and respectful and bared their heads as the cortege traversed the two miles to the pantheon. Almost every public body and every class of society was represented in the funeral procession. It is estimated that 200,000 people were on the streets to witness the funeral.

Mail Robbers Frustrated

Watertown, N. Y., Jan. 8.—Two men who boarded a train at Gouveneur last night forced an entrance into the mail car and commanded Clerk Stack to surrender the postal valuables. The clerk called for help and the express messenger responded, when one of the robbers jumped from the train, which was moving at 50 miles an hour. The other was captured and lodged in jail.

Fired Out of the Family

Vienna, Jan. 8.—At a council of the members of the Tuscan branch of the Hapsburg family yesterday it was resolved to pay forthwith to Archduke Leopold Ferdinand, who accompanied his sister, the Crown Princess of Saxony, when she eloped to Geneva with M. Giron, his eventful share of the family fortune and dismiss him from the family.

Incurred Anarchists' Emnity

Barcelona, Jan. 8.—Senor Quirno-Costa, vice president of Argentina, has cancelled all his engagements here and has left Barcelona hurriedly for Nice. His departure is attributed to fear of an anarchist plot against himself. The incentive for this attack on the vice president was the recent expulsion of anarchists from the Argentine republic.

WORLD'S BIGGEST TREE.

Giant Sequoia Just Discovered by a Woman While Bear Hunting.

The biggest tree in the world has just been found by a woman, says a Los Angeles (Cal.) dispatch to the New York World. The tree has been named Methusalem. Its discoverer is Mrs. Mattie Duncan, a modern Diana of the wonderful California forests, whose home is in the Tule river basin, in the south central part of the state.

Methusalem is a sequoia, or "big tree," about 480 feet high, 128 feet 3 inches in circumference a foot from the ground and 99 feet 7 inches at seven feet from the ground. At one place it is nearly fifty feet in diameter. It is a beautiful tree, 240 feet to the first limb, finely proportioned, straight and clean barked from top to bottom. Under its lowest limb, which itself is the size of the largest eastern oak, a twenty story skyscraper might stand. Stood beside the great pyramid, the tree would wave thirty feet above its top.

The discovery of Methusalem was a remarkable incident. Mrs. Duncan was chasing a cinnamon bear over a spur of Mount Moses, fifty miles south of the Sequoia National park, a few weeks ago. She was alone, and the country was an exceedingly rough one, but she did not mind that. It was a hard and dangerous climb to follow the bear, but she stuck to it for miles, sometimes crawling on hands and knees, sometimes letting herself down over steep precipices and again climbing almost hand over hand. In this way the enthusiastic bear hunter finally found herself in wilds that appeared never to have been entered by man. In a heavy forest growth many miles from any human habitation she found Methusalem, and the cinnamon bear was forgotten.

A few days later Mrs. Duncan returned to her find accompanied by her husband and brother, S. C. Edwards, an artist living at Fillmore, and a party of lumbermen. The big sequoia was christened, measured and photographed. After a brief little christening ceremony a hymn was sung and a card giving the name and date of the discovery was tacked to the trunk.

In the Tule river country several large sawmills are converting the mammoth logs into building material, and the industry is thriving. An expert has figured from its dimensions that Methusalem contains 730,000 feet of inch lumber.

EDUCATIONAL SEGREGATION

How the Policy Is to Be Pursued In Chicago University.

In the current issue of the Chicago University Record President Harper of the University of Chicago defines his ideas of segregation. He says in part:

"The policy proposes the continuation of the separation which has already taken place in chapel assembly, with possibly an extension in the matter of division lectures. It permits coinstruction in those courses offered to junior college students for which the registration is not sufficiently large to warrant division on an economical basis. For example, at the present time one-third of all the courses offered to junior college students, roughly speaking, will be offered to men, one-third to women and one-third open to both men and women. It would mean that as the members increase the number of courses retained as coinstructional on grounds of economy would be diminished. The plan makes necessary the provision of separate classrooms and laboratories."

A COSTLY PRIMER.

Schoolteacher Gets $2,500 For One He Paid 12 Cents For.

An original copy of the New England Primer which is said to be in better condition than the copies owned by Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt and Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan was sold recently by Mr. Morris D. High of Johnstown, Pa., to Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co. for $2,500, says a Philadelphia dispatch to the New York Herald.

Mr. High, who is a teacher in the high school at Johnstown, is a native of Oley, Berks county, Pa., and he purchased the primer for 12 cents at a public auction in a farmhouse near his home in 1893.

Mr. High received an offer from Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan for the primer, but Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co. made a higher bid and got the prize.

Photography and the Schools.

Something that is revolutionary in the educational circles of Europe is the recent introduction of photography in French schools as part of the curriculum, says the Photo Era. The minister of public instruction has authorized a novelty in the French lycees for the term which is just beginning. The Lycee Condorcet, the largest and most important of the Paris schools, begins the experiment of a photography class, and if this proves successful there will be classes in photography once and afterward twice a week in every school under state control in France. Photography has assumed such importance lately that M. Chaumie, the minister of public instruction, considers that no French boy's education is complete without it.

Daring Shown In Naval Evolutions.

A boat's crew from the United States cruiser Don Juan de Austria made the first successful attack on the mine fields near Subig bay, says a dispatch from Manila. The boat capsized as it was approaching the mines, and part of the crew, with Ensign Babcock leading, swam a mile, though the water was infested with sharks, towing counter mine buoys, which were successfully placed. The searchlights of the warships did not discover the operation. Ensign Babcock and his men were congratulated on their courage.

TESTIMONY OF EXPERTS

In Behalf of Defense In Richardson Case

SICKNESS OF HER MOTHER

Not Due to Arsenical Poisoning—No Attempt to Disprove Government's Contention That Powder Obtained From Her Contained Arsenic

Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 9.—The first stage of the Richardson alleged poisoning hearing has been reached. Yesterday the prosecution concluded its evidence, and before court had adjourned yesterday afternoon, the defense had presented its expert testimony. The examination of the medical experts confirmed the suspicion aroused by the cross-examination of the government witnesses that the plan of the defense was to show that arsenical poisoning had nothing whatever to do with the illness of Mrs. Richardson.

No effort yet has been made by the defense to disprove the statement of government experts that the powder numbered 1, taken from Miss Richardson, contained arsenic to the amount of nearly 40 percent of the whole. The feature of the direct examination, as it has been in the cross-examination, was the effort of the defense to show that beyond the testimony of Dr. Kinney and the fact that the powders were found on Miss Richardson's person, there was nothing to prove that Mrs. Richardson was the victim of arsenical poisoning.

Yesterday interest centered in the testimony of experts regarding analyses they had made of fluids from Mrs. Richardson during the period she is alleged to have been suffering from arsenic administered by her daughter, Catherine.

Dr. B. F. Davenport, for the government, admitted that in his analysis he found no trace of arsenic, and Drs. Hoos and Vickery for the prosecution, in addition to testifying that no arsenic was found, gave as their positive opinion that in view of Mrs. Richardson's condition as observed and described to them, it was impossible that she could have suffered from arsenic poisoning.

The day's session concluded with a story of the happenings in the Richardson apartments in the Morrison House at Revere from Dec. 20, until two days ago, by Miss Lester Lisle, who had a place in the household as companion to Mrs. Richardson. The principal point in her testimony, which was unfinished when court adjourned for the day, was that Mrs. Richardson suffered from severe pains in her stomach and a burning sensation in her throat after Catherine had been placed under arrest and while the latter was in charge of a police officer.

Burglars Tackled Three Safes

Westville, N. S., Jan. 9.—Burglars broke into the bank of Nova Scotia building yesterday and attempted to blow open the safe. An explosion wrecked the door but left the outer plate on its hinges. They then abandoned the job and proceeded to the jewelry store of R. H. Mackay, where they blew open the safe and took jewelry valued at $1000. A drug store was also entered, the safe opened and a small amount of money secured.

Bank Credit System Criticised

New York, Jan. 9.—Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Gage was the guest of honor at a dinner of the sound currency committee of the Reform club last night. In the course of his remarks, Mr. Gage compared the National bank credit system of this country with that of China and said that it was about as antiquated and cumbersome as the system in vogue in that country.

Boy Murderer Goes Free

Columbus, Neb., Jan. 9.—Herman Boerchers, 13 years old, who last October shot and killed his stepfather, and with the assistance of younger brothers burned the body in a straw stack, was acquitted last night of the charge of murder. There was no denial of the crime, the plea of the defense being the moral irresponsibility of the boy and his youth.

Lewis Gets an Appointment

Washington, Jan. 9.—W. J. Lewis, whose appointment to the postal service had been deferred because of his Seventh Day Adventist objection to working on Saturdays, has received a temporary appointment in the postoffice department. WANTED TO BE A MASON

Boston Man Given Initiation That Turned Out to Be Bogus

Boston, Jan. 9.—John W. Shattuck, having an office on Tremont street, and doing various kinds of clerical work, was yesterday found guilty of larceny of $15 from Robert J. Yates, a carpenter. The case had greater significance than that of mere larceny, for Yates claimed that Shattuck took the $15 for initiation fees into the Ancient Landmark Lodge of Masons.

Yates said that Shattuck claimed to have a special dispensation from the Ohio Masonic grand lodge, to initiate men at the low rate of $15. Yates was taken into a room and given initiation, being "butted by the goat," and given various signs, grips and symbols. Afterwards Yates found that his grips were not truly Masonic. Sentence is deferred.

Slaughter After Second Inspection

Littleton, Mass., Jan. 9.—Seventeen of a head of 40 cattle owned by C. V. Flagg of this town were slaughtered yesterday by order of the authorities. All these cattle passed inspection by one United States and two state veterinarians on Monday. On Wednesday they visited the farm again and upon the discovery of "symptoms of a reactionary nature," the animals were condemned to death.

Postmaster Lurvey Indicted

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 9.—The grand jury yesterday reported an indictment against James M. Lurvey, the Goffs Falls postmaster, charged with robbing the American Express company of a package containing $2711 last August. He was arraigned before Judge Pike, pleaded not guilty, and was held in $7000 bonds. Failing to secure bail he was remanded to jail.

Thought Detectives Were After Him

Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 9.—A well dressed young man, who gave his name as John C. Dingee of Philadelphia, was found kneeling in the slush on Matthews street yesterday, muttering incoherantly, and was taken to the police station. He told a disconnected story of being followed by detectives and said he was praying the detectives not to shoot him.

Endurance Test Postponed

Boston, Jan. 9.—The government trial board attempted to make an endurance test of the Fore River company's destroyer MacDonough yesterday. After running 30 minutes at a speed exceeding 26 knots, the reversing gear worked loose and it was decided to postpone the 26-mile run until a more favorable occasion.

Both Sides Hold Firm

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 9.—During the past two days 15 men have arrived here to take the places of the striking carriage makers, but the latter claim to have induced six of them to abandon their jobs and join the union. Boston, Jan. 9.—During the meeting of the Society for the Protection of Italian immigrants yesterday, it was announced that from Feb. 16 to Nov. 27 last year 14,180 Italians arrived at this port. It was further reported that Italian bankers have robbed immigrants of $230,000 in the past 10 years in this city alone.

COME UP OUT OF THE MIRE.

Remark of Chairman Gray to Which President Mitchell Takes Exception.

Philadelphia, Jan. 9.—The principal feature of the proceedings before the coal strike commission yesterday was the exception taken by President Mitchell to a remark made by Chairman Gray that he would like to see the Miners' union come up out of the mire that is around the baser parts of it into the sunlight.

The incident was brought about by Commissioner Parker. Anthony Ferguson, an outside foreman of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company, testified that he was beaten while on his way to work; that he recognized two of his assailants as union men, and that they were prosecuted and convicted. Mr. Parker asked the witness if the men were expelled from the union for what they had done, but the foreman did not know. Mr. Mitchell had stated on the witness stand that all members of the union found guilty of crime are expelled from the union.

Noting the interest the commission took in Mr. Parker's question the lawyers for the non-union men called on Terrence Ginley, a member of the executive board of the union in the district where the assault was committed, for the information desired. Girley told of the attempts made to keep the peace at Shenandoah before the big riot there and added there had been no disturbance until the coal and iron police were sent to the place.

Chairman Gray then asked: "So you wait for conviction by the civil authorities before disciplining your men. Do you think you can have effective discipline unless you make investigations yourself and bring the men up and punish them in some way? I ask you as a member of the order and as a man who would be glad to see your order come up out of the mire and the clouds that are around the baser part of it into the sunlight and into the air of free government and a free country."

"If it is proven that our men have committed acts of violence there is no question about our disciplining them," replied the witness.

Then followed a discussion over the Shenandoah riot and the killing of a man and in reply to Mr. Mitchell's remark that it was not the miners who did it, Chairman Gray said: "But there was a crowd and as yet I have heard no evidence of a disciplining voice in that mob. No man there said: 'Shame on the cowards.'"

There was a further discussion on this subject and then Mr. Mitchell rose and said to Chairman Gray: "I do not know whether I quite understand you in expressing yourself to the witness as to your solicitude for the organization, that it should arise above the mire or that part of it should rise above the mire."

Chairman Gray—"Perhaps I may have been misunderstood. It was not an unfriendly wish that was expressed. I said I hoped it would lift itself out of the mire and out of the conditions created by these things which have been testified to around its better parts."

Mr. Mitchell in reply said that while the commission is going to determine all the questions that are being presented here there is a greater jury passing upon the attitude of the strikers. "As to the action of our organization and the position of the coal operators," he said, "there is no doubt in my mind that many of the witnesses are brought here, and do not come as witnesses ordinarily do, to testify against the strikers and indirectly against the United Mine Workers. It does seem to me, until there is some connection shown between the United Mine Workers of America and acts of lawlessness, the organization should not be placed under any indictment at all."

Chairman Gray said that he did not wish Mr. Mitchell to understand that anything he said indicted the organization. "I did hope," continued the commissioner, "that it would disentangle itself entirely from these scenes of violence and lawlessness with which the strike was attended. They may have been exaggerated, as you contend. I am not passing upon that now. We have heard isolated instances of outrage which we must all admit. We are not saying that the organization is responsible for every act of violence and we only wanted to see whether the organization has interested itself in maintaining the order which you have advised and whether it has disciplined those who actually were convicted of disorder."

Mr. Mitchell said that he did not know that any member of the union had been expelled, and added that until more are convicted of violation of law the organization had no right to expel them and thus prejudice their case before the trial court.

Chairman Gray said that Mr. Mitchell's point was well taken so far as concerns those under indictment, but what he wanted to know was whether any of those men were ever called up who had been notoriously engaged in illegal acts and whether they were subject to discipline by the organization.

This ended the incident.

Thirty Thousand Troops In Review

Delhi, Jan. 9.—The review of 30,000 British and native troops, led by Lord Kitchener, by Viceroy Curzon yesterday was the last important event of the coronation durbar. The scene was not less brilliant in coloring than the preceding events and it equalled them in picturesqueness. Of all the soldiers reviewed none made a better impression than the native volunteers, which were led by native princes magnificently uniformed and horsed.

Wives For Lonely Bachelors

Kokomo, Ind., Jan. 9.—Three months ago J. R. Walters, a former resident of this city, wrote from his new home at Rugby, N. D., that 500 bachelors in that neighborhood want wives. The letter was published in a Kokomo paper. Nearly 100 girls wrote to Walters and the names of the writers were placed in the hands of the men and individual correspondence followed. As a result 48 girls are getting ready for the journey to Rugby.

Tangier, Jan. 9.—A courier who arrived here yesterday from Fez is the bearer of a letter dated Jan 3 from a commercial firm there saying that confidence has been restored and requesting the dispatch of goods which were being detained here. The letter says the sultan is sanguine, but it is not likely that he will assume the offensive.

Probate Notice.

Good Afternoon.

"Bates' first" is the way the Globe puts it. An early indication that His Excellency will be reelected Governor.

Reference to the list of Hospital contributors, published this week shows that our adopted citizens have this year taken a great interest in the Quincy Hospital. Ward Four not only has more contributors this year than any other Ward (about 800 out of a total of 2200) but they have given more generously according to their means. Thursday's long list was mostly from Swedish and Finnish residents. But just look at the list of Granite Railway quarrymen today, each $1 or over. A list of Granite Railway yardmen will appear tomorrow.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Mr. Callender opened the ball in the House on Wednesday with great promptness, and although two of the leaders attempted to head him off, he succeeded in his purpose. The example set by "the gentleman in the fourth division," is worthy of emulation by all the members of the Legislature. If they do as the member from Dorchester did, the session will be much shorter than usual.—Lynn Item.

☞Gov. Bates is no novice in public service and the suggestions he makes are of a practical nature which, whether adopted or not, will command respectful attention. The two most important features of the address, noted in a hasty reading, are the one relating to public franchises and that relating to the financial policy of the state in the retirement of its bonded indebtedness. The governor takes a distinct position in favor of securing compensation for public franchises, and he is unquestionably right in line with a growing popular sentiment that valuable privileges in the public streets have too long been conferred upon private corporations free of charge, until in fact these corporations have forgotten that they were enjoying a privilege at the hands of the people and have insolently assumed that they were themselves lords and the people their obedient servants.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞I am in the library manufacturing business, and beg to be allowed to concentrate my time upon it until it is filled. As long as the people of a community are willing to maintain a library from the proceeds of taxation as a part of the city's educational system, I intend to labor in that vineyard, keeping myself as free as possible from hearing of the woes and wants of humanity in general, to which if I listened, I would soon become unfit for my special work, which I think the best of all. For among the numberless suggestions made I have not found one which to my mind equals the free library maintained by the people as a field for wise distribution of surplus wealth. It is fruitful in the extreme because the library gives nothing for nothing, because it helps only those who help themselves, because it does not pauperize. This is not charity. It is not philanthropy. It is the people themselves helping themselves by taxing themselves. Free libraries maintained by the people are cradles of democracy, and their spread can never fail to extend and strengthen the democratic idea, the equality of the citizen, the royalty of man.—Andrew Carnegie in Washington address.

RECEPTION

To New Rector of Christ Church and Wife.

Two to Three Hundred Present.

A Brief Sketch of Rev. William Gardner.

A hearty welcome was extended Rev. William Gardner, the new rector of Christ church, and his wife Thursday evening by 200 to 300 members of the church and friends. The reception was held in the Parish house and its capacity was fully taxed. The rooms were attractive with their Christmas evergreen trimmings.

In the receiving party were Rev. and Mrs. Gardner, Warden George H. Brown and Mrs. Brown, Warden C. Theodore Hardwick and Mrs. Hardwick, Miss Emma Savil, the superintendent of the Sunday school, and Mrs. John Downes, president of the Ladies Guild.

The vestrymen of the church acted as ushers, viz: Frank Fessenden Crane, John E. Sprague, Solomon Fuller, James Smith, Charles L. Hammond and William L. Thomas. Almost continously from 8 to 10 people were presented.

Among those present were: Rev. E. N. Hardy, pastor of the Bethany Congregational church; Rev. F. W. Pratt, pastor of the Wollaston Unitarian church; Rev. C. P. Mills, rector of St. Chrysostom's church at Wollaston, and Rev. William Hyde, rector of Trinity church, Weymouth.

During the reception a stringed orchestra of four young ladies from the Conservatory of Music rendered several selections.

The new rector and his wife made a very favorable impression on all. Mrs. Gardner was charmingly attired and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses, the gift of the vestrymen.

Frappe, fancy crackers and coffee were served during the evening by the young ladies of St. Margaret guild, of which Mrs. Frederick L. Jones is directress, viz.: Alice Deacon, Lottie Barnicoat, Mary McConnell, Olive Smith, Edith Spargo, Gertrude Jones, Ethel Randall, Gertrude Jilbert, Hattie Smith and Ruth Burnham.

Rev. Mr. Gardner was born in Sherborn, March 22, 1872, and early became a resident of Nantucket, where he was married on Sept. 14, 1898 to Miss Mary Tracy of that town. The new rector comes from Swampscott, where for nearly five years he was in charge of the Church of the Holy Name.

Mr. Gardner fitted for college in the public schools of Nantucket, and in the Coffin preparatory school, and entered Brown University in 1891. While at college he was editor of the Brown Magazine and Liber. He was graduated in 1895, and entered the Episcopal Theological school, at Cambridge, graduating in 1896.

While in the Theological school he was lay preacher at Medway and organized a mission at Franklin. He was ordained a deacon at Providence by Bishop McVickar. June 1, 1898, he accepted the call to Swampscott, and Dec. 7 was elevated to the priesthood. Mr. Gardner has written "The History of Christiantty" and other works.

Was Sawing Wood.

About fifty of the friends of M. A. McDonald tendered him a surprise party Thursday evening at his home on Brooks avenue. The surprisers arrived about 8 o'clock and found their host busily engaged in the basement sawing wood. During the evening there were games, music, refreshments, and a general good time. Another feature of the evening was the presentation to Mr. McDonald of a desk and book case the presentation speech being made by Fred E. Goss.

Grocers Attend.

The funeral of Matthew W. Lynch was held Thursday from the church of the Immaculate Conception at East Weymouth. Business in the village was suspended during the services, which were attended by many of the Old Colony Grocers' Association.

EVENING SCHOOL.

And Reading Room Desired by Peoples' Union in Ward Two.

A largely attended meeting was held in the Washington school building Thursday evening to form a branch of the Quincy People's Unions, whose objects are to advance the material and educational advantages in the several sections of the city.

An organization was perfected with Thomas B. Pollard as president; Miss Kate A. Raycroft as secretary, and Joseph A. Dasha as treasurer.

By-laws were adopted and a committee on membership appointed, consisting of Elijah B. Barrows, William F. Sidelinger, Timothy J. Collins, Miss Margaret L. Thomas and Mrs. Harriet G. Holman.

President Pollard who authorized to appoint a committee on educational matters.

One of the first efforts of the Union will be to try and secure an evening school for Ward Two and a reading room for young men.

Equitable Building Fire.

Two alarms were rung in about 11 o'clock this morning for a fire in the Equitable building on Devonshire street, Boston. The fire was in the upper part of the building on the Federal street side. This part of the building is occupied wholly by offices. Among the number being Theophilus King and Lewis Bass, Jr., of Quincy. The fire was confined to the interior of the building.

Fire entered the office of Mr. King and his papers, etc., were water soaked as were all the offices near the light shaft. The tenants loss in money and valuable papers was large.

The desk of W. E. Burke, the real estate man, was burned but the desk of Mr. King and two safes were saved.

A. A. Meyer has an office in the building.

Several occupants of the building were rescued by the firemen.

Surprise Party.

Miss Ethel B. Kittredge of Washington street, Quincy Point, was greatly surprised Thursday night, when about forty of her friends gathered at her home. Many games were played. Miss Lulu Crowley took the prize for pinning the donkey's tail on, and Edward Larkin took the gentleman's prize. Punch was served during the evening and a dainty collation served. Mr. Arthur Foster presented the gift ring with three opals.

Among those present were: Misses Helen Curtin, Mabel Read, Louise Hinkley, Casey Larkin, Annie E. Carter, Elizabeth G. Scouler, Mary Gay, Gertrude Foster, Estelle C. Tirrell, H. Marion Tirrell, Theresa Roche, Julia B. Roche, Jeannette Weston, Charlotte Turner, Lulu and Gertrude Crowley.

Masters Edward Larkin, Ralph Read, Clifford Snow, Harold Newcomb, Harry Drake, Robert Hardwick, Frank Tirrell, Frank Melville, James Melville, Arthur Foster, Chester Foster, George Hayden and Charles Hogan.

Post Office Clerks Meet.

At the quarterly meeting of the Norfolk County P. O. Clerks' Association, branch No. 227 of the United National Association of Post Office Clerks, which was held at Norwood, Mass., on January 4th, the following officers were elected:

President, James R. Delany of Dedham.

Vice President, George H. Walters of Hyde Park.

Secretary, Miss Katherine M. Kennedy of Hyde Park.

Treasurer, Edward L. Mitchell of Quincy.

After the regular business was transacted, the meeting was addressed by Mr. R. W. Thorson, a member of the National legislative committee and Mr. S. E. Lucet, President of Branch No. 5 of Boston. Mr. Thorson talked interestingly on the bright prospects of the clerks eight hour and mandatory classification bills passing the House, the present short session, the same having already passed the Senate. He outlined work to be done and spoke of what had been accomplished, especially by the grievance committees. He also spoke of the harmony which exists between the P. O. Department and the Clerks Association. Mr. Lucet spoke on the rapid growth of the association and reviewed part of the work accomplished; namely, securing fifteen days vacation and in increasing the minimum for clerks in first class offices from $500 to $600 and in second class offices from $400 to $500 per annum.

He also spoke of the liberal increase in the general appropriation for clerk hire, but that a mandatory classification bill would give justice to all clerks. The postmasters are in favor of it as it would greatly relieve them from trying to assign a limited number of increases in salaries. The eight-hour bill is also looked forward to as many clerks are still working from ten to twelve hours.

Refreshments were served by the Norwood clerks.

—Rev. Arthur A. Blau was on Thursday evening installed as pastor of the Universalist church at Beverly.

GOATS ARE OUT.

Said to Have Been Removed Between 3 and 4 A. M.

Because for over 100 years Rural lodge of Masons held their stated monthly communications on the Thursday nights on or before the full moon, quite a number thought, as the moon fulls on Sunday evening that the attempt would be made by the brethren to remove the goats by the temporary staging in front of the Greenleaf block last night. Several gathered about midnight in the vicinity and were seen hiding behind trees and buildings watching for the first move, but about 2 A. M. concluded it was too cold to bring forth these Masonic pets.

Had the boys waited an hour or two later they might have seen the delicate operation, but they must be on hand when the goats are placed in the new building now being erected. The best way, however, to see the goats is to become a member.

The staging was removed today.

Let them "go it," says Postmaster Hammond.

GRANITE CITY

Takes Everything at Bowling and Billiards.

Braintree Club Wins at Pool.

The Clubs Split Even at Whist in League Games.

There was a large attendance at the rooms of the Granite City club Thursday night to witness the games in the Norfolk County League between the Granite City and the Braintree clubs.

Braintree sent down a crowd of rooters to cheer their teams on to victory, but they were so weak in billiards and bowling that no amount of rooting availed.

AT BILLIARDS.

Granite City captured both games of billiards, McGrath defeating his opponent by a score of 75 to 27, and Sears winning by a score of 75 to 32. Herbert M. Federhen, formerly of this city and a member of the club, came out to see the fun and was referee of the billiard games.

AT POOL.

The Granite City club did not put up a strong game at pool and lost both games. Faxon and Graham represented the home club but neither put up their usual good game, although Faxon held his opponent well for the first part. On the last frame the score stood 49 to 35 in favor of Braintree. The latter club broke and Faxon succeeded in pocketing eight balls before his opponent secured the one ball needed to make him a winner. The final score in this game was 50 to 43 in favor of Braintree.

In the second game Braintree also won, by a score of 50 to 39. Albert R. Shed, the well-known authority on all athletic games, was referee.

AT WHIST.

At whist the two clubs split even. Curtis and Rideout of Granite City won their game by a score of 7 to 0. Jones and Langley were not as successful, for they lost their game to Braintree by a score of 6 to 3.

BOWLING.

It was at bowling where the home club showed up well. Having in mind their defeat in their first game with Braintree the team went into the game determined to win or burst. Success smiled upon them, for they won and did not have to burst themselves to do it.

The bowling games were rolled on the Granite street alleys and at the very start it was seen that the home team was on their metal. The visitors had some strong men, but also had a weak man which did much toward defeating them. The home team won every string.

Braintree carried off the honors in having the highest and lowest three-string totals. Hobart was high man with 259, and Gerry low man with 195. Braintree average was 220 and their string average 367.

Hobart also carried off the honors for the visitors by bowling the highest single string, namely 90, which he bowled on the second string. Nightingale of the Granite City went him one better, however, by bowling two 90 strings and on three string totals he was but four pins behind him.

For the home team, Nightingale was high man on single strings and on three string totals, with Ross a good second on three string totals, and Ross and Johnson neck and neck for second place on single strings. One pin only kept Hill from tieing Walsh for low man.

The average of the team, however, was 235, and their string average 392.

As a result of the games Granite City secured six out of nine points.

Madeline Goes to Connecticut.

The trim passenger steamer, Madeline, which has been plying between Boston and Winthrop Beach for the past three summers, and is now laid up at Hanley's ship moorings in this city, will leave early in the spring for Hartford, where she will go into commission for excursions. The beautiful 95 foot steamer has a license to carry 300 passengers, is very speedy, going twelve miles an hour, light draft and carries her load with perfect ease and comfort. She has all the modern improvements, and the price for which Editor Hale has secured her, is much less than her cost, which was $18,000 in 1893.

She is practically new, shows no wear, has the celebrated Paine Compound Engine and a fine Almy boiler. The Boston people have been quite attached to her and will regret her departure.

ZIGZAG VALLEYS.

The Processes of Nature by Which They Are Formed.

Volcanic action has in most cases primarily determined the configuration of the crust of the earth, but the chief agents in the formation of tortuous valleys have been streams flowing above ground or below the surface. These naturally take the course of least resistance, dislodging the softest soil, and thus gradually enlarge their channels and are flanked by rising ground.

It has been ascertained by a well known expert that the serpentine course of the valley of the Cheddar gorge is caused by the jointing in the limestone. The rock, he tells us, is traversed by two systems of joints, which appear to be vertical or nearly so, intersecting approximately at a right angle. The joint surfaces form salient and re-entrant angles, the former opposite to the latter, so that if the two sides of the glen were brought together they would seem to interlock. Water above or below the surface would soak along these open joints and widen them into fissures, and this movement, sometimes to the right and sometimes to the left, would follow zigzag lines, so that the natural course of the current would by its continuous action excavate a valley of this unusual character.—London Answers.

A Verified Story.

A group of railroad men in New Orleans were talking about the fastest rides they ever experienced, says the Times-Democrat. One man in relating his experiences said: "Across bayous and through marshes we rushed like mad. When we reached the Rigolets, the most remarkable thing I ever saw took place. The train was traveling so fast it sucked the water up behind it as it rushed across the trestle, and I could hear the fishes groan as we flew over this neck of the gulf. Most remarkable thing I ever saw in the way of fast runs." And he lapsed into silence.

"I am glad you reminded me of that run," said another member of the group. "I had forgotten the incident. I can vouch for all you say, for I was on the back end of the last coach, and the water which was sucked in behind the train by the vacuum almost washed me overboard, but I held on all right, and when we made the crossing and the waters had receded I picked up on the platform of the rear coach the finest bunch of fish I ever saw. They were no doubt the fish you heard groaning."

Smallpox In Olden Days.

The first accurate description of the nature and ravages of smallpox is that of Rhases, an Arabian physician, who flourished in the tenth century and was the author of books on medicine and alchemy.

This terrible scourge was also described in most of the ancient Chinese and Indian books. In China it was known as the "bean disease" and traced back to the times of the Emperor Kwang Wu, who reigned A. D. 25-28.

The earliest Chinese treatise on smallpox was published in 1323, and from this it appears that inoculation has been known and practiced in the far east since the Sung dynasty, A. D. 960-1127. Chinese experts hold that the poison is communicated by the parents to their offspring, so that all possess its germ in their constitution, waiting only for circumstances favorable to its development.

The Marine Flag.

The revenue marine service flag, authorized by act of congress March 2, 1799, was originally prescribed to "consist of sixteen perpendicular stripes, alternate red and white, the union of the ensign bearing the arms of the United States in dark blue on a white field." The sixteen stripes represented the number of states which had been admitted to the Union at that time, and no change has been made since. Prior to 1871 it bore an eagle in the union of the pennant, which was then substituted by thirteen blue stars in a white field, but the eagle and the stars are still retained in the flag.

Slope of Rivers.

Generally speaking, the slope of rivers flowing into the Mississippi from the east is on an average about three inches per mile. Those entering it from the west have an average descent of about six inches per mile. The average descent per mile of the Missouri after it leaves the mountains is reckoned at about a foot; the Des Moines from its source to its conjunction with the Mississippi, 7.3 inches. The entire length of the Ohio shows a fall of even five inches. The Mississippi from the mouth of the Ohio to the gulf has a fall of but 2½ inches.

HANDSOME SILKS.

Chine and Pompadour Silks Used as Trimmings.

Chine and pompadour silks are intermixed with lace on the more sumptuous evening gowns. A deep flounce of ivory silk with lovely groups of rosebuds and foliage in natural tints was arranged on a gown of moss green velvet of rather a light shade. At the edge of the flounce was a border or tuck of velvet overlaid at intervals with motifs of lace. The velvet fell over the chine flounce in deep slender points which were tasseled in green silk. The bodice was almost indescribable, so intermixed were the three materials—lace, velvet and chine silk. The very abbreviated bolero of velvet had a deep flounce of lace, and the low neck had a quaintly shaped bertha of the silk opening in vandykes over the velvet.

Pompadour taffeta in a delicate iris design was used as a trimming to a lace gown. These fancy silks make admirable trimmings used in strips or medallions.

The smart black and white waist in the illustration is of black chiffon shirred into bands and livened by a collar and front of all over lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

—The work of the deputies of the tax department in reassessing the real property of New York City at its full market value has been completed. It is estimated that the total assessed valuation of the whole city will be at least four billion, seven hundred million dollars, an increase of about thirty-five percent.

BATES' FIRST MESSAGE

Governor Advises Careful Scrutiny of Expenditures

CONTRACTS TO HOME FIRMS

Speed of Trolleys Should Be Regulated—Recommends Enrolment of Voters on Party Lines—Gist of Other Important Matters Touched Upon

Boston, Jan. 9.—John L. Bates was inaugurated governor of Massachusetts yesterday. He was the 39th governor to be inaugurated under the constitution of the commonwealth, and the third speaker of the house to reach the governor's chair since Governor Alexander H. Bullock's day, 36 years ago. Curtis Guild, Jr., was also sworn in as lieutenant governor.

Governor Bates' inaugural address contained no such radical or positive recommendations as did those of his predecessor, Governor Crane. There is one recommendation for a consolidation of departments—that for the comptroller of county accounts with the auditor's department, in connection with the law providing for a municipal system of accounting, under which reports are made to the comptroller of county accounts. Here are some of the more important points in the address:

The net state debt incurred for state purposes was on Jan. 1 $13,472,628.09. The net contingent debt was $52,491,877.65, incurred largely for the benefit of cities and towns, chiefly within the Metropolitan district and to be paid by them. The net state debt will be increased by large sums for the abolition of grade crossings, the improvement of Boston harbor, construction of state highways, etc. "The statement of this situation shows the need for the most careful scrutiny of every measure involving expenditure, the practice of every economy consistent with the welfare and progress of the commonwealth, and the wisdom of directing efforts to the best method of augmenting the revenues rather than to the discovery of new means for their disbursement."

Boards and commissions, in awarding contracts, should give Massachusetts work to Massachusetts mechanics. There should be a modest appropriation for the state's representation at the St. Louis exposition next year. In granting school aid the state should reserve sufficient authority to insure compliance with its intent in granting such aid. Boston's loss of freight and commerce through the order of the English government forbidding the importation of cattle, sheep or swine from Boston or Portland because of the foot and mouth disease alone justifies the most drastic measures for the extermination of the disease. There is most urgent need that the state institutions for the insane be relieved from overcrowding. The act of 1896 to take waste or unused land and to improve it by the labor of prisoners should have its value tested by the granting of a small appropriation. The system of indeterminate sentences at the reformatory should be tried at the reformatory prison for women at Sherborn. Appropriations for the improvement in our smaller harbors should be made with great caution. There should be no lowering of the standard of labor laws. The public and the street railway companies should have the right of appeal to the railroad commissioners, and the latter should have authority to act, where the local board neglects to do so, in regulating the speed of electric cars.

There should be legislation providing for the enrolment of voters on party lines, which will tend to the purity of the ballot at the primaries and to fix party responsibility. Commends the referendum in cases where the people of a particular locality alone are to be affected by the gravity of franchises. Believes in local home rule. Franchises should not be granted to public service corporations except upon conditions that will secure direct compensation to the public for privileges enjoyed. The use of labor patronage by public service corporations should be made an offense. In order to insure speedy trials, there should be four sessions of the superior criminal court at Cambridge instead of three; probate courts might be given jurisdiction of divorce proceedings. Policy holders in reserve life insurance companies authorized to do business in Massachusetts should be further protected. Our laws should be such that Massachusetts citizens can employ Massachusetts capital under Massachusetts charter in any legitimate business, conducted in or outside the state, and the taxation incident upon such incorporation should flow into our treasury rather than into those of other states; a special committee should be appointed to consider the report, about to be submitted, of the committee which has been considering the revision of the corporation laws. More attention should be paid to the beautifying of the state highways by planting trees and shrubbery; the annual expense of the construction of state highways should be fixed with a due regard to economy, and the localities benefited should bear a greater proportion, if not the whole, of the expense of repairs.

Indianola Wants Postoffice Opened

Washington, Jan. 9.—Senator McLaurin of Mississippi called on Postmaster General Payne yesterday and urged him to reopen the Indianola postoffice. Mr. Payne told him that the case now rested with President Roosevelt, who was giving the question careful consideration.

HOLLEBEN'S DEPARTURE

May Have Been In Connection With the Venezuelan Matter

Washington, Jan. 9.—Herr Von Holleben left here for New York yesterday to consult specialists. He expects that his physician will advise a protracted rest at some of the health resorts in southern Europe and therefore has arranged to sail on Saturday.

Berlin, Jan. 9.—The suggestion that Ambassador Von Holleben's indefinite leave of absence from Washington was caused by illness alone is received here with some incredulity. Most of the newspapers print without comment a brief dispatch from Washington announcing his illness and his intention to go to New York for treatment by a specialist, but The Lokal Anzeiger says that it has good reason to believe Dr. Von Holleben will not return to his post, and in seeking for an explanation it asserts that the government is displeased at his non-success in persuading President Roosevelt to accept the proposition that he arbitrate the Venezuelan dispute.

Baron Speck Von Sternburg's work on the Samoan commission is still remembered by the government here as marking him for promotion.

No General Amnesty For Boers

Pretoria, Jan. 9.—Mr. Chamberlain, replying yesterday to an address of the burghers, said the terms already granted were decidedly generous and that there was no prospect of a general amnesty. The cases of the burghers now in Europe would be considered individually on their merits, and these burghers should prove their loyalty by accounting for the gold taken to Europe. He said also that the annexation of the Vreyhard and Utrecht districts to Natal was irrevocable and that the natives would be compelled to observe their obligations. He declared he would have been better pleased had the address of the burghers, instead of consisting merely of demands, contained some recognition of what England had already done for the Boers.

In Congress

Washington, Jan. 9.—The senate yesterday discussed the Vest resolution requesting the finance committe to report a bill removing the duty on anthracite coal. The resolution went over until the next legislative day.

The house passed the Philippine constabulary bill, providing that the chief of the constabulary and the assistant chiefs who are United States army officers shall have the rank, pay and allowances of brigadier general and colonel respectively.

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medinieas directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. For sale by all druggists.

Dealing With United States Only

Paris, Jan. 9.—Secretary Lampre of the new Panama Canal company authorizes a denial of reports that a German offer of $40,000,000 has been made to the company for the Panama canal concessions and property. He adds that the entire negotiations are confined to the United States.

Firemen Intend to Strike

Chicago, Jan. 9.—The locomotive firemen employed by the Chicago and Alton Railroad company have decided to go on strike to enforce the demands presented to the officials of the road Dec. 1 for an increase of 12½ percent in wages.

Senator Vest's Successor

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 9.—The Democrats of the Missouri legislature last night nominated former Governor W. J. Stone for United States senator to succeed Senator Vest.

CARRIES THE STRAIN

Quite a strain on a child to grow. You find it about all you can do to live along as you are and keep well. Your child has to do all that and grow besides. Some children can't stand the extra strain. They get weak and sickly as a result of it.

This is where Scott's Emulsion does some of its best work. It is a strong "growing" medicine. It starts up new life in the backward child and strengthens the weak ones.

Scott's Emulsion takes all the extra strain and carries the children along until they are strong enough to stand it alone.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

BOWEN IS HONORED

Venezuela Entrusts Him With Arranging For Settlement of Dispute

Washington, Jan. 9.—Confirmation was received here last night of the reports from Caracas to the effect that all barriers in the way of a settlement of the claims of Great Britain, Germany and Italy against Venezuela had been removed by the last named country yielding to the demands of the European allies.

Minister Bowen will leave Venezuela either Saturday or Sunday and will come direct to the United States on one of our warships. Minister Bowen will be clothed with authority to represent Venezuela as her commissioner for the adjustment of all claims out of hand without reference to The Hague tribunal or, if this be found impracticable, then he is authorized to act for Venezuela in settling all points open to controversy as far as possible, and of drafting the terms on which a final and conclusive arbitration shall be made by the international court at The Hague.

The proceedings in which Minister Bowen will participate will take place at Washington, presumably a few days after his arrival in this city. The commissioners on the part of the allies, it is understood, will be their leading diplomatic representatives in Washington.

Conditions Considered Unjust

Caracas, Jan. 9.—After two stormy meetings of the cabinet all the conditions set forth in the replies of the powers to President Castro's last proposals in the matter of settling the Venezuelan dispute through arbitration have been accepted by the Venezuelan government. The government considers these conditions to be unjust, but declares it is obliged to yield to force. The Venezuelan answer was delivered at the United States legation here at noon yesterday.

The conditions of the powers cover cash payments to the allies and guarantees for the payment of the balance of their claims. It can be said on good authority that the question of raising the existing blockade will not be considered.

Campbell-Bannerman Rejoices

London, Jan. 9.—Speaking at Stirling last night Mr. Campbell-Bannerman said that he rejoiced that the Venezuelan dispute was not to be referred to any person or potentate, however prominent, but to The Hague tribunal. He said this step would establish the important precedent that the two greatest powers, Great Britain and Germany, had shown readiness to use this machine.

Shoulders All the Blame

Paris, Jan. 9.—Therese Humbert was interrogated yesterday for the first time since her arrest. The questioning was conducted by Judge Leydu. It is reported that she refused to answer a single question regarding the Crawfords or their millions, saying she reserved her replies in this connection for her trial, when she would tell absolutely everything. Mme. Humbert said she took the entire responsibility of the whole affair. As the proceeding before Judge Leydu was private it is impossible to accurately ascertain what occurred.

A Remarkable Banquet

Berlin, Jan. 9.—Six hundred people sat down last night to a banquet given for the purpose of demonstrating the nourishing and palatable qualities of horse meat, thereby causing increased consumption of the meat and a ready market for old horses. This would prevent owners from working the poor animals to death, as well fed specimens would bring good prices. The bill of fare consisted of horse soup, pickled horse tongue, fillet of horse and roast horse. All of the dishes were nicely prepared and were evidently greatly relished.

Trains Met on Crowded Street

Ada, O., Jan. 9.—Three men dead and 14 or more other persons injured, one fatally, is the result of a collision between two trains here last evening. The accident occurred on the main street of the town at a time when the thoroughfare was crowded with people.

ANOTHER PROCLAMATION
By E. J. MURPHY, Druggist.

Whereas, some time ago we caused to be published in the newspapers of this City a proclamation setting forth certain statements and claims for our new tonic and reconstructor, VINOL, Wine of Cod Liver Oil.

Know, therefore, people of this city that the facts, statements and claims made therein have since been most amply verified. Proof monumental and indisputable has been coming to us from all parts of the City which confirms beyond contradiction the fact that VINOL is a scientific and wonderfully successful remedy for the ills for which it is recommended, and amply justifies all our strong statements in its behalf, and the further statement that nothing ever dispensed from our drug store has equalled VINOL both in demand and real medicinal merit.

We again proclaim our offer to the people that we sell VINOL on a POSITIVE GUARANTEE. If it does not succeed in benefiting you we will refund the entire amount of purchase money.

There is no medicine that will cure everything, but if you are troubled with any of the following ailments we know that VINOL will help you. Anyway, you should give yourself the chance to be benefited by it, particularly as you take no risk in losing money if it does not help you.

Vinol is NOT a patent medicine. Everything in it is plainly printed on the label, and while it contains all the medicinal elements found in the Cod's Liver, it contains no oil or grease, and is as deliciously palatable as the most delicate glass of wine, — come in and test it — you will want more.

All Run Down—No Appetite.

If you feel all worn out, have very little appetite, and not much sleep, caused by over-work or sickness, try VINOL on our guarantee.

Debilitated—All Tired Out.

Why drag out an existence without life or ambition. It is not natural to feel continually tired. We guarrantee VINOL will bring life, strength and vigor to the debilitated. If you do not feel well try VINOL. If it does not help you your money will be refunded.

Gain Flesh—Get Strong.

You can get fat without taking disagreeable Cod Liver Oil. Fat taken into the system does not create fat. We believe VINOL will create flesh quicker than any preparation containing grease. We have proved in many cases that VINOL quickly creates strength. Try it on our guarantee.

Indigestion—Dyspepsia.

Only those who actually suffer know its terrors, for them life is robbed of all joy. It produces many serious complications and enfeebles the entire system. Relief only comes when a scientific remedy enables the stomach to properly assimilate food. There is no medicine that will do this so successfully as VINOL. Try it on our guarantee.

Old People—Weak People

need a strengthening and invigorating rebuilder. VINOL is of exceptional value in such cases. We guarantee it to give strength and health to those who are weak and debilitated, from disease or old age. Try it on our guarantee.

Pale Women—Pale Children

need a tonic-reconstructor that will create flesh and make pure red blood. Pale, haggard faces show that the blood is poor and thin, and also indicates imperfect digestion. VINOL will correct such troubles as sure as the sun shines Children love VINOL, it is so delicious. Try it on our guarantee.

Bronchitis—Sore Lungs.

often end fatally unless specially cared for in its early stages. There is no medicine more valuable for restoring health to the throat and lungs than VINOL, Wine of Cod Liver Oil. Try it on our guarantee.

Nervousness—Irritability.

Diseased nerves are due to over-work, insufficient nourishment or slow breaking down of general health. We guarantee VINOL, Wine of Cod Liver Oil to permanently and effectually cure nerve affections; it actually rebuilds the entire body. Try it on our guarantee.

Chronic Colds—Hacking Cough.

Sure signs of danger ahead. One might as well commit suicide as to let them go unchecked. VINOL is the very medicine needed. Unlike other Cod Liver Oil preparations, it does not upset the stomach, and it is delicious to the taste. Try it on our guarantee.

Nursing Mothers—Weak Mothers.

If women with nursing babies who have difficulty in keeping up their health and strength would take VINOL, we know positively that the best results would be obtained. You know the life and future development of the child depends upon proper nourishment. Try it on our guarantee.

TRY ON OUR GUARANTEE,

Vinol
WINE OF COD-LIVER-OIL.

You will absolutely be under no obligation to us whatever, if after you have given VINOL a fair trial for any of the above ailments and have received no benefit, you have only to tell us so, and we will return the entire amount of money you have paid us.

You see our faith in VINOL, and you must admit that we know something about medicine; therefore, when we tell you that VINOL is the most valuable preparation of Cod Liver Oil we have ever known, and a wonderful tonic-reconstructor, and rebuilder of strength, appetite, and health, at the same time delicious to taste, we are not unreasonable to expect you to believe us.

The Social Realm.

It is the mind that maketh the good or ill,
That maketh wretch or happy, rich or poor;
For some, that hath abundance at his will
Hath not enough, but wants in greatest store;
And other that hath little asks no more,
But in that little is both rich and wise,
For Wisdom is most riches; fools therefore
They are which fortunes do by vows devise,
Sith each unto himself his life may fortunize.

To the Supreme Court.

Judge Bond has denied the motion for a new trial in the case of J. L. Soderquest, convicted of assaulting Miss Crockett in the natural history rooms, on the grounds that the court has no authority to revoke the sentence.

Judge Bond suggested that the case be carried to the supreme court on exceptions, where it could be ascertained whether his conception of the statute on such cases was correct. If he were wrong the case could come back to him or someone else and the motion be disposed of Lawyer Mackay and the district attorney will agree upon the form of a bill of exceptions, to be first submitted to Judge Bond for his approval and then argued before the Supreme court.

G. A. R.---INSTALLATION---W. R. C.

Woman Who Installed W. R. C. Says Men Would Not Be "Sawing Wood" if Patriotic.

INSTALLING OFFICER STETSON.

The officers of Paul Revere Post, G. A. R., and Paul Revere Woman's Relief Corps were publicly installed last evening at Faxon hall in the presence of a large gathering of members and friends of the two organizations, including the Legion of Spanish War Veterans and the Ladies' Aid Society.

The exercises opened ar 6.30 with a supper which was served in the lower hall. At the conclusion of this pleasing duty an adjournment was made to the upper hall where the two installations took place.

The officers of Paul Revere Post were first installed by Warren E. Stetson of Middleboro, past assistant adjutant general, assisted by Comrade W. McAllister of G. W. Price Post 8 as officer of the Day.

The cermony adopted by the installing officer was not confined strictly to the manual, but was a pleasing innovation. He first stationed members of the W. R. C. in the officers' chairs, and as the officers' took their new chairs they first saluted the occupant and then the officer of the day, the latter conducting the woman relieved to a seat and saluting. Music by the Lord Family added greatly to the effectiveness of the ceremony, and pleasure of the evening.

Between the two installations little Louis and Ethel Monaghan, pupils of Prof. Lord played as a duett patriotic airs which met with great favor.

The installations of the officers of Paul Revere Womans Relief Corps was preformed by Mrs. Mary E. Holbrook of South Weymouth assisted by Mrs. Addie Raymond of East Weymouth.

The special guests of the corps were Commander Hersey. Past Assistant Adjutant General Stetson, Officer of the Day McAllister, and Rev. E. N. Hardy.

The same idea as at the Post installation was followed, but was enriched by a salute to the flag, and the part taken by the color bearers.

President Litchfield presented, Mrs. Holbrook, the installation officer, with a bon-bon dish, and bouquet of flowers, and Mrs. Raymond who assisted, a bouquet of flowers. Mrs. Hayden also received a bouquet from an unknown admirer.

The members of the W. R. C. presented Mrs. Hayden, the retiring efficient president, through the installing officer, with a gold watch chain for the neck.

Installing Officer Stetson, a son of the late David B. Stetson of Quincy, said that he still cherished Quincy his old boyhood home, and kept in touch with it, but there had been wonderful changes in Quincy as in the world at large. He spoke of the expansion and and growing importance of the United States, and the Revolution and Rebellion which made it possible.

Mrs. Holbrook in her speech said the amount of patriotic work which the W. R. C. was doing was astonishing, many were not aware how much was being done. The corps should have the assistance of all Quincy people. She had heard that many Quincy men were sawing wood, and said they would not be sawing wood if they were patriotic. She did not say how they should show their patriotism, whether by preventing the long coal strike, or in revolt against the coal barons and coal dealers.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johnanna Soderham, of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

MERCILESS CRITICISM

Directed at Dr Kinney by Miss Richardson's Counsel

SARCASM AND INSINUATION

As to Her Professional Ability, Honesty and Motives In the Case—Claims That Client's Mother Showed No Symptoms of Poisoning

Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 10.—The defense in the Richardson alleged poisoning case rested yesterday. Judge Bosson then heard Lawyer Bartlett, in behalf of the defendant, and at the close of a two hours' address, which was alike able in argument and scathing in sarcasm, adjourned the court until today.

Lawyer Bartlett, in his summing up for the defense, aimed his argumment at the vital point in the government's case—whether or not any crime had been committed. He cited cases in his own practice, showing that the question of probable cause arises only after the establishment of the fact that a crime has been committed. The government's principal witness, Dr. Kiuney, Mr. Bartlett attacked with all his well known craft. She first treated Mrs. Richardson in September. Then the patient was treated by Dr. Bond and Dr. Lawrence. It was Dec. 12 when Mrs. Richardson again "fell into the hands of that Kinney woman."

Dr. Kinney's course in the whole matter Lawyer Bartlett mercilessly criticised. Dr. Kinney describes a condition of collapse. Collapse from arsenical poisoning is a fatal stage. Dr. Kinney administered no antidotes. Dr. Kinney allowed two and perhaps three cases of acute arsenical poisoning to occur without removing the patient from the poisonous surroundings. She took four days to find the police. When she had an appointment with Chief Sackett she didn't keep it. Dr. Kinney's professional ability, her honesty and her motives in the case were alike targets for Lawyer Bartlett's sarcasm and insinuation.

Dr. Kinney, who sat within the bar enclosure, was very nervous during the first part of his arraignment of her course. Once she cried a little, but soon she faced her tormentor again with set and determined face, and did not wince when Mr. Bartlett launched his fiercest shafts at her failure to secure analysis of ejecta from the alleged victim's stomach or kidneys, or of the changed medicines.

Returning to the question whether there was arsenical poisoning, the lawyer held that the burning symptoms had been suffered by Mrs. Richardson for a long time. He emphasized the fact that the person whose life the government alleges was attempted, was in ill-health, a nervous wreck, virtually insane. Dr. Chipman examined the woman, "poisoned" on the day before, with full knowledge of all Dr. Kinney had seen, mistrusted and treated, and found her suffering from no symptoms of arsenical poisoning. Certain analysis which should have shown arsenic or arsenical poisoning had there been, showed no trace of this poison.

Regarding the seizure of packets of powders from the person of the defendant, her counsel said that there were four put in evidence which on analysis were found to contain phenacetine, not bromide, which was what the powders were supposed to contain; phenacetine in one or two grain powders not a medicinal dose; a headache-curing coal-tar preparation, and not the sedative sodium bromide. "I don't know what it means," said Mr. Baretlett, "but where there is bromide in the evidence we have phenacetine in the exhibits."

As to the arsenic found in one packet taken from the defendant's person, her counsel declared, "I don't care if there's six grains, or six barrels of arsenic in my house. If you don't prove that any of it is in my system then there has been no crime." On Professor Wood's expert evidence that the excretion from the kidneys will almost inevitably show arsenic, if arsenic has been taken into the system even in non-poisonous doses, Mr. Bartlett laid special stress, holding that the failure to find traces of arsenic shows conclusively that no arsenic has entered Mrs. Richardson's system.

In closing Mr. Bartlett again defined his purpose in asking a hearing in the lower court. He had massed his case on one point, that no crime had been committed as alleged. Against the evidence of Dr. Kinney he placed that of five physicians; against the evidence of Dr. Davenport he placed that of Professor Wood and Dr. Vickery. The preponderance was in his favor, he claimed; and, without going into the question of probable cause, he asked that the defendant be discharged.

At the close of Mr. Bartlett's argument counsel was called in conference with the court, and a recess until today was later announced.

Americans Suspected of Smuggling

St. Johns, Jan. 10.—The cruiser Fiona has been dispatched to Fortune bay, where, it is alleged, American fishing vessels are smuggling from St. Pierre, as well as supplying French fishermen with herring for bait in defiance of the colonial regulations. The Fiona will enforce the law vigorously.

Against Hobson's Retirement

Washington, Jan. 10.—The naval affairs committee of the house yesterday decided not to report the bill authorizing the transfer of Naval Constructor Hobson to the retired list.

THE TROLLEY SCRAMBLE

Will Be an Important Problem For Connecticut Solons to Handle

Hartford, Jan. 10.—Considerable interest is manifested to see what attitude the general assembly will take toward the flood of petitions for street railway franchises. Although it was supposed that nearly all the desirable routes had already been pre-empted, the scramble for trolley charters is greater this year than it has ever been. Some of the projects are simply wildcat ventures; others are speculative schemes whose promoters hope to convert into cash at some future period; and many, of course, are strictly legitimate enterprises. A very strong public sentiment is developing that the legislature should exercise the greatest discrimination and caution in acting on the pending petitions.

A considerable sentiment is also growing to the effect that an annual franchise tax should be imposed on the trolley charters. It is argued that if the trolley franchises were not valuable there would be no such scramble for them, and that what is worth struggling for is worth paying for. Many citizens are freely expressing the conviction that the practice of Connecticut in giving away these valuable special privileges, without exacting an annual franchise tax from them, contravenes sound public policy. The trolley scramble will be one of the most important problems that the new legislature will have to handle.

Heavy Verdict Against State

Salem, Mass., Jan. 10.—The jury in the superior court yesterday returned a verdict for plaintiff in the suit of John Woodbury of Lynn against the commonwealth in the sum of $45,600 for land taken at Nahant for park purposes. The Metropolitan park commission took the land and offered Woodbury $18,180 for the property, which he refused, but he finally agreed to take $36,000. The parties representing the commonwealth, however, preferred to leave the matter to the court.

Hub to Have New Theatre

Boston, Jan. 10.—To Boston's growing list of theatres is to be added another to be known as the Copley. The plans call for a structure devoted to general uses as stores on the street floor. The auditorium plans call for a larger seating capacity than any theatre in Boston, with a stage 97 feet wide. The structural feature of the entire block will be its roof garden for theatrical purposes in summer, and for social events as a ballroom in cooler weather.

For Big Shipbuilding Plant

Boston, Jan. 10.—George Lawley, head of the ship and yacht building firm, is likely to acquire the recently abandoned property of the house of correction in South Boston, through being the higher of two bidders. This property adjoins the Lawley yard. The Lawley company's bid was $205,130, against $151,150, the other bid. On the supposition that the Lawleys will get the property, it is stated here that upon it will grow a big shipbuilding plant.

Shattuck Appeals to Higher Court

Boston, Jan. 10.—A fine of $75 was imposed on John N. Shattuck yesterday for larceny of $15 from Robert J. Yates, who gave it for what proved to be a bogus Masonic initiation. An appeal was taken and the case goes to the superior court. Police Inspector McGarr says there are 50 or 60 similar complaints on file at police headquarters, but that it is not thought likely others will be prosecuted.

Letter Carriers Did Wrong

Boston, Jan. 10.—In the United States district court yesterday Charles H. Webster, the elderly carrier, indicted on the charge of stealing letters containing money, entered a plea of guilty. He was one of the oldest men in the service. Sanford L. Desmond, a letter carrier connected with the Pittsfield postoffice, pleaded guilty of detaining and delaying letters. Sentence in both cases was deferred.

More Pay For Conductors

Boston, Jan. 10.—An increase in wages of conductors on the entire New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad system went into effect today. The men running less than 120 miles a day receive $3.50, no increase; those running over 120 and up to 160, or on duty over 12 hours, $3.75; those running over 160 and up to 200 miles, $4; over 200 miles, $4.50; between Boston and New York, $4.75.

Killed by Fall From Truck

Greenwich, Conn., Jan. 10.—Gustave Kannabell, 50 years old, is held by the local police, who believe he can tell how Charles Kelly, 24, met his death yesterday. Both men drove here from West Farms, N. Y., and Kelley was thrown from a truck, receiving injuries from which he died a short time later. It is said both men were under the influence of liquor when they arrived here.

General Demand For Higher Wages

Boston, Jan. 10.—From what street railroad men say a general demand for a raise in wages, to take effect March 1, is to be made on all street railways of eastern and central Massachusetts. This action was decided upon at a recent meeting here at which representatives of the unions on each road were present.

More Coal For Boston

Boston, Jan. 10.—For the second day since the end of the coal strike there failed to arrive any coal by water in Boston yesterday. Today, however, the first craft in a fleet bearing something like 75,000 tons of anthracite arrived and much soft coal is also on the way.

Bowser Tests Theory

He Tries to Learn Whether Freezing Water Rids It of Its Impurities

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

AFTER dinner the other evening Mrs. Bowser suggested that they make an evening call on a neighbor. Mr. Bowser laid aside his paper and replied:

"You might go over alone if you wish. I have a little matter on hand that will probably keep me busy until midnight."

"You—you aren't going to upset the house again with any experiments?" she asked.

"My dear woman, I have no recollection of upsetting this house in any way or manner. I have made several experiments for the benefit of humanity,

"AS I UNDERSTAND IT, YOU ARE HUNGRY?"

but I haven't brought about any particular calamity in so doing. Neither shall I do so tonight."

"Can't you put it off until another night?"

"Do you wish me to delay a matter that is life or death to thousands of people? I do not think you do. We can go into Green's any time, while I may have to wait a whole month for another night so favorable to my researches."

"Well, then, what is it?" queried Mrs. Bowser as she surrendered her plans and sat down, with a sigh.

"You are aware, I presume, that water freezes in the winter?"

"I think I have heard so, unless it is kept on a hot stove."

"It has been claimed and denied that when water becomes ice it cleanses itself of all impurities. There are savants who declare that swamp water, full of germs of all sorts, becomes drinkable as soon as it freezes. It is a worldwide question and one as yet unsolved. Is there any reason why I should not solve it myself this very night and have the credit due a discoverer?"

"But haven't scores or hundreds of others failed?"

"Didn't scores or hundreds of others fail to practically apply steam? Yes, numbers of men have failed in this, but that fact should spur me on to succeed. Who can say, then, that it was not left to Bowser to solve a problem that has vexed the wisest heads? It is a clear, freezing night. I will prepare a pan of water and set it out on the back fence."

"But there will be trouble over it, and you will blame me," she protested.

"Trouble? Blame you? Woman, don't be silly. I never get into trouble, and I never blame you. If the experiment fails, I shall simply try again. I will now proceed with the experiment."

Mr. Bowser descended to the kitchen and filled a pan with water. Then he proceeded to corrupt the water with garbage of various sorts. When he had made it entirely unfit and undrinkable, he placed the pan on a box in the back yard and left it to a freezing temperature to do the rest. He had just re-entered the house when a tramp rang the basement bell and asked for something to eat.

"An idea occurs to me," observed Mr. Bowser as he went forward to size up the caller. "Come in, my man. As I understand it, you are hungry?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"How long since you had anything to eat?"

"Not since 8 o'clock this morning."

"A matter of, say, twelve hours. Are you as hungry as you were in August when you had been twelve hours without food?"

"More so, sir."

"But you can't be. It is a well known law of science that heat expands and cold contracts. Since the cold weather came your stomach should have contracted at least one-third. Such being the case, you cannot suffer with the pangs of hunger as you did in hot weather."

"What's your little racket, old man?" asked the tramp as he backed away, with suspicion in his looks.

"I am seeking the solution of a scientific problem, and this case of yours has come up as a side issue. If iron contracts and expands according to the weather, why not the human stomach. Egad, but here is a new question. Have you realized since the frosts came that you could not hold as much food as before?"

"Don't try to stand me up for a fool, cully," answered the tramp. "Me stomick is all right and will hold as much grub as I kin git to put into it. Do I git a bite to eat here?"

"I'd like to discuss this question a little first," replied Mr. Bowser. "If there was a shrinkage or contraction, do you think you would have realized it? Can you recall that on any particularly hot day last summer you devoured an inordinate quantity of miscellaneous"—

"G'wan wid yez fur a duffer!" interrupted the tramp as he withdrew and slammed the door after him. When too late, Mr. Bowser got mad and rushed out to the gate to lay hands on him. A visit to the back yard somewhat consoled him, however. The water in the pan had begun to freeze, and he figured that another hour would show whether his experiment was a success or a failure. He entered the house rubbing his hands and wearing a smile and presently remarked to Mrs. Bowser:

"It is a matter with scores of ramifications. There is food for thought here. There are problems to engage one's thoughts for years to come."

"Especially if the number of tramps holds out," she quietly replied.

"Woman, don't try to be sarcastic. You are not in sympathy with me in this experiment. You have never been in any, but you cannot and shall not discourage me. There are wives who are proud and glad to be of assistance to their husbands, but you are not one of them. You would rather see me fail than succeed. You would rather I should be locally known as Bowser the kicker than to have the world singing my praises as a public benefactor."

"I merely criticise your fads and whims."

"My fads? My whims? You add insult to injury. There is not a man in all this world more clear of fads and whims. Here is a case in point. I am perhaps on the eve of making the most important discovery of the century, and yet you"—

Mr. Bowser did not finish. The wail of cats suddenly came from the back yard, and he ran downstairs and out to see if his experiment was being interfered with. The cats fled at his approach, and he found the pan all right. The water had turned to ice, and now he had to resolve it back to find if the impurities had been eliminated. But he didn't carry it to the end. He had just picked up the pan when there came a rain of cans, bottles and stale vegetables, and he went down under the storm like a giant oak uprooted at last. There was a long minute in which he was unconscious and lying on the frosty grass. Then in seeming far-away tones he heard Mrs. Bowser saying to the cook:

"We shall have to take him by the legs and drag him into the kitchen, and if his head falls off we can't help it. Poor man! I wish that he could have lived to see how nice these potato peelings and coffee grounds look frozen into his ice, but he will never, never know!"

GAUNTLET IS THROWN

Rival Labor Organizations at War In Lynn

OF INTEREST TO SHOE CRAFT

Cutters' Assembly of Knights of Labor Takes Action Which Is Interpreted to Mean a Prolonged Contest With Boot and Shoe Workers

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 10.—The first pitched battle between the local Cutters' union of the Knights of Labor, known as Cutters' assembly No. 3662, K. of L., and the Boot and Shoe Workers' union began here late yesterday afternoon, when the Cutters' union agent ordered a strike in the factory of Walter H. Tuttle upon the refusal of a demand for increased wages by the proprietor. Tuttle had just been granted the union stamp of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, which fact, it is said, was taken advantage of by the Knights of Labor organization to demand an increase in wages. Only eight Knights of Labor cutters quit work in all, but the number is sufficient to test the strength of both organizations provided extreme measures are resorted to in the battle for supremacy that is about to be waged among the union shoemakers of Lynn.

The agent of the Cutters' assembly, Knights of Labor, presented a new price list for cutting shoes in the Tuttle factory, but the proprietor stated that it would mean an increase of 30 percent in this department alone, which he could not afford to pay, and rejected the list, the strike following immediately after. He stated that some of his fast cutters could earn $18 a week at the present time with an eight-hour working day, while some others, who are slow workmen, could not earn so much. He stated that his men did not want the strike, but were forced to the step through their membership in the Knights of Labor.

Members of the Cutters' assembly state that the fact of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union granting the union stamp to the proprietor of the factory had nothing whatever to do with the strike or the demand for an increase in wages at this time, which statement, however, is denied by the members of the local Boot and Shoe Workers' union, who claim that the Knights of Labor cutters are bent upon forcing the fighting and put in their price list yesterday because Tuttle was granted the union stamp.

When the union stamp of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union was first introduced in the Lynn shoe factories some three years ago, an agreement was entered into between that organization and the Knights of Labor cutters whereby each organization should recognize the union card of the other, and the cutters were to remain a separate and distinct organization until the Boot and Shoe Workers' union had 250 cutters in union stamp shops in Lynn, when the cutters should form a local union in that organization. This mark was about reached the past week, when the union stamp was granted to some additional proprietors of shoe factories. Consequently the Cutters' assembly of the Knights of Labor called a mass meeting of all shoe cutters in the city, over 700 in number, on Tuesday evening, when it was stated that the agreement had been broken by the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, whereupon the cutters' meeting repudiated the entire agreement, and declared that its members would be no longer bound by it.

The Boot and Shoe Workers' union has local unions in shoe manufacturing towns and cities all over the country, where the help in all departments of factories having the union stamp are members of the organization, and as far as known, Lynn is the only city where the cutters have maintained a distinct organization outside of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union. Now that the fight is on here, it is likely to be a bitter one.

A prominent member of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union stated last evening that his organization, he expected, would get Boot and Shoe Workers' union cutters to take the places of the striking Knights of Labor cutters in the Tuttle factory, provided it became absolutely necessary to do so. The Cutters' union was never stronger in Lynn than at present and its members are undoubtedly prepared for a prolonged combat with the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, should the gauntlet already thrown down be taken up by the latter organization. The Boot and Shoe Workers' union, however, has a strike assistance fund of over $60,000, which makes it strong financially. Meanwhile the shoe manufacturers of the city are not affected in the least.

Mail Service Hampered

New York, Jan. 10.—During the continuance of the Venezuelan blockade the steamers of the Red D line will not run to Caracas. Venezuelan mails will be carried by the Porto Rico line to San Juan, P. R., and thence by a small vessel of the same line to Curacoa, from which place they will be taken to Venezuelan ports by a United States war vessel.

The Hunter-Fitzgerald Tragedy

New Orleans, Jan. 10.—Consul General McNally of Guatemala arrived here last night on his way to Washington. He denies any expression or act in connection with the Hunter-Fitzgerald tragedy and believes the killing was a duel between enemies.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Fuel Situation Appears to Be the Chief Obstacle In Prosperity's Path

New York, Jan. 10.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Collections are notably prompt at all leading centres, bearing testimony to the strong financial position of the nation's industries at the opening of the new year. Distribution of merchandise is heavy and manufacturers are pressed for prompt delivery. Orders for spring goods come forward freely and in many lines there is more than a sample business in fall weights.

The fuel situation is still the one serious element, rendering abnormally high the cost of manufacturing, and restricting the purchasing power of almost the entire population. There is little interruption to work because of labor disputes, but many operations are interrupted by the delay in transit of needed materials. Railway freight rates were advanced and one result will be a loss of exportation from eastern cities, the traffic being deflected to New Orleans.

New England producers of footwear are busy on spring orders and a few deliveries have already been made, although shipments are light in these lines as yet. Manufacturers have completed forwarding of winter goods, except as to supplementary orders that have continued to arrive.

No new features have appeared in the domestic demand for dry goods. Home buying is only for current requirements, distant needs receiving little attention.

Prayers Failed to Cure

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 10.—Mrs. Louis Hanson died yesterday after having been treated by prayers of so-called elders in a society which has obtained a firm foothold in Ithaca, known as "The Church of the Living God." She was a devoted member of the sect and despite the entreaties of her husband and daughters she refused to be treated by a physician. This is the second recent death of members of the society in Ithaca who have been thus treated.

Holocaust Narrowly Averted

London, Ont., Jan. 10.—About 5 o'clock last evening a boy working in a stamping mill here struck a match to light the gas. He dropped the burning match and it fell into a vat of oil. With a report like a cannon the oil went up in a sheet of flame. About 500 persons were in the building and in a terrible crush, scorched and smoke begrimed, they reached the street, hatless and coatless, but none seriously injured. The loss is $300,000.

A Move In Right Direction

Chicago, Jan. 10.—To determine whether a conspiracy has existed to force up the price of coal Judge McEwen last night, on the petition of State Attorney Dineen, summoned a venire of 75 men, of whom 23 were selected for a special grand jury today. Small dealers are not the mark at which the state attorney aims. The names on the list of witnesses are those of mine owners and wholesale dealers in coal.

Fire Fighters on Strike

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 10.—Tampa's entire fire department is on a strike and the city is without fire protection. The firemen organized a union recently. Chief Harris discharged three men and the union made a demand on the council that the men be reinstated. The firemen demanded immediate action and when this was refused all the men were ordered out and abandoned the stations.

England Flooded With Immigrants

London, Jan. 10.—The publication of Board of Trade returns, which show that the stream of alien immigration is still increasing, at the rate of 10,000 persons a year, is very generally commented upon in the newspapers this morning and has produced demands for the enactment of legislation to deal with the matter.

Mrs Roosevelt Entertains

Washington, Jan. 10.—Mark Hambourg, the pianist, gave a musical at the White House last night, which was enjoyed by a brilliant assemblage of 200 persons. It was the first of a series of Friday evening musicals which Mrs. Roosevelt proposes to give during January.

Setback For Pretender

Madrid, Jan. 10.—A dispatch from Melilla, Morocco, says that Bu Hamara, the pretender to the throne, has been defeated near Fez and has retreated to Taza. Several more tribes have abandoned the revolutionary movement and have submitted to the sultan.

To Accept Gift of $1,500,000

Philadelphia, Jan. 10.—Andrew Carnegie's offer of $1,500,000 for the erection of 30 branch free library buildings in this city was yesterday formally accepted by the board of trustees of the Philadelphia free library.

Great Output of Coal

Reading, Pa., Jan. 10.—The daily coal run in Reading company's mines this week averaged between 1500 and 1600 cars. It is expected that the output of the company's mines for the week will aggregate 270,000 tons.

Plague's Ravages Continue

Mazatlan, Mex., Jan. 10.—Thirty-seven people are in the lazarettos and six deaths occurred yesterday. Many people have left the city and gone to live on the islands nearby.

MARCONI ON HIS GREAT TRIUMPH

Inventor Tells How He Will Revolutionize Telegraphy.

SENDS FIFTEEN WORDS A MINUTE

He Says Double the Number Can Be Got Off With Proper Sending Key. Two Thousand Words Have Been Flashed Across the Atlantic by Wireless Telegraph—Guarantees Secrecy of Messages In Transit. Transatlantic Passengers Can Have a Daily News Bulletin Service.

On the bleak, frozen headland at Table Head Station, Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, which is guarded night and day against attempts to invade the secrets of wireless intercontinental telegraphy, I found Guglielmo Marconi, to whose bare little room at the foot of his four wooden towers kings, queens, princes and prime ministers have been sending their congratulations in reply to messages flashed across the surface of the Atlantic ocean, writes James Creelman in the New York World.

As he stood beneath the great loose harp of fifty wires hanging from a cable stretched across the tops of the towers, he waved his hand upward and said:

"There it is. Powerful currents of electricity sent into those fifty wires intermittently from the power house below start forth the electro magnetic waves which cross the ocean in one-ninetieth of a second and record themselves on similar wires at the Poldhu station on the coast of Cornwall, 2,400 miles away. Nothing can stop or divert them. They will go through or around any obstruction. Like sound waves, they do not have to go in a straight line. The messages are received through a telephone or are printed automatically in Morse letters as clearly as though the stations were only a mile apart."

Marconi seemed fearful of talking to the public lest he might be suspected of boasting, and, besides, the bitter war waged upon him by the desperate ocean cable companies has made him cautious and suspicious, but after awhile he spoke freely.

"Wireless telegraphy across the ocean is now as practical as cabling,' he said. "We have sent more than 2,000 words in all from Glace Bay to Poldhu and have reached a speed of fifteen words a minute, which, considering our clumsy sending apparatus—a mere wooden lever to connect and disconnect the current—indicates what we can do when we substitute a sending key designed for speed. With a proper sending key we can easily get off thirty words a minute, and I shall be surprised if we do not soon send at a higher rate.

"The Atlantic cables average about twenty-one words a minute in their regular work, I believe. And there is this vital difference in the two systems of transoceanic telegraphing: As the cable grows longer the rate of speed in sending messages decreases, while distance makes no difference in the rate at which we can send by the wireless system."

"Can you send more than one message at a time from the same station?"

"Yes. I have already demonstrated that we can send two at a time for a short distance. Whether more than two messages can be transmitted simultaneously by the same wires I am unable to say; probably not. But separate stations can be set up and worked in the same neighborhood without interfering with each other, so that our capacity for sending messages can be multiplied indefinitely."

"How can you prevent other people with similar wireless apparatus from reading the messages you send from continent to continent? The secrecy of telegraphic communication is vital."

The sudden flash in the cold gray blue eyes showed that Mr. Marconi understood the importance of the question. It was the point of attack selected by the cable companies in their combined attempt to discredit him.

"With properly tuned instruments," he said, "we can make the reading of our transatlantic messages very difficult. To read a wireless message an outside station would have to be in exact tune or vibratory unison with our stations at the same moment. It would cost a rival not less than $50,000 to try the experiment on the smallest scale. Besides, we can arrange our apparatus so that the tune or rate of vibration can be automatically changing every moment at the same rate in sending and receiving stations on each side of the ocean.

"Those who talk about the danger of having our messages read by outsiders do not understand the subject. When I was in England, I offered to pay a large sum of money to any one who could pick up one of our wireless ocean messages after notifying me that it was to be attempted, and I even offered to lend apparatus to any one who desired to try the experiment. No one took up my offer.

"But even if it were possible to read our signals—and I do not admit that it is a contingency to be feared—it would be the simplest matter in the world to use a constantly changing secret code between our stations, and if secrecy were actually impossible there are thousands of messages to be sent by a cheap system of telegraphy which are not necessarily secret in their nature. If it were not so, postal cards would not be used so extensively. If a man in New York wants to send a sailing date or a birthday message or any other such communication to a man in London, what does he care whether his message is read by an outside operator or not?

"Remember that it only costs us $200,000 to establish a wireless transatlantic system and that our rates can be made cheap enough to attract an immense volume of telegraphic business which is prohibited now by the high cable rates. Under my contract with the Canadian government I must send ordinary messages across the Atlantic at not more than 10 cents a word and government and press messages at not more than 5 cents a word. In time the rate will probably be lowered so that it will be no more costly to send a message from New York to London than it now is to send the same message from New York to Philadelphia.

"It must not be forgotten that since we have been sending messages across the ocean from Glace Bay to Poldhu neither our wireless stations at Penzance and Nantucket nor the twenty-one ships with wireless apparatus plying the Atlantic have been disturbed by these messages. The truth is that when an operator of the wireless telegraph apparatus receives some blind signal due to a mere elemental disturbance he is apt to conclude that he has received part of a secret code message from a Marconi station.

"There is nothing in this talk about outside stations reading our messages. During my experimental work I have used untuned apparatus a good deal of the time, and it is possible that messages sent in that way, without the slightest attempt or desire to make them secret, have been picked up outside. That was in nearby work on the outside. But no transatlantic message sent from Glace Bay has been picked up."

"But how about telegraphing overland? Are there no earth currents in the way, no complications due to the existing system of wire telegraphy?"

"It is as easy to telegraph without wires overland as oversea. I can send wireless messages from New York to San Francisco as easily as from Glace Bay to Poldhu. We are now arranging to establish a wireless system to connect Alaska with the United States and British Columbia. We shall also send messages when desirable from the station here to our new wireless station on Cape Cod."

"Have you found no indications that there is a limit to the distance of wireless communication?"

"None. It is simply a question of increasing the power of the apparatus."

"Then you will be able to send messages from the Pacific coast to Japan and China?"

"Undoubtedly; but eager as I am to try messages across the Pacific ocean I must complete my transatlantic system first. The messages which have been communicated from Glace Bay to Poldhu have required only a part of the power of which this station is capable. There is space between the four towers for four sets of the wires from which electric vibrations are propelled to the coast of Cornwall. Thus far we have used only one set of fifty wires. There is room for three more sets. My problem now is to find out exactly how little power is needed on each side of the ocean to transmit messages. The sending of messages having been reduced to a simple and practical basis, both from the standpoint of cost and speed, it is important to know by actual tests the amount of electrical energy necessary to signal clearly to any given distance.

"The station at Poldhu is less powerful than this station. For that reason we have confined our work to sending messages from America to England only. When I go to Poldhu, the power of that station will be increased to the degree necessary for sending, and then we shall be ready to accept messages from the public."

"Does light or darkness make any difference to wireless ocean telegraphy?"

"Yes, but it is only a question of power. The electric vibrations crossing the Atlantic are something like 50 per cent stronger at night than in the brightest daytime."

"The heat of the sun probably?"

"No, it is not heat. It is light.

"There is one use for our ocean system which will appeal to the traveling public. Our wireless apparatus on ships has been working perfectly for some time. Every Cunard steamer, for instance, is equipped.

"It will be quite easy to send every day from this Glace Bay station a condensed bulletin of news to each steamer crossing the Atlantic. This daily news service can be posted up for the information of the passengers. A regular news service can be supplied to ships at sea at a cost of 10 cents a word.

"The principal news events of the world can be furnished to all vessels equipped with our wireless apparatus at a cost averaging perhaps $5 a day.

"If officers of ships which do not pay for the news service think they can pick up our messages, let them try it."

His system, Mr. Marconi feels, represents not only universal intercommunication, but also represents prices which even the poorest can pay. Although the starting price will be 10 cents a word for ordinary messages and 5 cents a word for press messages, it is probable that before long the rates will drop to a point at which it will be possible for the poor immigrant in New York or Chicago to communicate freely with his relatives in Ireland, Germany, Italy or Russia.

Encouraging Spying.

A somewhat remarkable textbook for the use of young German soldiers has just been published. It deliberately instructs soldiers to inform their superiors of all kinds of offenses committed by their comrades. Services of this character are stated in the textbook to be a high duty and worthy of commendation. If the soldier hears anything derogatory of his officers or the kaiser, he is to fetch a policeman.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medinineas directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. For sale by all druggists.

—The Christian Endeavor World tells of a parsimonious rich man who was gently upbraided by his pastor for giving so little to benevolent causes. His reply was equal to his purse-tight convictions: "Pastor, I know that I do not give much, but if you knew how much it hurts me when I do give, you would wonder how I give anything."

—Mr. Morgan gave each of his employes an amount equal to a year's salary for a New Year's present. There are no vacancies in his office just at present.—Somerville Journal.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ One sentence in the address of Mayor Collins of Boston contains a pregnant bit of political philosophy. "We are all charged," he says, "by our constituents to serve the city—not ourselves. It is a contract of our own making." The truth that a man who seeks or accepts office voluntarily assumes responsibilities could not be better put.—Providence Journal.

☞ It did not last long—this pretense of the coal operators that they were giving away coal that other people were then wickedly making money off from. Their pronouncement that the addition of fifty cents a ton "might last till January" seems to have proved no exaggeration. Now they come right out into the open and inform the public that they are going to sell to the fellow who will pay the most. In other words, if there's a dollar to be made, they want it. That is human nature, but it is in singular contrast to the altruistic rubbish that was shoved at us at first. The fact is, and it will stick out plainer as time goes by, that the strike has been worth millions to the coal mine owners. They pose as victims of Mr. Mitchell and his organization, but whose victims are all the rest of us? Which is the harder lot—to be victims of a crowd who push you right into millions, or victims of a crowd who take what you have got, provided it is enough to be worth their while?—Hartford Courant.

☞ Many of our friends who send items to newspapers appear to have forgotten that there is such a word in the English language as "woman." At least whenever they are to have a pink tea or a strawberry social they always say it will be given by the "ladies of such and such an organization." If they will look in the dictionary, they will find that the term "lady" does not mean the same as woman, but is given to those who have acquired certain graces of manner and character that unfortunately are not the possession of all women. When one writes a notice that the "ladies of the What-you-may-call-'em society will hold a baked-bean supper," the real effect is as much as to say that the women of this society, who are exceptionally refined and well-bred, will give, etc. That conveys the impression of a certain presumption. Are there many organizations in Franklin county, in Massachusetts, or in the United States, whose members would care to announce that they all possess the qualities of character that go to make up the real lady? The free use of the word lady in such connections also gives the idea that the impression had gotten abroad that the members of organization in question are women lacking these exceptional graces of character, and as if it therefore became necessary to stand up for them to protect them from the assaults of the jeering world, and announce that they are "ladies." "Woman" is a good word; it has dignity, but some people seem to be ashamed to use it. "Lady" is a superlative, and its incessant use leaves no term applicable to those whose exceptional beauty of manner and character deserve special recognition.—Greenfield Gazette.

There was increased interest with each meeting of the Week of Prayer at Wollaston, and last night a very large attendance.

PAY BIG BILLS.

Heavy Taxpayers of City of Quincy.

Assessments of Over $400.

There Are 111 in List and H. H. Faxon Has Rival.

Not for several years has any list of the heavy taxpayers of the City of Quincy been published, but the Ledger is able to present today a list of all those persons and corporations whose total tax is in excess of over $400. The tax rate of 1902 was $17.40, which represents a valuation of nearly $23,000.

Henry H. Faxon continues the largest taxpayer, but he now has a close rival in the Fore River Ship & Engine Co., which will surely come to the front in a few years. Next to Mr. Faxon, the second largest individual taxpayer is Mrs. Fannie C. Adams, wife of the late John Quincy Adams of the Mt. Wollaston farm.

Our second largest industry is the Tubular Rivet & Stud Co., while the railroad and street railway pay thousands.

"OUR BOYS."

Amateur Dramatics at Atlantic Prove a Great Hit.

The play, Our Boys, presented by Mr. Charles F. Merrick's Sunday school class in Music hall, Atlantic, last evening, was remarkably successful, and should have been a great satisfaction to Mr. Edward C. Bellows who has coached the characters in their several parts with true managerial skill.

The plot of the play centers around two young men. Talbot Champneys and Charles Middlewick, who met complications in their love affairs their unbending parents. Sir Geoffry Champneys a country magistrate, and Perkyn Middlewick of Devonshire House, a retired butterman. Violet Melrose an heiress, and Mary Melrose her poor cousin, are the objects of affection, and Belinda, a slave in a lodging house, mixes things up generally.

Poddles, and Kempster, the former Middlewick's butler, the latter Sir Geoffry's servent, are amusing machinery, and Clarissa Champneys, Sir Geoffry's sister is a maiden whose heart has not grown hard with her years.

Mr. Frank Coe as Talbot Champneys and Mr. William Moffat as Charles Middlewick, although impersonating men of widely different character, were equally graphic in their representations. Mr. Coe, having the more ludicrous part, was serenely stoic under the laughter he provoked, and Mr. Moffat proved himself well worth the love of his sweetheart, Violet.

Mr. Percival Hall made Sir Geoffry Champney's eratic temper shiveringly realistic for the poor son, and carries off the air of a country magistrate with graceful ease.

As Perkyn Middlewick, Mr. Winifred Ware kept the audience in constant laughter, his conception of the part was original and well portrayed.

Miss Lillian Waterhouse as Clarissa invested the part with her usual naturalness which never fails to win appreciation and praise.

Belinda, Mrs. Edward Bellows, was a sure cure for melancholia and such a dainty maid would be an acquisition to any family.

Miss Emma Curtin as Violet and Miss Beatrice Briggs as Mary Melrose, carried off their parts with instinctive talent, and their gowns were pretty and becoming. Mr. Russell Hammond made Poddles appear to be an exceptional butler, and Mr. David Moffat, as Kempster, was a shining example for the working class to follow.

During Acts II and III, six choir boys from St. Chrsostom's church sang "The Caddie Song" by Edith Noyes Porter. Their acting was uniform and spritely, and the costumes suggestive of the links. The music throughout the evening was furnished by Mrs. Green, Miss Abbie Green and Master Oliver Green.

The ushers were Mrs. Charles Cherrington, Miss Gertrude Hall, Miss Florence Wilson and Miss Emilie Gassett

It is predicted the weather for 1903 will be a great improvement over that of 1902, especially during the summer months. If the twelve days beginning at Christmas foretell the weather for the twelve months, the outlook is certainly encouraging, for out of the twelve days there were but two stormy ones; two cloudy; one with showers and clouds part of the day and seven clear perfect days.

Is There Iron in Your Blood

Great achievers, men and women who bring things to pass, obstacles or no obstacles, have an abundance of iron in their blood. They take the initiative; they push ahead, regardless of obstacles; they succeed.

There is no quality of character that gains more admiration and respect than that which enables a person to form a definite purpose and then concentrate all his energy in executing it. To possess and use this quality, it is necessary to be in a sound mental and physical condition, to have an abundance of iron in the blood, which gives stamina, vigor and endurance.

Peptiron ironizes the blood, nourishes, strengthens and steadies the nerves and produces the above result. It is a new and thoroughly scientific preparation, combining iron with the best tonics and nutrients; is agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and readily assimilated, and has the great advantage of not causing constipation nor injuring the teeth.

Peptiron is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50c. or $1 per box. By C. I. HOOD CO., proprietors, Hood's Sarsaparilla, Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.

NO COMPLAINTS.

H. H. Faxon Challenges Mayor to Name a Single One.

Editor of the Daily Ledger:

The Mayor in his inaugural address criticized my dump located on Valley street, and remarked that "various complaints had been made of its existence at this place." I challenge Mayor Bryant, or his cowardly Board of Health, to name a person who has stated that the dump in question has been offensive in any way.

In connection, I will remind Mr. Bryant that it would have been well if he had given more attention to the condition of the city dump located about fifteen rods from mine on the same street. Last summer I noticed a fishy smell emanating from the city dump and, upon investigation, found a alf barrel of partially decayed herring which had been dumped there. With a fair wind this odor may have reached the nostrils of some of the Mayor's political friends at City Hall, and led them to imagine that it proceeded from my dump.

However, it certainly was the duty of the Board of Health to have notified me if any complaints were made. When the Mayor and his advisers get their washing machines in operation, in the buildings which the administration has caused to be erected for the disposal of the vault and cesspool matter, the taxpayers will find that the expensive scheme will prove a failure.

Henry H. Faxon.

Quincy, January 10, 1903.

League Standing.

The games this week in the Norfolk County League between the Granite City and Braintree clubs put the former team among the high lines again. The North Quincy's still lead the Granite City in billiards by one point, and the Braintree leads the Granite City at pool by two points.

At whist the Granite City leads with five points, Braintree coming second with two points. The North Quincy's continue to hold first place on bowling but the strong game that the Granite City have been putting up of late they will have to look out or they will drop to second place.

On total points, the result places Granite City ahead with 17 points, North Quincy second with 14 points, and Braintree third with 12 points.

The following table shows the standing to date:

	Billiards.	Pool.	Whist.	Bowling.	Total.
Granite City,	4	3	5	5	17
North Quincy,	5	1	1	7	14
Braintree,	1	6	2	3	12

Ties—Granite City and Braintree at whist. Granite City and North Quincy at whist.

THE UNITY CLUB.

Entertaining Papers at Meeting at Wollaston.

The program of the Unity club, considering "Man and his environment, was continued last evening in the Wollaston Unitarian vestry after nearly a month's vacation. The audience was good for a cold night and remained until the end notwithstanding the chilly air of the vestry room.

President Parlin presided and after Mrs. Bennett had been selected to serve as secretary, in the enforced absence of Mrs. Smith, he spoke briefly on the subject for the evening "Creation Myths," introducing Mrs. F. H. Bishop as director.

The first paper by Mrs. Parlin took up the "Myths from the East." After explaining the difference between a Myth, which is a story of some fact or phenomenon of experience, and a legend which is a local story of a marvellous nature, the speaker took up in turn the creation myths of the eastern nations. From Central Asia the myth originated and was carried over the world as the nations migrated. Whence the earth? whence man? are the great questions that have always been deeply considered.

The Chaldeans have interesting stories of the origin of things, one of which is not unlike the Genesis story. The Babylonians too have handed down in their clay books, written with cuneiform characters, accounts of the formation of the earth.

The Hebrews wrote the Genesis story after their return from Babylon therefore we find certain similarities between the creation stories of these two people. The Genesis story is a work of art, free from wild exaggeration, though there are contradictions in it.

The Persians conceived of the world as ruled by Ormuzd, King of Light, and Ahriman, the Prince of Darkness. These two, the Good and the Bad are eternally striving for mastery.

Creation stories are found in the Vedas, the ancient sacred literature of the Brahmans. The Japanese, too, have fanciful tales of how the monsters are driven out by the God and man.

Mr. Avery Bennett of Harvard read a clever paper, devoid of monatony on "The Myths of the South." In Egypt we find such a confusion of gods, goddesses and sacred animals that it is difficult even for the priests to keep them separate. They claim the greatest antiquity of any people. It is in Greece that the most interesting mythical tales are preserved.

Hesiod has written them down and Ovid the Latin merely rewrites them in Italy. The story of the formation of earth out of Chaos, the coming of light, the race of Titans offspring of Heaven and earth the birth of Zeus who afterwards conquers old Chronas and sets up the kingdom on Mt. Olympus, all this makes fascinating reading. It was Prometheus who made man from clay, stole fire from the gods and gave it to man. For man Pandora was created. When the earth became peopled Zues flooded the land as a punishment. Then there are many interesting stories of metamorphoses how the various tree were formed from men, hyacinth, cypress and laurel.

Mr. W. E. Simmons spoke of "Myths from the North and West." There is a similarity between the stories of Germany and of Scandinavia, due to the fact that the peopies were related. The giants were men of huge size whose footsteps caused the valleys. They warred with the Gods by whom they were defeated. They thought the Gods created man out of wood and that the sky was put over the earth as a covering.

The American Indians have tales of great simplicity. The Chippewas thought of the Great Spirit as a bird, dwelling in the pipe stone cliffs. With his claws the Great Maniton could lift two buffaloes. The serpent came one day to the nest in which was one egg. The Maniton hearing a noise returned with a rock in his claws, which fell, breaking the egg and releasing man He awoke one day to find woman beside him and together they went to the prairies. These Indians also tell of a flood.

Mrs. Crane for the music committee presented Miss Bicknell who sang "The Slave Song" and "The Spring Song" responding to an encore. Miss Monroe pleased all with a difficult study for the pianoforte.

Dr. Johnson read Flashlight No. 4. The next meeting Jan. 23 is in charge of Mrs. J. H. Litchfield, subject "Local History."

—The hottest region on earth is the southeastern part of Persia, where it borders the gulf. For 40 consecutive days in July and August the temperature has been known not to fall lower than 100 degrees night or day.

The Pursuit Of Mr. Overalls

By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1902, by Charles W. Hooke

JOHN WILDE is a man of great wealth and restless energy, and he owns a newspaper called the Citizen, which is an organ of the common people. A fiery and erratic genius named Henry Bond was editor of the Sunday issue, and I was his assistant when the events here chronicled occurred.

Pardon me one moment while I introduce myself. I am a mild eyed, melancholy, lazy and generally incompetent fellow, having no appetite for a strenuous life and very little for any other sort. Upon the editorial staff of the hustling Citizen and assistant to Henry Bond I was as much misplaced as a Quaker in a swearing match. A spurious reputation for—well, I scarcely know what procured me the position, and I took it because I needed the money. Bond, whose geese were always swans, declared to Wilde that I was the greatest man in the two Americas.

One day an item of news drifted into the office to the effect that a horny handed son of toil had been refused admittance to the Museum of Art because he presented himself at its portal clad in his overalls. By the best of our information it was purely a question of dress. There was no claim that the man had been intoxicated or that his conduct had been open to objection.

"We've got to get hold of that man," said Bond, running his hand backward over his hair, which was so full of electricity that it always stood up straight and crackled every time it was touched. "There's a peach of a story in this case."

"Out of sight!" I responded, with enthusiasm.

"Take it right in hand," said Bond, making a movement as if he were passing the matter to me on a large platter. "It's our first page yarn for next Sunday."

I had no appreciation of the story nor any power of guessing what my chief desired, but I knew better than to ask questions. I sent for a reporter, and when he had come I laid the facts before him.

"Find this man and interview him," said I. "Get a photograph of him and of his wife and children, if he has any; also a view of the interior of his humble home, showing books on the table and some good pictures on the wall. He's a man, you understand, who appreciates art. Here's a card to a friend of mine who runs an art store. He'll lend you the pictures. You can get the books anywhere. Telephone me when you've found the man, and I'll send up a photographer."

It was early in the day when the reporter went upon this errand. About noon he telephoned that he was having trouble in his search, that all the papers in town were after the story and that some of them had as many as four or five men out on it. This was bad luck. We had supposed that our information was exclusive. I sent all the available reporters by way of re-enforcements and authorized the general of this little army to pay Mr. Overalls $10 if he would agree not to give his story to anybody else.

Mr. Overalls was not found that day. The next morning's papers had the story, but not the man. There was not even a description of him that savored of authenticity. He remained nothing but a suit of overalls, to which some of the papers added a decoration of machine oil or of whitewash.

This mysterious individual became the subject of a newspaper rivalry so keen that if I were to tell the simple truth about it here I should not be believed. Naturally I am not fully informed as to what the other papers did, but the Citizen employed three private detective agencies and at one time had more than fifty trained men at work on the case in addition to its own staff.

"YOU OUGHT TO BE ABLE TO DO THIS JOB YOURSELF."

"It's as much as our jobs are worth to get beaten on this story," said Bond to me upon the third day while we were at dinner. "We've got to find this man, and we've got to find him before anybody else does. This thing is costing us at least $500."

I gasped, as I always do at the mention of any considerable sum of money. Bond fell into an unusual silence which lasted until the coffee was served. Then he absentmindedly lighted two cigarettes and, holding one in his extended right hand and the other in his mouth, he said earnestly:

"You ought to be able to do this job yourself. You've written more detective stories than there have been crimes committed since Cain killed Abel. You've been thinking about this sort of thing all your life, and you ought to know just what to do."

The man who writes a detective story has the great advantage of knowing who did the deed, but I would not make such an observation to Bond. A lack of confidence is the unpardonable sin in his eyes. I began to speak in an assured tone, with the air of an expert. This sort of thing is not lying with me. It is mere weakness and exhaustion.

Bond was impressed. He saw a great triumph.

"It's not my fault," said he, "that all these men have been put on to the case. I said that I could do it with my own staff, and here is where I prove it. You get right out on this fellow's trail, and if you catch him I'll add $50 to your salary this week."

As I rode uptown in a car I tried to think of this man hunt as a sober fact.

INTRODUCING WILLIAM WASHINGTON.

I even tried to picture one of my mythical detectives engaged in the search for Mr. Overalls. In vain. I merely fell into that dreamland which is the limbo of such faculties of mine as might have been practical under better conditions.

With no clear idea of what I hoped to accomplish I left the car and went into the business office of a newspaper, where I arranged for the insertion of a small advertisement offering a reward of $25 for the man who had been excluded from the Museum of Art. I had it put among the washerwomen in the two classifications "Help Wanted" and "Situations Wanted" on the vague theory that women know the news and tell it; that they are sharp to see a chance to earn a dollar; that Mr. Overalls was probably out of work and his wife taking in washing.

Having accomplished this masterly detective stroke, I went home and read a book till it was time to go to bed.

On the way down to the office the following afternoon I called for answers to my advertisement and was amazed to find that one had been received. It was a brief and somewhat illiterate production signed "Mrs. Mary Collins, 3 flure, back," and it contained the information that the writer had "suspishuned" for two days that her janitor's brother was the man in question.

"He denize it," added Mrs. Collins, taking considerable trouble with her z, "but it's him."

I called a messenger boy, to whom I gave $5 and Mrs. Collins' address, with a brief statement of the facts in the case and a command to bring the janitor's brother to the office of the Citizen.

"Suppose he won't come?" said the boy.

The same idea had occurred to me. I would have bet a week's pay that he would not come for my asking, but these messenger boys are smart.

"Don't talk nonsense," said I. "Bring him."

At the office I found Bond and Wilde together in the latter's private room. Bond seemed to be considerably excited. Wilde was laughing in that silent and secret fashion which is peculiar to him.

"Have you got him?" asked Bond.

"I've sent for him," I replied.

"Good!" said Wilde. "That will make the round dozen."

This statement was presently elucidated, and I perceived an extraordinary condition of affairs. It appeared that Wilde, seeing the offer of $25 reward in the morning paper and supposing it to be the work of a rival, had offered $100 in an afternoon addition. Eight men had responded. Every one of them declared that he was the original and only genuine Mr. Overalls. As the circumstances of the case had been fully detailed in the newspapers, there was no difficulty in telling a perfectly straight story. But there was a very great difficulty upon our side of the matter in determining who was telling the truth.

In addition to the eight who had answered the advertisement the three private detective agencies presented one candidate apiece, and, as Wilde had expressed it, my man would make the round dozen.

"We must have the fellow identified," said Bond, "and the doorkeeper must come down here to do it."

There were several objections to this proposition. It was not the regular doorkeeper who had been on duty when this crime against the liberties of the plain people had been committed, but an assistant named William Washington. This man had been kept out of the way since the event, and only one reporter had succeeded in finding him. To this reporter Mr. Washington had declared that he could not remember Mr. Overalls; that he didn't even know whether he was white or black. Undoubtedly this was a falsehood, yet it was likely that he would stick to it. Certainly he hated all newspapers after the "roasting" to which he had been subjected, and a yoke of oxen couldn't drag him to the Citizen office for the purposes of this investigation. Nevertheless Bond said to me cheerfully:

"Go out and get this man Washington and have him here within two hours."

I felt a faintness succeeded by an agreeable desperation.

"Sure!" said I and stalked out of the room.

A desperate man can accomplish much. In exactly fifty-five minutes I re-entered that room and introduced Mr. William Washington to Wilde and Bond. He was a tall colored man with a very magnificent air and a shrewd, piercing eye; a man of very distinctive—I had almost said distinguished—appearance.

"I have come entirely as a matter of friendship for this gentleman," said he, waving his hand toward me. As a matter of fact I had given him $10.

We began immediately to admit our candidates, who had been detained here and there in the building upon various pretexts, and with considerable difficulty, for some of them were getting scared. We tried first the men whom the detectives had discovered. Mr. Washington looked at each of them with close attention and courteously declared that he had never had the pleasure of seeing them before. They lied like men experienced in the art, but Mr. Washington was entirely unshaken.

Then we began upon the fellows who had answered the advertisement, and they filed through the room one by one. Some of them gave up the game when informed of the presence of the doorkeeper, while others protested even to the point of violence.

Toward the close of the examination Wilde took me aside.

"This man is throwing us," he said. "In my opinion the first fellow we had in here was the real article, and Washington knew it."

I ventured to differ in a respectful manner, and just then the last of the lot was led through the room. When he had vanished in a smoke of sulphurous language, Jim, the office assistant, who had been busy with the formalities of admitting and sending away the candidates, whispered to me:

"There's another one with a messenger boy."

"Send him in," said I, and then to Bond, "This is my man."

Wilde overheard the remark and glanced uneasily at Washington. It was his last chance to serve us. If he failed this time, we had no more to offer. Washington remained dignified and impassive as Mrs. Mary Collins' janitor's brother was led into the room.

He was a stolid yet an honest looking fellow, which was more than could be said for the others.

"See here, gentlemen," said he, looking from one to the other of us, "I come down here because this boy told me you wanted to see me, but I don't want no publicity in this case. I don't care a ray about their old museum anyway. I was just goin' in there to see a plumber who was at work inside, but they fired me out before I could say what I wanted."

"YOU WA'N'T THERE!"

William Washington shook his head, just as he had done eleven times before.

"This is not the man," said he.

"What the blankety blank blank do you know about it?" demanded the janitor's brother. "You wa'n't there!"

"I was not there!" echoed Mr. Washington.

"No; you wa'n't within nine miles of the place, so far as I know," was the warm response. "I wa'n't put out by no coon. It was a white man that trun me out—a square built feller, shorter'n you."

"This is the real identification," said I. "It is true that our friend here is not William Washington and that he was not present when the affair occurred, and because this fellow knows it he is the original and only genuine Mr. Overalls. I couldn't get Washington, and so I did a more conclusive thing and hired the janitor of the building where I live to play his part."

I did not consider it necessary to say that my scheme had been pure imposture in the beginning and that I had had no idea of the excellence of the trick until after it had worked. It certainly looked as if I had foreseen all from the beginning.

Harry Bond threw his arm across my shoulder and declared that I was the only one of my kind ever born in captivity.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 11—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Bringing others to Christ.—John i, 40-45; iv, 6-10; Mark v, 19, 20.

The supreme mission of the Christian in this life is to bring others to Christ. Like Andrew, having found the Messiah ourselves we should go to others, tell them this fact and invite them to come to Him. Christ's mission was to seek souls. To seek and to save the lost was His chief business in life, and as His disciples and followers it should be ours.

The principal factors in bringing others to Christ are personal work and individual effort. The church services and the preaching of the gospel are not by any means to be underrated in their importance, yet it must be acknowledged that most people are led to Christ by hand to hand, face to face work. This method is eminently Scriptural. Andrew led Peter to Christ. Philip led Nathaniel. Christ addressed the multitudes, yet He also had the time to speak to one man, Nicodemus, and to one woman, the woman of Samaria. Peter and John brought the lame man at the beautiful gate to the Master, and Philip was led off to the Spirit to have the revival at Samaria that he might preach the gospel to the Ethiopian and bring him to Christ. Surely there is one person in our homes or among our acquaintances that we can bring to Christ this winter.

To bring one person to Christ may seem an insignificant thing, yet eternity alone can reveal the results of such a work. Andrew could not see Pentecost and 3,000 souls saved under Peter's preaching in one day, when he brought him to Jesus. That may have seemed a little thing to him, but how important it was in the light of future events! It may have seemed a little thing for a Christian workman to have invited a Boston shoe clerk to Sunday school, yet how transcendently important it was in view of Dwight L. Moody's subsequent career! No soul seeking service is a little thing. If but the one soul is saved, it would repay a lifetime of work, for has not Christ declared that our soul is worth more than all this world?

To be successful in bringing others to Christ we must be consistent in our own lives as Christians. If your religion has not made you better, it will be useless to recommend it to somebody else. Peter had confidence in Andrew's word and life, else he never would have followed him to Christ. Get sin out of your own life before you attempt to show others the way to Christ. If still living in sin, we have not traveled the way of salvation ourselves, and how can we guide others along a way unknown to ourselves? It would be a case of blind leading the blind and both would fall into the ditch. Keep right with God yourself first of all if you desire to be successful soul winners.

In bringing others to Christ we not only bless them, and perhaps countless others through them, but we bless ourselves. "Whosoever shall do and teach [God's commandments] the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever."

Missionary Unbelief.

Every missionary committee would do well to read the following by Dr. Herrick Johnson to its society:

The Christian that does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the great commission. Repeat it and see.

The Christian that does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the Apostles' Creed. Repeat it and see.

The Christian that does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the Lord's Prayer. Repeat it and see.

The Christian that does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the Doxology in long meter. Repeat it and see.

The Christian that does not believe in foreign missions in this generation believes that 300 more millions of the heathen world ought to die before we tell them of Jesus Christ. How long is this belief to go on? How many more millions must die before the church of God is ready? "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to Him that believeth."

The Fire We Need.

Rev. Dr. Edwin Forrest Hallenbeck, president of the New York State union, in calling its recent convention to order said:

"Our dependence is upon God. If we have come praying that God might stir your hearts, and if we continue thus to pray through these days, I feel sure fire will be kindled here that will go back with us to our fields and burn till souls are born into the kingdom of God. We believe that God wants us to carry away from this convention coals of fire that will burn their way into weary hearts."

HOLLEBEN WON'T RETURN

Baron Sternburg Will Be Germany's Next Ambassador at Washington

Berlin, Jan. 10.—Ambassador Von Holleben was not recalled from Washington but, learning that his government was not wholly satisfied with his work and feeling ill and depressed, he cabled for a long leave of absence, which was immediately granted. He will not return to Washington. Baron Speck Von Sternburg will be Von Holleben's successor.

Washington, Jan. 10.—Baron Speck Von Sternberg is a personal friend of President Roosevelt, their acquaintance having begun when Theodore Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy. He is married to an American woman, Miss Langham, daughter of a wealthy miner of Idaho, and he had previously served with great distinction as secretary of the embassy at Washington. He represented Germany on the Samoan commission, which disposed of that vexed question to the satisfaction of all concerned. His appointment, however, will cause comment in the diplomatic corps, as it reverses a time-honored policy of Germany that no diplomat shall be accredited to a country from which he has chosen his wife. His appointment as ambassador, following a short period as minister resident, would be another unprecedented promotion. Baron Von Sternberg is at present the German consul general at Calcutta.

The amount will aggregate $10,000. This is taken to mean that the railroad company intends to encourage its employes to become members of the National Guard.

DEFENDS SHIP TRUST.

Lord Charles Beresford's Views on the Big Combine.

MAKES REMARKABLE PREDICTION

British Vice Admiral Says Atlantic Shipping Combine Will Be Beneficial to England and Can Insure Peace of the World—Says There Can Be No Monopoly In Freights.

When the projected scheme generally known as "the Atlantic shipping combine" first became realized by the British public, an excitement amounting to alarm was created among our people (English), says Lord Charles Beresford, vice admiral of the British navy, in the New York American and Journal.

Personally I shared very strongly in the anxiety that was prevalent when first the project of the combine became an accomplished fact, but this anxiety was not so much based on the probabilities as the possibilities of danger that threatened British trade.

The principal danger seemed to be that as those financiers connected with the shipping combine are also connected with the American railroads they might control the water borne traffic by giving the combine shipping preference in exporting the products of American trusts to this country and so placing at a disadvantage the British producers. This would be rendered all the more easy as the combine owns the terminals.

First, to refer to the advantages which lie with the British companies, the suggestion of the American financiers was that the British companies be paid one-quarter in gold and three-quarters in 6 per cent cumulative preference shares. The Americans paid, the British received. The creation of the trust will give a distinct guarantee to the British merchant that there shall be a reasonable stability in freights. Stability will stop speculation in freights, which is merely taking a gambler's chance.

There can be no monopoly in freights, as British firms could build similar vessels to all those bought by the combine for one-third of the price those vessels cost, and the newly built vessels would be modern ships with all the advantages of coal saving engines and extra speed. Again, if an attempt was made to raise freights a shipper could buy a ship of 8,000 tons for about £50,000 and ship his goods immediately. Such a vessel is easily procured, as it does not represent a great capital.

There will be an enormous saving in working expenses, amounting, it is said, to a sum of from 5 to 8 per cent. This saving will be effected in the following particulars:

First.—Cheaper administration in the number of officials.

Second.—Less cost for repairs and maintenance, all being under one head, and a reduction in the number of workshops.

Third.—One policy under one administration.

Fourth.—Better service, regular periodical sailings instead of three ships sailing one day and none on days following.

Fifth.—Economy in agents, houses, offices and work.

Sixth.—And, most important of all, the possession of the terminals.

It may be asked, If the British gain all these advantages, what advantages accrue to the Americans from their large expenditure of money?

First.—They have bought the good will of a growing concern with enormous connections, and besides the actual shipping they derive the benefit of retaining the services of the captains, officers, including engineers and crews, of the lines accustomed to run between England and America.

Second.—The Americans also gain the advantages of all the details already enumerated as gains to the British, with the exception of the price paid for the shipping and good will.

It may be said that the combine is overcapitalized and therefore can never pay the shareholders, but the capital sum paid was not made out on the value of the ships, but on the value of what those ships earned. The Americans are shrewd, hard headed men of business, and we may depend upon it that they knew what they were about when they paid so high a price for the British shipping. From a business and commercial standpoint the combine would appear to be absolutely sound.

It has been suggested that Great Britain should have adopted a bounty fed policy for her own ships in order to compete against the Atlantic combine, but such a policy would have been absolute madness, as any idea of a commercial war against the combine would have set the whole American people, who are now more or less divided in opinion on the subject, against us, with the result that as their capital is floating and not largely tied up under trustees, as in the case of the British nation, they could have made a gigantic combination of financiers, who, be it remembered, control the railways, and by this combination have built a fleet of their own. Then by giving a bounty to this fleet, with the object of reducing freights, British shipping must have been driven off the Atlantic. Surely it was wiser for the British to join in partnership with the American financiers and divide the profit than to embark on the mad policy of a commercial war.

We have no right in these days to think that we should have the monopoly of the carrying trade of the north Atlantic. A largely increased part ownership, automatically created by the strongest ties possible (those of natural interest in commercial and part ownership in great commercial undertakings), must perforce make other nations prouder before they attack either one or other of the English speaking nations, for fear an attack on one might bring about a war against the two combined.

These facts appear to prove that the Atlantic combine makes for the individual benefit of both countries, and may it not have a farreaching effect for insuring peace for the future? There are many reasons why the two great English speaking nations should forget the irritations of the past and come closer together in the future.

During my recent visit to America what impressed me most was:

First.—The genuine friendly feeling toward this country.

Second.—The sentiment often expressed that combinations of trading interests between the two countries would prevent war in the future.

At present, in the interests of peace, neither Great Britain nor the United States can afford to relax its energies for maintaining its navy in such a sufficient and efficient state that it would be able to carry out the work which would be thrown upon it in time of war, but if the United States and Great Britain form that natural alliance which I have indicated can be brought about by part ownership and profit sharing in great trading combinations it will certainly place them in so powerful a position that the whole world would think twice before attacking either of them, and the English speaking people might perhaps have a great moral effect in preventing war between other nations.

WILL RUN LINE OF AIRSHIPS

Santos-Dumont Believes He Can Carry Passengers Over Paris.

A line of passenger airships in operation over Paris is the latest scheme of M. Santos-Dumont, the world's foremost aeronaut, says the New York World. The inventor not only believes that this is practicable, but says that he will soon have his line in running order.

"I have ordered," he said, "the silk and other materials for the Santos-Dumont airship No. 10, which will be my airship for 1903. It is intended to carry two aeronauts and twelve passengers. I shall begin my experiments in Paris and make a charge for carrying passengers around the Bois de Boulogne. I am perfectly sure to get as many passengers as I want. This No. 10 will be ready by the beginning of spring. I am certain that the airship as an actual carrier of passengers will be a working reality long before the end of 1903.

"Believe me, the time will come when the building of airships will be as common as is the building of steamships today, and in the meantime the only way to demonstrate that aerostatics is a practical science is to prove it by carrying theories into execution. That is why during 1903 I shall develop the passenger airship, and if I get sufficient encouragement I shall build more than one.

"When I have trained enough aeronauts to man my airships, you may on any beautiful day see not one but four airships flying around the Bois de Boulogne. It is not easy to find men who are able to operate airships, but when my passenger ship is ready I shall be able to take men out and train them.

"See, here is the model of the new aerodrome. It will be 70 yards long, 50 feet wide, and the height from the ground to the center of the canvas covering overhead will be 40 feet. It can be put up or taken down in a few minutes so as to allow the airships to leave or enter with the greatest freedom. It will probably be finished by the end of January."

ORANG OUTANG'S RANK.

Professor Wilder Places It Next to Man.

One of the interesting papers read at the meeting of the American Association For the Advancement of Science at Washington the other day was by Professor Burt G. Wilder of Cornell university before the section of zoology on "Some Questions as to the Arrangement of the Primates." According to the views advanced by Professor Wilder, there should be a rearrangement in the present classification of apes and man, says the New York Tribune. The brain he considers as affording the best criterion by which to determine their affinities and divergences.

Incidentally he showed that the brain of the orang outang approached more nearly that of a man, and, judged by this character, the orang outang instead of the gorilla should rank next after man. This paper provoked much discussion.

A Huge Russian Battleship.

The Russian admiralty is now preparing plans for a new type of battleship which is to be laid down early in 1903 and which will be the most powerful in existence, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. The new ships are expressly intended to surpass the British King Edward class. They will be of from 16,000 to 17,000 tons and will carry four 12 inch guns and sixteen 8 inch quickfirers, besides a large number of smaller weapons. They will be able to steam from Europe to the far east without recoaling.

Games For Soldiers.

A society has been organized in Paris called Les Jeux du Soldat, the object of which is to prevent the conscripts at the French barracks from forming bad habits. The society has provided wholesome games for the army—chess, cards, deck quoits and perhaps pingpong. So far 140,000 soldiers have been provided with games.

The Young New Year.

We welcome thee, oh, glad young prince,
And trust our fate within thy hands!
Oh, let thy coming to us be
A grateful blessing in our lands!
Where pain and sorrow dare to tread
Be thou a soothing friend to cheer,
And, though the dear old year be dead,
May you a greater friend appear.

HARD TO MAINTAIN LAW

Even When Coal Fields Were Full of State Troops

GOBIN GIVES TESTIMONY

Says "Shoot to Kill" Order Meant All It Said and Had a Most Salutary Effect—Denies Undue Friendly Relations With Operators

Philadelphia, Jan. 10.—After occupying eight days, during which time they presented about 150 witnesses, the non-union men who are a party to the arbitration agreement closed their case yesterday before the coal strike commission. The coal companies open their case today, and, according to the plans of the operators, the companies will present their case in the order of the geographical location of their mines.

The principal witness before the commission yesterday was Lieutenant Governor Gobin, senior brigadier general of the National Guard of Pennsylvania. General Gobin was in command of the Third brigade during the time the troops were on duty in the hard coal fields. He was on the stand 3½ hours and during most of this time was engaged in a recital of the conditions as he found them in the territory he covered. He was on duty from July 30 until about Nov. 1. From his observations and from reports made to him by his officers, it was his opinion, he said, that an "excited state of lawlessness" existed in the regions; that disturbances were numerous; that the presence of the troops was absolutely necessary to preserve law and order, and that it was difficult to maintain the law even after all the troops in the state had been placed in the disturbed territory.

During direct and cross-examination, General Gobin had several tilts with Mr. Darrow, counsel for the miners, but they never reached a serious point.

The witness said when he first went into the coal regions with his men as a result of a riot at Shenandoah he was unable for a time to get vehicles to carry his supplies, teamsters refusing to furnish them. In Shenandoah and the Panther Creek valley, he said, there was no civil authority at times. Committees of the union called upon him and assured him that the striking miners would give him all the assistance they could, but as far as the witness could remember they never gave him any help or did he ask them for any.

After his entire brigade had been called out, the general said the situation became extremely serious in certain parts of the territory and he feared that he could not cope with the situation if it grew worse. He so informed the governor. The now famous "shoot to kill" order, issued by him, after his soldiers had been attacked by stones, was touched upon by Mr. Darrow. The general said it meant every word it said, and that the issuance of the order had a most salutary effect upon the communities which his soldiers guarded. It had such a good effect that it was not necessary to fire one shot. The order, he further said, did not include the shooting of women and children.

Mr. Darrow called his attention to the fact that the order did not except them and the witness replied that his men were not engaged in fighting women and children.

There was considerable cross fire between Mr. Darrow and the general over the right of a sentry to fire upon a man skulking around the camp of soldiers after dark. The witness finally gave it as his judgment that a sentry has a right to shoot in guarding the men in camp. This discussion was brought about by Mr. Darrow reading a communication from the late Colonel Hoffman of the Eighth regiment to the brigadier general, in which he reported that a sentry fired on a man who was skulking around the camp at night and in which the colonel added that he regretted there was no result to the sentry's shooting. In the sparring that followed this, General Gobin, who is a lawyer, would not approve or condemn the sentiment expressed by Colonel Hoffman. The latter died from pneumonia while on duty in the coal fields.

Just before the cross-examination was concluuded Mr. Darrow wanted to know if he ever met certain coal operators. He was asked by Commissioner Watkins the object of his question, and Mr. Darrow replied: "To show that his relations with the coal companies were much more friendly to the operators than to the workers."

"That is not true," warmly replied the general, and the discussion was stopped there.

The testimony of a number of other witnesses called during the day was along the same line as that presented during the last eight days of the commission's sessions.

The evidence of the 150 witnesses called by the lawyers for the non-union men since they opened their case related almost wholly to their personal experiences and to the conditions prevailing in the strike affected territory as regards lawlessness.

The lawyers for the non-union men, in the early proceedings of the commission at Scranton, filed a statement with the arbitrators on behalf of 2000 non-union mine workers, asking among other things for a 20 percent increase in wages, insisting upon the right to work as many hours as they choose, and protesting against any agreement being entered into between the Miners' union and the coal companies which would interfere with the interests of the non-union men.

Handsome Coats Are Made of Greenland Seal.

Some odd new skins have appeared on the fur market. Greenland seal is the latest, and it is remarkably pretty. Cream of tone and spotted of surface, it somehow suggests the leopard's skin, yet lacks its harshness when supplied with a collar of skunk or black fox, for it really makes most smart little jackets.

A recent costume was composed of a skirt of mastic cloth and a blouse of surah silk of the same tones. The latter was trimmed with elaborate decorations of Chinese embroidery, having tassels of many colors pendent from straps on the shoulder. A Greenland seal coat lined with mastic satin and a marquis hat of bright colored velvet, the brim upturned, completed the costume, which also had the muff matching the seal coat. This was made in the latest style, large in size, trimmed with bands of skunk on either side.

A pretty three-quarter length evening coat is here shown. It is made of white cloth, with the revers and cuffs strapped in a darker material.

Mrs. Marion D., widow of the late Peter Lawson, passed away at her home on Hillside road early Friday morning at the advanced age of 86 years and 5 days. January Magazines.

In addition to a full treatment of the Venezuelan situation, the editor of the Review of Reviews, in his January number, discusses the most important of the questions immed iately before Congress, together with current municipal problems as illustrated in var ous American cities at the beginning of the new year.

The first World's Work of the New Year contains a wide variety of subjects written about in the concise, optimistic manner which is characteristic of this magaz ne. Perhaps the most important articles are Mr. Robert H. Montgomery's story of the American invasion of Canada, illustrated with many striking pictures and portraits and Mr. Lewis Nixon's prophecies of the "Battleship of the future" Morgan Robertson's article concerning modern methods of saving wrecked ships is finely illustrated.

The New Year number of Lippincott's magazine is a veritable mine of good fiction, containing a whole novel and nine short stories, besides several papers of timely interest some choice verse, and fun galore in the department called Walnuts and Wine. The novel is "The New Heloise," by Mrs. Schuyler Crowninshield. In this there is new evidence that "Love Laughs at Locksmiths" and stone walls—even those of a French convent.

Edwin Markham and Admiral Schley lead the list of contributors to the January National Magazine. The Admiral writes of The Sailor's Christmas at Sea. Fine full-page portraits of Congressman Cannon, the next Speaker, and of Senators Spooner, Clapp, Heitfeld and Hawley are among the illustrations of Joe Mitchell Chapple's Affairs at Washington.

SCENE IN DAVID BELASCO AT HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Mrs. Leslie Carter, undoubtedly the greatest of English-speaking artistes, is now in the sixth week of her enormously successful engagement at the Hollis St. Theatre, Boston, where she is presenting David Belasco's new play "Du Barry" to audiences that completely fill every bit of the seating and standing capacity of the playhouse. Mrs. Carter inaugurated her Boston engagement Tuesday night, December 16, and some idea of the stupendous character of the business may be had when it is stated that almost every night the orchestra is compelled to vacate its usual place and play beneath the stage, so that the space generally given over to the musicians may be occupied by ticket purchasers. This is a condition of affairs that is exceedingly rare nowadays in Boston theatricals, and simply indicates the great interest and enthusiasm that Mrs. Carter's brilliant impersonation of the milliner girl, Jeanette Vaubernier, who became the favorite of King Louis XV, of France, and who was queen in all save name have aroused. Mrs. Carter's unapproachable art has heretofore illumined other roles majestically and powerfully, but in "Du Barry" her acting displays the most consummate art that has ever been revealed to an American audience. There is a witchery about her work that almost makes the audi nce see the La du Barry of real life—the beau iful creature that fascinated the French regent, and makes one forget that it is all art—art of the most subtle sort, an art that no other English-speaking actress is capable of bringing to a characterization. The performance is of such length that it is necessary to have the curtain rise promptly at 7.45 evenings and 1.45 at the Saturday matinee, the only afternoon performance that Mrs. Carter gives. Boston is the only city in New England in which Mrs. Carter will appear this season.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.

The new Oriental comic opera "Bobadil," with Miss Isabelle Underwood in the title roll, received its first American presentation at the Columbia theatre on Monday evening. Miss Underwood in the character of "Bobadil," the young Oriental who is made Sultan for a day achieved a pronounced success, and excited general admiration by reason of her remarkable beauty and splendid voice. Mr. J. K Murray and Miss Clara Lane are always welcome in Boston and created a profound impression by their rendition of the roles of the Armenian money lender, and the Princess Zorayda. The music by Luscombe Searelle, the English composer and author is distinctly good and bids fair to become immensely popular, as it is bright, sparkling and tuneful without being trashy.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The Castle Square Theatre managment announce A. C. Gunter's merry play in four acts, "Prince Karl," as the attraction at this house next week. The presentations of this play have, heretofore, been restricted to the appearance of Mr. Richard Mansfield in the title part and much interest will attach to the impersonation by Mr. John Craig in the Castle Square production. The play is particularly pleasing comedy, as will be remembered by those made familiar with its scenes by Mr. Mansfield's performances in this city, and the leading characters afford many excellent opportunities for the Castle Square players. The principal parts have been assigned as follows: Karl Von Arheimen, John Craig; Sparton Spotts, James L. Seeley; J. Cool Dragon, John T. Craven; Howard Algernon Briggs, George E. Mack; Markey Davis, Lindsay Morison; Gustavus, William J. Hasson; The Mayor of Karlschop, Louis Thiel; Mrs. Florence Armien Lowell, Lillian Lawrence, Miss Alcia Eucled Lowell, Mar. Sanders; Mrs. Priscilla Daphne Lowell, Leonora Bradley. The usual distribution of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The capital one-act comedy, "An Artist's Dream," with that versatile and clever actor, Wright Huntington, in the title role, will be the principal offering at Keith's for the week commencing Jan. 12. It is some years since the piece was given at this theatre, but the older patron will remember the big hit it scored and the personal triumph of Mr. Huntington. The play is bright in dialogue and has many very funny situations, and Mr. Huntington's support is promised to be of the best. Among the others already booked for the same week are: George W. Day, the favorite blackface monologue comedian and tropical singer; the Motogirl the largest vaudeville novelty, and a tremendous hit everywhere. The new scheme of having only two shows, without eliminating the continuity of the entertainment is proving an immense success and giving greater satisfaction to those who drop in in the early evening house than the old method.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

The excellent attractions presented at Boston Music Hall will be continued by the management next week when Joseph Arthur's celebrated comedy drama, entitled "Lost River," will be presented at that theatre for six nights and six matinees commencing on Monday afternoon. This play enjoyed long runs at Boston and New York and this is the first time that it has ever been presented at the popular prices of 25 and 50 cents for the evening performances and 15 and 25 cents at the matinees. "Lost River has the merit of taking a firm stand as a melodrama without evasion. Its posters prepare ne for most tremendous sensations, such as the bicycle ride for life in the storm and the sensational gallop for the toll gate with its strong climax. At the same time there is an element of rural simplicity which places it in high favor. The Japanese Garden continues to be a favorite place for the children and the Punch and Judy performances and the moving comic pictures bring joy to the little folks. The Sunday night concerts draw audiences that pack the theatre to the doors every Sunday night and none but the very highest grade of vaudeville attractions are presented.

older patron will remember the big hit it scored and the personal triumph of Mr. Huntington. The play is bright in dialogue and has many very funny situations, and Mr. Huntington's support is promised to be of the best. Among the others already booked for the same week are: George W. Day, the favorite blackface monologue comedian and tropical singer; the Motogirl the largest vaudeville novelty, and a tremendous hit everywhere. The new scheme of having only two shows, without eliminating the continuity of the entertainment is proving an immense success and giving greater satisfaction to those who drop in in the early evening house than the old method.

NO CARS ARE RUNNING

On Connecticut Lighting and Power Company's Lines

EMPLOYES ALL JOIN UNION

And Formulate Demands Which the Company Refuse to Grant—Three Cities Cut Off From Waterbury and Demonstrations Are Feared

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 12.—Waterbury entered upon the first trolley strike of its history yesterday after a midnight meeting by the employes of the Connecticut Lighting and Power company. Before the meeting adjourned every man employed in the transportation department of the road became a member of the local union, and 147 men refused to run their cars yesterday morning.

The immediate cause of the strike was the discharge of three men, one of them, William Barrett, being president of the union. The men assert that they were discharged because of their activity in behalf of organized labor.

J. E. Sewell, general manager of the road, denies this statement, asserting that he is not opposed to the union, but states that the men were discharged for repeatedly visiting saloons while in uniform and absenting themselves from duty without explanation.

An ultimatum was sent to the general manager Friday night, asking for a reply at 12 o'clock Saturday night. The demands are: Recognition of the union; reinstatement of William Barrett, John Kelley, Edward Maloney and A. W. Light, the discharged men; a 10-hour day at 22½ cents an hour for all regular and extra men; snow plow work 30 cents an hour; car barn men 20 cents an hour; all extra men shall be paid regular scale of wages for reporting at car barns until released; all men failing to report to barn to take out their cars shall report for duty at central office at 9:30 a. m. and at 2 p. m., to be paid only for work done; all men employed by the company shall become members of the union within 30 days. in all cases where men are discharged the superintendent shall allow a conference with the grievance committee.

General Manager Sewell refused to act without consulting with the executive committee of the company, some of whom are in New York and others in Bridgeport. The men refused to wait for his return and when the hour mentioned in the ultimatum arrived every one of the 147 employes quit their cars.

Last night Mr. Sewell returned with an answer to the men. It is a refusal to grant their demands and notice that unless they return to work before 3 o'clock this afternoon their places will be filled by others.

The towns of Naugatuck, Waterville and Oakville will suffer greatly by the suspension of traffic, particularly the former. The only demonstration of the day was the pelting of a snowplow with stones and snowballs and the shouting of "scab" by the crowds at the men on the plow. No one was injured.

At a meeting last night the men voted unanimously to remain out and their action has been endorsed by several labor bodies.

John J. Daley, leader of the strikers, declares that every effort will be made by the men to put down any spirit of violence. Feeling is already running high, however, and trouble is feared when the company tries to operate the lines.

Billings Disagrees

Boston, Jan. 12.—J. B. Billings, one of the owners of the Boston National club, says that he does not believe that the reports sent out about the peace negotiations between the two baseball leagues are authentic. He cannot see how the Boston club will be affected in any way. Mr. Billings thinks that the committee has gone beyond its province in clinching the negotiations for peace at so short notice, and that the whole thing is too premature.

Holleben Would Say Nothing

New York, Jan. 12.—Dr. Von Holleben, the German ambassador to the United States, sailed for Hamburg Saturday on the Graf Waldersee. He was asked if he had any comment to make on the reports which had been circulated about his return to Berlin on his relations with the present administration. He said tersely that he had absolutely no comment to make on anything.

BOSTON BANKER IN JAIL

Charged With Theft of $23,000 and Failed to Secure Bail

Boston, Jan. 12.—Edwin J. Dunning, a State street banker, has been indicted, arrested, arraigned and held in $20,000 bail to answer a charge of larceny. It is alleged in the indictment found by the Suffolk grand jury that Dunning fraudulently obtained $23,000 from Francis A. Brooks, for years a leading member of the bar, who died last fall.

As soon as the arrest had been made, Dunning was brought before Judge Bond, who had just heard the report of the grand jury in the superior court. Mr. McLaughlin briefly reviewed the principal points in the case, and said:

"The defendant is accused of having stolen $23,000 from Mr. Brooks, in sums ranging from $3000 to $16,000. The money was secured by the defendant, as the government alleges, by the defendant, through a series of gross frauds on Mr. Brooks, during the two years prior to his death.

"The state of his health was such that he should not be permitted to attend to large financial matters, and a petition for the appointment of a conservator for his estate was pending at the time the defendant got the money."

Mr. McLaughlin said further: "The counts do not represent all the money obtained from Mr. Brooks. The defendant received sums amounting to a large fortune within two years."

The court fixed bail at $20,000 and being unable to secure bail, Dunning was taken to Charles street jail.

Dunning was visited in jail yesterday by his counsel and by members of his family. His counsel, when seen later, said that no public comment on the matter would be made.

Sharp Thrust at Rockefeller

Boston, Jan. 12.—In a talk upon the subject of "Methodist Philanthropy vs. Standard Oil Philanthropy," Rev. H. S. Johnson, pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist church, said last night: "Gifts of John D. Rockefeller contain, morally, no more of the quality of Christian philanthropy than the act of the chicken thief who thinks he is kind because he gives away one hen out of 10 that he has stolen. When the Standard Oil company raised the price of oil 2 cents a gallon at the time of the coal strike, thereby forcing the great mass of the poor into its clutches, it put into their pockets hundreds of millions of dollars that didn't belong to them."

Hoarded Savings at Home

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 12.—Charle. B. Richards, a mechanical engineer, who died two months ago, leaving known personal estate valued at about $3000, had hidden away, unknown to his wife, more than $25,000, which represented the accumulation of years While the widow was looking for a will which she believed her husband had made, she found a large number of bills stuffed, in small rolls, in crevices of furniture, in the cushions of chairs and stitched into under garments worn by her husband. She also unexpectedly found bank books showing deposits of $15,000.

Flood Failed to Harm Vaults

Boston, Jan. 12.—No trace of fire or flood was found on the contents of the vaults of the Security Safe Deposit company in the Equitable building when they were opened by the company's officers yesterday for the first time since Friday's fire in the building. During the fire an immense body of water was poured into the building and this worked its way to the sub-basements in which are located the vaults.

Spinners Return to Work

Maynard, Mass., Jan. 12.—The strike of the spinners in the Assabet mills of the American Woolen company, which has been in progress since Tuesday noon, was settled late Saturday night. The men returned to work this morning. The terms of settlement are not made public, but it is believed that they have been granted practically all that they asked from the company.

No Change In Amesbury Strike

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 12.—The difficulty between the carriage manufacturers and their employes apparently is no nearer a settlement than on the first day of the trouble and the present stand of both sides indicates a prolonged struggle. The manufacturers claim to have made gains in the number of employes at work.

Bakers In Serious Quarrel

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 12.—During a meeting of the Lynn Bakers' union Saturday night James Casey and John Toomey became engaged in a discussion which resulted in Casey stabbing Toomey in the breast with a jack-knife, inflicting a serious wound. Casey was arrested and Toomey was taken to a hospital.

Oil Stove Overturned

Boston, Jan. 12.—An overturned oil stove in the tenement occupied by William Marr at 934 Tremont street set fire to the bed clothing and Marr, in attempting to extinguish the fire, was suffocated and badly burned about the lower limbs. Marr was 56 years old and unmarried.

Chinamen Overcome by Gas

Providence, Jan. 12.—Eleven Chinese were overcome by coal gas yesterday in a Chinese boarding house here. One of them, Don Doo, was dead when found. Two others are in a critical condition. Six others are at a hospital, but their recovery is believed to be only a question of time.

DESPERATE FOR COAL.

Chelsea People Raided a Train and Confiscated All They Could.

Boston, Jan. 12.—A coal train on the Boston and Albany tracks at Chelsea was raided by men, women and children yesterday and a quantity of coal, variously estimated at from five to 10 tons, was stolen from the cars. The force of train hands was unable to cope with the raiders, and the looting of the train was stopped only by the appearance of the police. The descent on the train was sudden and earnest. Men and women swooped down on the loaded coal cars with bags, baskets, bread pans and other unusual receptacles for fuel. They defied the commands and warnings of the men in charge of the train.

The trainmen did the best they could to protect the property, but when they would reach one car where the looting was going on the coal pickers would run to another car and dump off a lot more coal. When the trainmen would go after them, the cars they left would be boarded and used by other shovelers and scrapers, and very soon the railroad employes found themselves perfectly helpless. So they notified the police. One man was arrested and he will be charged with larceny of two bags of coal.

Does Not Reach New England

Reading, Pa., Jan. 12.—The Pennsylvania and Reading railroad officials claim that for the week ending last night more anthracite coal was taken down the main line than for any previous week in years. The total is an average of 1700 cars for each working day of the week, equal to nearly 235,000 tons. This was distributed in the company's territory as far as New York and along its branch in this state and elsewhere.

Terrible Results of Coal Famine

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Two hundred thousand persons in Chicago are suffering from ailments directly due to cold and exposure resulting from the coal famine, according to the weekly bulletin of the health department issued yesterday. The death rate last week for children under 5 years of age was 10.2 percent greater than in the corresponding week of last year, and among persons over 60 years of age it was 36.7 percent greater.

Bound to Have Coal

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 12.—Because there was a coal famine in the city and the dealers were unable to secure any coal, citizens of Arcola held up a coal train of 30 cars on the Illinois Central road as it was passing through the town, uncoupled the engine and refused to allow the cars to proceed further. The citizens are willing to pay the value of the coal, but are determined to have it.

Lots of Coal, but Prices High

Boston, Jan. 12.—There arrived at this port by water yesterday something like 50,000 tons of coal, divided between hard and soft. Dealers say that this quantity will relieve the market, but is not likely to lower the price, which is $12 for hard and $10 for soft coal.

Murdered by Highwayman

Philadelphia, Jan. 12.—Edward Powers, a produce merchant, was killed early Sunday morning by an unknown highwayman who attacked him on the street a few blocks from his home. Powers left his place of business about midnight Saturday with $250 on his person. This money was missing when the body was found. His gold watch and chain had also been taken. Powers' skull was crushed.

Boy Commands $10,000 a Year

Good Afternoon.

Mayor Bryant continues to get coal delivered in Quincy for $9 per ton. May success attend his efforts to break the extortionate price of coal.

Our City Council like the Legislature is strenuous this year, not having adjourned to the third Monday as usual but to the second Monday. The City Book should be at least one week earlier.

Another evidence that Massachusetts has a good working Legislature, is the unusually early appointment of committees. Almost a week has thus been saved. Some hearings will probably be held next week.

Boston boasts of a death rate of 18.70 per thousand in 1902, the lowest since 1865. Only twice since 1865 has the death rate been below 20. In Quincy, however, it was less than 15 in 1901, and about the same in 1902.

The Globe should know better than to announce in big type that Franklin Pierce was "New England's second and latest President," as he was neither. Quincy claims the first two from New England, and the last was Chester A. Arthur, who became President in 1881. He was born in Vermont.

Drift of Opinion.

The report of the business of the steel trust shows immense earnings for the past year and a magnificent cash surplus on hand after the payment of dividends. Still the capital of the country which is always seeking sure and paying investments is not rushing into this particular stock according to the market reports.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ Ordinary persons reading in the newspapers that the contract between the big mine operators and the little mine operators having been abrogated, the price of coal goes up, fail to comprehend how it is that the price of coal must perforce advance for any such reason. The abrogation of this contract, as we understand it, gives the independent operator a chance to charge more for his coal. But at the same time he is selling in competition with the big operator, who claims to be exacting no more than formerly. The operators who have the most to sell still sell at the low prices; but the operators who have the least are asking big figures and consequently all coal goes up. It is a pretty puzzle.—New Bedford Standard.

McNary Reelected.

Congressman W. S. McNary of this district was on Saturday reelected president of the Democratic State Committee, George T. McLaughlin continues as secretary and Thomas E. Dwyer as treasurer. The vice presidents are Josiah Quincy, Robert M. Burnett, A. C. Drinkwater, W. T. Jenney and John H. Lee.

Bids Withdrawn.

The Fore River Ship and Engine Co. has withdrawn its bids for the two new government cruisers, Tennessee and Washington, and the board of construction recommend that the proposals of the Cramp Company to build at $4,000,000 each be accepted, to be completed in 36 and 39 months respectively.

LIKE HOT CAKES.

The Mayor's Coal in Great Demand.

All Sold at Ten O'clock This Morning.

Four Hundred Orders Taken in Less Than Three Hours.

Mayor Bryant has been successful in getting another car load of coal for distribution. The coal obtained this time is what is known as nut coal. He was only successful in getting one car load, or about twenty tons. This coal arrived Saturday night and was placed on sale this morning.

The cost unloaded in the bins at the old pumping station was $9 per ton, and it will be sold at that price in bags of one hundred pounds each. Owing to the limited supply but one bag will be sold to each applicant.

Word that the coal had arrived was given out by Mayor Bryant late Saturday afternoon. The news travelled fast and when City Messenger Tirrell appeared at City Hall this morning he found a crowd of half a hundred men, women and children waiting to give an order. Several of the clerks at City Hall were pressed into service to assist him, and they were kept busy for as fast as one person stepped out of the line there were others to take his place.

As there was but twenty tons in the car that arrived, it is self evident that but 400 orders can be taken, and at the rate they came in this morning only a few hours will be necessary to sell out the lot.

At 10 o'clock City Messenger announced that all of the twenty tons received had been sold, and that no more orders for hard coal would be taken.

It was given out this morning that this coal would only be sold to those who have either no coal or who cannot buy from the dealers in larger quantities.

Coasting Accidemt.

Irving Badger, 13 year old son of W. E. Badger of the Board of Health, was seriously injured Saturday while coasting on Kent's hill, West Quincy. The double-runner on which he and others were coasting, was rapidly descending the hill, and when near the bottom he attempted to steer out for a team. In doing so he ran into a telephone pole. The double-runner was overturned, and the Badger boy landed on his hands with such force as to fracture the wrist of his left hand. One of the sleds was smashed, and before he could get out of the way, the broken runner struck him in the calf of his right leg, tearing out over a pound of flesh. He was removod to the office of Dr. Dion, where his injuries were dressed and later he was removed to his home. It will be some weeks before he will be able to be out again. The others on the sled escaped with a few bruises.

Faxon Dissatisfied.

Mr. Henry B. Faxon, the well-known temperance advocate of Quincy, and those associated with him in that work, are very much dissatisfied with the legislative committees on liquor laws which were appointed Friday by President Jones of the Senate and Speaker Myers of the house, says the Globe.

To a reporter Saturday, Mr. Faxon said: "The liquor law committees appointed Friday are the weakest appointed in the past ten years. It would seem, from some of the names on the committee, that a direct slap was made at the temperance people."

Mr. Faxon also expressed himself as being surprised that Gov. Bates made no reference to the liquor laws in his inaugural address.

A REAL HOT TIME.

Two Couples at Holbrook Pull Hair and Use Revolver.

The McDonald and Dempsy families of Holbrook are neighbors, but they do not live in peace with each other as neighbors should. One day McDonald has Dempsey in court and the next day Dempsy has McDonald in court. The last time the parties were in court each was put under bonds to keep the peace.

Both parties were in court again this morning, Miles Dempsy being arraigned for assault upon John B. McDonald with intent to murder.

The story as told by McDonald was that on Saturday afternoon he left his home to take a car for Brockton. He soon met Dempsey, who called him vile names, and threatened to kill him.

McDonald told him he was not afraid of him, but wanted no trouble. At thia Dempssy drew a revolver and fired one shot. McDonald was not hurt but he thought he was at the time.

Mrs. Demsey then appeared upon the scene and took the revolver. Then Mrs. McDonald appeared and soon the two women were at it.

Mrs. McDonald knocked the revolver from Mrs. Dempsey's hand. Then Mrs. Dempsey buried her hands in Mrs. McDonald's hair, and began to pull. Mrs. McDonald retaliated by burying her hands in Mrs. Dempsey's hair and als o began to pull. They tripped and in falling separated although McDonald had tried to separate them before.

In the meantime McDonald had obtained possession of the revolver which was later turned over to Officer Peckman. The revolver was exhibited in court and showed one of the chambers empty. The others were loaded with ball cartridges.

Dempsey's story of the affair was that he was walking along the street toward his home when McDonald came running up to him and called him vile names. That McDonald pulled his hand out of his pocket as though to strike him. At that Dempsey said he drew his revolver and fired one shot into the air.

Mrs. McDonald and Mrs. Dempsy were both witnesses, and both women exhibited bunches of hair which they had lost in the scrimmage.

McDonald was also in court for assault on Mrs. Dempsey, and Mrs. Dempsy was arraigned for assault on Mrs. McDonald.

The two latter cases grew out of the first case, and both were placed on file. In the case for assault by Dempsy with intent to murder, he was fined $25 and put under bonds of $300 to keep the peace for three months.

The Good Old Hymns.

There's lots o' music in 'em, the hymns of long ago;
An' when some gray-haired brother sings the ones I used to know,
I sorter want to take a hand—I think o' days gone by,
"On Jordan's stormy banks I stand, and cast a wistful eye."

There't lots o' music in 'em—those dear, sweet hymns of old,
With visions bright of lands of light and shining streets of gold;
And I hear 'em ringing, singing, where memory dreaming stands,
"From Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strands."

They seem to sing forever of holier, sweeter days,
When the lilies of the love of God bloomed white in all the ways;
And I want to hear their music from the old-time meetin's rise,
Till "I can read my title clear to mansions in the skies."

We hardly needed singin' books in them old days; we knew
The words, the tunes of every one, the dear old hymn-book through!
We had no blaring trumpets then; no organs built for show;
We only sang to praise the Lord "from whom all blessings flow."

An' so I love the dear old hymns, and when my time shall come—
Before the light has left me and my singing lips are dumb—
If I can only hear 'em then, I'll pass without a sigh,
"To Canaan's fair and happy land, where my possessions lie."

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medinieas directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. LATEST.

PROBABLE CAUSE.

Miss Richardson of Revere Held for Grand Jury.

The case of Mrs. Katherine V. Richardson of Revere, who it is alleged attempted to poison her mother, is ended as far as the lower court is concerned. The case which has occupied some days was heard before Judge Bosson at Chelsea.

The evidence was all in Friday and Saturday was given up to arguments.

Judge Bosson reserved his decision until this morning.

He finds probable cause to believe Miss Richardson guilty of the offence charged, and held her for the Middlesex grand jury.

The specific charge against Miss Richardson was that she administered arsenical poison to her mother, Mrs Harley Richardson, with intention of killing her.

Rescued from Eighth Floor.

Frank Pollock of Wollaston had a thrilling experience at the Equitable building fire in Boston, but did not lose his head as reported in a Boston daily. He is a designer, and has an office on the eighth floor. When the fire was reported he made an investigation and then went back for his books. Before starting to descend he stepped out of a revolving window onto a balcony to get a little fresh air, when some one closed the window or it swung to. It was a long time before he was discovered and rescued.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Quincy will soon be as famous for pilgrimages as Plymouth and Concord, as parties come now almost daily. Surely there are many historic spots of National interest, and enterprises which are novel to many. A brief list is given below.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN ADAMS.

Franklin street, Quincy Adams, house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Patriotic societies admitted free, although contributions are welcome to defray expenses of keeping house open and in repair. Small fee asked the general public.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

BURIAL PLACE OF PRESIDENTS ADAMS.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. In cellar is old town hearse, also box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams. At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

HANCOCK CEMETERY.

Hancock street, across from First Church. Many old stones, among the oldest that of Rev. John Hancock, father of the Patriot, who died May 7, 1744. Was fifth minister of First Church.

PRESIDENTS ADAMS MANSION.

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants. Not open to public.

JOHN HANCOCK BIRTHPLACE.

Adams street, junction of Dimmock and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born.

MYLES STANDISH CAIRN.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution, of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept. 30, 1621, guided by the indian Tisquantum.

SQUAW ROCK.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN.

Penns hill, erected June 17, 1896, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son, John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

DOROTHY Q. HOUSE.

Hancock street, corner Butler road, Quincy. Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Has quaint old paper on parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber and other interesting features. Private house, not open to public.

PRESIDENTS LANE.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

Many other points of interest might be mentioned: Thomas Crane Memorial Hall which is the public library building; Merrymount, the home of Mrs. John Quincy Adams, where Morton erected his famous May pole in 1626; the soldiers' monument at Mount Wollaston cemetery with its tablets; the famous Quincy granite quarries, many of great depth; the granite yards where monuments and statuary are being cut, and the polishing mills where granite is polished; also the big ship yard now established at Quincy Point.

SUSPENDED.

Another Member of Permanent Police Force Under a Cloud.

Timothy J. McCarthy one of the permanent police force was suspended Saturday night for an indefinite period for conduct unbecoming an officer. Officer McCarthy did not report for duty Friday night, but shortly before 7 o'clock he called up the station, from the box near Neponset bridge, and said he was sick and unable to go on duty. Officer Holloran was sent down to McCarthy's home to find out the nature of his illness, and it was his report that led to the officer's suspension.

It is said that McCarthy went to Boston that afternoon. Mayor Bryant will make a furthrr investigation before he decides what to do in the case.

MANY ACCIDENTS.

Impossible for Man and Beast to Keep their Footing.

The slippery streets and sidewalks have caused several accidents and in some cases broken limbs today.

Samuel Corning, chief inspector of the Metropolitan sewer, residing at Jamaica Plain, visited Houghs Neck this morning. When alighting from the car near the Sea street office, he fell and broke his ankle. He was taken home on the 12.12 train.

A horse attached to one of the depot carriages slipped on the ice in front of the postoffice this morning and fell down. No damage was done.

Several rumors of accidents have reached the Ledger office but have not been verified.

—There are a good many ways of lobbying at Washington, some fair and most of them bad, but no one can find fault with the method employed by Congressman Francis G. Newlands of Nevada to help along his irrigation bill at the last session. There was a pretty strong opposition to committing the government to the policy of irrigation in the arid West. Some doubted its value and others its propriety, and sectional jealousy was aroused. It was freely predicted that the bill would not pass. But Mr. Newlands, becoming desperate, struck out a new line of persuasion. He invited members of the Senate and House to dine at his house. After dinner the host announced to his guests that he would give a stereopticon show. Then he threw on the screen pictures illustrating the benefits of irrigation in the West. His colleagues were convinced. He repeated the dinners and the magic lantern shows until victory was won. There is no doubt that Congressman Newland's magic lantern pictures, more eloquent than rhetoric and more convincing than statistics, are to be credited with influencing a vast addition to the wealth of the nation.—Boston Courier.

THE EXCEPTION.

I hold a certain girl in mind,
Not far above the mediocre,
Yet, strange to say, I'm half inclined
To yoke her.

In looks, 'tis true, a likelier maid
Perchance has crossed this bard's horizon;
More beauteous girls he's often laid
His eyes on.

Ibsen and Richard Strauss she knows,
But really she's no rara avis.
Ragtime appeals, and, I suppose,
Dick Davis.

One day each week she cuts pink tea,
Departs this life of sweets and orchids
And leads a club of twenty-three Or four kids.

While other girls their charms possess
She has an extra one that strikes me
Which others lack; I must confess
She likes me!

That's why I hold this girl in mind,
In most things merely mediocre;
That's why I'm more than half inclined
To yoke her.

Eddie—A repetition of the same thing in different words.

"Correct. Can you give an example?"

"Yes'm. Anthracite coal."

"Why is that tautological?"

"Because all anthracite is coal."

Teacher—Jimmie, can you give another example?

Jimmie—Yes'm—cold street cars.

"How do you make that out?"

"Why, all street cars is cold."—Baltimore Herald.

Too Risky.

"For thirty years a man in New Jersey never went out of his home except at night," remarked Mr. Mildchap, looking up from his paper.

"I noticed that article," retorted Mrs. Mildchap icily. "I suppose you think it a laudable example to follow, but let me call your attention to the fact, Jeremiah, that he is now dead. I prefer that you shall run no such risks."

And Jeremiah answered softly, "Yessum."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

KING'S NOVEL RECEPTION.

Carnegie's Musician, Almost Nude, Played Skibo Organ.

The London correspondent of the Philadelphia Press tells the following story of King Edward's recent visit to Andrew Carnegie at Skibo castle:

"The royal visit to the castle was a complete surprise to Mr. Carnegie, the king merely telegraphing him a few hours beforehand that he would arrive at a certain time. As luck would have it, Mr. Carnegie was asleep when the "wire" came, and, no one dreaming that its sender was Edward VII., the message was not handed to the laird of Skibo until he woke up.

"Then there was considerable excitement. The king was due in five minutes, and Mr. Carnegie was in despair at the thought that not a single arrangement for his reception had been made. Then he had an inspiration. At Skibo there is an immense pipe organ which Mr. Carnegie had put in some time ago for his own pleasure. An organist who performs upon it is a permanent member of the millionaire's household. Mr. Carnegie determined that the organ should thunder out "God Save the King" as his majesty entered the castle.

But when he sent for the organist the reply came back that the musician had gone down to the neighboring swimming pool.

"'Have him out of the water, then!' shouted Mr. Carnegie.

"And so they had him out. Actually dripping and clad only in a blanket, the wretched man was brought back to the castle on the run, borne into the concert room and plumped down on the organ stool. It was just in time, for the word passed that the king's carriage was coming up the driveway.

"An immense screen had been dragged in front of the organist, now innocent even of his blanket, so that he was shielded from view, and thus, the water dripping from his hair, his fingers and his shoulder blades, the shivering musician played 'God Save the King' while one servant rubbed him with a coarse towel and another gave him brandy.

"As for the king, he was delighted with his musical reception, and when Mr. Carnegie told him the circumstances under which the national anthem had been performed his majesty laughed till his sides ached."

WEDDED AS HORSES RAN.

Novel Marriage Ceremony Performed In Flying Cab.

A most unusual and, from the point of speed, record breaking wedding occurred in Metropolis, Ill., the other curred in[illegible] of the parties beafternoon, the contracting [illegible] than 500 miing Mr. Everett Barnes and Miss Birch Lane of Princeton, Ky., says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The wedding ceremony was performed in a cab by Judge Thomas Liggett while the wedding party was being driven at breakneck speed to catch a southbound Illinois Central train.

The couple had eloped to Metropolis and arrived on the northbound passenger, which comes into Metropolis just thirty minutes ahead of the southbound. They hurried to a cab and informed the driver that they wanted to be married and return on the next train. He drove them to the residence of Judge Liggett, and a messenger was at once dispatched for the license. He was delayed and did not return with the necessary papers until just three minutes before train time. Accordingly the party was hurried into the cab, together with the officiating gentleman, and while the driver was doing his best to make his horses reach the station in time the ceremony which made the two young people man and wife was performed in the cab. Just as they stepped upon the station platform as man and wife the train rolled in, and they had just enough time to respond to the conductor's "All aboard!"

ANTICS OF A DEER.

Went to Church and Then Returned to His Farm.

A full grown buck deer with large antlers followed Nelson D. Ford, a Hall Meadow farmer, and his family to church in Winchester Center, near Winsted, Conn., a distance of five miles, New Year's day, says the New York World. During its several hours' stay in Winchester the animal visited several houses and ate apples from the hands of children, some of whom put their arms around its neck.

The deer returned to the Ford farm the next morning and immediately sought its place among a herd of cattle. Whenever Ford drives his yoke of oxen into the woods to get a load of timber the deer always follows.

The Increasing Popularity of Coral.

Coral bead necklaces, guard chains and collarettes, which have been sold in great quantities during the past season, promise to be in even greater demand than ever before, says the Jewelers' Circular Weekly. From all indications the sales of coral articles by jewelers will eclipse the business which has so far been done in this material for many years. Coral is exceedingly becoming to all complexions, and this, it is believed, accounts in a large measure for its great popularity once the fashion of wearing this substance is revived.

Automatic Pistol.

The steamship Glenogle recently brought the news to Vancouver, B. C., that Lieutenant Hino of the Japanese infantry has invented an automatic pistol which will fire eighty cartridges a minute, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The range is more than a thousand meters. The invention has been taken over by the Japanese government.

FASHION FANCIES.

Ermine Stoles Fashionable — The Rage For Embroideries.

Ermine stoles are a great deal worn in Paris, but this fur is really only suitable for evening wear.

Squirrel will not last in the popular favor long, although the trying gray color is becoming to a few, and it certainly is much cheaper than chinchilla.

The rage for embroideries and incrustations of lace is greater than ever, and we shall do well, therefore, to use any we may have by us.

The amount a smart woman must spend on petticoats if she wishes to appear well dressed is enormous. The underskirt of today is a very important article of dress, being a mass of frills and furbelows, and it must be both dainty and elegant. Although glace petticoats are made up cheaply and look tempting, their wearing properties are small when worn by those who walk much. The economically minded should pick up some remnants of satin or peau de soie, for although a petticoat requires many yards of silk, yet it is permissible to use two shades, one for the upper and the other for the frills. A soft silk lining adds greatly to the wearing qualities.

The dress skirt in the picture is of black silk elaborately tucked and trimmed with velvet.

It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. IS NOT AN ANARCHIST

Man Who Fired at Alfonso's Procession a Monomaniac

DIDN'T INTEND TO KILL KING

Declares That Bullet Was Meant For Duke of Sotomayer, Whom He Holds Responsible For His Troubles —A Bomb From Barcelona

Madrid, Jan. 12.—Feito, the man who fired a pistol on Saturday at the carriage in the royal procession in which the Duke of Sotomayer, with the grand chamberlain, was supposed to be riding, was examined again yesterday. His bearing during the questioning confirmed the previous reports that he is suffering from monomania. A careful official inquiry has shown that Feito is not connected with anarchists. It was first reported that Feito had attempted to assassinate King Alfonso. His majesty received a host of royal and other congratulations upon his escape.

King Alfonso, Dowager Queen Christina and the court were returning from church when Feito fired a pistol at one of the carriages in the royal procession. The bullet went wild and no one was injured. The king heard the shot and put his head out of the carriage window, but he was immediately dragged back into his seat by his mother, who was seated beside him in the carriage.

The escort of civil guards immediately threw themselves upon Feito, and overpowered him. Feito was taken to the police station, where he said he did not desire to kill the king, but the grand chamberlain, the Duke of Sotomayor, at whose carriage he had aimed. He was searched and in his pockets were found unmailed letters marked "Registered" and addressed to President Roosevelt, King Edward, the Emperor of Germany and the president of the high court of justice at Mexico, and also receipts for a number of registered letters and a visiting card of the mayor of Madrid.

Feito was later examined by a magistrate to whom he repeated his statement as to the object of his shooting. He insisted that he was not an anarchist and said that his wife, a French woman, had confined him in a lunatic asylum. The prisoner in re[illegible] this statement [illegible] did not appear excited.

A police sergeant who was the first to seize Feito, makes the following statement: "After the king's carriage had passed Feito, who was standing in front of me, raised a pistol and fired at the second carriage in the procession. Before he could fire a second time, I struck him with my sword. He cried 'You wish to kill me, but I seek the life of the Duke of Sotomayor, who is the cause of all my troubles.'"

The Duke of Sotomayor, however, was not in the second carriage, which was occupied by Marquis de la Mina, the court grand equerry, and two palace officials.

When Feito fired at the carriage of the Duke of Sotomayor the queen mother and the infanta were very much alarmed. The king was very cool, however. Upon arriving at the palace the king repaired to a balcony to watch the excited populace. The queen in the meanwhile was so upset that physicians had to be called to attend her.

The pistol used by Feito was an old double-barreled weapon. It now transpires that Feito was confined for nearly one year in a lunatic asylum in Buenos Ayres. He returned to Spain last June, since when he has lived chiefly in Madrid, vainly seeking employment, often changing his abode, and always attracting notice by his reticence and gloomy aspect. He pestered people in high positions for protection and wrote to this end even to King Alfonso and other sovereigns. He was several times employed as a servant in aristocratic houses but was always dismissed as crazy. Feito alleges that the Argentine government robbed him of hundreds of thousands of pounds and imprisoned him when he instituted suit to recover the money.

A dynamite bomb which was sent here by rail in a box from Barcelona has been found at the railroad station. All attempts to find the consignee of the box have been fruitless. The bomb reached here the day before the funeral of Senor Sagasta and is supposed to have been for use during the passage of the funeral cortege.

THE MORROCCAN UPRISING

Situation Seems to Be Growing Decidedly Worse For the Sultan

London, Jan. 12.—A dispatch to The Morning Leader from Tangier, dated Jan. 11, says the sultan has left Fez with his army and is awaiting the rebels at the Zeiuk river. The sultan's uncle, Mulai-Arafa, has arrived at Tangier and is seeking to raise money for the sultan. The imperial troops are badly armed and unreliable, continues the correspondent, while the rebels are well organized and better armed.

A dispatch to The Daily Express from Tangier says all the Europeans of Fez have now left that place and that the foreign consuls there will follow immediately.

The Times correspondent at Tangier says that the sultan has appealed to the governors of all districts, including Tangier, for men and arms. The general situation is certainly not improving. The sultan has placed his brother, Mulai-Mohammed, under surveillance.

Madrid, Jan. 12.—A dispatch to El Liberal from Tangier, Morocco, says: Official reports from Fez declare the sultan has rearrested his brother, Mulai-Mohammed.

DIRECT LEGISLATION

And Public Ownership of Public Utilities Favored

WILLIAMS' NEW MOVEMENT

Formally Launched on the Political Sea—Says Organization Is Broad Enough to Include Members of All Political Parties

Boston, Jan. 12.—Hon. George Fred Williams has just formulated a plan for a new political organization founded on the three principles of direct legislation, public ownership and restriction of the power of judges. He calls the new party "The People's Rule," and announces that members of all parties will be eligible to membership.

The declaration of principles of "The People's Rule" and the plan of organization given out by Williams is as follows:

"Great social, political and economic changes, involving incalculable consequences to humanity, are now being forced upon us and in them the people's interests seem to be feebly guarded. There is, therefore, supreme necessity in our politics for the impulse of a public opinion, directly, boldly and decisively expressed.

"We believe this impulse will be furnished by an organization of voters of all parties, with a new purpose, a new method and a new program. We suggest:

"The purpose—To restore, extend and effectuate the sovereignty of the popular will.

"The method—To force our principles upon the parties, and insist upon their loyalty thereto.

"The program—Three articles of faith.

"First, direct legislation, or the right of the people at the polls to vote laws or veto legislation.

"Second, the ownership by the people of all public utilities.

"Third, a restriction upon the power of judges in equity to the liberty of a citizen without trial by jury.

"We do not propose a new political party, but an organization within which members of any party may unite to bring their party to the support of our principles.

"We would organize for the distribution of literature, for full and free debate, and for questioning and pledging candidates, to the end that our politicians, officials and legislatures may be turned from mastery to service of the people.

"The name of the organization shall be "The People's Rule."

"The various organizations shall be known as councils and be identified by the name of the political sub-division to which they belong.

"The council units shall be towns and wards, but a provisional state council shall be formed at once to promote immediate local organization, secure state headquarters and perfect a plan for adoption by the members as a permanent state council.

"The principles of "The People's Rule" shall always be subject to a vote by ballot, and to the will of a majority of all members voting."

Mr. Williams was asked if he intended to get out of the Democratic party and he replied with emphasis that on the contrary the organization of this new movement was but one step in his fight against the element which was in control of the Democratic party at the last state convention.

"I simply have made the new organization broad enough to include members of all political parties who want to accomplish the three things enumerated."

Mr. Williams was asked if Mr. Bryan was in the movement and he replied in the negative, stating that this was purely a state affair.

A Naval Academy Scandal

Annapolis, Jan. 12.—As a result of a fight between Midshipman Robert H. Pearson of Concord, N. H., and Francis G. Blasdel of New York, the former is in the hospital with a broken jaw and Blasdel is locked up. The affair was the result of Pearson's refusal to be hazed by upper class men. He was accused of cowardice and was required to fight. Blasdel was pitted against him and in the first round broke Pearson's jaw. The latter, however, continued to fight until the fifth round, when the contest was stopped.

UNCLE BEN WAS AHEAD

"I was in a small village in the interior of the state," said a Chicago man, "and one night at the postoffice I heard a man making certain historical statements that I knew to be incorrect. I felt it my duty to tell him so, and he resented it, and the crowd was with him. A day or two later I got hold of a history and attempted to show wherein the man was wrong, but the villager I was talking with replied:

"'Yes, history agrees with you, but I can't. I've got to stick by Uncle Ben.'

"'But is Uncle Ben better authority than history?'

"'Well, he killed five rattlesnakes while he was mowing this summer, and I've never heard that history has even killed one.'" M. QUAD.

Queer Effect of Generosity.

Miles M. O'Brien, ex-president of the board of education, dropped into the offices of the Guardian Trust company the other day to have a chat with Bird S. Coler.

In the course of the conversation he related one of his experiences while visiting a west side grammar school. He asked a number of questions of the various pupils to test their knowledge of the branches taught. Of one of the small boys in the arithmetic class he asked:

"If your father should give your mother $3 today and $6 tomorrow and $4.50 the next day, what would be the result?"

The boy who was at the bottom of the class replied, "She would have a fit."—New York Times.

At last he spoke.

MATRIMONIAL SORROWS

Consume Much Time of Army Department Officials

GLITTER OF WEST POINT

Often Leads Young Officers to Early and Rash Marriages—Sequel Generally Impairs Efficiency of Soldier, Though Creating Sympathy

Washington, Jan. 13.—The spectacle of a venerable senator travelling all the way from New England to Washington during recess to intercede for a change of detail for a young married army officer who had been ordered to the Philippines has directed attention to a passage in the adjutant general's latest report which has excited more comment than any official utterance hereabout in years. This was the paragraph discountenancing early and improvident marriages among subalterns in the army. General Corbin has been accused on all sides of objecting to marriage as an institution when the military service is to be affected by it. As a matter of fact, he has always expressed himself as believing that marriage was a good thing for an officer who realizes in advance the responsibilities attaching to such a change of state, and whose own salary or private means or the dower of his intended bride is sufficient to justify it.

What he does object to, and what other practical men in the higher military walks object to as strongly as he, is the sort of complication typified by the New England case just mentioned. The circumstances are pathetic. The young man, with nothing to depend on for a livelihood except his salary of $116.67 a month, married a young woman who is in a very overwrought nerpposite end of the earth, he leaves her without a home roof over her head, as they feel unable, on their small income, to rent a dwelling. It has been hard enough for them to get along on his salary while together; apart it would cost them more to live, even if he remained at some out-of-the-way post in this country; and when it is remembered that the most expensive place of residence under the jurisdiction of the United States is the Philippine archipelago, the chances are that the husband will be able to spare the wife very little indeed, and may have to run into debt in order to do that.

It is estimated that three-quarters of the mail received at the war department, dealing with the personal affairs of officers, as for its burden such cases as this, modified by individual conditions. A petty large element in the category of hexpedient matrimony comes through be glitter of the commencement exeises at West Point. For the better art of four years the young men thei have been kept in almost monastic clusion. Their knowiedge is in tomespects as limited as it could very welbe, and in the glamour of the closing ours, with music and dancing, moonlit walks and brilliant costumes, man of the cadets become involved in lo affairs without the slightest thout of the inevitable sequel.

A year or o later the department hears from pi of these with some sorry story. rhaps the young people have drift apart, not having known their m minds when they plunged into tir hasty union, and now, in order to hi their troubles from the world, the hband wishes to change his station tsome place where there are no "mad quarters," so that the wife will he an outward excuse for going back her parental home. Or money is sce, and they want to go to some rote garrison where no expenditures ill be expected of them. Or inspect confirms a complaint made by commandant that such-and-such young officer is always shabby orinsoldierly appearance, and quiet ing brings out the fact that, as both wife and husband cannot wear gaplumage on small pay, the wife toorecedence, as became her sex. Orstly worse, the young officer, as giant of practical business as he form was of matrimony, has been boring right and left from his comradatil he is distracted in mind and doet know which way to turn. It is as stage that the temptation to dupte pay accounts becomes strong; many a well-meaning young fellow, ing it impossible to keep two pes on one allowance, takes his chance a trick which he knows would n him to dishonor if found out, bhose effect he hopes to intercepore it reaches the verge of exposu

Prof the departmental authorities w not feel so strongly on this point attention they owe to other and larger interests were not diverted so much of the time to the individual misfortunes of junior officers. Such cases excite the sympathy of senators and representatives, who perhaps remember early struggles of their own; they do not pause to reflect that an army officer, when he seeks his commission, abdicates the liberty he would have enjoyed as a civilian, and consecrates himself to a life profession hedged about with numberless limitations. The present move against rash matrimony is a move in the direction of governmental economy and good administration not less than of military discipline.

MOODY BADLY HURT

Secretary of Navy In a Runaway Accident at Annapolis

Annapolis, Jan. 13.—Secretary of the Navy Moody was seriously, but not dangerously, injured in the naval academy grounds yesterday by a runaway accident. Accompanied by Senator Hale, the secretary arrived here at 2 o'clock to inspect the new buildings being erected in the naval academy grounds, being driven from the railroad station in Superintendent Brownson's carriage. Cadets were drawn up in line of salute just inside the academy grounds and as the carriage bearing the secretary, Senator Hale and their escort, Lieutenant Poyer, passed in review a salute of 17 guns belched forth.

The restive horses attached to the carriage swerved suddenly and got beyond control of the driver. They dashed past the line of cadets, the driver making every effort to quiet them. The breaking of the pole of the carriage as the animals dashed down the roadway served to render them more excited. As the maddened animals dashed down a hill the driver, seeking to stop them, suddenly turned their heads into a vacant lot between two houses. Secretary Moody, who had opened the door of the carriage as the horses dashed over the frozen ground, suddenly leaped to the pavement as the carriage made the turn into the enclosure. He landed on his face on the pavement and was rendered unconscious by the shock.

The battalion of midshipmen had broken ranks without orders as the carriage dashed by and very soon the secretary was carried to the residence of Superintendent Brownson, where he shortly recovered consciousness. Slight cuts and bruises on his forehead, nose and face are thought to be the extent of the secretary's injuries. Neither Senator Hale nor Lieutenant Poyer were injured, as the horses were brought to the turn in the open lot.

Filipinos Friendly to Taft

Manila, Jan. 13.—A delegation of former insurgents visited Governor Taft yesterday and urged him to remain here and not accept the nomination to be an associate justice of the United States supreme court to succeed Justice Shiras. The delegates said the whole Filipino people petitioned President Roosevelt to allow Governor Taft to stay here. The delegation sent a cable message to Washington urging his retention as governor of the Philippine Islands.

McCormick Presents Credentials

St. Petersburg, Jan. 13.—Ambassador McCormick presented his credentials to the czar at Tsarskoe-Selo yesterday. The czar and czarina extended the most cordial welcome to the ambassador. Although only notified on Saturday of Ambassador McCormick's arrival the czar arranged the audience so as to enable him to participate in the Russian New Year's reception.

Protest Likely to Come

London, Jan. 13.—Although Russians and Turks, cables the Constantinople correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, deny the statement, I am informed upon the best authority that two Russian torpedo boats passed up the Bosphorus some nights ago, being the first of the four Russian vessels that received permission to pass the Dardanelles last September.

The Crown Princess' Folly

Geneva, Jan. 13.—Dr. Zehme, counsel at the Saxon court for the Crown Princess of Saxony, who recently eloped with M. Giron, has issued a statement to the effect that the crown princess has no intention of leaving Giron. She is taking steps to obtain a divorce and nothing more.

Jones Will Quit Senate

Little Rock, Jan. 13.—The 34th general assembly of Arkansas organized yesterday. Jan. 20 was fixed as the day for balloting for the United States senatorship. Former Governor Clarke has a majority of the instructed votes over Senator Jones.

Morgan's Latest Big Venture

Brussels, Jan. 13.—It is said here that a new Morgan trust is projected to include all the British, German, French and Italian shipping companies trading between Europe and South America.

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medicine as directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. For sale by all druggists.

COAL AT FIVE DOLLARS.

The Selling Price to Middlemen at Tidewater.

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—The proceedings before the anthracite coal strike commission yesterday consisted principally of the calling of witnesses by the Delaware and Hudson company to tell of the conditions existing in and around its collieries and to refute certain testimony presented against the company when the miners' side was being heard. In the absence of Chairman Gray Brigadier General Wilson again assumed the duties of chairman.

The Delaware and Hudson company expects to conclude its case today, when the Erie company, which controls the Hillside Coal and Iron company and the Pennsylvania Coal company, will present its side of the controversy.

The first witness was Abel I. Culver of New York, controller of the Delaware and Hudson company. His direct examination brought out nothing new beyond what he had stated on Saturday. On cross-examination by C. S. Darrow, counsel for the miners, Mr. Culver said that the Delaware and Hudson company was selling coal to middlemen at tidewater at $5 a ton for prepared sizes. He did not know what prices the middlemen were receiving from the public beyond what he had read in the daily newspapers.

C. C. Rose, superintendent of the coal department of the Delaware and Hudson company, testified that several of the company's collieries were flooded as a result of the strike of the steam men on June 2. On cross-examination he said he would rather let the mines fill with water than submit to unreasonable demands made by a union. He considered that the strikers were dictating to the company and rather than surrender a principle he would let the property become damaged.

George Anderson, a clerk in the coal department of the company, presented numerous statistics bearing upon the issues before the commission. One of the statements showed that 2388 of the company's 13,258 employes have been working in or about the mines from 10 to 60 years. He produced data showing the workings of the company's relief fund with which more than 5000 of the company's employes are connected.

[illegible] pay each year, the company contributing an equal amount. Men who are injured receive $6 a week for three months, and in case of death their heirs receive $50 for funeral expenses. The widows receive $3 a week for one year and $1 a week for one year for each child under 12 years of age. The company fixed $2.18 as the amount a contract miner should contribute as a day's pay.

Thomas R. Thomas, outside foreman at the Jermyn colliery of the company, told of the difficulty he had in inducing the men to mine more coal. He produced a paper alleged to have been drawn up by local union 1025, which stated that any men loading more cars in the heading than are loaded in the chambers would be expelled from the union. Two men, he said, violated this alleged rule of the union and their tools were destroyed and one of their houses was dynamited as a result of not restricting their daily output.

The two miners referred to, Michael McHale and Harry Gilbert, were put on the witness stand and corroborated the testimony of Mr. Thomas who, on cross-examination, said he was always willing to meet grievance committees of his own employes but he would refuse to meet officials of the union who are not employed in the mine over which he has charge. He added he had never received orders from the company officials not to deal with the officers of the Miners' union.

On redirect examination he said the contract miners averaged about four hours a day, and that he had talked with union men who said they were not favorably inclined towards the organization but that they were compelled to belong to it.

Mr. Anderson also presented a statement showing that the 28 collieries of the company lost 368 10-hour days in 1901 for which the employes were responsible. Of these 115 were lost on account of picnics and other holidays (not including legal holidays); 59 days on account of "Mitchell day" and other union days, and 194 days on account of strikes and suspensions. Another statement offered by the witness showed that since the strike ended in the latter part of October the 28 collieries lost 116 days, reducing the coal production of the company 92,581 tons. The men had been requested to work on Thanksgiving day and New Year's day, but they ignored the request, he said. None of the mines worked on "Mitchell day," he added, and 12 collieries were idle the day after Christmas.

The Cutters' union officials placed pickets at the Tuttle factory, where the cutters are on strike, but it was without result, as the Boot and Shoe Workers' union made no attempt to fill the shop with cutters from that organization.

Good Afternoon.

It is the duty of every householder to sprinkle ashes on his sidewalk.

The recent article which appeared in the Ledger on the "Burning of ashes" from a Chelsea minister's experience, has been tested by many Wollaston citizens with great success and considerable saving of fuel. The old adage that "Necessity is the mother of all invention" holds good in this case.

The appointment of Frank E. Burrell to the permanent police force of the city is the best that has been made in recent years. Mr. Burrell is Quincy born, of good reputation, strong physique, and intelligent, and we believe will be faithful in the discharge of his duties and a terror to evil doers. Recent developments in the Police department show that in the past some very unworthy men have been appointed, because somehow they have passed the civil service examinations, and the rules have limited the number of names certified to the Mayors for appointment. Character and intelligence should be more prominent factors in civil service examinations for the Police department.

Coasting is a highly exhilarating sport when carried on under suitable supervision, unattended by danger. The Wollaston hills have been thronged with young people and even a few of the older folks have not disdained a coast on a heavy double runner.

Unfortunately of late there have been a few accidents thus marring the sport to such a degree that some children have been forbidden to coast. The only courses open are either to prohibit sliding on the Wollaston streets, or else to designate certain streets for sliding and to have proper supervision. There is imperative need of some action.

It is learned from Principal Finch that the pupils in all the rooms of the Wollaston school had been carefully warned of the danger of the steep hill close by and sliding during the time teachers have charge is strictly forbidden. None of the accidents have occurred during time the children were under the care of the teachers.

Fitness seem to have been the qualification required by President Alden in the appointment of the standing committees of the City Council rather than locality. There may be some truth in the claim that Ward Five has the cream, but no member of the City Council of 1903 is better qualified to act as chairman of the Finance Committee than Nathan G. Nickerson, and it must be admitted that Walter F. Nichols is one of the most level headed leaders of the reelected Councilmen.

An analysis of the City Council Committees may be of interest:

Councilmen Nickerson, Nichols, Whiton and Loud will serve on one committee only, the first two being chairmen of important committees.

Every ward gets one chairmanship and Wards Three and Five two each. All the chairmen are reelected members.

Ward Two was the only Ward to get two members of the Finance Committee.

One Democrat was appointed to a chairmanship.

Ward Five has two members of the Street Committee, all the other Wards having one each.

Wards One, Two and Six have no representatives on the Committee on Fire Department and Police, because Wards Three and Four have two each.

All Wards are represented on the Committee on Sewers and Water Supply, but Ward Two has two members.

Ward One has two of the three members of the Committee on Legislative Matters, and Ward Three has two of the three on Health and State Aid.

The Ward Three men received the largest number of appointments—eight in all—to seven for Wards Two and Four, and six for each of the other wards.

Ward One has the smallest representation in the City Council this year—only three.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ President Baer is blamed for the coal trouble because it is said that the independent operators are allowed to handle the coal which his road ought to deliver at tidewater. The independents mine 17 per cent. of the coal and the combine mine 83, so that it is natural to inquire why one-fifth is allowed to control four-fifths. It is believed in many quarters that Baer could break the corner in 24 hours if so disposed. A Congressional committee of inquiry is bent on settling this point, if possible and the country awaits the result with something akin to impatience.—Lynn Item.

MERRYMOUNT CLUB.

Representative Freeman is Elected President for 1903.

The annual meeting of the Merrymount club of Wollaston, was held in club room on Monday evening and the following officers were elected President,—R. R. Freeman.

Vice President,—W. S. Pinkham.
Treasurer,—W. O. Parker.
Secretary,—E. W. Bowker.
Executive Committee,—R. R. Freeman, W. S. Pinkham, W. O. Parker, E. W. Bowker, F. W. White, James Casey, Hamilton Flood, W. I. Dewson and H. S. Taylor.

At the conclusion of the meeting, retiring President W. E. Simmons was presented by the members of the club with an etching, for which he returned his thanks in his usual graceful manner.

Twenty-five new members are to be admitted to the club at the next meeting of the executive committee, and a very prosperous year is anticipated.

Letter Carriers' Banquet.

The thirteenth annual banquet of the Quincy branch of the National Association of Letter Carrier's was held Monday evening at the Hancock House. In addition to the carriers' there was present the clerks of the several postal stations in Quincy. The special guests were Postmaster Charles L. Hammond, Mayor Charles M. Bryant and Frederick W. Tirrell. Covers were laid for forty. John H. Walsh, president of the Carriers' association, presided at the after dinner exercises and introduced Postmaster Hammond, Mayor Bryant and Mr. Tirrell, each of whom made brief remarks.

After Brief Illness.

Mr. Frank Barnes died at his home on Upland road this morning after a brief illness, aged 56 years.

Mr. Barnes had long been a resident of Quincy. He was a shoemaker by trade and of late years has been employed at Brockton. He was a member of Rural lodge of Masons, and Merrymount lodge, Knights of Honor. Also a veteran of Civil war, having served in Co. B of the 60th Regiment, of which F. E. Bent was captain, and in which several Quincy men were officers and privates.

He leaves a son and daughter.

Police Rumors.

It is probable that Officer Timothy J. McCarthy will not be reinstated as a member of the permanent police force, as other charges than those for which he was suspended on Saturday will probably be brought against him. It is reported that he visited the police station Monday and conducted himself in such a manner as to make his reinstatement an impossibility.

The state society of the Daughters of the Revolution have a meeting at Hotel Vendome, Boston, on Friday afternoon. Dr. Joseph Armand Bedard of Lynn is to give an address on "The part taken by the French in the War of the Revolution," which will be followed by a short musical program, social hour and refreshments.

—The Boston Bicycle club will hold its 25th annual meeting Wednesday evening at the Boston clubhouse of the Hull-Massachusetts club.

He was for many years a member of Hose 4 at Quincy Point, and served as foreman of the company. He has also been a member of the Ward Two Republican Committee. Some years ago he was a skilled base ballist, and caught out many a man behind the bat.

CHAPTER GOATS.

Plans to Remove Them from Masonic Hall Tonight.

It seems that there are more goats in Masonic hall, and that they also must be removed. That they belong to St. Stephen chapter instead of Rural lodge and that they are kept in a different closet somewhat remote from where the others removed last week were quartered.

These are higher degree goats and more frisky, and greater care will be necessary to prevent their escape.

Work was commenced this morning in building a stageing in front of Hotel Greenleaf for their removal, and it is probable that the goats will be removed tonight after midnight.

The Mayor's Double.

Senator Wallace of Fitchburg has early made a good impression on his fellow-members. He bears in a way a striking resemblance to Mayor Bryant of Quincy and Senator Sprague of Quincy was one of the first to notice it on inauguration day. Wallace is a paper manufacturer in Fitchburg, and he is a pretty good type of the sort of citizens they are always trying to get into the senate, but who somehow decline because they cannot leave their private affairs. Mayor Babbitt of Fitchburg, as late as the democratic state convention, when Sen. Blodgett was still in high bloom, talked of even as possible candidate for the presidency, told me, that Wallace would be the man. "Don't be led astray," said Babbitt, "it is going to be that way and no other."—Journal.

Weld of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Hingham, officiated. He was assisted by four choir boys of Christ church, Quincy, with their leader, Mr. E. Landis Snyder, and eight choir boys from his own church. The family accompanied the remains to Westerly this morning where brief funeral services will be held at the home of Mr. Bradford's sister, Mrs. Jane Segar of Main street. The remains will be taken to the receiving vault in River Bend cemetery, and in the spring interred in the family lot.

Sudden Death.

The death of Mrs. George F. Phillips of Chestnut street this noon will be a great shock to her friends, as last evening she was out coasting and the other evening at a dance. She was taken ill this morning at her residence with convulsions and was removed to the Quincy Hospital. She lived but a few hours, Brights disease being probably the cause of her death. She leaves a husband and one daugther about two years old.

MANY ADVENTURES.

Arthur H. Paterson Writes of Experiences in the Northwest.

Milestone, Assa.,
N. W. T. Canada,
Jan. 6, 1903.

Editor Daily Ledger:

Now that I am once more on my feet and able to work, I thought I would write to you and tell you about "the much talked of Canadian North West." I have now been practically all through Canada and enjoyed the place immensely until winter set in. Just imagine how cold it is out here at times. Sometimes the thermometer registers between 50 and 60 degrees below zero.

As it would take too much of your time to listen to my trip in detail I shall name the incidents and places where I met with adventures. I left Quincy during the month of June with the intention of going to Arkansas, but when I arrived in Boston I changed my mind and went to Prince Edward Island which lies at the mouth of the St. Lawrence river. It is called the "Garden of the Gulf," and it couldn't be better named, as it is one of the prettiest places I ever visited.

After staying with my grandparents on the island for a number of weeks, I took a notion to take a trip through Canada. I took the train from St. Johns, New Brunswick, for Winnipeg, Manitoba. It took me four days to make the trip. Although a little tired when I reached that city I must say I enjoyed the journey, as the scenery all along the line was simply beautiful. My eyes were opened very wide when we were riding along the banks of Lake Superior. It is a grand lake and reminds one of the ocean as it is impossible to see land when looking directly out at sea.

On my arrival at Winnipeg I thought I would take in the sights. Winnipeg is a flourishing city and reminds one of Boston on a small scale. It seems to be the distributing point for central Canada and the North West territories.

I next went to Portage La Prairie, and while there I secured a position with a rancher and went out to his ranch with him. This was my first experience as a cow puncher or rather a cow boy. I just seemed suited for the life as there is a spice of danger and recklessness about it.

After "learning the ropes" I was sent with a number of other "punchers" to the corral near the station with a drove of steers. Returning home we ran into a threshing outfit and for the joke of it we thought we would give the farmers a hand. We had only been with them a few minutes when a terrific explosion wrent the air and those that were standing near the engine or separator were either thrown into the air or knocked down so great was the concussion. Hard luck seemed to follow me for I received a broken nose and a dislocated shoulder. Two men were killed and 5 or 6 injured. I don't know what caused the boiler to explode but I certainly will remember my first experience at threshing.

I remained in the hospital a few days and then went to the home ranch of the man I had been working for at Portage La Prairie. His home was located in Medicine Hat. This is a pretty little town with about 1700 inhabitants. It has water works and almost every house is connected with the water supply. Natural gas is found here, and it is utilized in every possible manner. The hills around the town are full of coal, rattlesnakes and Indians. I once more got into the saddle and tried to ride my broncho, but found that the injuries that I received in the explosion had weakened me so much that I couldn't remain in the saddle, so I accepted a position on the Bridge and Building Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The outfit consisted of a dining car, sleeping car, material car, and a tool car. Their work consisted of building all stations, tanks, section houses and bridges on the western division, We covered a distance of about 700 miles, that is from Brandon, Man. to Calgary, Alberta. Nothing of any interest occurred until we arrived at Maple Creek, Assa.

While at work here early in November our outfit was shunted onto a side track. One night or I should say morning, a cattle train was taking on stock and they were on the same track where we were. Not liking to disturb us any more than possible, in our sleep, the conductor of the cattle train ordered the engineer to move our outfit onto another track. They had no more than transferred us than a heavy freight from the east came down the grade at at a rate of speed exceeding 40 miles an hour. Somehow or other the switch was left open, the train from the east came on without any warning of the disaster that lay before them.

It all happened in a moment. The two engines met head on and the crash could be heard for a mile. The engineer and fireman of the cattle train jumped, thereby saving there lives. The engineer and fireman of the other train were not so lucky. The engineer received a terrible wound on the head, from which he succumbed a few days later. The fireman received a broken wrist and his hand was cut badly. About 55 sheep were terribly mangled and about 10 freight cars smashed into kindling wood. Had our outfit been left on the track we all would have been hurled into eternity. That day our crew were engaged in picking up the wreck and pictures of the wreck and our crew were taken by sightseers. I shall try and obtain a photo and will send it to you.

After everything was cleared up we started for Crane Lake and built a new bridge there. Then we went to Sidewood and repaired a bridge that had been damaged. Having completed our work there we started for headquarters at Moosejaw. We remained in this town a couple of days awaiting orders. On Nov 26, the outfit was ordered to Milestone, to lay a two mile pipe line and build a tank.

That day I was promoted from bookkeeper to a position as assistant foreman. I felt quite proud of my new position as I was the youngest man in the crew.

That night before we were to leave town I thought I would go over and get a few things in the store, and my chum, another Yankee, named Bert Peterson, started to come with me. You know the accident that befell us so I'll not repeat it here, as it makes me shiver to think how near death poor old Bert was. I would not have been injured had I not lost my balance when I pulled him from beneath the wheels. He was so heavy it gave me quite a job to get him out.

My injuries were not very serious as all that happened to me was a fractured cheek bone and a small bone broken near the nose and a number of bruises on the body. My right foot received a few cuts.

My friend, Mr. Murphy, told me that he had written to you. It made me smile when he told me how he had found your address. I am now quite well and hope to regain a little of my lost weight in a short time.

My chum that lost his leg is gaining every day, and will soon be out of the hospital.

I never thought I would see dear old Quincy again, but if nothing happens between now and July I shall visit my home for a few days.

Well you must be tired of hearing about accidents and wrecks, so I shall describe the country about here. The land is as level as a table and it is a wonderful wheat-growing country. Over 40 bushels to the acre were raised here last summer, and oats yielded over 100 bushels to the acre. The air is very dry here so one does not mind the cold so much as he would along the eastern coast. Today a terrific blizzard is raging and one would get lost if they tried to go a hundred yards distant. Owing to the weather our men did not go out to work today.

Well, Mr. Prescott I must apologize for taking up so much of your valuable time and will now close. I shall write you again as soon as we start travelling.

Yours most cordially
Arthur H. Paterson

A Money Maker.

The steel seven-masted schooner Thomas W. Lawson, now discharging coal at the Metropolitan Coal Company's pier near Congress street bridge, is considered the money-maker of the coast. It is claimed that 8000 tons coal can be stowed away in her hold, and at the prevailing coal rates some $20,000 earned in two weeks' time means that she is a most attractive investment. She is built with water tight compartments and it is claimed that had the Frank A. Palmer and Louise B. Crary been so equipped when they collided out in the bay recently both vessels would be afloat today.—Post.

TODAY'S COURT.

Warren Potter was arraigned for violation of Ordinance 15 of Quincy, by peddling without first having a permit from the Inspector of Provisions, and was fined $1.

John Decelle was arraigned for assault on Frances Richards at Quincy, and fined $5.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

CARNEGIE ON GIVING.

Philanthropist Considers It a Real Task.

BUSINESS EASY IN COMPARISON.

Mere Holiday Making Contrasted With Present Work, He Said In a Speech at Dedication of Library Given to Washington—Prefers Not to Be Distracted by Hearing of Humanity's Woes and Needs.

With President Roosevelt and many public men present, the new public library, Andrew Carnegie's gift to Washington, has just been formally dedicated, says the New York World. The house of representatives adjourned in order that its members might witness the dedication.

Perhaps happiest of all was Mr. Carnegie himself, who came over to make the principal speech at the dedicatory exercises and to see for the first time the magnificent building.

Mr. Carnegie expressed himself as greatly pleased with the construction and arrangement of the building, declaring that it was one of the best he had seen.

"It was my desire not to be present," he said, "but the request of those who have labored so long and successfully to establish this library could not, and I concluded should not, be resisted. It is so little to give money to a good cause, and there an end; so grand to give thought and time. The difference should always be accentuated between the man who merely gives of his surplus and him who gives himself.

"I shall not descant upon the advantages of the free library, but this seems an opportune occasion to explain just what the free library business means upon which I have embarked.

"Seven hundred library building have been given, chiefly within the last two years, most of which are built or under construction. During July last 276 applications for library buildings were received from various parts of the English speaking world, all of which were or are being dealt with. Upon arrival in New York last month we found over 450 additional applications from the United States and Canada.

"We have today 385 new applications on hand. Thus there are under consideration today more than 800 applications, the great majority of which will no doubt be given.

"As long as communities are willing, as you are in Washington, to maintain a library from the proceeds of taxation as part of the city's educational system, so long I intend to labor in that vineyard, keeping myself free as possible from hearing of the woes and wants of humanity in general, to which, if I listened, I would soon become unfit for my special work, which, I think, is best of all.

"This is not charity, this is not philanthropy—It is the people themselves helping themselves by taxing themselves. They owe no man anything of moment.

"The submerged tenth, which in the census we designate as delinquents, do not appear to be properly the objects of private beneficence. They should be the care of the state. The habitual criminal, drinker, loafer, needing the necessaries of human life should be cared for, being human, by the state, town or community as a whole, and some day when we have gone further in the path of general civilization, though these will still be clothed, fed, housed, nursed, educated and reformed as far as possible, they will be isolated from their fellows as unworthy to wear the revered name of father or the holier name of mother.

"I rejoice for my part that I have found a field which still occupies my thought and time and keeps me, although retired from business, as busy a man, I think, as ever I was in business, which always was more of a recreation than a burden. It was easy compared with the life I now lead—mere holiday making in comparison. Verily, the way of the distributer is hard.

"I dread the coming of the day when I shall have to look out for new fields for distribution, for we have now systematized library giving. It will be a great plunge. Between 400 and 500 letters a day now reach my secretaries, and most of them also promptly reach the waste baskets.

"A man who has surplus wealth and escapes making a fool of himself once a week or so in view of all the temptations he has to resist and all the foolish things he is urged to do, should be considered above the average in wisdom."

In his speech President Roosevelt said that Mr. Carnegie's gift was the best possible method of helping people to educate themselves.

Novel Method of Sending an Appeal.

A unique appeal has been sent out by a number of English personages, including the bishop of Thetford and the Marchioness of Cholmondeley, for funds to be used for preserving a memorial window or some such monument to Amy Robsart in the church at Lyderstone Hall, where she worshiped. Instead of sending these appeals to every one broadcast and indiscriminately they are sent only to women bearing the name of Amy.

J. P. Morgan's New Title.

When Secretary Shaw's daughters accompanied him to the subtreasury the other day, their father pointed out to them the office of J. Pierpont Morgan on the other side of Wall street and the new Stock Exchange.

"Is Mr. Morgan a bull or a bear?" inquired one of the daughters.

"Oh, he is the boss of the menagerie," gravely replied the secretary of the treasury.—New York Times.

DEEP SEA KITEFLYING.

Germany and America Will Unite to Explore Tropical Air Currents.

It is announced that the German government has placed a naval vessel at the disposal of Mr. A. Lawrence Rotch of Boston, the director of the Blue Hill Meteorological station of Harvard observatory, for the purpose of enabling him to carry out his long cherished plan of investigating by means of kites the air currents above the great trade winds of the tropics. Mr. Rotch's cruise, it is expected, will last about three months and will cover the middle Atlantic between Africa and South America.

The problem involved is one which scientific men are almost entirely ignorant about, and it is believed that it can be solved only by means of specially constructed kites, such as have been used for similar purposes at the Blue Hill observatory for a number of years past. When flown from the deck of a moving steamship it has been proved that these can be sent to unusually great heights, for if above the surface winds a stratum of motionless air intervenes the vessel can be urged forward so as to pull the kite up into the next breezy tract. Mr. Rotch originated this form of scientific kiteflying a little over a year ago and has had the satisfaction of seeing it generally adopted by European meteorologists as being far more effective than flying the kites from a stationary base.

Some preliminaries in the way of equipment of the expedition have still to be arranged, but it is the hope of the Harvard meteorologists to have everything in readiness for a start next July. Given the use of a vessel completely manned and equipped the cost of the expedition to America will not be above $10,000.

FORTUNES IN BLUE FOXES.

Novel Industry That Is Prospering In the Aleutian Islands.

The success of the Alaska Commercial company in raising blue foxes in the Aleutian islands has attracted nearly a dozen venturesome Americans, who have engaged in the same business, says a special dispatch from Tacoma, Wash., to the Chicago Inter Ocean. Though having little labor to perform, these men live in complete storm swept isolation while waiting for their herds to multiply.

Chris Miller, who reached Tacoma recently from Kodiak, says that the fox raisers consider three things necessary to get successfully started. They first lease one of the Aleutian islands from the federal commissioner of Kodiak, paying a yearly rental of $1. Next they purchase their breeding foxes from the Alaska Commercial company at $75 per pair, and then they usually proceed to one of the Indian camps and purchase a squaw wife, paying $25 to $75, according to beauty and age.

Olaf Bjorsen, who started six years ago with twenty foxes, now has 500. He declares he will not sell until he can realize $50,000, when he will make a clean up and return to his eastern home. The foxes live on dried salmon and thrive on it like Malamutie dogs.

TO TALK WITH SPIRITS.

Duluth Man Thinks Marconi's Plan May Lead to Communication.

A. N. McGindley of Duluth, spiritualist, lawyer and student of occult philosophy, believes the time is approaching when the inhabitants of the material and spiritual worlds will establish communication and hold conversations as intelligible and satisfactory as may now be held over the telephone.

"It is difficult to get an expression of a belief thus advanced into the public press," said Judge McGindley to a representative of the Chicago Record-Herald, "owing to the bigotry which prevails so largely in church organizations. It is only within the last forty years that a person could express the conviction of spirit return without having his mental soundness questioned.

"The spirit world spreads all about us, and science will open up communication with our immaterial brothers before many years have elapsed. I am of the opinion that within five or six years the communication will be as easy and intelligible as conversation over the telephone. Marconi's discovery of wireless telegraphy is a long stride in that direction, I believe, and it would not surprise me if through it the communication is to be opened."

Police Stop Kissing.

The first arrest ever made by an officer of the city of Jackson, Miss., for kissing was recently made at the Union depot, and a precedent has been established that will be strictly adhered to in the future, says the Louisville Courier-Journal. During the afternoon when the waiting rooms were crowded with ladies and children complaint was made to the police that a young couple, strangers in the city, were making themselves ridiculous by their repeated osculations. The police called the couple to time.

Winter.

The north, unfriendliest wind of all that blow,
Sweeps the wide plain with keen and ruthless blast,
Like tiny footfalls hurrying o'er the snow,
The ghosts of summer's leaves go whirling past.

There is no sound of nature, many voiced;
The snow claims all the landscape for his own;
The singing birds that all the year rejoiced
Are hushed, and, lo, the winter reigns alone.

As far as eye can reach the land is white,
And gray sky bends to shrouded earth below,
The only note of color, glad and bright,
Where bitter sweet shines out against the snow.

RAISING OF BLOCKADE

Condition to Precede Adjustment of Allies' Claims

ITALY APPROVES OF PLAN

And Will Receive Moral Support of United States—Sapping of Venezuela's Resources Would Make It Impossible For Her to Settle

Washington, Jan. 13.—Advices received here indicate that while Minister Bowen comes as Venezuela's commissioner in negotiations looking to a settlement of the claims of the allies, President Castro has made it a condition that the blockade shall be raised before Mr. Bowen proceeds with the preparation of the protocol for the peaceful adjustment of the claims.

Moreover, it now develops that in this request Venezuela is likely to have the support of Italy. The United States, though not a party to the negotiations, of course will throw the weight of its moral influence on the same side. The Italian government is influenced in its course by purely economic considerations. It does not desire to crush Venezuela, but simply to procure the repayment of claims. The continuance of the blockade by sapping the very life of the country threatens to make it impossible for Venezuela to pay the claims within any reasonable period of time, so that any judgment rendered against her by private arrangement or by The Hague tribunal would be almost without result.

Furthermore it is held by Italy that there is really no sufficient reason for a continuance of the blockade, which is working great harm to trade, as it already has had its full moral influence upon Castro and longer punishment would serve no useful purpose in the Italian view. The Italian government, it is stated, remains thoroughly loyal to the alliance into which it has entered with Germany and Great Britain, but that fact, it is held, will not necessarily operate to prevent Italy from using her moral influence to have the alliance do what it regards as right, while still keeping within its lines.

Foreigners Supplied Funds

Bonilla Gets His Rights

Panama, Jan. 13.—Information has been received here that the election last October to the presidency of Honduras of Manuel Bonilla has been approved by the Honduran congress.

Bonilla was elected by a big majority. President Sierra, however, refused to turn over the presidential power to him and made efforts to persuade congress to declare his election null. Bonilla gathered his followers and a quantity of munitions of war and threatened to start a revolution if he did not obtain his rights.

The cost of construction was about $3000.

Drowned Where Wife Perished

Alburgh, Vt., Jan. 13.—Henry Mott of this place, well known in Vermont and northern New York as a hay buyer, was drowned while crossing the lake from Rouses Point, N. Y., to Alburgh. About 15 years ago Mott's first wife was drowned within a few rods of the spot where he lost his life, the cutter in which she and her husband were driving breaking through the ice. Mott at one time represented this town in the legislature.

COLORED MAN HONORED

Made Assistant United States Attorney For Boston District

Washington, Jan. 13.—William H. Lewis, colored, has been appointed an assistant United States attorney for Boston. The appointment was made by Henry P. Knowlton, the United States district attorney for the Boston district, but it is understood the selection was made on the suggestion of President Roosevelt.

Lewis was born in Berkeley, Va., just across the River Elizabeth from Portsmouth, on Nov. 28, 1868. Both his parents were former slaves and his father was a Baptist clergyman. Lewis' education began in the common schools of Portsmouth, where his father's church was located. After attending there he went to the state normal school at Petersburg, where he prepared for college. In 1888 Lewis came to New England and entered Amherst college, from which he was graduated with the class of 1892. He entered the Harvard law school in 1892 and during his first two years played contre in the Harvard 'varsity eleven. After graduating from the law school in 1895 he was admitted to the bar.

His political career began in 1899, when he was elected a member of the Cambridge city council. He served three years in the council and last year was sent to the legislature from one of the Cambridge districts, but was defeated last November as a candidate for re-election. In 1896 he married Miss Elizabeth Baker, of the class of 1898 of Wellesley, and they have three children.

Shocking Treatment of an Old Man

Washington, N. J., Jan. 13.—Mrs. Susan Beers, wife of John Beers, aged 60, of Good Springs, her son, Elijah Beers, and a hired man, Frank Gordon, were arraigned here yesterday, charged with inhuman treatment of the woman's husband. It is charged that the prisoners used to chain him up in a dilapidated barn and leave him for days in such a position that he was compelled to get on his hands and knees in order to eat the scanty food that was thrown to him on the barn floor. The prisoners pleaded not guilty and were remanded for trial Jan. 21.

To Leave Boot and Shoe Workers

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 13.—In pursuance of the newly organized movement against the Boot and Shoe Workers' union in Lynn, Salem and Marblehead, a mass meeting of shoe cutters was held here last evening. After the meeting it was claimed that more than 50 cutters had shown a disposition to leave the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and join the new Cutters' assembly of the Knights of Labor, recently formed in this city. If this claim is correct, labor men predict that there will be trouble in Haverhill within a few days.

Burned Everything Available

Queenstown, Jan. 13.—Steamer Mexican, 24 days out from New Orleans, bound to London, reached this port yesterday to obtain a sufficient supply of coal to enable her to reach her destination. Captain Parker reports that extremely severe weather was encountered in mid-Atlantic and his vessel's coal bunkers became exhausted four days ago. Since that time a quantity of timber, all the vessel's spars, her derricks and all woodwork which could be spared was burned to make steam.

Sold Coal at $20 a Ton

Washington, Jan. 13.—V. B. Johnson was the principal witness yesterday before the committee of the senate which is investigating the cost of coal in Washington. He admitted having sold coal at $20 a ton before the strike was declared off. Johnson testified that he bought coal Oct. 28 at $4.75 a ton, Nov. 4 at $5.75, Oct. 17 at $5, Nov. 11 at $7 and on Nov. 25 at $8.25. To each of these prices $2 should be added, he said, to show the cost in this city before he touched the coal.

Sick

Headaches and Dizzy Spells,

Weak, Nervous, Wretched, Tired,

Until Dr. Miles' Nervine Cured Me.

Are you in a "poor condition?" Are you almost ready to give up from exhaustion, nervousness, headaches, backaches, and dizzy spells? No need to mention the details of a run down or "poor condition" to those who are suffering. Better to tell you of Nervine, the remedy sold on a guarantee to help you, and restore your poor weakened nerves to life, strength and health.

"Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine has done a great deal for me. In the fall of 1897 my health was in a very poor condition. Extreme nervousness, dizzy spells and sick headaches made me most miserable. I had been under the care of our local physician for some time, but got no better. I was on the verge of nervous prostration. Had no appetite, and could not sleep. I grew worse as the dizzy spells continued and lost flesh and strength. Oh! those awful days. A lady friend who had taken Restorative Nervine advised me to try it. I bought a bottle at the local drug store and when it was one-half gone I noticed that the medicine was helping me. I continued taking it according to directions until I had used three bottles when I felt so much better I stopped taking it. I feel that my present greatly improved health is all due to Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. I am grateful for the benefit I received and recommend the Nervine wholly on its merits as a nerve tonic and restorative."—MRS. P. M. HOGOBOOM, Dalton, Mass.

RELEASED ON $5000 BAIL

Judge Decides That Richardson Case Must Go Before Grand Jury

Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 13.—The Suffolk county grand jury, which convenes the first Monday in February, will be called upon to consider the case of Miss Katherine V. Richardson, who is alleged to have administered poison to her mother, Mrs. Harley Richardson, at their former home in the Morrison House, Revere. This result was brought about yesterday afternoon when Judge Bosson found probable cause for holding the woman. Miss Richardson's bail was fixed at $5000, the same as that on which she was released from the Charles street jail a few days after her arrest on a complaint issued by the district court. She was able to furnish bail, William L. Wood of Beverly and the defendant's brother, Harry H. Richardson, going on her sureties.

When Judge Bosson stated that he found probable cause for holding Miss Richardson, that her case could be considered by the grand jury, she did not appear to be in the least concerned, and with a smile leaned over and spoke a few words to the nurse, who has been her attendant through the trial. Later, when Clerk Curley pronounced the finding of the court Miss Richardson retained the same composure, remaining apparently indifferent until after she had left the court house.

Surprise at Littleton

Littleton, N. H., Jan. 13.—The news from Chelsea that Catherine Richardson had been held for the grand jury to answer a charge of attempted murder came as a surprise to her acquaintances here. They had followed the newspaper accounts of the proceedings and many expected she would be released.

Dunning Remains In Jail

Boston, Jan. 13.—Edwin J. Dunning, the State street broker, who was arrested on Saturday charged with the larceny of $23,000 from the late Francis C. Brooks, figured in three court proceedings yesterday. In the superior criminal court his lawyer learned that the government would hold the charge of larceny, and would file a bill of particulars. In the bankruptcy court, his attorney filed a voluntary petition of bankruptcy, with liabilities of $132,121, of which only $21 is secured, and assets of $521,000, while in the poor debtors' court he was made one of three defendants in a suit of $5000 brought by the Manufacturers' National bank of Lynn. Dunning still languishes in jail, being unable to secure $20,000 bail, required in the criminal charge.

Pork Probably Not Cooked Enough

Middlebury, Vt., Jan. 13.—The report from the state laboratory, where an analysis of the meat which was believed to have caused a death in the home of Fred R. Brown of Whitney, was received yesterday, and shows that there was no poison in the sample submitted. All the members of the Brown family, as well as two guests, were taken ill on Dec. 21, after eating newly killed pork. Mrs. Brown died on Jan. 3. The guests recovered, but yesterday Brown had a relapse and it is feared that he will not survive. It is now thought that the sickness was due to insufficient cooking of the fresh meat.

Alleged Receiver of Stolen Goods

Providence, Jan. 13.—A warrant was yesterday served on John Nelson, former member of the general assembly, charging him with receiving silver scrap stolen from the Gorham Manufacturing company, and he was placed under arrest, pending arraignment. The police say that they have received complaints which tend to show that a general clearing house for stolen property has been conducted by Nelson, who frequently appears in the local police court as bondsman for all sorts of criminals.

Arbitration Prevails

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 13.—The adjustment of the wage scale of the shoemakers belonging to the local council of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union has been left to the state board of arbitration by agreement of both manufacturers and workmen. This result was reached at a conference yesterday and the agreement has caused great satisfaction.

Banker and Money Missing

Boston, Jan. 13.—Vircenzo Giangrande, an Italian banker and watchmaker, is being eagerly sought for by a number of his countrymen. He has not been seen in Boston for about three weeks, and between $10,000 and $18,000, said to have been intrusted to his care by members of the Italian colony, has apparently disappeared with him.

Teamsters Reach Agreement

Boston, Jan. 13.—After a conference lasting several days, an agreement has been reached between the Master Teamsters' association and the union team drivers, and the wages and hours which were agreed upon when the great strike of last spring was ended will remain in force another year. In addition June 17 is conceded as a holiday.

Got $2500 For Loss of Eye

Providence, Jan. 13.—For the loss of an eye Manuel de Conto was yesterday awarded $2500 by a jury. Conto brought suit against Bernard W. Goodwin, a police officer of Pawtucket, for $5000. The contention was that the officer, for slight cause, struck Conto with a club, injuring him so that he lost the sight of one eye.

Blizzard In Vermont

Chester Depot, Vt., Jan. 13.—A furious blizzard has prevailed in this section since midnight Sunday night. Snow has fallen to the depth of seven inches, the roads are badly blocked and business is practically at a standstill. The storm also damaged trees.

In Need of Repairs

Boston, Jan. 13.—The cruiser Albany arrived last night from Cuelbra Island, where she has been participating in the war maneuvers. She will undergo alteration and repairs at the navy yard.

Verdict In Mrs Tingley's Favor

San Diego, Cal., Jan. 13.—The jury in the Tingley-Times $50,000 libel suit has found for Mrs. Tingley the sum of $7500.

INVIGORATED

HOW A WOMAN GOT HER STRENGTH BACK.

She Took Our Vinol with Good Results.

WE WANT EVERY ONE TO KNOW ABOUT IT.

READ WHAT WE HAVE TO SAY. COME AND SEE US.

We don't want any one in this city to drag themselves through life in pain and misery for the want of enough strength to feel well and happy.

If you feel listless, without ambition and run down, it is a bad sign.

You are running grave chances. You are in a condition to be attacked by most any disease.

This feeling of debility is a symptom that your system is generally demoralized. You should take a tonic.

You should take Vinol, which we know and will guarantee will restore your strength.

Following is one case where it did this. Mrs. T. H. Boyle, of 56 Chestnut St., West Newton, Mass., says:

"Last spring I used one bottle of Vinol. At that time I was all run down and sick. I find that it did me lots of good, and by its use my strength came back to me."

Vinol is a delicious preparation, containing the active curative principles that are found in cod-liver oil, dissolved in a delicate table wine.

Vinol acts directly on the stomach, aiding digestion and at the same time creating a healthy appetite. It gives strength and vigor to every organ of the body.

We endorse Vinol, and guarantee its action, and will gladly refund to any one who is not satisfied the money which they paid for it.

FULL REBATE OF DUTIES

On All Coal Imported Into the United States

LIMIT PLACED AT ONE YEAR

But It Is Considered Unlikely That Coal Will Ever Pay Any More Duty —How Chairman of Ways and Means Committee Changed His Mind

Washington, Jan. 14.—"This means that coal will never pay any more duty," said Representative Babcock of Wisconsin, commenting on the action of the ways and means committee yesterday as he came out of the committee room. "Never in the world," chimed in Mr. Hill of Connecticut, the author of the rebate proposal for treating the coal situation, which with some modification as to detail has been accepted as party policy.

The bill which was brought in yesterday allows a rebate of the duty on all coal, hard and soft, for a period of one year from the date of the passage of the act. The proposed limitation to Atlantic coast ports was abandoned. Mr. McCall's amendment to admit free coal, after the expiration of the year, free of duty from countries which granted a similar privilege to us, secured the support, in the caucus of Republican members preceding the meeting of the full committee, of only McCall and Tawney.

Several others expressed themselves as in favor of that project, but it was believed it would be better to make the present measure of relief as simple as possible, so that it would go through without opposition, and to leave till the next congress the decision of such a question as this proposal of coal reciprocity with Canada, independent of any treaty. Babcock and Hill were particularly emphatic in saying that they would have been glad to go further in this legislation, did they not feel constrained to select what would encounter the fewest parliamentary obstacles.

This decision in favor of free coal for a year represents a very sudden change of front on the part of the leaders. When this session opened the leaders were emphatic in their opposition to any meddling with the tariff. All sorts of reasons were assigned against any change in the coal duties. Representative Payne, chairman of the ways and means committee, is quoted as having said only Monday: "There is an abundance of coal, as a matter of fact, and it is being mined in quantities sufficient to meet every demand. The retail dealers evidently appreciate the value of their opportunity to hold the consumers up and they are doing it. I do not believe that the removal of the duty will have any effect upon present prices. The amount, 67 cents a ton, is a mere drop in the bucket, when the retailers are demanding from $15 to $20 a ton. They could absorb the 67 cents a ton and the consumers would never know the difference. However, the proposed legislation will relieve congress of any responsibility in the matter, so far as tariff is concerned."

The bill adopted provides "that the secretary of the treasury is hereby authorized and required to make full rebate of duties imposed by law on all coal of every form and description imported into the United States from foreign countries for the period of one year from and after the passage of this act." Representative Richardson of Tennessee proposed an amendment striking out the words "for a period of one year," which was voted down. He then proposed an amendment placing all coals on the free list, which was likewise voted down. The final vote on the adoption of the bill was unanimous.

Before the coal debate ends recognition should be made of the vigorous work of Representative Powers, as well as that of Mr. McCall, who has been the recognized leader in these efforts. Mr. Powers not only introduced a free coal bill, but has so persistently besought members of the ways and means committee in its behalf that they have seemingly avoided meeting him in the corridors. There is a messenger's seat at the door of the ways and means committee, which Mr. Powers has so often occupied while lying in wait for the members, that, as he himself facetiously says, an impression has gained ground that the committee had obtained a new doorkeeper.

VESSEL WENT TO PIECES.

Crew of Schooner Oregon Half Drowned and Nearly Frozen

York, Me., Jan. 14.—Three exhausted and half frozen seamen made their way to this town yesterday and reported the total loss of their vessel, the little Rockland schooner Oregon, at Godfrey's Cove, on Sunday last.

The Oregon was on her way back to Rockland, after delivering a cargo of lime in Boston. She had on board 25 barrels of oil. After getting outside of Cape Ann on Sunday the wind began to breeze up from the southeast, with rain, and by midnight it was blowing a stiff gale. The captain of the little craft tried to run in for Portsmouth, but brought up five miles to the eastward, at Godfrey's Cove. The schooner drove right up on the beach, and after a hard battle with the surf all three of the men managed to reach shore. Before morning the Oregon was in pieces on the beach.

The men wandered about for hours before they found the only house in the vicinity, where they rested until yesterday, when they walked to this town. While hunting for the house they were all frost-bitten. They left for Rockland late yesterday afternoon.

The Oregon was one of the oldest of the coastwise fleet, being built in Trenton, Me., in 1851. She was 58 tons net burden and was owned in Rockland.

Suffered Awful Agony

Ellsworth, Me., Jan. 14.—Mrs. Joey Sargent of West Sullivan dropped a lamp yesterday and her clothing caught fire from the blazing kerosene. Her two young children rushed from the house for assistance and 10 minutes later the rescuers found Mrs. Sargent dead in a tub of water in the kitchen. Frantic with pain, she had tried to save herself, but the burns were so deep the water only tended to quicken her death.

Old Church Burned

Leominster, Mass., Jan. 14.—The Unitarian church in this town was destroyed by fire last night. The chapel connected with the church was also burned. The church was built in 1823 and was an excellent representation of the architecture of the period, having a portico of four large Doric columns. The fire is thought to have originated from a defective flue of the furnace. The loss is estimated at $40,000.

An Alleged Firebug

Malden, Mass., Jan. 14.—Walter E. Sturtevant of Wakefield, a tailor, was placed under arrest here yesterday on the charge of arson, it being claimed that he set fire to coal sheds in Greenwood in October, causing a loss of about $4000. He is also alleged to have set fire to a shanty in Wakefield. Within the past few months there have been more than 12 incendiary fires in Wakefield.

The establishment of the offices here will give employment to at least 100 clerks.

GREAT PROFIT AT RETAIL.

Delaware & Hudson Company Sell Products to Operators and do not Control Prices.

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.—Having occupied nearly three days in calling witnesses to testify in opposition to the demands made by the anthracite miners, the Delaware and Hudson company closed its case before the coal strike commission yesterday afternoon and the commission's attention was then called to the conditions existing in and about the collieries operated by the Erie company. This corporation manages the Hillside Coal and Iron company and the Pennsylvania Coal company, and its counsel before the commission is Wayne MacVeagh and Everett Warren.

One of the principal witnesses called yesterday was Thomas F. Torrey, general coal sales agent of the Delaware and Hudson company at New York.

Mr. Torrey was an interesting witness, but in the absence of certain papers relating to the business he was unable to give the commission all the information desired regarding coal prices. The commission would not hear any evidence relating to freight rates, on the ground that its jurisdiction did not cover that phase of the coal industry.

Mr. Torrey explained that the Delaware and Hudson company had no control over coal prices in New York harbor; that it turned its tidewater coal over to the Hillside Coal and Iron company at Carbondale; that his company gets 65 percent of the circular tidewater price in New York harbor, and that it derives no benefit from the present abnormal retail prices. The Hillside company (owned by the Erie) receives the other 35 percent, but all owe the Delaware and Hudson a portion of this for hauling the coal 80 miles from it mines to the Erie's tracks. The tidewater price of coal, he said, was $5 for domestic sizes. He did not know what the dealers were getting for the coal in New York beyond what he learned from hearsay. The company, he added, sells coal to dealers in New York state and in New England at circular prices. He could not give the prices at certain places or the prices during 1901 without referring to his books, and he promised to have them for the commission later.

The commission would not admit statistics presented by J. P. Dickson of Wilkesbarre regarding the consumption of liquor in the regions surrounding and including Scranton and Wilkesbarre because they did not contain the per capita consumption, so that the amount consumed by the mine workers could be separated from the remainder of the population.

Among other witnesses called by the Delaware and Hudson were two physicians who gave testimony tending to show that the occupation of a mine worker is not so unhealthful as physicians for the miners have stated; a real estate agent who testified to the amount of property owned by miners of the company, and an employe of the Delaware and Hudson who made an investigation of wages paid to bituminous miners which showed their pay was under that received by the anthracite miners.

General Wilson, owing to the illness of Judge Gray, again acted as chairman of the commission and was several times called upon to intervene in the personal tilts between opposing counsel over the admission of certain evidence.

Good Afternoon.

We feel that an injustice has been done to President Baer of the Reading Coal Co. and the practical head of the Coal Operating Companies, in accusing him of insincerity in the endeavor to keep down the wholesale price of coal and to prevent retail dealers from exacting unreasonable profits. Certainly he and the other coal operators are to be commended for what they have done to relieve the distress in Quincy where the poor and really needy could not buy any hard coal and where the city has had to pay and are now obliged to pay an excessive price to keep the schools open. It would have been unfortunate to close the schools and force the children to stay at home where many of the parents have no coal and cannot afford to pay $14 a ton for it.

The independent miners, the speculators, and large proportion of the retail dealers seem to be responsible for the resent high prices. If the money represented by their profit does not burn a hole in their pockets it ought to.

In this connection the action of Mr. Hans Carstein, a coal dealer of Cambridge, though he is a member of the notorious Boston Coal Club, stands out in strong contrast to most dealers. Mr. Carstein has been selling coal at a fair price. On the fact that he has not squeezed the public he is quoted as saying, "In my opinion I have not done anything more in this respect than any other honorable coal dealer would do. I have sold my coal according to the price it cost me after a fair and liberal profit and not according to the excessive demand," and we might add, at the dictates of Boston Coal Club.

In view of the fact that the coal that some dealers had on hand at the end of the strike, and the consignments which they have received since, has cost them on the average less than five or six dollars per ton, we feel that we are not unreasonable to demand on behalf of our people that the $14 price recently established be abandoned; and we especially demand that the agreement made with the city and the Citizens Coal Committee be resumed so that the needy of our city can again buy anthracite coal in 100 lb. lots at a reasonable price.

BACK TO OLD TIMES

January Meeting of Wollaston Unitarian Club.

Dr. Coffin Talks on Town Meetings.

Dr. Piper Talks on the Lost Forests of New England.

President W. M. Hatch presided at the monthly meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club, and a large number of gentlemen were in attendance. Among the guests were Dr. George B. Rice, Dr. John L. Coffin, Dr. Piper, Rev. E. C. Butler, George G. Saville and other friends of members.

A well cooked hot roast beef dinner was served by the young men at 6.30 with mashed potato, spinach, rolls, crackers, cheese, apples, coffee, etc.

President Hatch with his usual wit introduced the speakers.

Dr. Coffin spoke at length on "The Town meeting." He regarded the town meeting as the means of progress which had made the country great. He went back to the covenant of the Pilgrims to be governed by the majority, and the early town meeting, so called, in Dorchester, said to have been the first in this country.

He answered the query, what is the town meeting? and introduced humorour incidents which had happened at them, and made the address very interesting. Everybody met on an equality, he said, at the town meeting, and all generally had their say. The pulbic money was conservatively spent, and to the credit of towns, they usually have no debts.

The tendency of the times was to spend beyond income, but when towns build a new schoolhouse and make improvements they put it into the tax levy.

He had lived in a town which became a city and could not understand why the assessed valuation took such a jump when a town became a city. Or why it was necessary for a city to plunge heavily into debt. He quoted figures to illustrate. City governments were expensive, and appropriations were made which would be impossible under a town.

Most important, the town meeting was the training for good citizenship which we do not get in a city. He queried if residents of cities had made the best of their opportunities. The cities should have the condensed town meeting. The city must go back to the simpler methods of the town.

Dr. Piper's address on "Lost Forests of New England" was instructive and entertaining. He took his hearers through a primeval forest is New Hampshire, between the Pemigenwasset and Saco valleys, telling of grandure, and later of the work of the axe and fire.

People of today must hurry up, he said, to see a primeval forest, for they will be gone in a few years. People carelessly say, let them grow up again, but he showed that fully 1000 years would be necessary to get a primeval forest.

Had one-half of the forests of New England been saved until today they would have been worth more than the present valuation of New England. Had towns of New Hampshire saved their old forests their income would have been large enough to pay all town expenses of today.

The doctor was of the opinion, however, that things after all go about right. That the farmers of years ago prospered on them and raised large families. That representatives of these families went west and developed it. Who can say but this New England sentiment of liberty in the West really turned the war of the Rebellion as it did. The grand old forest therefore, may have been worth a great deal.

The subjects of the evening were further considered by Rev. F. W. Pratt, Rev. E. C. Butler, F. E. Parlin, Dr. H. M. Willard, W. M. Hatch, W. E. Simmons and Walter O. Parker, most of whom were carried back to their boyhood days. Mr. Parker told of his experiences as a cowboy in Wyoming.

MURDER ALLEGED.

Employe at Shipyard and His Wife Arrested.

George D. Greis, a machinist employed at the Fore River Ship and Engine Co., was arrested by Inspector McKay this morning upon a warrant sent from Baltimore, Md., charging him with the murder of his infant child.

The warrant arrived in Quincy last week and called for the arrest of both Greis and his wife. Inspector McKay located the parties, and the wagon was sent to the Fore River Works for Greis this morning. Later in the morning Mrs. Greis was also arrested. They will be helda waiting the arrival of the Baltimore police.

The crime alleged to have been committed took place on Oct. 4 last.

Greis story, as told the Quincy police, is that his wife was taken sick in the night and he was sent for a nurse. Unable to get a nurse he returned with a friend. After they arrived the child was born. He heard one screech and then went out. Returning in about an hour his wife showed him the dead child. He then went out again and upon his return the child had disappeared and he had seen nothing of it since that time.

The woman, whose name is Barthia L. Greis, when taken to the police station admitted that the newly-born child was killed, but says that she had nothing to do with its death, and that it was the midwife who committed the act.

Swelling Her Income.

A good story is told of a man who one day told his wife that he would give her all the silver pieces she found in his purse or pockets which were coined the year she was born.

As a result the lady in due course of time had quite an amount of silver on hand—so much, in fact, that she went to the bank and deposited it in her name.

Then, speaking to the cashier, the lady said: "My husband tells me you are going to pay him some money today. Will you please pay him in this silver I have just deposited? I should be so much obliged to you if you would."

Of course the cashier quickly replied that he would be happy to please her.

As a result the lady has still more birthday money.—London Answers.

PLAN TO CHECK INSANITY.

Londoner, Alarmed by Scourge, Calls For International Conference.

Apropos of the reported discovery by Dr. Arthur Macdonald of Washington of the cause of the increase in insanity, which has been cabled to London, an article by W. J. Corbet, which appears in the January issue of the Westminster Review, comes pat:

"From year to year, from decade to decade, from generation to generation," says Mr. Corbet, "in spite of every effort made to stop the ravages of the disease, the insane continue to increase in great numbers. The leaven spreads annually, with cumulative force apparently, under the influence of the natural law of reproduction. The question has to be faced, How long will it take before the whole mass is leavened?"

The lunacy returns show an appalling increase during the last generation and a half. The number of registered lunatics in the United Kingdom in 1859 was 47,992; in 1902 the number had increased to 148,631, of these 110,713 being in England alone, where the yearly increase works out about 2,000 victims.

The official view is that the increase is more apparent than real, that the case is rather one of accumulation—that if there is an increase it is not out of proportion to the increase of population. Mr. Corbet repels this view with idignation and scorn. The present system, he declares, is sadly wanting, and he maintains that the marriage of a person who is or has been insane should be prevented by law. He thinks, moreover, that the question is so important that an international conference of qualified persons should be called to consider it.

NO COON DOGS FOR LIBERIA

Negroes From Georgia Have to Leave Animals Behind on Sailing.

Great was the sorrow of a party of negroes from Irwin county, Ga., when they had to part from their dogs the other day, says the New York Press. The White Star pier resounded with their wailings. The howls of the dogs added to the outburst.

"How can we get along without dogs in Liberia?" was the plaintive query of one of the men. There were fifty-four persons in the party—thirty-two men, twelve women and ten children—bound for the African land of promise. They had two bloodhounds and two "powerful fine coon dogs." But when they trooped aboard the Teutonic the man at the head of the gangplank said "Get out!" to the dogs.

"They're ours," said the leader of the emigrants. He was pained to learn that his ticket didn't include dogs. He was told he must get a government permit before the dogs could be received at an English port. He communicated that fact to his companions, and then the sounds of sorrow arose.

"Them bloodhounds has followed a scent fifty miles," moaned George Scott. But, under orders, he tied the dogs in the waiting room. When the Teutonic left her pier, the animals strained at their ropes, but couldn't break them, and their masters and mistresses soon were far away.

"Pity they couldn't take the coon dogs with them," said a pier hand. "There'd be great sport in Liberia. I hear it's full of coons."

ANCIENT DEATH CHAMBER.

Shocking Relic of Old Wars Found In Italy.

A special cablegram from Rome to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat states that the governor of the ancient citadel of Aquilla, contemplating repairs in the subterranean arrangements of the old pile, a wall was broken through, whereupon an ancient death chamber was discovered full of bodies of men and women, many of them wearing uniforms and fine dresses. The bodies, being shut off from air, were perfectly preserved; there were no coffins. Some of the corpses leaned against the walls, others lay in heaps on the floor.

Investigation showed that the dead were prisoners of war during the French invasion of 1795 and that they were either murdered by the garrison or by the French when the citadel was taken. Many of the bodies had stab and shot wounds; others had knives and stilettos sticking in the throat or breast. One hundred and forty-five bodies were recovered, among them many belonging to noble Italian families, according to papers found in their clothes.

Gold In Ireland.

A London syndicate is now being formed with the object of starting a large company (proposed capital $500,000) to develop a certain gold mine in Ireland, says A. G. Ryder in the Dublin Daily Independent. The presence of gold in this Irish mine has been already proved over a distance of about 1,650 feet, and in four new shafts results exceeding three pennyweights per ton were obtained near the surface. The average of what one may term "haphazard" samples was five pennyweights eight grains. One sample gave the astounding result of one ounce eighteen pennyweights per ton.

Novel Type of Ocean Greyhound.

A Vienna dispatch to the London Express says: An Austrian engineer of note, Herr Wetkovic, has invented a new type of ship which he claims will be capable of traveling at lightning speed. Herr Wetkovic declares that when perfected it will enable a journey around the world to be made in a week. The ship does not displace water, but glides over the surface like a skate over ice. Ingenious contrivances are constructed to minimize friction and air pressure.

1500 EMPLOYED

In the Granite Industry of Quincy.

Shipments by Month and Year.

Average over 225 Tons per Day Shipped by Rail Alone.

Returns from the three railroad terminals for December show that during that month 8,891,126 pounds of granite were shipped. Considering the season of the year this is a remarkably good showing. Of this amount Quincy Adams forwarded 3,459,208 pounds; West Quincy, 3,718,748 pounds; and the Quarry railroad, 1,713,170 pounds.

The shipments for the year were: Quincy Adams, 51,482,189 pounds; West Quincy, 53,659,063 pounds; Quarry Railroad, 30,196,305 pounds, or a total of 135,337,557 pounds for the year.

These figures do not include the amount of granite shipped by teams which it is impossible to obtain.

As a whole, business last year was all that could be desired and it is believed that this year it will be even better.

During last year an average of 611 cutters and blacksmiths were employed every month. By months the returns to the unions showed the number of men to be employed as follows:

January, 526; February, 543; March, 566; April, 603; May, 650; June, 670; July, 657; August, 648; September; 658; October, 652; November, 607, December, 556.

These figures include the cutters and blacksmiths employed in the cooperative yards. They also show June and July to be the banner months, and January and December to be the quiet months.

While these figures are not absolutely correct to a man they are very near accurate. To carry the figures further, it might be said that on an average about 325 quarrymen are employed. There are also about 200 employed as polishers. Add to this the boys, teamsters, clerks and bosses, and it will show that during the year 1902 there was an average of over 1,500 employed in Quincy granite industry every day.

These figures will doubtless astonish many who have supposed that upwards of 2,500 persons were employed.

More Warships.

A Washington dispatch to the Herald says: Three battleships, similar in size to those provided for at the first session of the 57th Congress, one armoured cruiser of the type also ordered at the last session, two steel training ships and one wooden training brig, are the items of the increase of naval vessels voted on Tuesday by the sub-committee of the House naval committee, and they will be laid before the full committee at its meeting today.

The cost of the battleships will probably be limited to about $4,212,000 and that of the cruiser to about $4,659,000. This is the limit placed on the ships now about to be bulit under the authorization of last year.

—That wood will stand the passing of centuries as well as metal is proved by the unearthing near the Nile of some Egyptian boats nearly 5000 years old, which are in good condition.

WARRANT OUT.

For An Alleged Assault at Houghs Neck Yesterday.

A warrant was issued late Thursday night for the arrest of Frank Ryder for a felonious assault on William Hatch at Houghs Neck during the afternoon. The two men got into an altercation, during which Hatch alleges that Ryder threatened to shoot him and then struck him on the head with a policeman's club.

Ryder was formerly a member of the Boston police force, but of late has been employed in the street railway car barn at Braintree.

Two years ago he created a sensation by claiming to have been locked up in a freight car by tramps with whom he had an encounter.

Hatch the man who claims to make coal out of rock and eel grass at $2 a ton, received a bad cut on the head. When last seen Ryder was boarding a train for Boston.

All's Fair These Days.

They are telling in Dedham a rather good coal story at the expense of ex-Sheriff Augustus B. Endicott, says the Herald in its "Stories of the town."

He had ordered from a dealer two tons of the needful and was expecting its arrival. His next door neighbor is John H. Burdakin, register of deeds for Norfolk County. He had not ordered any coal but a team drove into his yard and two tons of anthracite rattled into his bin. He was glad enough to get the fuel and appreciated the thoughtfulness of his dealer in sending him a supply just as his was nearly exhausted.

Later that appreciation fell below zero when he learned the driver had made a mistake in the two houses and that the coal in his bin had been intended for his neighbor.

Still he saw the joke in it all and hastened over to ex-Sheriff Endicott's and tendered him a few hods, "just to tide him over the cold snap."

The former county official thanked him for his kind offer and told him he was expecting two tons "almost any day," but a merry twinkle in his eye showed he was "wise" and took his "medicine" without frills.

Then came a mutual explanation and a good laugh over the driver's error. But the coal is still in the bin where first deposited.

Without Topmasts.

A Bangor dispatch to the Journal says Captain C. A. Davis of Somerset, Mass., managing owner of the four-masted schooner Hope Sherwood, launched at Bath last week, contemplates building a four-masted schooner with a rig altogether different from anything now on the Atlantic coast. This vessel will carry no topmasts, but will carry lowermasts 105 feet in length.

This rig is used successfully on the Pacific coast, and as it effects a saving in spars, rigging and sails, as well as in wages of men, it is believed it will become popular on this coast.

Capt. Davis has the plans of the vessel already, and will soon make a contract for her construction.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

CUBA'S DEVELOPMENTS

A Havana Lawyer Talks of New Conditions.

HEALTHIER GROWTH NOTICEABLE

Americans Now In the Island Engaged In Business and Are Coming In to Take Up Lands For Farming Purposes—The Government Considered a Success.

Ernest Lee Conant, of a law firm in Havana, when interviewed by a representative of the Washington Star at the New Willard hotel said: "There was somewhat of a reaction after the American military authorities left Cuba, and American influences were not as prominent in business as under military rule. There is a healthier growth now, and many Americans are coming in to take lands and engage in farming on their own responsibility. These people do not come at the suggestion of any land company and as a rule know why they come and what line of farming they intend to engage in. There are between 1,000 and 2,000 Americans in Havana engaged in business, and there is an American paper there published entirely in English. An American brewery supplies the needs of those who use beer, and the Havana electric street railway is an American institution. This railway now operates forty-five miles of road, with lines to Vidado, Quemados, Cero, Jesus del Monte, Mariano and other suburbs. The line is being extended to Mariel, twenty-five miles out.

"Vidado, the beautiful suburban city by the sea, has almost doubled in size, the new houses being largely American. This was always a favorite resort with Americans, and the headquarters of the military government was at the La Trocha hotel at Vidado. There is a Colonial Loan and Deposit company controlled by Americans in Havana, and American companies are preparing to raise cotton on a large scale for the English market.

"The American club in Havana is quite an organization. It is presided over by Mr. Merchant. A syndicate has completed its line of railroad from Havana to Santiago, and a few weeks ago trains began running. The distance is about 600 miles, and it takes two days to make the trip one way. The reason of this is that the trains tie up over night and the passengers go to a hotel. Speed is not particularly desirable, and as everybody is anxious to see the country, and the railroad company is anxious to have the country along its line seen, all parties seem satisfied with the arrangement. I suppose later at least one through fast train will be put on.

"I think the Cuban government has been a success. Notwithstanding the increase in expenses by reason of a congress and a state department with several costly foreign missions the Cuban government has materially reduced operating expenses. Revenues have not declined and there is a surplus in the treasury. The expenditures for schools have been reduced without crippling that branch of the public service. The recent strike on the street railway was somewhat exaggerated in the United States. The authorities suppressed the rioting in two or three days, and too much credit cannot be given to President Palma and Chief of Police Cardenas for their firmness, steadiness and good judgment. The incident has been in reality of great benefit. It increased the confidence of the people in their president, placed the chief of police firmly in authority over his men, united the police, increased their confidence and esprit de corps and in every way strengthened the government. I think generally that there has been less disorder, less cattle stealing, than under American military rule. The people are more contented, and that may account for it.

"There is of course business stagnation at present and will be until the treaty with the United States becomes law. There is no question as to its meeting the approval of the Cuban government. The people there have great admiration for President Roosevelt and look upon him as their friend. Generally they are suspicious of the people of the United States as a whole and think that this country intends to gobble them up at the first opportunity. There is an entire lack of cordiality toward Americans as a people. If I had any suggestion to make to the government there, I would perhaps advise less attention to the military department and more to agriculture. Up to this time a great deal of energy has been devoted to the organization of the army. Perhaps this was necessary in a country recently engaged in war, but the future of Cuba depends upon the development of its agricultural resources, and this feature should receive early and earnest attention."

The Vanishing Red Man.

A discussion of the Indians of Oklahoma and Indian Territory brought on by the consideration of the omnibus statehood bill provoked some sharp passages in the senate recently, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune. The declaration made by Senator Beveridge that a considerable proportion of the members of various Indian tribes were really white called forth a burst from Senator Tillman, who demanded to know the reason for this. Senators Quay, Spooner and Beveridge united in the explanation that the white men had married Indian women and were Indians only by marriage. "Well," roared back Senator Tillman, "then if the white men married the Indian women, what became of the Indians that would have married the Indian women?"

DISCIPLE OF LORENZ.

Straightened Woman's Bowlegs and Saved Her a Husband.

"For more than thirty years I have treated cases of congenital dislocation of the hip by the bloodless surgery method somewhat after the style Dr. Lorenz has adopted," said Professor Henry Hermann of Fort Erie, according to a Buffalo special to the New York World.

"In 1873 a little girl was brought to me afflicted with a dislocation of this sort. I examined the case very carefully and succeeded in working the hip into its socket by the mere use of my hands. The child recovered the use of the limb, and when it grew up to young womanhood not a single defect was noticeable.

"Several times a year after that I treated similar cases and have always met with the greatest success. I have likewise met with success in the treatment of clubfeet, curvature of the spine, knock knees and bowlegs—in fact, it is only a few months ago that by the mere use of my hands I cured a bad case of bowlegs in a woman twenty-three years of age.

"The young woman came to my place one day about six months ago and said that she was about to be married, but that her intended husband did not know that she was bowlegged. 'If he did,' said she, 'I do not believe he would marry me.'

"I made an examination and found one of the worst bowlegged cases I had ever seen, but in four months' time I had straightened the young woman's limbs so that about a month ago she was married. She declares that I saved her a husband, and at Christmas time she sent this pretty watch charm for a present," and the Lorenz of Fort Erie proudly exhibited a handsome watch charm which now adorns his waistcoat.

THE BICYCLE FOR 1903.

Chainless Coaster Brake With Changeable Gear the New Model.

Wheelmen generally will be glad to know that the new models in bicycles for this year show a decided all around improvement, says the New York Tribune. This wheel is not only a chainless coaster brake, but it possesses still another advantage in that it has a changeable gear, something long sought for by riders and manufacturers on both sides of the Atlantic.

The new models are arranged in three styles, the low gear being 68 in each instance, and the high gears being 83, 91 or 101. The new mechanism is contained in the rear hub and is said to be simple and not likely to get out of order. When the rider, using, say, a 101 gear on the level or in going down hill, comes to an incline and wishes to reduce his gear to 68, all he has to do is to give a slight pressure on the pedal and the gear is reduced. When the coaster brake is wanted the pressure on the pedal is made more pronounced.

While it is admitted that high gears are much in favor, the fact that wheels so geared were hard to ride against the high wind or up a hill caused lower gears to prevail the last two years. With two gears the chances are that many riders will accept the 91 and 101 gears for regular road use. The new principle cannot be attached to the old bicycles, even the chainless coaster brake of last year. The new models will be made in both diamond and drop frame styles. The cost of the new wheel will be $85.

TO RECORD INDIAN SPEECH.

Yale Men, With Special Car, Will Tour the West and South.

The department of experimental psychology at Yale soon will begin the study of the dialects of the United States, the funds for the experiment having been granted by the Carnegie institute at Washington, as announced some time ago, says a New Haven special to the New York Times. To carry out this experiment, which is to be known as the Yale phonetic survey, a special railroad car will be chartered and sent out to various places in the western part of the United States in charge of Yale men to collect gramophone records of the rapidly disappearing Indian dialects.

Southern and western modes of speech will also be studied and records taken, but the main object of the trip will be to collect Indian speech. The car will start some time in the spring and will carry on its work during the coming summer.

New Sugar Making Process.

Thomas Wommack, a prominent planter of East Baton Rogue parish, in New Orleans, has discovered a process for making sugar which promises to revolutionize the industry in Louisiana, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Mr. Wommack declines to divulge his secret until he has secured a patent, but he says the process converts the whole product from the ordinary sirup into first sugars, with only a small percentage of the residue in the shape of a black kind of glucose, with scarcely a trace of sucrose in it and as hard as a brick. He brought samples of this residue product to the Sugar Exchange for chemical examination. As an evidence of the success of his discovery every pound of sugar made by him this season is clear white firsts.

Tillman Jars the Senate.

During the coal debate in the senate recently Senator Tillman said:

"We have only been reassembled for three days, and we have hardly got off our Christmas drunk yet—if any of us were so unfortunate as to get drunk."

The senate and the galleries gasped in astonishment, says the Washington correspondent of the New York World. Afterward Senator Tillman said the remark was a "mere pleasantry."

EVENING DRESSES.

Net and Veiling Gowns Are the Height of Fashion.

Imported dancing frocks are shown with skirts which barely reach the ground.

A Vienna model seen recently had a skirt made in the new double style, the two skirts appliqued with guipure of the applique type and with narrow velvet ribbon running in stripes over the seam of each gore and finished with a fringe and a motif of pearls.

These long stripes from the waist are exceedingly fashionable, and a ball gown of point d'esprit was recently trimmed with satin ribbons about an inch wide placed in groups of three and finishing with deep loops left loose at the end. Rows of fine punched insertion encircled the skirt at intervals of eight or nine inches, and these rows of lace went over the ribbon and kept it in place.

Net gowns are very fashionable, and a fine brussels net with tiny ring spots is much used in cream and ficelle. There are usually many flounces on this type of gown, and it is quite smart to have three graduated ribbons on each flounce, the deepest at the edge.

The evening gown shown is of veiling trimmed with narrow ribbon and embroidery. JUDIC CHOLLET.

TAFT WILL NOT RETURN

Considers His Services Needed In Philippines

DECLINES A HIGH HONOR

In Order to Finish Teaching Natives Self-Government and Justify Their Faith In Confidence Which They Have Shown In Him

Washington, Jan. 14.—After mature consideration it has been decided by the president that Judge Taft shall remain in the Philippines as civil governor. The decision was reached only after the president had discussed the Philippine question thoroughly with Secretary Root and the other members of his cabinet and with Vice Governor Wright, who has been in this country for two months.

For several weeks it has been regarded as settled that Governor Taft would return to this country, perhaps in a few months, to become a justice of the United States supreme court. President Roosevelt indicated to Governor Taft in a letter dispatched to the Philippines more than a month ago that he could have the appointment to the supreme bench if he desired it. It was the president's purpose to name General Wright as civil governor of the Philippines.

As soon as it was learned in the Philippines that Governor Taft was likely to leave the islands, cabled protests began to pour in on the president from prominent Filipinos. Even on Monday the president was in receipt of a cablegram from some of the most important interests in the Philippines, urging the retention of Governor Taft as civil governor. The protests received in no manner reflected on Vice Governor Wright, but it was pointed out to the president that Governor Taft was ideally equipped for the position of governor and that any change, at this time, would be disastrous to the best interests of the archipelago. It was maintained that Governor Taft's relinquishment of the post would retard the development of the islands fully five years.

Governor Taft is known, as one high official expressed it, "to be thoroughly wrapped up in his work in the Philippines." His ambition has been to round out his career as a justice of the United States supreme court, but he has become imbued so entirely with the spirit of the great work to be accomplished in the Philippines and is so perfectly in sympathy with the ideals of the best classes of the inhabitants that he hesitated to relinquish his post at this time, even to accept the distinguished honor the president offered to confer on him.

Yesterday, in response to the president's letter offering him the supreme justiceship, a cablegram was received from him suggesting, with a sincere appreciation of the tender made to him by the president, that it might be better for him, in view of all the circumstances, to remain where he was. After this it was announced authoritatively that Governor Taft would remain indefinitely as civil governor of the Philippines.

During the afternoon, subsequent to the cabinet meeting, Secretary Root had a long conference with the president, at which the Philippine situation was canvassed in all its phases. Many serious problems remain yet to be solved with respect to the islands, and the administration is looking with confidence to Governor Taft to reach such a solution of them as will be satisfactory to the people of this country, to the Filipinos and to the world.

May Go to Judge Day

Cleveland, Jan. 14.—The Washington correspondent of The Cleveland Leader telegraphs that paper as folows: The place on the supreme court bench that was tendered to and declined by Governor Taft of the Philippines, has been offered to William R. Day of Canton, O., and it is understood that Mr. Day will accept. Mr. Day is now a United States circuit judge of the Sixth district.

Peary May Make Another Dash

St. Johns, Jan. 14.—It is believed here that Lieutenant Peary has decided to make another attempt to reach the North Pole. Captain Bartlett, Peary's ice navigator, is in St. Johns arranging to charter one of the largest sealing steamers for a voyage north next summer. Peary's steamer Windward is said to be inadequate for the large outfit to be taken on the proposed trip.

CHINA'S TIGHT SQUEEZE

Hague Tribunal May Have to Deal With the Payment of Indemnity

Washington, Jan. 14.—The state department has been informed by Minister Conger that the Chinese government has professed its utter inability to pay the Chinese indemnity on a gold basis under present conditions and has suggested that if the powers insist upon such payments of the indemnity then China should be allowed to collect the import duties in gold. This would practically amount to doubling the customs receipts, gold standing in the ratio of about 10 to 2 to silver.

Secretary Hay replied that, so far as the United States is concerned, having agreed to accept the payment of the indemnity on a silver basis, it could not, of course, consider this last proposition. The attitude of the United States government is thus maintained consistently, while at the same time the American export trade is protected from a severe blow which would be dealt by the doubling of duties on these grounds when they enter China.

What the powers will do is unknown. Various propositions have been broached by their representatives, that most strongly urged being of British origin and looking to the reduction of the instalments of indemnity through a considerable extension of the present 40-year period in which the total was to be paid. It is felt here that the only logical solution of the problem is a submission of the matter to The Hague tribunal, as has already been proposed by China.

To Cruise In Gulf of Mexico

Washington, Jan. 14.—Instead of ordering the north Atlantic squadron directly north on the completion of its evolutions in the Caribbean, it has been decided that the itinerary shall include an extensive cruise in the Gulf of Mexico. The squadron, which may include 22 boats, will be the most formidable force ever assembled in the gulf. It is felt that the north Atlantic squadron should be familiar with the Gulf of Mexico in view of the increase of American interests on the isthmus that will follow the building of the canal.

A STUBBORN COLD OR BRONCHITIS

yields more readily to Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil than to anything that you can take; and if persistently used a few days, will break up the cold.

When you awake in the night choked up and coughing hard, take a dose of the Emulsion, and you will get immediate relief, where no cough medicine will give you relief. It has a soothing and healing effect upon the throat and bronchial tubes.

Most people understand Scott's Emulsion is a great body builder—but it is equally good to allay inflammation and cure colds and violent coughing.

"BALANCE OF POWER"

May Lead England and France Into a Conflict Over Morocco

Vienna, Jan. 14.—The Allgemeine Zeitung, which is well informed on political matters, expresses apprehension of a collision between British and French interests in Morocco. The paper says that after the Spanish American war France and Spain negotiated a special arrangement to take common military and political action in Morocco and secured Italy's neutrality by promising her a free hand in Tripoli. "France, irritated by the disturbance of the balance of power in Africa by Great Britain's conquest in the Transvaal," says The Allgemeine Zeitung, "sees an opportunity for revenge and the restoration of the balance of power in Morocco. In this connection Great Britain appears to be isolated unless she obtains the support of Germany, whose attitude is unknown."

At that time Cunard complained that Francklyn had converted large sums to his own use and brought suit to recover $3,000,000. After long litigation Francklyn agreed to compromise the case for $1,250,000. This he failed to pay and the present suit was brought for $1,250,000 with interest.

SHOE WORKERS UNEASY

Agitation at Lynn Spreading to Other Cities

KNIGHTS OF LABOR CUTTERS

May Have Their Places Filled by Men of Boot and Shoe Workers' Union Should They Go on Strike—Brockton Men May Be Ordered to Strike

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 15.—Both sides of the contending labor parties held meetings last night at which the situation was fully discussed. After the meeting the Knights of Labor cutters, the executive committee of the organization had a secret session, but the only statement issued was to the effect that the war against the Boot and Shoe Workers association would be pushed with great vigor. Many of the labor men take this last statement to mean that strikes will be ordered in one or more shops. It is stated that the Boot and Shoe Workers' union will organize a Cutters' union within the next few days.

Reports from other shoe centres show that the labor men in those places are eagerly watching the reports from Lynn, while in this city the outcome of the meeting at Haverhill Saturday night is awaited with great interest.

A report has gained circulation in Lynn to the effect that the Boot and Shoe Workers' union proposes to bring 1000 cutters into the city to take positions in the shoe factories in case of a strike by the cutters connected with the Knights of Labor.

TROUBLE AT BROCKTON

Demands Upon Manufacturers Not Favorably Viewed by Latter

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 15.—Leading members of the Shoe Cutters' union state that a strike in several factories of this city is threatened. They say that for many weeks the union men have been intrenching themselves as though expecting opposition to the demands they have made for more pay, and that unless there is a change in the program this order to quit work may go into effect Monday.

The cutters employed at the factory of George E. Keith & Co., who recently made a request for more pay, and who were offered the piece system, have declined to accept the firm's offer. Receiving this answer, the firm replied to the men that it could offer no more, and that it was willing to submit the question to the state board of arbitration or any other fair judge as to what would be a fair price. The men have not replied. The cutters for this firm have been receiving on an average of about $15 weekly, the union price. The factory does not use the union stamp.

A new pricelist has also been submitted to the P. B. Keith Shoe company, and has been returned to the union with disapproval. It is claimed that the union has been making a strong effort to get men in the factories that do not use the union stamp to make a demand for more pay, and this has been done in several cases. It is understood that unless the demand is met the men will strike, those in the so-called non-union shops depending on the cutters in the union shops to support them. The factories that are called non-union, and in which it is understood that the firm and its ex-employes will attempt to settle among themselves any grievance that may arise, are about as thoroughly organized as those which use the stamp.

Fight Didn't Come Off

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 15.—Governor Yates had Company C., Fifth infantry, I. N. G., at their armory last night in uniform and under orders to proceed to the Olympic club's rooms and to prevent the six-round prize fight between Ole Oleson of Chicago and "Kid" Williams of Philadelphia. "Spider" Garrey, the trainer of Ole Oleson, and Clint Gouldy called upon Governor Yates and endeavored to explain the difference between a boxing match and a prize fight, but the governor did not see it.

Attorney General Pushing Matters

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 15.—Mayor Egozcue, who was arrested Jan. 3 charged with destroying the records of the city water receipts, which constituted the only evidence of alleged extensive embezzlements, and who was held under $5000 bail for trial, was rearrested yesterday at the instance of the attorney general after having been discharged by the magistrate who heard the case. The mayor will be tried on the charge of having destroyed the city records.

PROVED A BOOMERANG

Patrolmen's Campaign Against Chief Resulted Disastrously For Them

Newton, Mass., Jan. 15.—The anxiously awaited decision of Mayor Weeks upon the numerous charges preferred against Chief of Police Tarbox, which was made public last night, is practically an exoneration for the accused official. While the mayor finds that the chief had been censurable, in some instances, he paid him a high compliment for his general capability and for the improved state of the department while under his command.

Many of the officers who were instrumental in having the charges preferred against Chief Tarbox were reprimanded, and, in some instances, severely punished by the mayor. While the chief is criticized for some of his acts, Mayor Weeks concludes that he has been sufficiently punished by the unusual publicity given the troubles in the police department here and the whole case is regarded as closed.

Mayor Weeks ordered Patrolman Young to be dismissed from the force for violation of the rules of the department. Patrolman Fuller was ordered suspended for three months without pay for conduct unbecoming an officer. The mayor severely censured Sergeant Bartlett and nine patrolmen for their conduct towards the head of the department. The mayor sentenced Patrolman Dearborn to be suspended for three months without pay for failure to properly patrol his route.

Dunning Remains In Jail

Boston, Jan. 15.—An application for the appointment of a temporary receiver in the case of E. J. Dunning, the banker, accused of larceny, was made yesterday by attorneys for the creditors or alleged victims. Dunning's attorney urged a continuance of the hearing on the ground that he wanted time to show that a receiver was unnecessary, and, upon the assurance that Dunning in the meantime would not be bailed or that any of the property in his possession would not be transferred to any other person, the referee continued the hearing.

Flanders Wins Mayoralty Fight

Boston, Jan. 15.—The Haverhill mayoralty case was decided yesterday by the supreme court. Parkman B. Flanders, the Socialist, will be the mayor of that city for the ensuing year. Under the decision of the court his election will be declared. The court held that the 18 ballots, each containing a cross in the square opposite the blank space immediately under the name of the Republican nominee, should not have been counted by the registrars of voters for the latter, but should have been thrown out.

Boiler Pin Blew Out

Boston, Jan. 15.—The occupants of the big Shoe and Leather building on Bedford street and those of the adjoining structures were thrown into a state of alarm yesterday by a terrific explosion in the boiler room. Three persons were slightly injured and considerable damage was done. A pin in the boiler blowing out caused the explosion. The boiler and engine were driven through a thick brick wall, a distance of 10 feet.

No Change In Amesbury Strike

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 15.—Although a proposition with a view of settling the carriage makers' strike was made to the Carriage Manufacturers' association by the non-union workmen last night, it is not expected that it will be accepted. The Armenians who were brought here to take the places of the strikers continue at work, although they have to be escorted to and from the factories by the police.

Cars Not Yet Running

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 15.—The fourth day since the strike of the motormen and conductors employed by the Connecticut Lighting and Power company in this city began was eventful because of the arrival of over 60 strike breakers. Absolutely no disturbance is reported. Manager Sewell promises to operate cars today.

Hotel Rates to Be Advanced

Hartford, Jan. 15.—Managers of large hotels in this city, New Haven and Springfield, decided at a meeting here yesterday to make an advance in hotel rates on account of the increase in price of agricultural products and coal. It is said that an increase of 50 cents a day has been practically agreed upon.

Attempted Suicide In Cell

Pawtucket, R. I., Jan. 15.—Thomas Marshall, who was released from jail in New Bedford Tuesday after having served a three years' sentence, attempted suicide in the local police station last night by hanging. He was discovered in time to save his life. He said he was despondent.

Creditors Recommend Bankruptcy

Providence, Jan. 15.—Benoni Hawkins, president of the Riverside Coal and Lumber company, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy yesterday in which he gives his debts as $60,701.09 and his assets as $13,180.43. The petition came after the creditors had voted to recommend this course.

Want Work For Union Men

Pawtucket, R. I., Jan. 15.—The Building Trades council has petitioned the school and fire departments not to allow firemen in the fire department or janitors in school buildings to do any repair work, contending that this work should be done by contractors who employ union men.

UP TO THE PRESIDENT.

The Senate Promptly Passes the House Bill Taking Duty Off Coal.

Washington, Jan. 15.—The senate yesterday acted promptly on the house bill providing rebates of the duty on coal and passed it unanimously, without debate, a few minutes after it was brought over from the house.

For an hour and a half Mr. Tillman occupied the attention of the senate in a characteristic speech in which he denounced trusts and monopolies. Mr. Tillman said that Mr. Aldrich, since the resolution came up, had become more strenuous and had exhibited more feeling and earnestness than he thought him capable of. He criticised those who asserted that there was not now sufficient authority to remedy the evils which exist and he said that we may load down our statute books with laws, but unless the sworn officers of the law shall discharge their duties fearlessly and honestly every effort to protect the people will fail because of their dereliction.

The energy of the venerable and brilliant senator from Missouri, Mr. Tillman said, spurred the lagging horses in the house of representatives and those in the senate who had been cold-bloodedly contemplating the condition of affairs for a month. His only wonder, he said, was that in these trying times of death and distress mobs were not taking steps to show monopolists that in the last resort men will neither starve nor freeze to death but will throttle the law if necessary and take it into their own hands and seize supplies.

"Efforts have been made," said Mr. Tillman, "proof has been filed, pleadings have been had, petitions to the attorney general filed, warning and begging him to protect the people against the impending danger, but he has sat quietly in his office and done nothing."

Rich and poor alike, he declared, are freezing because of the fact that a monopoly does exist; because the lawyers have failed to interpret the laws in the interest of the people.

He criticised the coal strike commissioners and said that they were taking irrelevant and unnecessary testimony, when if they wanted to they could find out about the combination and report to congress that such a monopoly exists.

He criticised a decision by Judge Taft involving a case under the interstate commerce law and said it was the same judge who would not leave "the onerous and odious" duties upon which he was now engaged in the Philippines for a seat on the supreme bench.

The bill reported from the ways and means committee to provide for a rebate of the duties on foreign coal for a period of one year was passed in short order by the house yesterday by practically a unanimous vote 258-5, those voting against it being Messrs. Cushman and Jones of Washington, Gaines of West Virginia, Mondell of Wyoming and Patterson of Pennsylvania, all Republicans.

The bill was considered under the operation of a rule which cut off opportunity to amend. The only opposition to the measure came from some of the members representing coal states, who expressed the fear that the admission of Chinese mined coal in Canada would injure the coal industry of their states. Both Mr. Dalzell and Mr. Payne, the Republican leaders, expressed the opinion on the floor that the bill would not relieve the existing distress.

Will Not Be Brought to Trial

Elmira, N. Y., Jan. 15.—George H. Lapham, former president of the Penn Yan National bank, which he is charged with wrecking in 1898 and misappropriating $40,000, is nearly 70 years old, has sustained two strokes of apoplexy and is now confined to bed. As Lapham is a hopeless invalid District Attorney Brown says he will never be brought to trial. Lapham is being sued by his wife for divorce.

Movement Against Oil Trust

Berlin, Jan. 15.—The reichstag yesterday adopted the tariff committee's resolution asking the government to consider whether it is not in the interests of the nation to place a differential duty on refined petroleum, as against crude, in order to establish a national refining industry. Objection to Turnpike Tolls

Washington, Jan. 15.—Postmaster General Payne has directed that no more rural free delivery routes are to be established over roads that require the payment of turnpike tolls by the postoffice department. Where routes are already in operation and contracts are in existence for the payment of tolls the contracts will not be renewed.

Good Afternoon.

The coal situation is now considerably relieved in Quincy, but prices should drop.

President Roosevelt has espoused the interests of the people as opposed to the interest of corporate wealth. It remains to be seen if the people will stand by him or will bow down to the golden calf.

In 1902 we raised more than a billion dollars worth of corn, nearly one half of a billion dollars worth of wheat and $135,000,000 worth of potatoes. In fact all our crops were good, but we did not raise enough coal.

A captious Scot says Hall Caine and Marie Corelli are the high priest and high priestess that serve at the altar of the six-shilling novel. "Each of them wears a golden ephod, with a breastplate of jewels arranged to spell out the magic figures 100,000."

The coal question seems to be the principal subject of conversation, and as most every dealer who has anything to do with coal gets a blessing, it may not be out of place if we give a statement, which will be a surprise to many of our readers, of a cargo of hard coal that arrived at Quincy Point yesterday. Some may think it is not true, but as we were confidentially informed by a reliable person who knows it to be a fact, we will give it to our readers.

The dealers in this city are unable to buy of the trust or contractors, and therefore are obliged to purchase of middle men or speculators, or not have any at any price. The merchants in New York charged $10.75 a ton for the coal that arrived yesterday, then the freight charges at the present time are over $2.00; the insurance and other incidental expenses made the cost of the coal on the wharf over $13 a ton. Who is there that can reasonably find fault with a dealer who delivers it to our citizens and charges only $14 a ton?

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Do not pile all the bedclothes on top of you these cold nights. Put some of them under the lower sheet, and put newspapers between the wire springs and the mattress. Sleeping between comforters all night is almost as bad for one as wearing rubber boots all day. Both prevent the escape of perspiration and keep the air from the skin. The skin needs fresh air just as the lungs do. Take an air bath often, by going through some physical culture exercise with the windows open, before dressing or after undressing. —Maxwell's Talisman.

☞ Women's clubs have improved with age, but there is still a too prevalent disposition to dally with ponderous subjects of remote utility and to neglect seemingly light matters that are of the utmost consequence. In other words there is still a chasing after the shadow rather than the substance of culture. Instead of reading a paper on something that she really understands a woman often prepares a "learned" disquisition on something so that she has to con encyclopædias and heaven knows what else in order to keep to her course. Just as likely as not, too, she runs ashore or founders on rocks and all her labor is for naught. It is a good idea to remember that knowledge of the commonplace is really the most useful and that without that knowledge there is no such thing as culture. For the only real culture is that which makes life better worth the living and all else is the veriest froth. Cooking is of more consequence than archæology, and inculcating a love of the "masters," desirable as that love is, is not the only thing on earth worth having. So, too, it is very well to know how people live in Morocco, but it might not be amiss to learn how people live in one's own town. The factory laws of England are a good subject to prime one's self on, but so are the factory laws of Massachusetts. It is all well enough to get acquainted with "the classics," but there are books written every year that are worth considering. Raking over the past isn't anywhere near so important as knowing what is going on today. There is no subject that cannot be brought into requisition, but the goal should be fuller and freer life, and the way to reach that goal is to keep one's feet on mother earth and not to try cloud-soaring and rainbow-chasing. —Boston Home Journal.

☞ Nothing can be more unmeaning or more senseless than the act of uncovering when a lady enters the elevator. It is not politeness. It is not courtesy. It does not represent any sentiment of reasonable deference. One doesn't remove his hat when a lady enters the street car in which he happens to be seated. One doesn't remove his hat when he goes into a shop where ladies are. Why need he go through this stupid farce in an elevator? The act indicates a pretence of politeness, inspired neither by good sense nor good feeling. A sensible woman doesn't want you to do it, nor will she think better of you on that account. A foolish woman isn't worth your while. —Washington Post.

MR. AND MRS. GRIES

Are Still at Quincy Police Station Awaiting Baltimore Officers.

Mr and Mrs. George D. Gries, who were arrested by Inspector McKay at Quincy Point, are still at the Quincy police station.

Word has been sent to the Baltimore police that the parties have been arrested, and they are expected to arrive in Quincy any day.

Both now disclaim all knowledge of the child's death, saying that they did not see it after the midwife took it away. This story, however, differs somewhat from the story they told when first arrested.

They informed the police that they would waive the formality of requisition papers, and would willingly accompany the officers to Baltimore.

It is intimated that the police first clew of the affair was by finding the dead infant in a freight car, and that it was traced to the Greis family.

A SOCIETY EVENT.

Wedding of Tom Thumb and Jennie June.

Minister's Charge a Novel One.

The Wedding Supper Was of Pie and in Great Variety.

The vestry of the Quincy Point church was far too small Wednesday evening to accommodate all who desired to attend the brilliant wedding of the ever popular Tom Thumb and sweet Jennie June.

The bride was Miss Clara, the charming 10-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Bushnell of Washington boulevard, and the groom was Mr. Roy Sidelinger, the 10-year old son of City Auditor and Mrs. George F. Sidelinger of South avenue.

The petite brunette bride wore a rich gown of white with the conventional long veil, and a rose in her hair.

The maid of honor, Miss Ella May Melville, was also gowned in white, and there were four bridesmaid—Miss Elsie Burrell, Miss Elsie Whitehead, Miss Marie Bryant and Miss Dorothy Mueller, two gowned in blue, and two in pink.

The four ushers were: Mr. Joseph Lincoln, Mr. Forest Hayden, Mr. David Melville and Mr. Russell Oliver, all in full evening dress of young men. They performed all their duties with ease and grace, especially the seating of the guests before the ceremony.

The guests came in society gowns and full dress and included the following prominent people: Miss Helen Lincoln, mother of the bride; Miss Helen Sherburne, grandmother; Miss Esther Sidelinger, Miss Beatrice Lowe, Miss Edith Stoue, Miss Sadie Pike, Mr. Walter Mead, Miss Edith Littleton, Miss Margaret Murray, Miss Florence Bryant, Miss Lizzie Paul, Mr. William Paul, Miss Florence Thayer, Miss Maisie Oliver and Miss Ermine Kane.

The bridal procession was a feature of the evening, the bride being preceded down the broad aisle by the ushers, bridesmaid and maid of honor, and leaning on the arm of her father, Mr. Willis Middleton.

At the altar they were met by the groom and his best man Mr. Jas. Oliver.

The ceremony was performed after the new century ritual by Rev. John Melville of the Howard avenue church, who wore the full surplice, the ceremony being as follows and the responses prompt and clear:

Dearly beloved, we are gathered together in the presence of this august assembly of fair women and brave men, to join together in the iron bonds of padlock, this stalwart specimen of the Lord of creation, and the gentle spirit of the once weaker sex, but now better known as the "new woman."

Into this jolly estate these two lovy doves come now to be joined. If therefore, any member of this august assembly can show any cause just or otherwise why they may not be forthwith solidly welded in these inseparable bonds, let him now speak out, or else hereafter mum's the word.

TO THE MAN.

Will thou have this new women to be thy partner in the business of life; to live together in the aforesaid iron bonds of padlock.

Will thou feed cloth her, boss her and keep her properly in her own place so long as she gracefully submit to thy lordly authority?

I will.

TO THE WOMAN.

Wilt thou have this lord of creation to be thy silent partner in the business of life, to live together in the aforesaid iron bonds of padlock?

Wilt thou always close thine eyes to his faults, and open thy lips every day in praise of his virtures?

Wilt thou strickly obey his commands, humor him in his whims, bite your lips very hard and never sauce back, no matter how cross he may talk, so long as he keeps you in a house with a brown stone front, and furnishes you with six house servants, besides horses and carriages, with suitable coachman and footmen to match.

I will.

TO THE FATHER.

Who giveth this new woman a proper send off and delivereth her into the care of the Lord of Creation.

Father—I do.

PLEDGE TROTH.

I, Tom Thumb, take thee Jennie June, to be my lawful partner, from this day forward; for better but not worse; for richer but not poorer; so long as your cooking does not give me the dyspepsia, and my mother-in-law does not visit oftener than once in a quarter, and then not to remain all night; so long as all bills for millinery shall be paid out of spending money furnished by your beloved father, out of gratitude for not having you left upon his hands in the deplorable station of a helpless spinster. And thereto, I give my word and honor, sure enough.

I, Jennie June, take thee, Tom Thumb, to be my lawful partner from this day forward; for better but not worse; for richer, but not poorer; provided that you do not drink or smoke; provided that you will never mention how your mother used to cook, or sew on your buttons, or make your shirt bosoms shine; provided that you carry up coal three times a day, take out the ashes once a week, bring up the tub and put up and take down the clothes line on wash day, and perform faithfully all other duties demanded by a new woman of the twentieth century; and thereto give my word and honor, sure enough.

With this iron padlock, I thee secure, and with my worldly goods, all of which may found, I thee endow. May you take good care of them when you get them.

For as much as Tom Thumb and Jennie have consented to be bound with an iron padlock, and thereto have pledged their word and honor, sure enough, and have made assurance of affection for each other, I pronounce them a happy pair.

The wedding marches were played by Miss Sara Kelley.

Following the wedding ceremony came the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Thumb being assisted in receiving by the best man and maid of honor and the four bridesmaid.

The guests were presented in turn by the ushers with all the dignity and leisure possible. Each shook hands with the members of the receiving party and had special felicitations and often kisses for the happy couple.

Later the bridal party marched to the ladies' parlor, but returned and enjoyed the entertainment provided.

Mr. Elmer Ricker gave a difficult piano selection with credit, and Mr. Daniel J. Seward was twice on the program for solos, each of which called forth an encore. The favorite of the evening, however, was Miss Mary Margaret Mills, who made her fifth appearance as a reader at Quincy Point. The program called for three selections and she gave "The Dilemna," "Thanksgiving Day at Grandmother's" and "As Luck Would Have It." Encores were given each, and Quincy Point people will never tire of Miss Mills, who by the way is a California young lady and an assistant of Prof. Kelley, son of the late Father Kelley of this city.

The whole town was invited to the wedding feast or pie supper which in this case preceded the marriage, and was served by the ladies of the church to over 100. There were pies in variety but those chicken pies, at which the Quincy Point ladies are experts, appealed especially to everyone.

All in all it was one of the best entertainments ever given at the Quincy Point church, and the ladies and the children are to be highly complimented.

TOXIN AND ANTITOXIN.

What These Two Terms In Medicine Mean Made Clear.

Pasteur, the great French savant, founder of the sciences of bacteriology and preventive medicine, proved in the first place that the epidemic diseases are due to minute living organisms, plants and animals and that for each definite disease there is a specific micro organism. This was the great fundamental fact. Later it became evident that these microscopic parasites cause disease by certain chemical poisons which they produce, called toxins. In many cases the micro organism, if grown in culture tubes outside the body, will produce the same toxins. After being separated from the living germs which produced them these substances will produce all the symptoms of the disease when injected into an animal body. The body at the beginning of an attack of fever is not, however, passive. Its cells react against the poisons introduced and a struggle ensues, the end of which is life or death, the fighting being purposeful and definite. The body cells secrete a specific chemical body which has the power of neutralizing or rendering harmless the particular toxin introduced. This antidote to the poisonous toxin we call the antitoxin. When a man recovers from an attack of smallpox, it is because his antitoxins have proved too strong for the toxins of the disease, and his after immunity, it seems probable, is due to the persistence within his body of the antitoxins once produced.—C. E. A. Winslow in Atlantic.

Hannibal's Downfall.

The fate of Hannibal turned upon the result of a promenade. It was after he had crossed the Alps and entered Italy, with winter quarters established at Capua. His residence was one of the best houses in the city, and while walking in the garden he heard a female voice singing not far away. Struck by the tones of the voice, he issued an order that the singer should be brought before him. He was so greatly impressed by her charms that he at once attached her to his household, disposing of the husband by beheading him. Retribution followed closely upon the cowardly perpetration of the outrage. The balance of the winter was devoted to pleasure, discipline and drills were practically abandoned, and with the advent of spring the Carthaginian army was so demoralized by the dissipation of the city that its prestige was lost, and with it came the downfall of Hannibal.

Miss Grace I. Ramsdell of Glover place celebrated her ninth birthday Tuesday afternoon by giving a party to her little friends. They enjoyed games and singing and a dainty spread. Each child was presented with a box of bon bons on their departure. A very pleasant afternoon was spent.

The first supper given this season by First church was on Wednesday evening and was largely attended all the tables being filled. Cold turkey and cranberry sauce, ham, hot rolls, beans, pies, cake and coffee in abundance were served by the supper committee. A social hour followed the supper.

The revival meetings at the United Presbyterian church have been of an unusually interesting character. The sermon last night was on "Seeking God." Where to seek him and where not to. Deep feeling prevailed and decisions for Christ followed. The service tonight is expected to be of a very interesting character. The subject will be "Why we should join the church." Everybody is invited to the meeting.

The Affections of the Arab.

An Arab—meaning a tent dweller, for in an equine sense the town dweller is no Arab—loves first and above all his horse. Next he loves his firearm; next to his gun he loves his oldest son. Last comes his wife or one of his wives. Daughters don't even count; I mean the Arab scarcely takes the trouble to count them unless in so far as they can minister to his comfort, dietetic or otherwise. Until some neighbor comes along and proposes to marry—in other words, to make a still worse slave of one of them—she is only a chattel, a soulless thing. And yet she is said to be a pretty, amiable, helpful being—said to be, for no one by any hap ever chances to cast his eyes on one worth seeing. This disregard for women, be it said to their honor, does not always apply to the Bedouins of the Syrian and Arabian deserts.

An Artful Scheme.

A newly elected official would sometimes return home late at night after his wife had retired, and when she asked him what time it was would answer, "About 12" or "A little after midnight."

On one occasion instead of making the inquiry she said:

"Alfred, I wish you would stop that clock. I cannot sleep for its noise."

All unsuspicious, he stopped the pendulum. In the morning while dressing his wife inquired artlessly:

"Oh, by the way, what time did you get home?"

"About midnight," replied the official.

"Alfred, look at that clock!"

The hands of the clock pointed at 2:20.

Clay "Butter."

It is not generally known that in many parts of the world clay is eaten on bread as a substitute for butter. This is termed "stone butter" and is used in Germany. In the northern parts of Sweden earth is often baked in bread and is sold in the public markets on the Italian peninsula as well as on the island of Sardinia, Persia, Nubia and other tropical countries. This practice probably had its origin in the knowledge that all earths have some sort of flavor and take the place of salt, a necessary ingredient in all kinds of food.

SHATTERED DIGNITY.

An Exit From Church That Had a Flavor of Comic Opera.

The crude humor that makes the small boy want to throw a stone at a silk hat on a man bristling with dignity is not to be disposed of as a mere ill conceived prank of youth. There is deep in most people a spring of unsubduable humor that leaps gleefully when conscious dignity gets a fair tumble. That is why, for all the solemnity of the place, the soberest charity and the best bred propriety in the world could not prevent a titter at a little farce that happened once in a church in Brooklyn.

A gentleman and his wife, who were offended at something the preacher said, gravely rose and stalked toward the door, with their heads held high in assertive disdain. The wife followed the husband.

Unfortunately when they were half way down the aisle the husband dropped his glove and stooped to pick it up. Fate, the humorist, determined that the wife should keep her head so high that she did not see her husband stoop. She went sailing on and doubled over him in riotous confusion.

The congregation held its breath and kept its composure. The two recovered themselves and went on. Hoping to escape quickly, they turned to what looked like a side door. The husband pulled it open with an impressive swing. Before he could close it out tumbled the window pole, a long duster and a stepladder. The congregation could hold its mirth no longer, and man and wife fled to the real exit in undignified haste amid a general and pervasive snicker.

Coal Companies May Lose Charters

Columbus, O., Jan. 15.—The quiet investigation that Governor Nash has been making of the coal situation for several days ripened into fruit yesterday when Attorney General Sheets filed quo warranto suits against six big coal companies to oust them from their charters. It is charged in the petitions that these companies have entered into a conspiracy to limit the output of coal and to increase and generally control the prices.

Which Are Now Before the Massachusetts Legislature.

Quincy and Braintree will both be represented on the special committee of the Legislature to consider the coal problems, Speaker Meyers having appointed on Wednesday: Freeman of Quincy, Drinkwater of Braintree, Cunningham of Gloucester, Bearse of Springfield, Phinney of Lynn, Skerrett of Worcester, Ruston of Malden and Schofield of Ipswich.

The Senate members of the committee are: Apsey of Middlesex, Chandler of Middlesex and Gore of Suffolk.

There are several coal bills in the Legislature and new ones are being introduced nearly every day.

Killed at Shipyard.

Henry C. Kemp, an employe at the machine shop of the Fore River works, was fatally injured Wednesday afternoon at the works by a crane falling upon him. The crane struck him in the back, breaking his back and fracturing several ribs. He died a short time after the accident.

The body was removed to Hall's undertaking rooms, where it is awaiting the arrival of relatives. The young man was about 20 years of age and boarded at East Braintree. It is said his mother resides in Lowell.

Another Warrant.

Frank E. Ryder who it is alleged made an assault on William Hatch at Houghs Neck, Tuesday, was placed under arrest Wednesday and was promptly bailed. He then swore out a warrant against Hatch for assault on his daughter.

When Ryder's case was called in court this morning, Hatch was not present and the case was continued until Saturday at which time both cases will probably be heard.

Ryder when seen by a reporter said that the cause of his making an assault on Hatch was that the latter assaulted his daughter in a criminal way and that he lost his head and probably took the law into his own hands.

TODAY'S COURT.

The continued case of John Shatzel f r violation of the Metropolitan Park rules at Quincy was called, and he was fined $5.

Frank E. Ryder was arraigned for assault on William Hatch at Quincy. Case continued until Saturday.

A water pipe in the home of Mrs. Gray on Sheldon street, burst on Tuesday. The family were away at the time and it became necessary to break into the house. Once inside the neighbors were unable to stop the flow of water until a plumber was obtained. By that time there were two inches of water on the street floor.

A union service for men was held at the Congregational church last Sunday afternoon. Mr. Abercrombie, the well known Harvard athlete, spoke on "Christian manhood among athletes at Harvard."

Plans for the new church for the Mission of Our Saviour have been made and work will be commenced in the early spring. The building will be of Quincy granite.

Miss Sadie F. Mudgett has gone to New York for the winter. In the spring she goes to the White Mountains.

The memorial service to the late Arthur M. Gardner last week, was very largely attended. Rev. T. I. Reese spoke of the life and character of Mr. Gardner. A committee was appointed to draft resolutions.

Employes Celebrate.

The employes of McDonnell & Sons had a half holiday Wednesday to celebrate the marriage of Mr. John P. McDonnell of the firm. The men met at Wilson's hall in the afternoon where a spread had been provided for them by the firm.

Every employe of the firm at the Quincy plant was present and a jolly time they had of it. George Ruxton, the superintendent of the Quincy plant, presided and brief remarks were made by all of the workmen. The trend of their remarks was of a congratulatory nature and many compliments were paid Mr. McDonnell, as well as many wishes for a happy wedded life for Mr. and Mrs. McDonnell.

Supt. Ruxton was not forgotten and many in their remarks alluded to him in a complimentary way.

The men spent nearly the whole afternoon about the festive board, and when they parted it was with three cheers for their employers.

A GAME BETWEEN LOVERS

[Original.]

"Why, Heywood, having asked my daughter's hand, do you continually put off the wedding?"

Heywood Glover sat musing for a few moments before replying to his prospective mother-in-law's question.

"I am not sure Estelle and I will be happy together. She has a passion for attention. My love does not seem to satisfy her. Better give her time to make up her mind that she really prefers me to all the rest."

"I must admit that you show very good sense. I will speak to Estelle, and we shall see if she will not do better."

"That would avail nothing. If this love of admiration, which usually carries with it a love for dress, is a part of her nature, she will not heed your admonition. Say nothing to her. Leave it to me to decide when, if ever, she is fitted to get on with one man."

There was no need for either to admonish Estelle, for she overheard every word from behind a portiere.

The winter social season was at its height, and Estelle, being engaged, did not scruple to go out in the evening with her lover as sole escort. The first ball they attended after she had overheard her lover's remarks about her she put on her finest costume and all her jewels. When Heywood saw her thus arrayed, he frowned. As soon as they arrived at the ball Estelle accepted the attentions of every man who was disposed to seek her and seemed pleased that their number was greater than ever before. Heywood stood beside her till her card was filled, then left her to her first partner and did not rejoin her till it was time to leave. He drove home with her, listening to her prattle about the different triumphs she had achieved during the evening, and left her at the door without the usual kiss. The next day he wrote her a note breaking the engagement.

Estelle inclosed his note without a word of comment or reply in an envelope addressed to Heywood Glover, Esq., and sent it through the mail.

Heywood was somewhat taken aback at this unexpected treatment. He considered it, to say the least, evidence of a wayward disposition. He deemed himself insulted by the girl who was to have been his wife, and the next step, if any, must be an apology from her. But this was simply a man's view.

The next entertainment at which Heywood and Estelle met was a promenade concert. Estelle was dressed with the utmost simplicity. This was gratifying to Heywood, though somewhat surprising. He hoped it was in deference to his wishes till Estelle passed him on the arm of her escort, when she turned away her head. There is no weapon with which a woman can fight a man so effectively as contempt. Heywood winced. How tantalizing that she should have respected his wishes as to her costume and at the same time declined to recognize him! There was another inconsistency—instead of accepting the attentions of a number of men, she confined herself almost exclusively to one.

Things were not going Heywood's way. Instead of the apology he had looked for as the only possible solution to the situation, Estelle had cut him and had evidently taken up with another man. When the self deposed lover went home that night, he was very near a collapse, very nearly ready to sue for reinstatement. But the next morning he awoke an hour before daylight and thought it all over when his brain was cool and resolved, come what might, to fight to a finish.

When a resolute man makes up his mind that he is right and, after often going over his premises, invariably comes to the same conclusion, he is hard to move. Day after day passed, during which Heywood whenever he met Estelle treated her as though she had had no place whatever in his life. Estelle endeavored to freeze him by her haughty demeanor and at times made him feel that he was a worm of the dust. She went so far as to circulate a report that she was engaged to another man. This came very near breaking through Heywood's armor and piercing his already lacerated heart, but he stood firm.

Then Heywood, being somewhat left out in the cold, took up with a widow. This move, though he made it without the slightest intention of using it as a weapon, carried consternation to his beloved enemy. Estelle, panic stricken, sought an immediate opportunity for surrender, but instead of sending for Heywood and frankly confessing that she had been in the wrong she resorted to a very petty and transparent device. At a cotillon party, suddenly releasing herself from her partner, she went over to where Heywood was standing and without looking at him pinned a favor to the lapel of his coat. Then, casting up her eyes, she feigned to have been mistaken in the person. Heywood was not duped, nor did she expect him to be. Why she had not surrendered openly and aboveboard, he, being a man, could not see, but he did not trouble himself about so small a matter since he knew from that moment he was her master. He put his arms about her, and they sailed away. After circling the room Heywood led her into a window seat, where they remained for the rest of the evening. Then and there a treaty of peace was signed. Heywood was very lenient with her, though she knew well that he would stand no more trifling.

However, all this was much ado about nothing, for Mrs. Glover, now having several children to take care of, has neither the time nor the inclination to accept attentions from other men than her husband. Besides, she has lost her beauty, and her admirers have fallen away. F. A. MITCHEL.

SLAVES OF FURNITURE.

The Result of Women Being Afraid of Beetles and Mice.

If man is the slave of a dog, woman is the slave of furniture. If women only knew how much more graceful—and the only way is to appeal to their vanity—they would be reclining on the floor, they would never sit up on chairs or round a table. That this is fundamentally true is proved by the fact that they are never so happy as at a picnic, where there are no chairs and tables. I really believe that the craze for putting everything on something above the floor—by which I mean tables, sideboards, etc.—grew from the custom of sleeping in ugly, cumbersome and dirt collecting beds instead of on the floor. Of course the reason why women do not sleep on the floor is because they are afraid of beetles and mice and other harmless things. Women, therefore, having invented the bed, invented the table to stand by it, and thus spread the habit of putting everything above the level of the floor.

Woman's original sin of being afraid of black beetles and mice costs man more than all the royalty, armies, navies, pension lists, prisons, poverty, schooling, national debts and wars of Europe.

I am sure I am not putting it too high when I say that the average cost of furniture per house is $1,000, and if the world would only agree not to cumber its rooms with beds and tables, sideboards, cabinets and chairs our ground rents would be about half what they are, and the overcrowding of our cities would come down proportionately.—"Domestic Blunders of Women."

The Conductor's Honest Rakeoff.

A conductor of a Sixth avenue car, during a lull in the ringing of fares, stood passing coins from one hand to the other, turning up the date of each coin as he did so. "There are more ways of making money than by 'knocking down' fares," he remarked, noting the inquiring look on a passenger's face. "Any greenhorn can pocket a dozen nickels in collecting 120 fares in a car built for forty-eight passengers, but a man has got to know something to spot a coin that has a premium value. It's surprising how many more or less rare coins pass current without falling into the hands of some one who knows their value. This was suggested to me one day, and I took to studying the catalogue of dealers in rare coins and memorizing the dates of those that are worth more than the prices stamped on them. Since then I have picked out of the money I have taken in fares several hundred coins with a premium value ranging from a few cents to $5 and have redeemed them with my own money and sold them to dealers in coins."—New York Times.

"Biography of a Snowflake."

Under this title Mr. Arthur H. Bell in Knowledge describes the life history of the aerial frost flowers of winter. In order to have a fair start in life a snowflake should be built up on a particle of dust. Then, if it has the good fortune to begin its career at the top of a cloud many miles above the earth and to pass through many atmospheric strata, differing in their temperature and the amount of moisture they contain, our snowflake is very likely to become a notable individual among its kind. In a stratum of warmer air the little flake catches moisture on its tiny spicules, and when it enters a colder stratum below the moisture is frozen, and so the flake grows. In a thawing air many flakes sometimes cohere, forming disks from an inch to two or three inches across.

Ragged Island.

Ragged island, alias Crie Haven, on the coast of Maine, is certainly happy above most islands. It has neither mice nor magistrates, though its inhabitants number nearly fifty. The solitary doctor comes over when wanted from the mainland. There is not the solace of a church, but there is also not the distraction of a lawyer. There are a few cows and horses, but neither dogs nor cats, nor is insect life, if present at all, a nuisance even in the hottest season. The natives catch lobsters and eat all that they cannot sell.

Plants That Hate Each Other.

Fancy two plants being so unfriendly that the mere neighborhood of one is death to the other! Yet that is the case with two well known British plants. These are the thistle and the rape. If the field is infested with thistles, which come up year after year and ruin the crops, all you have to do is to sow it with rape. The thistle will be absolutely annihilated.—London Standard.

FASHION NOTES.

Evening Garnitures—Elaborate Effects the Keynote.

There is a dearth of novelties in evening attire, but the soft textures still prevail, and there is a rage for spotted or speckled net. The slips or foundations worn with net chiffon and transparent skirts are still gored and edged with fussy frills, but the top is cut and fitted in sheath fashion. Slips with separate flounces of the godet order are only worn with heavier or nontransparent materials, as the line of heading is too obtrusive.

The floral garnitures are exceedingly lovely this winter and gain much in effect from a judicious mixture of ribbon. What, for instance, can be lovelier for a net gown than a cluster of salmon pink chrysanthemums resting on a few loops of flame colored satin ribbon and then wandering off into a slender trail of stems from which descend smaller buds and knots of ribbon? Exquisite garnitures of violets are made up with narrow pale blue ribbon.

The elaborate nightgown here shown might also be used for a negligee and will be found especially useful for a convalescent. It is made of nainsook, banded with lace insertion. Some of these form a pointed effect on the yoke. The rest outlines the bolero of all over lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

ARE OPPOSED TO UNION

Operators Think It Has Harmed Anthracite Region

SHERIFFS ARE UNRELIABLE

Because of Their Sympathy With Workmen, According to Mine Superintendent's Testimony—Says Bosses Would Listen to Grievances

Philadelphia, Jan. 15.—Recognition of the union, which the anthracite coal operators maintain is not an issue before the coal strike commission, was the principal demand attacked by the Erie company yesterday in its contest against the claims of the United Mine Workers of America. General Superintendent May of the Hillside Coal and Iron company and the Pennsylvania company, which are controlled by the Erie, was on the witness stand for a long time, and gave testimony tending to show that since the advent of the union into the anthracite regions the workmen were less efficient, that a lack of discipline has resulted, that it interfered with authority and limited the earning capacity of the employes. On cross-examination Mr. May said he thought that where the company and the men disagreed some good may result by calling in a third party. Other witnesses were called who corroborated much of Superintendent May's testimony.

Superintendent May was emphatic in saying that the employment of coal and iron policemen was most essential in time of strikes. The sheriff, he said, was unreliable, and from his experience he found that deputy sheriffs, as a rule, sympathized with the strikers He said the coal and iron policemen in the company's employ were of good character.

The witness also said that had the region been free from terrorism, he believed the company would have been able to mine coal during the late strike The company was making progress last September when the terrorism prevented the company from going any further. Asked what this progress amounted to, he replied that the company had secured from 40 to 50 men out of 2500 to blow down coal.

At this point Wayne MacVeagh questioned the witness regarding the weighing of coal and the docking system. Mr. May said the men were docked for the purpose of discipline, and that the company did not seek any advantage in having a docking boss.

The discussion ended by C. S. Darrow, counsel for the miners, remarking that it seemed that a docking boss was necessary.

The witness did not think that the 10 percent advance given the men two years ago was deserved, but he has since changed his mind. He did not think the advance asked for was reasonable, and gave a non-committal answer when asked if he might change his mind two years hence. He said he knew John Mitchell personally, but would object to meeting him as the agent of the men in the employ of the Erie company, because it would bring in an outside element which had no direct interest in the business.

He repeated that the company was always ready to meet its employes. He said that he was always willing to meet grievance committees of his own men or any one else, and where there was a real grievance it was always adjusted. The instructions to the bosses, he said, were that foremen must listen to the men and that complaints would not count against the men.

He was asked if, in case one of his own employes gave up mining coal for the purpose of looking after the interests of the company's 9000 men, if he would meet him for the purpose of settling differences, and he replied that he was not prepared to answer the question. Subsequently he said the company and the men could arrive at an understanding without the assistance of an agent.

Commissioner Clark asked the witness in case the two parties failed to agree if the men could call in an agent, and May replied that he thought they could. He further said it might result in much good.

The witness then submitted to a long cross-examination on the amount of waste in the loaded mine car brought to the surface. He said it averaged about 21 percent. He admitted that some of the foremen of mines were sometimes overbearing, and concluded his testimony by stating that he thought $600 a year was a fair American living wage and that he would like to see all of his men earning at least that much.

Miners Not Voluntarily Idle

Columbus, O., Jan. 15.—The Ohio miners' convention yesterday declared against government by injunction, in favor of arbitration of all disputes between labor and capital, and urged a campaign of education among the members. President Roosevelt's attitude in the anthracite strike was endorsed. The convention declared by resolution that the miners of Ohio are willing to work at all times and that they are idle only when compelled by the operators to suspend work.

As to Municipal Fuel Yards

Boston, Jan. 15.—The Socialist members of the house gained a victory yesterday in obtaining the approval of an order requesting the supreme court to pass on the constitutionality of the power of the legislature to pass an act establishing city fuel yards. The opponents of the measure managed to obtain some modifications, but it passed nearly intact.

SMOOT IS NOMINATED

Next Senator From Utah an Apostle of the Mormon Church

Salt Lake City, Jan. 15.—At a caucus of Republican members of the legislature last night, Reed Smoot, an apostle in the Mormon church, was chosen as the Republican nominee for United States senator to succeed Senator Joseph L. Rawlins, whose term of office will expire March 3 next. This nomination is equivalent to an election

Reed Smoot was born in Salt Lake City in 1862. He has been since 1888 a member of the council of the Twelve Apostles of the Mormon church, and is, therefore, in direct line for the presidency of the church.

Previous to his candidacy for the United States senate, which was announced last spring, he had never taken any important part in the political affairs of the state. He served his church for nearly a year during 1900-01 as a missionary in England, also visiting Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and France in connection with the church work. Mr. Smoot is interested in a number of manufacturing and mining enterprises of the state and is considered wealthy. He was married in September, 1894, and has five children. He is a monogamist.

Drowned In Boston Harbor

Boston, Jan. 15.—The chief steward of the Cunard line steamer Ultonia Drew Stretch, aged 60, was visiting Chief Steward Glover of the steamer Vancouver, while the latter vessel was proceeding down the harbor yesterday. Jackson's Statue on the Constitution.

In 1833 Commodore Elliott ordered a figure of General Jackson to be carved to take the place of a billet head which the United States frigate Constitution had carried through the war of 1812. It was placed on the bow of the frigate in June, 1834, when she left the drydock in Charlestown navy yard. The excitement among the political enemies of Jackson in Boston was intense. A meeting was called in Faneuil hall—which, however, did not take place—and anonymous letter writers threatened the life of the commodore unless the statue was removed. On the night of the 2d of July, 1834, in the midst of a terrific thunderstorm, Samuel P. Dewey, a young man of twenty-eight, rowed out to the vessel and managed to saw off the head of the statue and carry it away. The head was replaced a month later in New York, and the figure remained there until 1874. It now occupies a place in the grounds of the Naval school at Annapolis.

PARIS PAWNSHOPS.

Why They Are Poor Places to Get Loans on Stolen Watches.

Of watches alone there are received here and at the twenty-two branch offices from a thousand to twelve hundred a day, about 350,000 in a year, the average loan on a watch being 30 or 40 francs. The official assured me that in this great number of watches scarcely one in a thousand has been stolen, the fact being that people who have come dishonestly by watches or other property fight shy of the mont de piete. The reason of this was presently made plain as we watched the formalities of record, and I realized how difficult it would be for any one to do business here under a concealed identity. Every client receiving a loan greater than 15 francs must produce some official document—an insurance policy, a citizen's voting card, a permit to carry arms or a rent receipt bearing his signature and throwing light upon his station in life. For loans under 15 francs the client is simply required to show an envelope through the mails to his address. All these facts, with various others, are duly inscribed upon huge record sheets, so that whoever deals with the mont de piete exposes himself to the scrutiny that must be ungrateful to folks of shady antecedents. Indeed, certain persons make this a grievance against the mont de piete and declare the Paris system an impertinent intrusion upon a client's privacy, which would seem a point badly taken if the client is an honest man.—Cleveland Moffett on Paris Pawnshops in Century.

Cards Disclose the Man.

"I wish I had not played bridge with Mr. X.," said a girl recently. "I thought him so nice before, and now my liking for him has quite gone. He was so keen about trifles, insisted upon every forfeit, questioned the score and seemed so annoyed when he lost, and yet the stakes were very small, and he was only out a few dollars; so, of course, it was not the money. It must have been the disposition of the man coming out under provocation, and the test did not show him up to advantage. Now, Mr. Z., the other man at the table, was so good natured and such a gentleman in his play that I quite like him, although I never thought him attractive before."

All games of competition may be said to assay certain characteristics, but the most crucial test seems to be card playing, and bridge is responsible for many a coolness resulting from self betrayal at the green table.—New York Tribune.

The Badger as a Fireman.

A badger which had made its home among the granite cliffs dealt with the fire god with sagacity and skill, says Nature. A friend, while painting a sea piece, discovered a badger's lair and thought to play the animal a practical joke. Gathering together a bundle of grass and weeds, he placed it inside the mouth of the hole and, igniting it with a match, waited for the ignominious flight of the astonished householder. But Master Badger was a resourceful animal and not disposed to be made a butt of practical jokers. He came up from the depths of his hole as soon as the penetrating smoke told him that there was a fire on the premises and deliberately scratched earth on the burning grass with his strong claws until all danger was past. No human being could have grasped the situation more quickly or displayed greater skill in dealing with an unfamiliar event.

The Bud of a Tree.

Among the curious things discovered by the students of plant life is the fact that a bud taken from one tree and grafted on another carries the age of the original tree with it. It has always been believed that the bud so transferred began a wholly new life, but this new theory—it may, after all, be more theory than fact as yet—shows the matter in an entirely different light.

For example, if a bud be taken from a tree that is twenty-five years old with a natural life of fifty years and grafted on another tree it will not live as long as its parent tree is entitled to live, the full fifty years, but only for the period of life then left to the tree, twenty-five years.

Extravagant.

"There was a young man in Michigan," said a United States senator, "who was deeply enamored of a beautiful young lady in my town. He lived in Detroit and one day decided that the only thing for him to do was to propose. So he went to the telegraph office and sent this message:

"'Will you marry me? Twenty word answer paid for.'

"An hour later he received this reply:

"'You are extravagant. Why pay for nineteen words too many? No.'"

A Respect For Figures.

"What do you consider the most important branch of education?"

"Arithmetic," answered Mr. Cumrox. "Give a boy plenty of arithmetic. What blights the careers of so many young men is the failure to realize that you can't subtract a $5,000 expense account from a $1,000 income."—Washington Star.

Helps.

"Yes, he always announces himself as a patron of art."

"In what way?"

"He manufactures picture cord."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Clear Course.

"She says that he is a man after her own heart."

"Then I suppose he will get it."—Judge.

It's usually easier for one father to support ten small children than it is for ten grownup children to support one father.

THE STORM HAS BROKEN

Knights of Labor Cutters on Strike at Lynn

UNION STAMP FACTORIES

Will Be Supplied With Cutters From the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, With Which Organization Manufacturers Decide to Stick

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 16.—Fifteen of the shoe manufacturers of Lynn using the union stamps on their goods decided yesterday afternoon to throw their lot with the Boot and Shoe Workers' union in its struggle for trade union supremacy with the Knights of Labor, and as a result of this decision 200 cutters affiliated with the latter organization are on strike.

Although the strike is aimed at all the fifteen union stamp factories, cutters from only nine went out today. The cutters were already out in the factory of Walter H. Tuttle. The strike was definitely decided upon at a meeting last night of the executive board of the Knights of Labor Cutters' union, and the men left their benches at 8 o'clock this morning.

Both sides to the fight in this city are well prepared and apparently eager for the fray. The Knights of Labor have pickets at every railroad station, while the Boot and Shoe Workers' union only regrets that the strike which was ordered yesterday morning and held in abeyance pending the manufacturers' conferences did not come off in time.

The Boot and Shoe workers' part in the contest will be to supply union cutters to take the place of the strikers in the union stamp factories, while the Knights of Labor will use every effort, through means of pickets, to dissuade the new workers from taking the places of union men. And strangely enough, the Massachusetts arbitration law prevents the state board from interfering in such a situation, as it is not a controversy between employer and employes.

Pending the final outcome of the battle the position of the 15 manufacturers is particularly delicate. Having large orders on hand they are loath to close their shops when the controversy does not involve either the question of wages or the recognition of union labor, while on the other hand, they are unwilling to risk the chance of losing the use of the union stamp on their product, for which they have numerous contracts, especially in the south. Such is the situation on the eve of a battle which is unique in the annals of trade unionism in this country.

After the ultimatum which was served on nine of the large shoe manufacturers in this city yesterday morning by the Knights of Labor union cutters, who demanded that the manufacturers should employ none but Knights of Labor cutters, it was expected that the strike would be on in earnest before noon.

The strike order given in the morning was countermanded at the request of the shoe manufacturers, who told the officers of the Knights of Labor cutters that a meeting of all Lynn shoe manufacturers using the union stamp would be held during the day to take action on the situation.

The Lynn shoe manufacturers who are the proprietors of what is known to the trade as union stamp shops, about 15 in number, held a meeting at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The session lasted over two hours, and the situation among the shoe workers of the city was discussed in every detail. The result was that the manufacturers decided that greater advantages would be gained by having the union stamp, and it was therefore decided to stand by the Boot and Shoe Workers' union. While the meeting was a secret one, and those attending it pledged to give out no information, it was nevertheless learned that the manufacturers were influenced considerably in their decision because of the assurances received from the Boot and Shoe Workers' union that it would use every effort to fill the positions of the striking cutters, and that the work in the shops would go on without interruption.

The manufacturers appointed a temporary chairman and secretary and decided to form an association known as The Union Stamp Shoe Manufacturers of Lynn. There are similar organizations in Haverhill and Brockton, their main object being the retention of the union stamp.

These manufacturers state that the union stamp has increased their business greatly within a very short time.

Demand For More Pay at Brockton

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 16.—The first aggressive move in an effort of the cutters of this city to secure an advance in wages was made yesterday, when a list of prices calling for increases ranging from 25 to 50 cents a day was submitted to the management of four factories where the union stamp is not used. Two of the firms, the M. A. Packard and the George E. Keith companies, made counter propositions that a piece work scale be accepted, and the P. B. Keith company and George E. Snow company returned the new price list, saying they could not accept it. The proposition that a piece work scale be adopted was declined by the union and formal notice was served on the M. A. Packard company that unless the demand is granted by tomorrow the cutters will go on strike. There the matter rests for the present.

Had a Rough Passage

Boston, Jan. 16.—Storm battered, and with her crew worn out by constant vigil, steamer Miramar reached here yesterday afternoon. Captain Dundas says that in 20 years at sea he had never experienced such tempestuous weather. The steamer loaded a cargo of coal at Newport, Eng., and sailed from there Dec. 24. From the very outset the weather was boisterous. During gales a fireman had his arm broken, the chief officer had his leg broken and a sailor had all the fingers of one hand broken.

Confessed Murderer Acquitted

London, Ont., Jan. 16.—Walter Herbert, who confessed to being a murderer, was yesterday formally acquitted of the charge of murder by a jury and discharged. Herbert confessed that he and Gerald Sifton killed Joseph Sifton, Gerald's father, in 1900. Gerald was tried twice and acquitted at the second trial. After his acquittal there was nothing for the crown to do but discharge Herbert, who was in jail awaiting sentence.

DROPPED FIVE STORIES

Five Persons Miraculously Escape Death In Falling Elevator

Boston, Jan. 16.—An elevator in the building at 3 Gilbert Place, in which were James Donnelly and four girls, gave way yesterday while it was ascending and fell from the fifth floor to the basement. All escaped death and no bones were broken, but they were terribly bruised and shaken up. As the elevator struck the bottom a large steam pipe near it burst and the escaping steam added to the peril of the imprisoned occupants. For a few moments they lay stunned and powerless. Then Donnelly burst the glass in the door with his hands and by his screams succeeded in attracting the attention of other workmen in the building, who came to the rescue. The cause of the accident has not been discovered.

Strike Breakers Have Trouble

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 16.—Incipient violence characterized the fifth day of the strike of the employes of the Connecticut Railway and Lighting company in this city. Fights occurred between the new men housed at the car barns, some of whom escaped without the lines, and the spectators. Employes of the American Pin company stoned one of the cars and smashed several of the windows. The attack was brought on by the flourishing of a revolver by a motorman. The cars were run on but two lines. No cars were run later than 5:45 p. m. Few persons rode on the six cars run.

WOULD YOU INVEST

BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S

STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $115.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 22 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property, that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 50c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $5.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions. HERBERT S. COAL PROBLEMS.

Special Committee of the Legislature Has Organized.

The special committee appointed by the Legislature to investigate the coal situation in this State of which Representative Freeman is a member, held a session Thursday afternoon, for the purpose of organization and to outline the plan for procedure. All of the members were present, Senator Apsey presiding.

Representative Mark Skerrett, of Worcester, was elected clerk. It was voted that the chairman should prepare an order authorizing the committee to summon persons and ask for such papers as they might require during the investigation, and to engage the services of a stenographer. The order will be constructed by Senator Apsey immediately.

The order to consider coal problems, under which Representative Freeman and his committee are acting, was introduced early in the Legislature and reads as follows:

"Ordered, that a joint special committee to consist of three members on the part of the Senate and such as the House may join, be appointed to investigate the conditions under which coal is received, supplied and sold in the city of Boston and vicinity, and ascertain if any attempt is being made or has been made to prevent coal being transported to or delivered at its destination or placed on the market as speedily as it might be, and to determine whether the high price at which coal has been sold is unavoidable or the result of an attempt on the part of dealers at wholesale or retail to make excessive profits.

"Said committee is instructed to investigate and report as soon as possible, and is authorized to report such measures pertaining to the subject as it may think proper for the purpose of correcting such exils as may be found to exist."

Politics should not enter into this investigation and probably will not, but the Post has discovered on this committee there are two Republicans in the Senate and one Democrat. In the House there are five Republicans and three Democrats. The committee will in all probability organize today and begin hearings at once as to the coal situation. The investigation will be held in Room 240, which is the largest in the State House, and it is expected that the Legislature will grant the committee power to summon persons and papers in order to get at the facts in the case.

More City Coal.

Mayor Bryant received another car load of coal this morning. This lot is what is known as Welsh coal and will be sold in bags of one hundred pounds each for 45 cents per bag. One bag only will be sold to a family.

Coal for Quincy.

The coal wharves of Messrs. Patch & Son and J. F. Sheppard & Sons presented a busy scene on Thursday. A schooner loaded with coal was tied up at each wharf and were being unloaded. The two vessels brought 1881 tons of anthracite coal.

Congress can act promptly when so disposed, and the bill suspending the duty on coal is now a law. President Roosevelt signed the bill on Thursday.

NO TROUBLE

Anticipated Over Granite Bill of Prices.

Cutters and Association Get Together.

Blacksmiths Demands May Go to Arbitration Board.

The two committees representing the Granite Manufacturers' Association and the Granit Cutters' Union, who have been considering the charges desired in the existing bill of prices, have completed their labors.

The two committees came to an agreement on all but one clause. That clause will be referred to a board of arbitration consisting of three men, one appointed by the manufacturers, one by the cutters, and the third to be selected by the two men appointed. They must render their finding before Feb. 25.

The clause upon which the committee failed to agree was that desired by the manufacturers, which was that in case a stone was spoiled through carelessness or negligence on the part of the workman, he shall not be paid for work already done on that stone.

There is a similar clause, in the present agreement but it applies to piece men only. The manufacturers desire it to include day men as well as piece men.

The bill of prices as agreed upon by the two committees goes into effect the first of March and in brief calls for an increase of five per cent. on all items in the price bill. It also provides that the pay for day work for an average man shall be increassd from $2.80 per day to $2.94 per day. The minimum rate for day work remains the same as now, namely $2.64.

There is also a new clause which provides that all apprentices shall be registered. That is the record of every apprentice shall be kept, the date upon which he began to serve his time, where he he has worked and how long. This record will be open to inspection by the Union and Association at all times, so that it will be known when they have served long enough to enter the journeyman class.

The two committees which have been considering the changes desired by the blacksmiths have not had such good luck. A number of meetings have been held but no understanding has been reached.

Another meeting of these committees will be held next week, and if at this meeting they cannot agree, then the whole matter will go to a board of arbitration who will have until Feb. 25 to make their finding, which will be binding upon both parties.

The changes desired by the blacksmiths in brief were: That their pay should be increased from $2.90 to $3 per day; that surface machines count as five men; that no apprentice shall be employed in a shop unless a journeyman is also employed; and that in case of men being laid off the journeyman shall be kept at work.

Ball of W. Q. B. B. C.

The annual ball of the West Quincy base ball club was held Thursday evening at St. Mary's hall. The affair was a most enjoyable one and was largely attended. Parks, Edward Spiller, Arthur McGovern, Frank Maroney and James Logan.

Church Officers.

The annual business meeting of the Wollaston Congregational church was held in the vestry Thursday evening.

Officers the ensuing year were elected as follows: Moderator, H. T. Whitman; clerk, A. W. Thompson; treasurer, J. B Cornish; collector, Herbert Tucker; prudential committee, W. S. Sayward, Albert Sayward, Dr. E. R. Johnson, W. W. Wight, A. W. Thompson, Herbert Tucker and J. B. Cornish; music committee, C. G. Farwell; deacon, S. B. Harrington; superintendent of Sunday School, C. A. Campbell.

☞ We of the south no longer dream of separate national existence. Our wealth and power and material greatness are to be gained in the union, and in it we mean to stay until we dominate it as we did in its early decade. Therefore, no more secession for the south. Next time it may be New England that will want to secede. —New Orleans Picayune.

CHRISTIAN HISTORY.

Tableaux of Merit Presented at Wollaston.

The second annual tableaux given in the Unitarian church at Wollaston, Thursday evening surpassed in splendor and detail the successful production of last winter. The stage arrangements, under the personal supervision of Rev. F. W. Pratt were smoothly effected despite the fact that there were over one hundred people in the twenty-four tableaux. The calcium light effects made the pictures highly colored and realistic.

The program began with the playing on the organ of Handel's Hallelujah chorus from the Messiah, by Mrs. C. W. Smith.

The tableaux were all good, receiving hearty applause from the audience.

Special mention might be made of "The Last Prayer" in which the poses were well kept; "Gregory and the Angels;" "The Baptism of Wittekind" and "Henry the Fourth at Canossa," notable for the beautiful costumes; the two pictures of Joan of Arc and "Milton Dictating Paradise Lost."

Perhaps the heartiest applause greeted "The escape of a Hugenot Family," showing a large boatload of people among the rushes of a stream. Beautiful too in its vivid reality was "The Morning after the Massacre of St. Bartholomew."

The story of each tableaux was charmingly read by Mrs. Gurney.

Mrs. Page sang with good effect "Ave Maria" and the incidental music was well arranged.

Quincy Man's Plan.

William B. Rice, of Quincy, head of the great shoe firm of Rice & Hutchins, has a novel plan for solving the problem of transportation of freight from the railroads entering Boston on the south to those which enter from the north says the Post. His idea is nothing more nor less than a subway for teaming under the city from Dewey square on the south to Haymarket square on the north, an enterprise which, it is thought, would solve the the problem that has troubled merchants for many years, though at a cost of millions.

Eight Hours at Westerly.

THE NEW BRIDGE.

Planking Has Commenced on Weymouth Side.

Work on the new bridge at Quincy Point over Weymouth Fore river, between Quincy and Weymouth, is going forward rapidly and should be completed by the first of February. All of the permanent spans on both sides of the draw are in position, and the planking is being put on those at the Weymouth side of the bridge.

The big revolving draw, which when open leaves an opening one hundred feet wide on either side, is now at the Fore River works, and it is expected that it will be floated down the river in about ten days. The big turret upon which it will swing is about ready to receive it, and when it arrives it will probably be necessary to tear away the bridge now used by foot passengers and by the street cars, and it is expected that for a period of ten days, the bridge will be closed for everybody, and that people desiring to cross will be obliged to do so by boats.

Ward Five People's Union.

A public meeting to consider the question of organizing a branch of the Quincy People's Union at Wollaston will be held next Thursday evening at the Wollaston Congregational church. A short history of the steps leading up to the movement will be presented as well as the constitution of the Quincy Union.

Rev. Frederic Palmer of Andover, will describe work that has been done by similar organizations in Andover.

An opportunity will be given to discuss the advisability of forming a Ward Five branch of the Union. All citizens of Ward Five, both men and women, who are interested in a movement looking to co-operation in promoting matters of public welfare are invited to be present.

Surprise Party.

About fifty friends of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Phelan gathered at their home at No. 177 Washington street, Thursday evening and gave them an old-fashioned surprise party and house-warming. During the evening, Mr. Herbert R. Holmes, in behalf of the company presented Mrs. Phelan with a beautiful rattan rocker, of unique design. Vocal music by Mr. J. Edward Greene and Miss L. E. Phelan occupied the earlier part of the evening, after which a collation was served. The party broke up in the wee sma' hours, wishing their host and hostess many happy times in their new chair.

How She Caged Him.

"Are you fond of birds?" she asked innocently as she stood at the piano fumbling the music.

"I dearly love them," he replied with never a shadow of suspicion.

Then she ran her slender fingers over the keys and began to sing, "Oh, Would I Were a Bird!"—Chicago News.

wood fillers well rubbed down and finished with two good coats of brilliant flowing varnish.

The kitchen and bathroom contain full and complete modern plumbing and fixtures. The bathtub is porcelain. The house is lighted with gas.

This makes a very cozy and comfortable little home, either for the city or suburbs, and can easily be adapted to fit any personal requirements. It will cost about $1,500.

Building For Winter Homes.

A matter to which attention ought to be paid is the construction of houses with a view to economizing fuel, says the Toronto Globe. Solidity, good workmanship and compactness are obvious means of protection against cold weather. The suggestion has been made that the winter sunshine might be utilized more extensively than it is at present. The verandas, which are now becoming every year more common, might be incased in glass during the winter months and so converted into sun parlors. Even when there is no scarcity of fuel it is pleasant and healthful to bask in the winter sun, and it is customary to advertise the sun parlor as one of the attractions of winter resort hotels.

DAY NURSERY.

Meeting Next Week to Further the Good Work.

All interested in establishing a Day Nursery in Quincy are invited to meet and discuss the necessary details next Monday afternoon, at three o'clock, in a room in charge of Mrs. Burns, Adams Building, Temple street entrance.

It is hoped the matter will meet with such assistance and approval that, before the year is out there will be a Day Nursery in every ward in Quincy.

It is of greater public interest and importance than seems apparent on the face of it. There are women with families now obliged to receive assistance from the city who would b nearly self-supporting if they could pu the little ones, too small to be school, in safe keeping for the da , thus securing freedom to earn a dollar in laundry work or house-cleaning.

It is generally agreed it is not well to leave small children alone as housekeepers, yet this is done here in Quincy as a matter of necessity, where the mother is the bread-winner.

One young woman this winter left her little children alone while she went to earn money for their food and fuel. During her absence the fire went out and she found the little people had tried to rebuild it with kerosene. The family are still alive and Quincy not a heap of ashes, but the experiment will not bear repetition.

This is only one instance of several which might be quoted to prove the need of a Day Nursery in Quincy to help working-women and to save the city perhaps money and loss of life.

F. C. B.

Funeral of Mr. Barnes.

The funeral of Mr. Franklin Barnes was held from his late home on Upland road Thursday afternoon. Rev. Merrill C. Ward pastor of the Universalist church conducted the services assisted by Rev. E. W. Preble, a former pastor. A quartette from Weymouth rendered several selections.

The many silent tokens told of the high esteem in which Mr. Barnes was held; a pillow from the Masons, star from Knights of Honor, pillow from son and daughter, pillow from friends and many kind remembrances in bouquets and cut flowers from others.

Rural Lodge of Masons, Paul Revere Post, G. A. R., and the Knights of Honor were represented by delegations.

The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Mr. Barnes was a quiet, unassuming man, kind-hearted, devoted to his family, friends and those connected with his household who held no kindred ties grew to love him in the brief years of their association with him. He was always ready to join the young people who came to his home in any sport, and will be missed by old and young, especially by the daughter who is left alone, to whom he had been for years father and mother.

Vainly shall we list for voices,
Made by absence doubly dear,
But our hearts will keep on telling
How we cherished them while here.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

Kilted Skirts—Walking Costumes. Kid Hats.

Women are wearing silk, satin or brocade evening petticoats in preference to those composed of cambric and lace. Zenana is of course a favorite winter material and obtainable in delightful shades, but it is better for dressing gowns and peignoirs, for even with shaped bands you cannot do away with a certain amount of thickness.

Cloth walking dresses in brown are much in favor, and they mostly boast the flat kilted skirts. Again, many of the bolero coats show plaits, these being loose either at the front or at the back. Plaits indeed are a fad just now, but they must be fitted and arranged so that their lines follow those of the figure they are to adorn or else disaster will lurk in every fold.

Kid hats are perhaps more new than pretty, though they are useful when devoted to motoring, and one of these in gray, bound with black braid and with bows and ends of braid at the back, has been especially designed for such exercise.

The up to date hat and muff shown in the cut are designed to correspond with the coat of light putty colored cloth. The hat is draped in the popular three cornered shape, with the edge of sable. There is a large ruche of ribbon and a bunch of violets under the brim. The muff is of the same cloth, with two large ruffles in each side, two bands of sable and a large fall of lace and violets on the left side.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medininea directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. SHOT AT CLOSE RANGE

Lieutenant Governor Tillman Puts Bullet Into Editor

WOUND PROBABLY FATAL

Had Been Sworn Enemies For Years and Assailant's Animosity Was Accentuated by Pronounced Editorial Opposition to Him In Politics

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 16.—N. G. Gonzales, editor of The State, and widely known throughout the south, is at the Columbia hospital in a critical condition as a result of a pistol wound inflicted by James H. Tillman, lieutenant governor of South Carolina.

It was an awful tragedy in broad daylight on the most frequented street and corner in the state capital. It was a few moments before 2 o'clock when the cry was passed along the streets that "Jim Tillman has shot Gonzales." The announcement went like a thrill through all Columbia and there was a rush towards the scene of the tragedy to learn the facts and the condition of the editor.

The office of The State is on the same block as the scene of the shooting and it took only a few moments for a throng to assemble in front of the newspaper building. The excitement and the indignation on the street was intense. Police Officer Boland immediately after the shooting arrested Tillman and took him to police headquarters, where he was relieved of two pistols, the one with which he shot Editor Gonzales and a second large revolver of 38 calibre. From the police station he was taken to the county jail, where he is in full protection of the officers.

No fight or words occurred between the men preceding the assault and the only attributed cause for the shooting by Tillman is that during the recent primary election Editor Gonzales opposed Tillman in his race for governor and vigorously assailed him editorially. The two men have been sworn enemies for some years.

During the progress of that campaign Editor Gonzales, in his newspaper, The State, called Tillman a debauch and a blackguard and referred to him as a "criminal candidate" and a proven "liar." It was this and other such editorial expressions, it is supposed, that goaded Tillman to the desperate deed.

The campaign occurred last August and since the first primary, Aug. 26, 1902, Gonzales has had nothing to say about Tillman, except to comment on the result of the primary.

There appears to be no conflict of testimony as to the essential features of the tragedy. Gonzales was going home alone from his office to his lunch.

Lieutenant Governor Tillman had presided at the senate's session and remained around the senate chamber for a short times after adjournment. As he came out of the state house he was accompanied by Senator Tallbird and Senator Brown, and he was joined on his way up town by Congressman-elect Aiken and former Representative Dominick. The lieutenant governor and the editor of The State met at the corner of Main and Gervais streets, just at the street car transfer station.

When at close range Tillman drew his pistol and opened fire. He wiped his pistol on his coatsleeve and took aim as if to fire a second time, but changed his mind and let his pistol fall to his side. Tillman was perfectly cool and collected, sober and unexcited to all appearances. Gonzales was unarmed. The shock from the magazine pistol paralyzed him, but as he saw the deadly weapon aimed at him, perhaps for a fatal bullet, he cried out "Shoot again, you coward."

There was only one shot fired and that entered the right side between the eighth and ninth ribs and passed through the forepart of the body, coming out just above the free border of the ribs. After the shot had been fired and as Gonzales fell against the nearby transfer station, James Sims and Gainwell Lamotte rushed up and gave him support. He was taken to the business office of his newspaper.

There, with his head resting on a bundle of newspapers Gonzales requested that his wife be sent for and to his friends told the story of the tragedy. Four doctors were soon at his side and in a few moments there were a half dozen more physicians doing all they could to save life. It was promptly decided that the only hope was to perform an operation.

Editor Gonzales and Lieutenant Governor Tillman have passed each other in full view since the opening of the present session of the general assembly on Tuesday, but there has been no encounter, no word passed and no recognition of any kind, so it came like a thunderclap out of a peaceful sky when the shot was fired. It was absolutely unexpected as it was thought that whatever soreness there was as result of the primary of last August had passed away.

Last night Tillman was asked for a statement, but said he had been advised by counsel to say absolutely nothing and he followed the advice to the letter.

The condition of the wounded man is critical, with chances against recovery.

Britishers Advance Coal Prices

London, Jan. 16.—The prices of coal have advanced 12 cents a ton at the pit banks, partly owing to cold weather demands and partly to increasing contract orders in view of the coal situation in America.

SMOOT'S NOMINATION

Presents Many Difficulties For the Senate to Deal With

Washington, Jan. 16.—Present indications are that Apostle Smoot will meet some resistance when he comes to the senate, although the form which the opposition to him will take has not been disclosed. The question presents many difficulties. His opponents argue that an apostle is worse than a polygamist, like Roberts, whom the house excluded, because the apostles are responsible for 10,000 polygamists. All the marriages are recorded by the hierarchy, and if it really desired to make an end to polygamy, its power would be great. The Mormon oath, taken by an apostle, it is alleged, vacates any oath taken before the United States officials. The Mormons have it in their power to elect anybody to the senate, and the only argument that the opponents of Smoot have made is that it was bad policy to force an issue of this kind before the country.

The religious associations are already organizing their opposition, and by the time Smoot gets here next December, or earlier if an extra session be called, the senate leaders will be confronted with an emphatic request. An investigation into Utah conditions would seemingly be the first step. This may be quietly made before congress meets, just as four years ago when Mr. Tayler of Ohio was required by the speaker to make a vacation inquiry into the constitutional remedies for dealing with Roberts. Utah's defiance is not helping Arizona in its present effort to secure admission, for the Mormon element is strong there and may become troublesome.

The Indianola Incident

Washington, Jan. 16.—Senator McLaurin of Mississippi says there is no disposition on the part of the authorities of Indianola to give official assurances that the postmistress, Mrs. Cox, will be protected as to her personal safety, because giving such assurances as are demanded by the postoffice department would be an admission that some danger threatened her, which they do not admit. Reiteration of Postmaster General Payne's statement that the office at Indianola would not be reopened until such assurances were given is made.

In Congress

Washington, Jan. 16.—In the senate yesterday Mr. Tillman continued his arraignment of trusts and monopolies and again charged that the attorney general was responsible primarily for lack of action against trusts. The statehood bill was under discussion for a short time.

The house passed the army appropriation bill and began consideration of the department of commerce bill, under a special rule making it a continuing order until disposed of.

Large Fortune Goes to Judge

Tiffin, O., Jan. 16.—What purports to be the last will of Mrs. Charlotte M. Hoyt, widow of the New York multimillionaire, was filed yesterday. It is dated Sept. 9, 1902, this being of later origin than the other two wills. Judge Dunn of this city, who was in charge of Mrs. Hoyt's interests, is bequeathed the bulk of the estate. Her father, Casper Guss, gets $100 a month during his life, and the New York Humane society $50 a month for the care of her pets.

Employers Will Investigate

Pawtucket, R. I., Jan. 16.—The management of the J. & P. Coats Thread company, limited, have agreed with the national officers of the United Textile Workers of America to investigate the alleged grievances of the employes in the carding and combing rooms of their mill in this city and have the matter satisfactorily adjusted before next Monday.

MINE FOREMEN TESTIFY

Think That Union Is Detrimental to Discipline

BIDS OF CONTRACT MINERS

Result In Injustice to the Laborers, in the Opinion of President Mitchell, Who Conducts a Cross Examination—Wage Statistics Admitted

Philadelphia, Jan. 16.—Most of the testimony presented to the anthracite coal strike commission yesterday was of a corroborative nature, the Erie company, which has not yet concluded its case, producing numerous witnesses to prove that the Miners' union is responsible for the alleged restriction of the hard coal production. During the examination of Edward Hutton, a foreman, the fact was adduced that the practice of restricting the number of cars to be loaded daily by one man had been in operation as far back as 1895, long before the United Mine Workers of America entered the anthracite region. The union's responsibility rests with the enforcement of this rule and not with its inception.

The majority of the witnesses were mine foremen who testified that the union was detrimental to discipline at the collieries, that mining is a comparatively healthful occupation, and further to acts of lawlessness committed during the recent strike. A contract miner testified that he had been prevented by the union from carrying out a certain contract, the driver refusing to furnish him with a sufficient number of cars.

President Mitchell explained to the commission that the union regarded with disfavor the practice of miners securing certain work by proposal. In the first place, he said, the lowest bidder always secured the contract and he employs as many helpers as he deems necessary, paying them smaller wages than they would otherwise receive. In many cases one contract miner has employed from 12 to 15 laborers to do the work, while he would act as a superintendent, performing no part of the actual mining. This the union considers unjust to the other men, besides increasing the liability of accidents, as the contract miner could not pay proper attention to so many different jobs. Mr Mitchell stated also that he had been informed that saloon keepers sometimes secure these contracts and never enter the mines, but leave the work to the laborers.

William Zorn, a miner, told how he had been compelled to give up contract work. He said he was engaged in the work known as "robbing pillars," but the driver refused to give him enough cars, telling him he was acting under orders from the president of the local branch of the union.

Mr. Mitchell cross-examined the witness. He said: "When you took the contract you got it by bidding, did you not?"

"Yes."

"You had 12 or 15 laborers?"

"Yes."

"You required three men to fill 10 cars in a day and the union simply wanted you to have the same number of cars as the other miners. Is that correct?"

Witness was not certain, but was positive the driver had told him the president of the local would not permit him to have enough cars to continue the work.

Mr. Mitchell asked the witness if he had done any of the actual mining under the contract, and Zorn replied that he directed the operations.

"Then you were a small operator," said Mr. Mitchell.

"Yes," replied the witness.

At this point President Mitchell explained that the union was opposed to such contract work for the reasons stated above.

Commissioner Clark asked Mr. Mitchell if it was customary for such contractors to furnish bonds, and received a negative answer.

"What is their responsibility?" asked Mr. Clark.

"The same as that of an ordinary contract miner," was the reply.

M. P. Blauveit, auditor of the Hillside Coal and Iron company and of the Pennsylvania Coal company, offered numerous statistics showing the average earnings of the men in the companies' employ and produced figures to show what the earnings would be if the collieries worked full time at the rate of 10 hours a day for a year. Counsel for the miners objected to this as evidence, but Chairman Gray decided that as the statements were computed from office records they were admissable.

Navy Yard Faces Coal Famine

New York, Jan. 16.—An inventory taken at the Broklyn navy yard yesterday disclosed the fact that there is only enough coal on hand to last five days. BATTLED WITH FLAMES

Woman Dies From Burns and Aged Mother Is Seriously Injured

Woburn, Mass., Jan. 16.—Mrs. Mary Maloney, a widow, was burned to death last evening and her mother, Mrs. Patrick Haverty, aged 96 years, was seriously burned while trying to save her daughter from the flames. That the aged woman did not lose her life was due to the prompt action of Mrs. James Brown, a colored woman, who tore the blazing garments from the old lady's body.

Mrs. Maloney's clothing caught fire from a stove while she was preparing supper. With the exception of her mother, she was alone in the house at the time, and when the aged woman saw her daughter enveloped in flames she seized an overcoat and wrapped it around the blazing woman and then with her unprotected hands began to tear off the burning clothing. In a moment the flames had communicated to her own person and her outer garments were ablaze.

Crazed by the pain, Mrs. Maloney rushed from the house, but fell unconscious on the porch, where her sufferings were relieved by death. Mrs. Brown was standing at a window in her home when she saw the blazing figure and rushed across to find the younger woman dead and the aged mother battling with the flames which enveloped her. Seizing the overcoat, which was lying on the floor, Mrs. Brown extinguished the fire and then tore the charred garments from the old woman's body. Mrs. Haverty's burns, while serious, are not considered fatal. Mrs. Maloney was 66 years old, and leaves 12 children.

After Sickness

Take Vinol—Our Great Strength Creator.

IT GIVES ONE A SPLENDID APPETITE.

AND QUICKLY REBUILDS THE SYSTEM.

We Will Refund the Price of Vinol if It Fails.

The worst part of sickness, frequently, is getting over it.

The patient's strength is depleted, his system is generally demoralized, relapses are continually feared, and naturally.

The one thing to aid recovery is to give the patient that which will enable him to get strong, and at the same time give strength direct to the different organs of the body.

Nothing will do this like Vinol.

It acts directly on the stomach, creates a healthy appetite, and enables the digestive organs to obtain the necessary elements to increase the weight of the patient and to make new healthy flesh and muscle tissue and pure, rich, red blood.

The following is a letter showing where Vinol was taken and did good after a case of sickness. It reads as follows:

"I wish to certify to the very great benefit which has been derived from the use of Vinol in my family. My wife was very sick with the grippe and afterward was wholly run down. One bottle of Vinol places her on her feet in better condition than she had been before in six months. I heartily recommend and endorse it."—HENRY F. STURTEVANT, 84 Huntington St., Brockton, Mass.

Everything that is in Vinol is plainly printed on the label of each package.

We know Vinol is a splendid preparation, and in many cases we have been able to see for ourselves the wonderful results it brings about.

Remember that we guarantee Vinol and refund the purchase money if you are not satisfied.

Strikers Decline to Yield

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 16.—While the non-union men do not like the presence in the factories of the undesirable class of foreigners brought here, it is not thought probable that they will take any further steps to settle the differences between the manufacturers and the strikers, their efforts not having met with success. The strike leaders say they will not yield, and are confident of final victory.

Agents Think St Louis Safe

New York, Jan. 16.—No news has been received of the American line steamship St. Louis. Crowds of anxious inquirers have called at the offices of the company, where the agents maintain a cheerful view and assure all that there is no need for alarm. It is known the ship's boilers are not in condition, as she is to be withdrawn at the end of the present voyage for repairs.

Recognized the Smell.

The sexton of an Episcopal church in Boston has many stories to tell of the remarks and comments made by visitors.

One Christmas when the church was beautifully decorated with cedars and firs an old lady walked up the aisle to the chancel and stood sniffing the air after every one else had left the church.

"Don't it smell solemn?" she said at last to the sexton as she turned away with evident reluctance. "I don't know as I ever realized just what the 'odor of sanctity' meant before today. We don't have any such trimmings in the church I attend up in the country."—Youth's Companion.

Human Calendars.

In Siam every woman is a walking calendar. On Sunday red silk, with a parure of rubies, is worn; Monday brings a silver and white dress and a necklace of moonstones; Tuesday is dedicated to light red, with coral ornaments; Wednesday is devoted to green, with emeralds; Thursday sees a display of variegated colors, with catseyes; Friday the lady is arrayed in pale blue, with flashing diamonds, and Saturday in more somber, darker blue, with sapphires to match.

Quoting Her Own Words.

Mother (sternly)—Willie, you took some of these preserves from the pantry.

Willie (shrewdly)—Oh, who told you that?

Mother—No one told me. I suspected it! Now, tell the truth! Didn't you?

Willie—Ma, "children should be seen and not heard."—Philadelphia Press.

First Gathering of Labor Agitators.

"Of course you have read of the confusion of tongues at the building of the tower of Babel?"

"A gathering of labor agitators, I suppose. No; I haven't read it. Tell the truth, I'm not interested in trades unions."—Boston Transcript.

Quincy Bar Association Want Litchfield as Constable.

A meeting of the Quincy Bar Association was held this morning to take steps toward having Amos L. Litchfield appointed a constable. Mr. Litchfield has held the commission of constable for several years and has done the greater part of the civil business for local lawyers. This year Mr. Litchfield was not appointed by Mayor Bryant, and the lawyers have been handicaped in getting their papers served, and the meeting this morning was to enter a protest against his being dropped from the list of constables appointed this year. A petition requesting Mr. Litchfield's appointment will be presented to Mayor Bryant.

ANTI-UNION ARGUMENTS

Presented to Strike Commission For Consideration

ANTHRACITE PRODUCTION

Said to Be Restricted Through Union Rules Relating to Loading Cars—Dockage Against Men Greatly Reduced—Needless Petty Strikes

Philadelphia, Jan. 17.—More mine officials were called to the witness stand yesterday and informed the coal strike commissioners that, under the influence of the union, the mine workers restricted the production of anthracite coal and otherwise interfered with the discipline of the employes. The Erie company closed its case early in the day after calling a physician who testified to the good health of the mine workers.

The Scranton Coal company, which operates, besides its own, the collieries of the Elk Hill Coal and Iron company, then took up the attack on the demands of the miners. The Scranton and Elk Hill companies turn their coal over to the New York, Ontario and Western railroad, which virtually controls them. The witnesses testified generally that no blacklist exists; that the contract miners work on an average of from six to seven hours a day; that the local unions compel the men to load an equal number of cars, thus restricting the output; that the men are careless in obeying orders, and that frequent petty strikes occur because a union man is dismissed for insubordination.

One inside foreman testified that the employment of a check weighman, insisted upon by the union, has proved to be a good thing for the company because the miners sent to the surface cleaner coal, that is, coal with very little impurities in it.

The accountant for the Scranton Coal company presented figures which showed that since a check docking boss was employed by the company at the request of the miners the dockage against the men has been reduced about one-half. The miners pay the wages of the check weighman and the check docking boss. It was also stated that the checkmen have no trouble with the regular weighman and docking boss of the company.

Superintendent May of the Erie company testified a few days ago that the employment of check docking bosses is not practicable because the two men would not agree regarding the amount of dirt in a car.

Superintendent Allen stated on cross-examination that he believed the Raymond and the Ontario collieries of the company could produce about 1000 more tons of coal a day if the men would mine as much coal as they are capable of doing.

A Coal Dealer's Testimony

Washington, Jan. 17.—A number of wholesale dealers in coal who do business in Philadelphia and Baltimore and sell the coal of independent operators testified yesterday before the senate committee on the District of Columbia in connection with the committee's investigation into the scarcity of coal in this city. A. B. Whitney of Philadelphia said that his firm is now paying $8 a ton for anthracite at the mines, minus 10 percent commission, whereas before the strike the price was $3.25. He said that instead of increasing, the coal supply is diminishing. "If," he said, "the miners would do as Mr. Mitchell says, the supply would be increased, but none of the producers except the Reading company are producing as much coal as formerly."

Navy Yards Short of Fuel

Washington, Jan. 17.—The various navy yards are appealing to the bureau of equipment for fuel. Through the foresight of Rear Admiral Bradford the coal famine thus far has not affected the navy, ironclad contracts having been closed before the strike for the delivery of coal to the navy at normal prices. Unless relief comes soon, however, the contractors may be unable to supply the increased demand that is developing throughout the naval stations of the country.

Ohio Miners Want Advance

Columbus, O., Jan. 17.—The Ohio miners' convention completed its work yesterday. The report of the scale committee, which provides for a flat advance of 25 percent for all mine workers in the state, was accepted. The present scale is based on a rate of 80 cents a ton for pick mining and the advance asked means $1 a ton.

France Needs Her Own Coal

Paris, Jan. 17.—United States Consul General Gowdy says it is not likely that any French coal will be shipped to the United States as a result of the action of the United States in placing coal on the free list. The French mines are unable to meet the demands of the home market.

Disbrow Acquitted

Riverhead, L. I., Jan. 17.—Louis A. Disbrow was acquitted yesterday on the charge of killing Clarence Foster at Good Ground on the night of June 9. The verdict was generally anticipated. The case for the prosecution throughout was weak, the strongest point made against the accused being that he was the last person seen with Foster and Miss Lawrence on the night of the tragedy. The contention of the defense was that Foster and the girl committed suicide.

WATERBURY STRIKE

Union Men and Railway Property Are Targets For Mob's Wrath

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 17.—Yesterday was the most exciting day of the strike since its inception on Sunday, when the motormen and conductors on the Connecticut Railway and Lighting company went out in a body. At the street car barns where the non-union men are quartered there congregated last night a crowd of at least 500 persons, who hooted and jeered at the men within and discharged volley after volley of stones at the windows of the building and of the cars standing outside. One woman spectator was hit in the face with a large stone.

None of the imported men were allowed outside during the evening. The police were unable to deal with the crowd, as they congregated faster than they could be dispersed. The night watchman was repeatedly stoned as he passed from the office to the other buildings. A howl went up from the crowd every time a stone would crash through a window.

Even during the day as the cars passed through the principal streets they were the targets for bricks and other missiles. Wagons are purposely driven along the tracks in all parts of the town to hinder the passage of the cars.

The strikers are orderly and united to a man. They are supported by all the union men and their families in the city. Financial contributions are coming in and one business man has given them $500.

School Board Contest Ended

Boston, Jan. 17.—The contest that has been waged in the school board over the chairmanship of that body for the coming year was settled last night by the re-election of Chairman Cushing. Cushing, who was elected as a Republican and Public School association candidate, was strongly opposed by the straight Democratic members, and the 13 votes necessary to elect him to the presidency were secured only by his voting for himself on the fourth ballot.

Increase Not Satisfactory

Maynard, Mass., Jan. 17.—Spinners at the Assabet mills of the American Woolen company are very much dissatisfied with the increase of 2 cents a 100 pounds, which was the basis of settlement of the strike of two weeks ago, but there are very few who favor a second strike. The spinners claim that they are unable to run off more than 300 pounds a day, so that the increase amounts to very little.

Took Dose of Acid

Adams, Mass., Jan. 17.—Smith T. Gage, aged 23, died yesterday from the effects of drinking carbolic acid at his farm, but whether the poison was taken intentionally or by accident is not known. There is no known reason for suicide. Standing beside the bottle of carbolic acid on a pantry shelf was a bottle of whiskey, and it is possible that the one was mistaken for the other.

Chased Across Country and Caught

Boston, Jan. 17.—After having been chased across the country by Arizona officials who were looking for him on a charge of embezzlement, Justin T. Hindes was arrested here yesterday. Hindes was found at a prominent hotel. Sheriff Roberts of Prescott, Ari., says that the charge against Hindes in Arizona is the embezzlement from the State Mining association of $1000.

Their Bail Doubled to $10,000

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 17.—Joseph E. Palmer and Mrs. Mary F. Lottie, charged with a criminal operation, were arraigned yesterday and held under $10,000 each. The case was continued for one week. After the arrest on Thursday bail was fixed at $5000 each, which Mrs. Lottie obtained, but yesterday the court increased it to $10,000, and both were obliged to go to jail.

Unexpectedly Struck Gas

Boston, Jan. 17.—A lighted lantern used by telephone employes who were searching for a broken cable in a manhole in Maverick square, East Boston, last night ignited gas that had accumulated and an explosion followed. Michael McCarthy was severely burned, while hundreds of people who were in the vicinity felt the shock of the explosion.

Got a Light Sentence

Boston, Jan. 17.—Charles H. Webster, the letter carrier who pleaded guilty of stealing letters from the mails, was before Judge Lowell yesterday for sentence. Webster took the stand and asked for clemency. He really could not tell why he had taken the letters. Judge Lowell sentenced him to 18 months in the house of correction.

To Vote on License In February

Bennington, Vt., Jan. 17.—The tangle in connection with the submission to the voters of the state of the high license act passed by the recent legislature has been unraveled by the supreme court, and the question as to whether local option in the granting of liquor licenses shall go into effect on March 3 next or Dec. 1, 1906, will be voted on Feb. 3.

Little Fellow's Peculiar Death

Zylonite, Mass., Jan. 17.—Roger Myers, aged 4, with other lads too young to attend school, was coasting on hard crusted snow down a sloping meadow yesterday. The Myers boy, losing control of his sled, was carried against a wire fence, the lower wire just reaching his neck. The contact broke his spine, causing instant death.

Fifty Cents on Dollar For Creditors

Providence, Jan. 17.—A meeting of the creditors of Simpson & Kircaldy Co. of Woonsocket, which assigned a few weeks ago, with liabilities of $139,000, was held here yesterday. The proposition was advanced to pay the creditors 50 cents on the dollar within 30 days and the creditors accepted the offer.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

MAGIC INK.

A Simple Trick With Which to Puzzle Your Playmates.

Boys and girls sometimes amuse themselves with what is called "invisible ink," a fluid that makes no more color on paper than water does, but which becomes visible at once if you expose it to heat. An ink of that kind is a great curiosity to persons who have never before seen it, but a greater curiosity still is an ink that may be quickly made to disappear by rubbing it.

To make this fluid get a little starch (just the common kind used by the laundress) and mix it with water until it becomes of about the consistency of cream. Then to it add a few drops of tincture of iodine, and it is ready for use.

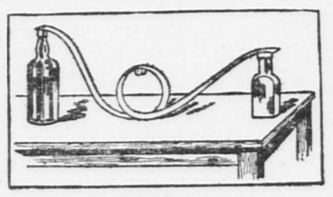
Dip your pen into it and write a few words on ordinary letter paper. The writing will be of a dark brown color and will dry very quickly. It will look exactly like brown ink, and when you tell your friends that you are going to make the writing disappear simply by rubbing your hand or your handkerchief over it they will probably look incredulous, for it has a permanent appearance, just as the black ink of a letter has.

But rub it, and every trace of the writing will vanish as quickly as if your hand had magic in it.

There are many ways in which this fluid may be used for amusing or mystifying people.

A Homemade Loop the Loop.

This little apparatus illustrates the principle of centrifugal force and shows why the trick cyclist does not fall when he reaches the top of his inverted path. A long strip of cardboard is bent into a loop, and its ends are fastened to two supports, one of which is a few inches higher than the other. Two bottles of different height form convenient supports. If a spool shorter than the width of the cardboard is placed carefully upon it at the higher end and let go, it will roll around the loop without falling off and go on the top of the small bottle. To prevent the spool running off the track it is advisable to bend up the edges of the cardboard or paste a narrow strip of paper on each side. The spool may be replaced by a little wagon in which any small objects may be laid loosely. Not only will the wagon not fall in going around the loop, but the load, though not fastened, will not fall out.



LOOPING THE LOOP.

The Hunter's Servant.

A hunter's servant while out on the chase lay down in a quiet nook, watching for the game to pass by. A rabbit soon passed, but he did not arise because he said he was then looking for deer. Presently a deer passed, but by this time he was looking for pheasants and so did not move. He next saw ducks, quail, pigeons, squirrels and other game, but he did not attempt to get any of them because they were not what he was looking for at the time. He was waiting for an opportunity, he said. But everything passed except what he was looking for, or else passed at a time when he was looking for something else. His master finally came and reproached him for his inaction, saying that one will never get an opportunity exactly to his liking, but should learn to take what came along and make the most of it.—Austin Bierbower in St. Nicholas.

The Pug's Retort.

An elephant large met a pug dog small
While both were out walking one day,
And the former began criticising the pug
In this really discourteous way:
"My dear little friend, the whole world knows that curls
Have long been out of style, but I see
That you cling to them still, for the curl in your tail
Is as tight as can possibly be!"

"Well, what if it is?" And the pug dog's wrath
Could be seen in his very toes.
"Full many a beast has a curl in its tail,
But you have a curl in your nose!"
Then the elephant trumpeted loud with rage,
While the pug, in a fright, ran away,
And the elephant hated the sight of a dog
Ever since that unfortunate day.
—Florence A. Evans in New York Herald.

About Old World Rulers.

The king of England is German, Norman and French; the emperor of Russia is Danish and German, even more than he is Muscovite; the king of Greece is a Dane; the king of Sweden and Norway is French; the king of the Belgians has nothing of the Belgian in him; King Victor Emmanuel is more Austrian than Italian. So it goes down the line. Very few of the reigning monarchs can claim race relationship with the people they govern. It is a curious fact, but nevertheless the records bear out the statement.

A Bird Surgeon.

Every now and then there are stories told of how birds and animals act as surgeons, either for themselves or for their fellows. The latest is the feat of one of the captive hawks in Central park, New York, who lanced with his sharp bill a tumor on the leg of one of his mates. He tried for days to accomplish his purpose, Pedro, the afflicted one, having serious objections.

Some Salt Water Ghosts

[Copyright, 1902, by H. S. Hale.]

In March, 1862, the bark Schuylkill of Philadelphia encountered a brig, the Speedwell, in the bay of Biscay with a signal of distress flying.

The Speedwell had a cargo of coal for Gibraltar. She was also a new craft, this being her third voyage. While lying in the Downs at anchor at night the crew had been frightened by a moaning in the fo'castle.

At dark, on the night before the Schuylkill came up, mates and all went away in the longboat and left the captain alone.

In June, 1868, I ran away from the Marblehead whaler Josiah Bemis in the port of Port St. Louis, island of Mauritius. A week after she had sailed away there came into port a ship called the Golden Horn, owned by an English firm in Bombay. She had touched at a port in Ceylon and was bound for Liverpool, and the crew had forced the captain to put in at St. Louis on account of the ship being haunted. Very little of the story leaked out when the six of us who had deserted the whaler shipped aboard of her.

The captain and both mates were English, and there were two English sailors in the fo'castle. Of the thirteen men forward there were five Portuguese. The cook was a negro and the steward an Irishman. Of those arriving in the ship at Port St. Louis only the captain and first mate remained. Cook, steward and all others were new hands. Four of the Americans were educated young men who had shipped for a whaling cruise in a spirit of adventure. The captain and both mates were above the ordinary, and even the cook was a man of considerable education who had been driven to sea by hard luck ashore. I tell you this because we had a mystery aboard, and superstition played no part in it.

Such of us as had heard the gossip about the ghost from the old crew had forgotten it when the Golden Horn was three or four days out. She was a fast craft, well found in every particular, and there was nothing to find fault with. One night, while I was acting as lookout on the bows, the hour being between 1 and 2 o'clock, I turned my face for a moment and saw a man standing about five feet away. I was in the captain's watch, which is really the second mate's watch, and Mr. Leslie, the second mate, was pacing the quarter deck, as I could see. It being a quiet night, with all sails full, the other men of the watch on deck were lying about to catch a wink of sleep, but ready to spring up at a call.

I at first thought the man to be the captain, though it would be strange if he came forward. Looking closer, I saw that he was a total stranger. He was a tall, heavy man and had on oilskins, though the night was fine. If masquerading was not almost a crime on shipboard, I might have thought it the cook or steward dressed up to play a joke. I could see the man at the wheel, and the mate and I looked about and counted the men in the watch. Then I advanced upon the stranger, and he backed up a few feet, glided to the port rail and swung himself over and out of sight.

I listened for the splash, but none came. I climbed upon the rail, but no one was in sight. I was still looking and wondering when Mr. Leslie came forward, and when he had heard my story he admitted that it was the ghost that had driven the other crew away. The spook had been seen by every man who stood watch from midnight to 2 o'clock, but by no one else and at no other time.

I promised to say nothing to any of the men, and I kept my word, but next night it was seen by the lookout just as I had seen it, and after two or three days more the thing was out. The Portuguese flunked at once and almost threatened mutiny, but the others of us, assisted by the officers, went coolly at work to solve the mystery. Not one of us was a believer even in dreams. We stretched ropes across the deck, but the shadow passed to the rail and over just the same. We stretched a net along the rail, but it went through the net as a puff of smoke would. We lighted the decks, and we even extinguished the binnacle light for a few minutes, but it made no difference. On one occasion every man in the ship stood on the spot and swung his arms and sought to grasp something, but the ghost came and stood and disappeared just the same.

At Cape Town the Portuguese cut sticks, and four English sailors were shipped. We were now all English speaking and all white men except the cook. We were determined to "lay" that ghost, and for at least twenty nights after leaving Cape Town we experimented. Not one of us was afraid, but the whole thing was considered a lark.

Do what we would, that shadowy figure appeared. It came as we lay becalmed, and it came as we were lying to in a gale. No man saw its face. You simply saw a man there. As you started forward he stepped back and then to his left. There was no sound of feet, no noise at the rail. From forehead down to throat was a darker spot in the shadow, as if veiled. The arms seemed to hang down, but you also lost sight of the hands in the shadow. Captain, mates, steward, cook, every man aboard, went on lookout and saw the ghost.

We took the ship into port, but no one wanted any more of her. The story got out, and for six months she was idle. Then she got a charter for Australia, was spoken twenty-two days out and after that was never heard of again. M. QUAD.

FIGHT ON IN EARNEST

Between Rival Unions In the Shoe Industry

KNIGHTS OF LABOR IDLE

Unless Their Places Are Supplied by Boot and Shoe Workers' Union Factories Must Soon Close—Stitchers Also Conclude to Take a Vacation

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 17.—All the Knights of Labor cutters were called out in nine of the 14 union shops yesterday and the women stitchers went out with them from two of the places. The number of strikers is not more than 500 as yet, while the whole number of employes in the factories where the strike occurred is between 1500 and 1800, but all are dependent on the cutting department, which handles the leather first. One by one the other departments would have to suspend operation, and in the course of a few weeks the factories would be idle if no cutting is done; but this is where the Boot and Shoe Workers' union expects to come to the assistance of the manufacturers.

Not only is this union bound by its agreement with the employers to help them in procuring competent shoe workers to fill the places of the strikers, in return for the manufacturers' acceptance of the union stamp, but it has given them written assurance within the past few days that it will send for competent union cutters to fill the vacancies occasioned by the strike.

Some of the manufacturers prepared formal applications to the Boot and Shoe Workers' union for new men, which shows that they consider their relation with the strikers to be at an end. John F. Tobin, general president of the organization, assured them some time ago, while the strike plans were under discussion, that he would not wait for a formal notice from them, but as soon as the strike started would proceed to import shoe cutters into Lynn.

Women stitchers joining the strike raises a serious complication. They are members of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, but are deserting that organization to sustain the blow which is aimed at it by the Cutters' assembly. Those employed in the Nicholson factory went out first; their action was followed by those in the Watson Shoe company and the Walton & Logan factories.

A few hours after the strike of the women stitchers at the Nicholson factory a general meeting of all the strikers was held, at which heated speeches were made and the methods of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union were vehemently denounced. The meeting was attended by nearly all the striking cutters as well as about 300 women stitchers and the latter were strongly urged to organize either as an independent union or as a branch of the Knights of Labor. The presiding officers said that the cutters were in the fight to stay and that the Boot and Shoe Workers' union would be driven out of existence. He told the women stitchers that the cutters would stand by them and if necessary render financial assistance.

At the close of the meeting nearly all the women stitchers went over to the Knights of Labor hall and there voted to organize a union. A temporary chairman and secretary were appointed and a mass meeting will be held on Monday to perfect the organization.

A meeting has been called for today of all the McKay stitchers in Lynn for the avowed purpose of also organizing an independent union in opposition to the Boot and Shoe Workers' union.

In order to stay the tide the Boot and Shoe Workers' union also held a meeting last night of women stitchers loyal to the union. The meeting was a large one, and the speakers told the stitchers that the present strike was only a wave of enthusiasm and that it would be a grave mistake to follow the lead of their fellow-workmen, who, they were told, would soon be back to work.

Both sides are seeking to strengthen their lines today, the strikers by missionary work among other workmen and a well organized picket system, and the Boot and Shoe Workers' officials by a strong effort to carry out the agreement with the manufacturers in supplying the vacancies.

Haverhill Conflict Begins

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 17.—The war against the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, which began yesterday at Lynn, extended to this city last night, when 36 "turned" workmen at Goodrich & Co.'s factory struck work in obedience to an order of the executive board of the Shoe Workers' Protective union, an independent organization. The strike was entirely unlooked for, as it was generally believed that the cutters would be the first to make the move. The executive board of the Shoe Workers' Protective union announce that the strike at the Goodrich factory is but one of a succession of movements which have been planned. As at Lynn, the Boot and Shoe Workers' union officials confidently claim that they will be able to fill the vacancies caused by any strike which may occur in this city.

Twenty Soldiers Laid to Rest

Washington, Jan. 17.—Twenty private soldiers who lost their lives in the Philippines were buried at Arlington National cemetery yesterday with the usual military honors. All the interments were made in the Spanish war section of the cemetery.

FRESH DISASTER

Believed to Have Overtaken Troops Operating Against the Pretender

Tangier, Jan. 17.—Four columns of troops have left Fez for Taza. The sultan's brother commands one of them and the war minister, General Menebbi, is in command of another.

The latest news received here from Fez indicates that operations against the pretender commenced Jan. 11. No official information has been received since that date, but rumors from Tetuan indicate that fresh disaster has overtaken the imperial forces. These rumors are considered to be quite credible because of the well known incapacity of the commanders who were entrusted with the expedition.

The tribal outbreaks around Tangier continue, but the local authorities are taking stronger measures to repress them which, it is believed, will be adequate to cope with the trouble in this quarter.

Baseball Peace Far Off

Philadelphia, Jan. 17.—President Pulliam of the National league was served last night with an injunction restraining him from ratifying, at the meeting of the National league to be held in Cincinnati next week, the agreement reached by the joint peace conference of the American and National leagues last week. The injunction was issued at the instance of the New York Baseball club of the National league. Pulliam left for Cincinnati last night to consult a law firm as to his future action.

Welcome Tidings of the St Louis

New York, Jan. 17.—Word has reached this city that the American line steamer St. Louis, from Southampton Jan. 3 for New York, was sighted off Nantucket lightship at 6:40 p. m. yesterday. The slow rate of speed at which the St. Louis was travelling indicates that unless she should be assisted she will not reach New York until late tonight. Appearances indicated that the St. Louis was short of steam power and signals were thought to imply that trouble with her boilers had been experienced.

Ship Captain Confesses Crime

St. Johns, Jan. 17.—Captain Nicholls, who was recently extradited from England on the charge of casting away the schooner Bessie Dodd in order to obtain the insurance on the vessel, made a confession last night in which he implicated a Mr. Jerrett, who shipped the cargo of fish which the Bessie Dodd carried when she was lost. Jerrett is under arrest. The insurance on the Bessie Dodd's hull and cargo amounted to $40,000.

Specimen of Filipino Barbarity

Manila, Jan. 17.—At the trial yesterday of Major Glenn, who is charged with unlawfully killing seven prisoners of war in Samar, a Spaniard testified that while he was confined at the headquarters of General Lukban, in Samar, in May of 1900, he saw sticks driven into an American prisoner's body and he was slowly turned over a fire until dead. The body was then left to be devoured by hogs.

Third Death From Poisonous Pork

Whiting, Vt., Jan. 17.—F. C. Brown died yesterday from poisoning arising from strepotherix in pork which he, his wife and son ate on Dec. 22. The wife and son have since died. Dr. M. J. Wiltse made the microscopical examination of the pork and gave his opinion that the cause of poisoning was strepotherix, although unable to identify it.

Contribution to Biblical History

London, Jan. 18.—The Cairo correspondent of The Daily Mail reports the discovery in Syria of one of the oldest Hebrew manuscript Bibles. It consists of the five books of Pentateuch, written in Samaritan characters on Gazelle parchment in the year 116 of the Moslem era. It shows important differences from the existing text.

Detective Perhaps Fatally Shot

New York, Jan. 17.—During a fight which followed a dispute over a dinner bill in a French restaurant known as the Black Cat, Detective Sergeant Welch was shot through the neck last night and probably fatally injured. A waiter in the place, Gabriel Arne, was arested and identified by Welch as the man who fired the shot.

Eleven Less Bolomen

Manila, Jan. 17.—Constabulary Inspector Fletcher, while travelling alone in the province of Albay, was attacked by 30 bolomen. Fletcher killed five of his opponents, but was himself wounded. He escaped, however, and formed a party which pursued and overtook the bolomen and killed six more.

Modest Swiss Girls

Geneva, Jan. 17.—The principals of a number of girls' schools have complained to the authorities that they can no longer take out the girls for their usual walks because they are shocked at seeing the Crown Princess of Saxony driving with Giron.

Pin Money For Chippewas

Washington, Jan. 17.—The Chippewa Indians in the northwest are to receive $194,261, or almost $20 per capita, as the amount derived from the sale of dead timber cut on the ceded lands of the Chippewas under the act of June 7, 1897.

The Weather Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, Jan. 18.
Sun rises—7:10; sets—4:39.
Moon rises—11 p. m.
High water—2:45 a. m.; 3:15 p. m.

The weather conditions have been remarkably constant for several days past. Fair weather has been general in almost all parts of the country and the temperature has steadily risen since the cold wave of Sunday last. Snow or rain is indicated for New England.

General Gordon says before he went into the battle of Bull Run his wife, who was in in camp, threw her arms around his neck and said with streaming eyes, "I don't want you to be killed. I would rather a thousand times die myself — but — don't — run." He said the men could not help fighting with such women behind them. The passionate devotion of the Southern women to the cause of the Confederacy has been the theme of song and story for a generation. Nowhere has it been more strongly portrayed than in

Don't Miss the First Chapters

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Quincy will soon be as famous for pilgrimages as Plymouth and Concord, as parties come now almost daily. Surely there are many historic spots of National interest, and enterprises which are novel to many. A brief list is given below.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN ADAMS.

Franklin street, Quincy Adams, house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Patriotic societies admitted free, although contributions are welcome to defray expenses of keeping house open and in repair. Small fee asked the general public.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

BURIAL PLACE OF PRESIDENTS ADAMS.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian) Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monumerts, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. In cellar is old town hearse, also box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams. At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

HANCOCK CEMETERY.

Hancock street, across from First Church. Many old stones, among the oldest that of Rev. John Hancock, father of the Patriot, who died May 7, 1744. Was fifth minister of First Church.

PRESIDENTS ADAMS MANSION.

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants. Not open to public.

JOHN HANCOCK BIRTHPLACE.

Adams street, junction of Dimmock and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born.

MYLES STANDISH CAIRN.

Squantum heights, erected in 1895 by the Daughters of the Revolution, of Massachusetts, in memory of Captain Myles Standish and his men of Plymouth Colony, who landed here Sept. 30, 1621, guided by the indian Tisquantum.

SQUAW ROCK.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN.

Penns hill, erected June 17, 1896, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son, John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

MYLES STANDISH SPRING.

On the beach to the left and back of Squantum Inn. Spring of fresh cold water, where Standish and his party breakfasted and thence started to explore the country around Boston Bay.

DOROTHY Q. HOUSE.

Hancock street, corner Butler road, Quincy. Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Has quaint old paper on parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber and other interesting features. Private house, not open to public.

PRESIDENTS LANE.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

Many other points of interest might be mentioned: Thomas Crane Memorial Hall which is the public library building; Merrymount, the home of Mrs. John Quincy Adams, where Morton erected his famous May pole in 1626; the soldiers' monument at Mount Wollaston cemetery with its tablets; the famous Quincy granite quarries, many of great depth; the granite yards where monuments and statuary are being cut, and the polishing mills where granite is polished; also the big ship yard now established at Quincy Point.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

—Last Sunday a Boston clergyman told his congregation that no good excuse can be given for the rise in the price of oil. No excuse is needed, for a very good reason can be given. There is an increased demand for oil, and if any one can tell when an increased demand wasn't followed by an increase in price, will he kindly step forward and say when?—Boston Home Journal.

WILD ANIMAL FIGHTS.

Enormous Physical Force Expended In These Fierce Combats.

In the pitched battles which sometimes take place between the great carnivora and the largest and most powerful of the ox tribe the forces of animal courage, desperation and bodily strength must be exhibited on a scale never elsewhere seen, says a writer in Leslie's Weekly. Such combats do occur, but have seldom been witnessed and still less frequently described. Two or three lions sometimes combine in such an attack, but from the marks seen on buffalo it is probable that sometimes there is a single combat, for it can hardly be supposed that the buffalo could escape from more than one lion.

The number of foot pounds of energy put into such a struggle must be something extraordinary. The efforts of a lion, which can strike a man's arm from the shoulder and leave it hanging by a strip of skin or which can carry a cow over a high stockade, endeavoring unsuccessfully in close grips to drag down or disable a buffalo bull, must be on a gigantic scale, and the strength which can shake him off and, it is believed, occasionally crush the lion afterward must be even more amazing. A buffalo bull has been credited with engaging three lions in mortal combat and making a good fight before he was disabled by one of the lions hamstringing him by biting his legs from behind.

Errors of Diet.

An insurance man of my acquaintance ate hearty breakfasts, with meat and coffee, a hurried lunch at noon, but also with meat, and a heavy dinner at night. He took no exercise, always rode between house and office, became fat and bloated, and his blood became so overloaded that he readily succumbed to disease at forty-five. The wonder was that he lived so long. He was a type of the average well to do citizen. Like him, most of us eat too much, says a writer in Good Housekeeping. Diet should depend upon temperament and vocation. At hard work out of doors one requires more nutriment than at sedentary labor indoors. A gradual reduction in diet, even an occasional fast, will cure many ordinary ills. Add deep breathing, fresh air, body building exercises, plenty of sunshine, water inside and out, and it is astonishing how much better one feels.

Prices For Sermons.

Much has been said of the practice of buying and selling sermons, a practice, by the way, of no very special novelty. Just before Toplady was about to be ordained Osborne, the bookseller, the friend of Johnson, offered to supply him with a stock of original sound sermons for a trifle. "I would sooner buy secondhand clothes," was the tart reply. "Don't be offended," said Osborne. "I have sold many to a bishop." The price of sermons, as of all else, has varied with the times. In 1540 a bishop of Llandaff received from the churchwardens of St. Margaret's, Westminster, for a sermon on the annunciation a pike, price 2s. 4d.; a gallon of wine, eightpence, and boat hire—in all 3s. 4d. In the seventeenth century sermons seem to have been valued at about 5 shillings each.

Making It Clear.

Religious examination papers are an ancient and unfailing source of joy. The latest one to be put in evidence comes from an English church training college. Candidates for admission are required to give in writing some account of the religious instruction they have received, and a recent answer to the first two formal questions ran as follows:

Question: What instruction have you had in religious knowledge?

Answer: None.

Question: By whom was it given?

Answer: By the vicar.

The thing might have been expressed more logically, but not much more clearly.

A Guest's Mot.

Greville does not tell the following story in his famous "Memoirs," but it is a fitting return for his own rather malicious wit: On one occasion, when Lord Alvanley was his guest, the dining room had been newly and showily furnished, whereas the dinner was but a very meager one. While many of the guests were complimenting their host on his taste and magnificence Lord Alvanley interrupted them with, "For my part, I should prefer more carving and less gilding."

Changing the Diet.

Cannibal Chief—Wasn't that last missionary you sent us a writer of books?

Agent—Yes.

Cannibal Chief—And the one before was formerly an editor?

Agent—That is correct.

Cannibal Chief—Well, I wish you'd send us a football player next. The medicine man says we're having too much brain food.—Judge.

A Genuine One.

A man dropped his wig in the street, and a boy who was following close behind the loser picked it up and handed it to him.

"Thanks, my boy," said the owner of the wig. "You are the first genuine hair restorer I have ever seen."

Broke.

Father—Well, my son, did you succeed in breaking in the new horses so that they would stand the noise of steam?

Son—No, father, but I broke the carriage.

COAL PROBLEMS.

Rep. Freeman Paid $12 and Rep. Drinkwater $16 per Ton.

The members of the special committee of the Legislature to consider the coal problems have been entervened by the Globe as to their experiences in obtaining fuel this winter with the following results:

Representative Freeman of Quincy—I haven't had any great difficulty in securing coal. I buy in Boston and paid $12 a ton for all the anthracite I bought. I think the Quincy dealers are charging $13 a ton now.

Representative Drinkwater of Braintree, son of Col. Drinkwater—We bought our supply at $16 a ton prior to the time the strike ended. The price fell after the strike was declared off and the same firm we bought from sold hard coal at $10 a ton. And that was from the same lot we had purchased from. The colonel has a wood lot from which we can cut between 40 and 50 cords, so even if our supply falls short, we shall not again be thrown on the mercy of the coal barons.

Representatives Phinney and Bearse of the committee have had to pay $15, Representative Kerrett has had to buy by quarter ton, Senator Chandler and Representative Ruston ordered in the spring, and Representative Schofield has not had to pay over $10.

Deviltry.

It is surprising to what extent deviltry will be carried. No one would suppose that any one would attempt to prevent the proper working of fire alarm and police signal boxes, yet it not unfrequently happens that the superintendent of the fire and police systems finds boxes that have been tampered with, and that they have been temporarily put out of commission.

One of the worst classes of this work is plugging the key hole with lead or an iron pin so that the box cannot be opened until the key hole has been drilled out. In one case the parties drove a cartridge into the key hole and then exploded it, rendering the lock useless.

Some day one of these fellows will get caught in the act, and when he is, the courts can be depended to make an example of him.

Lawson Without Crew.

Because of inability to secure her full complement of men, says the Globe, the big seven-masted schooner Thomas W. Lawson, Capt. Crowley, will have to tow to Newport News. The vessel had been detained here for several days, and as a last resort the services of the tug Gypsum King were engaged, and at 4 P. M. yesterday she left the harbor with the big steel craft in tow.

A number of schooners now in port are finding the same difficulty as the Lawson in securing crews. The captains desire to ship the men by the month, but the sailors, supported by the Atlantic seamen's union, want so much for the run.

—Two important court decisions were handed down this week—one that a child has a right to play in the street, and the other that public corporations cannot regard streets as their property

MUNICIPAL COAL.

The Braintree Committee Is Getting Down to Work.

Some forty citizens accepted the invitation extended by the Committee on Fuel Yard petition, to meet them and hold a conference at the Hollis avenue engine house, Braintree, on Wednesday. The meeting proved very satisfactory to the committee, for it gave them the opportunity of more clearly ascertaining the public feeling toward the project.

Representative Drinkwater was present and spoke of the obstacles the committee would encounter, but he thought quite likely that the previous opinion given by the Supreme Judicial court would be nullified and that a favorable opinion would be given this year as the extraordinary exigencies now existing would demand the intervention of the municipalities.

The committee draughted a strong petition and turned it over to Representative Drinkwater for him to present to the General court.

Considerable stress has been placed by those who are in favor of Municipal fuel yards by the fact that the representatives of the Republican and Socialist parties in the legislature held a harmonious and unanimous conference last Wednesday afternoon and agreed on the questsons for the Supreme court to rule upon. This is a very significant coincidence as heretofore the Republican party have completely ignored all propositions advanced by the Socialist legislators. The Democrats of the house are also conspicuously active in the matter, which makes it appear that all parties in the legislature are of the opinion that municipal ownership of fuel yards is the only remedy to alleviate the abominable condition now existing.

The Spirit of Winter.

The Spirit of Winter is with us making its presence known in many different ways—sometimes by cheery sunshine and glistening snows and sometimes by driving winds and blinding storms. To many people it seems to take a delight in making bad things worse, for rheumatism twists harder, twings sharper, catarrah becomes more annoying, and the many symptoms of scrofula are developed and aggravated. There is not much poetry in this, but there is truth, and it is a wonder that more people don't get rid of these ailments. The medicine that cures them—Hood's Sarsaparilla—is easily, obtained and there is abundant proof that its cures are radical and permanent.

—Andrew Carnegie has offered to endow a national theatre in Washington which, independent of popular support, may work to uplift the character of the modern drama.

Firemen's Ball.

The twelfth annual ball of the Milton fire department was apparently a greater success than ever, crowding the Town Hall to its utmost. Neighboring cities and towns were represented, the special guests of the evening being: Senator Albert A. Brackett, Selectmen Jacob A. Turner and Maurice A. Duffy, Chief of Police Maurice Pierce, Town Treasurer J. Porter Holmes, Water Commissioner John Graham, Clerk of Selectmen Joseph Duffy, Chief Wardle of Dedham, Chief McDougal, Assistant Chief Wetherbee and Engineer A. P. Robinson of Hyde Park fire department, William Martin, Louis Weis, Charles, Strangman, Mr. McIntosh, Harry Hibbard and Jedediah Strangman of the Boston fire department, and Capt. M. E. Flynn and George Walker of Braintree.

The orchestra rendered a fine concert program from 8 to 9 o'clock. The grand march at 9 o'clock was led by Floor Director George O. Bowman and Miss Beatrice English.

Chief George E. Choate was marshal assisted by Assistant Chief C. Wilder Holmes. The assistant floor directors were Lieut. Hazen B. Williams, David A. Heffernan, J. Harry Holmes, John A. Ewell, Thomas F. McDermott, Harry Brierly, Henry M. McCue, W. B. Skinner, Carl Ricker, assisted by the following aids: Thomas S. McWhirke, M. J. McCue, E. E. Choate, George Hersey, Frank Hall, B. F. Murray, J. F. McCue, J. H. Haley.

Dancing continued until morning.

Off for Baltimore.

Officers from Baltimore arrived in Quincy late yesterday afternoon for Mr. and Mrs. George D. Gries, who were arrested by Inspector McKay on Wednesday. They willingly consented to accompany the officers back to Baltimore without the formality of requistion papers. The party went to Boston last night and were to start for Baltimore early this morning. Mr. and Mrs. Gires are charged with taking the life of their infant child last October.

—Marconi has already made so many of his promises good that the public cheerfully accept his statements of what he is going to do with wireless telegraph. Having talked across the Atlantic with entire ease, he gives out positive affirmation of what his completed system will accomplish, as follows: Wireless messages can never be obstructed in transmission. Thirty words a minute has been demonstrated and a higher speed is probable. Distance has no effect either on the certainty or speed of transmission. Land or sea are alike for wireless purposes. A message can be sent as well from New York to San Francisco as from Glace Bay to the Cornish coast. Light and darkness make no difference, except that the electric vibrations are 50 per cent. stronger in the night. Secrecy of the messages, though not fully assured, can be safely anticipated. Only $200,000 is needed to establish a wireless system between any two points, however far apart, either on land or sea. Wireless messages can be certainly sent across the Pacific, the Atlantic, or any other ocean, or from coast to coast of any continent, at rates as low as are now charged for messages between New York and Philadelphia. Perhaps the most curious of the marvels he promises is a full daily or hourly news bulletin for passenger steamships crossing the ocean. Contracts for this service, it is reported, have been made already.—Boston Courier.

ONE TRAIT OF AN OUTLAW.

Always Willing to Stand by a Comrade in Trouble.

While Monrow was low minded, ignorant and brutal, he had one big quality that in some measure redeemed him in the eyes of the men who followed the rough life of the range. He would not desert a comrade in time of trouble, says the World's Work. Down in El Paso in the early part of his career before he had become bold enough to allow evidence of his misdeeds to become apparent he was ostensibly running a ranch and struggling along with the rest of the pioneer cattlemen. A man in his employ was caught driving off a bunch of cattle from a neighbor's herd. By some mischance the fellow fell into the hands of a newly elected sheriff and was not hanged. He was duly arraigned and held under bond of $3,000. Monrow was present at the time and offered to go on his bond. The justice would not accept Monrow.

"Nothing but cash goes in this here court," he said.

Monrow rode away. Five days later he appeared, deposited the cash bond for his friend, furnished him with a horse, and together they headed toward the south. Within an hour a band of cattlemen picked up the trail and followed it to Rio Grande. Monrow had stolen an entire herd, rushed it across to friends in Mexico and in that manner raised the security the court demanded for his friend. Of course, the man never returned for trial, and Monrow began open operations shortly afterward.

No Opposition.

They were holding a county convention when I reached Davisburg, and after dinner I went over to the hall to hear the speaking, says a writer in an exchange. It didn't amount to much until Sam Walker rose up and said:

"I hain't bin sayin' much around yere today, but the time has cum fur me to shoot off my voice. The ole woman is ag'in me, and my son Bill is ag'in me, but I want to go to the legislachur from this deestrict. The ole woman is ag'in me 'cause I can't write. What do I want to write fur? Thar'll be nuff who kin without me. My son Bill is ag'in me 'cause I can't read. What do I want to read fur? Can't I sot thar and h'ar others read?

"Yes. I want to go to the legislachur, and I hereby nominate myself. That nomination, feller citizens, is carried in my favor as slick as coon grease, and I've got jist a word mo'. I shall be right yere on 'leckshun day, and the varmint who polls a vote ag'in Sam Walker won't be residin' in this yere cold world five minits later."

A Hat Tragedy.

Not long ago a lady was choosing a hat, with the usual uncertainty of mind as to the kind of hat she wanted or whether, indeed, she wanted a hat at all. After trying on nearly every model in the shop she pounced with glee on one she had overlooked. "Here's something pretty!" she said. "Why did you not show me this before?" Without waiting for an answer she appealed to her patient friend. "There's some style about this, isn't there? How do I look?"

The friend distinctly sniffed. "It makes you look a hundred, and it's very dowdy," she said.

The other tried the hat at another angle. "It is rather dowdy," she admitted at this juncture. "Perhaps I won't risk it after all."

A voice from behind her made its third attempt to gain a hearing. "If you've quite done with my hat," it said very bitterly, "I should rather like to put it on!"

The Western Reserve.

In the early days of the Hayes administration, when Mr. Evarts was secretary of state, the members of the cabinet were discussing matters in an informal way one morning when the president mentioned that he had made a few appointments without consulting his official family, the appointees being personal friends. All the places filled happened to fall within the state department. Secretary Evarts turned to John Sherman and said, with a twinkle in his eye, "I have often heard and read about the western reserve of Ohio, but I must confess that I have never seen any of it."

Sterilizing Butter.

In times of cholera, typhoid and other infectious diseases butter is a dangerous thing to eat. A medical man in Egypt gives this recipe for making it harmless: Sterilize the local article by standing it in a covered jar surrounded by boiling water, which should be allowed to simmer for two hours. The jar should then be put on ice and the butter beaten with an egg whisk until it becomes solid again.

The Tarantula.

The sting of the tarantula (a name derived from Taranto, a town in Italy), the most venomous of spiders, was popularly supposed to produce a disease called tarantism, which could be cured only by music or dancing, and the dance which cured it was called tarantella. You can see the peasants dance the tarantella now, but without waiting for spider bites.

Why They Were Clean.

Teacher—Now, I want all the children to look at Tommy's hands and observe how clean they are, and see if all of you cannot come to school with cleaner hands. Tommy, perhaps, will tell us how he keeps them so nice.

Tommy—Yes'm. Ma makes me wash the breakfast things every morning.

After a man is fifty you can fool him by saying he is smart, but you can't fool him by saying he is pretty or sweet. —Atchison Globe.

BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S

STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $415.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 22 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins that of the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property, that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 50c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $2.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions. HERBERT S. General Gordon says before he went into the battle of Bull Run his wife, who was in in camp, threw her arms around his neck and said with streaming eyes, "I don't want you to be killed. I would rather a thousand times die myself — but — don't — run." He said the men could not help fighting with such women behind them. HOUGHS NECK CASES.

Ryder Fined $25, and Judgment Reserved in Hatch Case.

The case of Frank E. Ryder for assault on William Hatch at Houghs Neck, Jan. 13, was heard in the district court this morning.

According to witness for the government, Ryder met Hatch on the afternoon in question and told him he would give him two days more to get off of the beach. That Ryder flourished a revolver and demanded $500 or he would prosecute him. He then struck Hatch on the head with a policeman's night stick.

Witness for the government testified that Ryder appeared to be under the influence of liquor.

Ryder admitted assaulting Hatch and testified that the fatherly feeling for his children got the better of him. He denied making any demand upon Hatch for $500, and that he was not under the influence of liquor.

The court imposed a fine of $25.

The case of Hatch for assault on Edith M. Ryder was then heard. The evidence was that about Christmas the girl and her sister were down cellar jumping from a bench. One of the times she jumped he caught her in his arms.

Hatch testified that he was sawing wood in Ryder's cellar when the girls came down in the basement and as they jumped requested him to catch them. He had a sore arm and as the girl jumped her clothing became ruffled up. No assault was intended.

This case was continued one week for judgment.

League Standing.

The games this week in the Norfolk County League completed the third round in the series, that is each club has played three games. They are therefore, on an equal footing. As the games stand now, the North Quincys lead on billiards with six points, while Granite City is second with four points.

At pool the Braintree lead with eight points and Granite City is second with three points.

At whist Granite City leads with five points and Braintree is second with four points. There are two tie games in the whist series. It has not been decided yet whether these will be played off or count half a point for each club.

At bowling the North Quincys lead with ten points and Granite City is second with five points.

On total points made however, the three clubs stand nearly even. The North Quincys have 18 points to its credit and Granite City and the Braintrees 17 points each.

The following table shows the standing to date:

	Billiards.	Pool.	Whist.	Bowling.	Total.
Granite City,	4	3	5	5	17
North Quincy,	6	1	1	10	18
Braintree,	2	8	4	3	17

Ties—Granite City and Braintree at whist. Granite City and North Quincy at whist.

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medinineas directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. For sale by all druggists.

Every-Day English.

A textbook upon "Every-Day English" for the use of students in intermediate grades has been issued by the Educational Publishing Company. Its compiler is Jean Sherwood Rankin, and she sets before the reader a vividly entertaining plan for the pursuit of lessons in the English language. A brief foreword to the volume is furnished by Richard Burton.

By prompt work, Mr. Penniman, the keeper, used the fire hose and extinguished the blaze, which had worked its way through the shingles, roof boards and one rafter. This large town building, we hear, cost $10,000 and is insured for $7,000 through the Braintree Fire Insurance Co. The small damage will be promptly adjusted.

Wrinkles Or No Wrinkles

By Zoe Anderson Norris

Copyright, 1902, by Zoe Anderson Norris

ANN SIMPSON sat in her armchair by the window, across which was drawn a snowy dotted swiss curtain, nodding. By and by she roused with a start and, suppressing a groan, looked toward the door.

"Was it somebody knocked?" she queried. Then, "Come in," she called. "Come right on in."

The door opened, and a young woman in a slatted sunbonnet stood on the threshold.

"For the land's sake, Sally," cried Miss Simpson, "shut the door! The flies, the flies!"

Sally hastily shut the door and stood against it, sunbonnet off and in hand.

"There!" she exclaimed triumphantly and drawing a chair close to Ann's.

"TAKIN' UP THE LIGHT, SHE RAISED IT ABOVE HER HEAD."

"Now tell me all about the weddin'," she begged. "Begin at the beginnin' an' tell me every little thing about it, Ann."

Ann, looking at the clock ticking loudly on the mantelpiece, drew aside the curtain and peered from it to the house across.

"They must be gone by now," she complained. "An' I slept through their goin'."

"They are gone," said Sally. "I met the carriages as I was comin' up the street. But they'll be back again, an' you can see them then. Why wa'n't you at the weddin', Ann?"

"You don't suppose, now," asked Ann, with some asperity, "it was on account of the want of an invitation, do you? There it is on the mantelpiece by the clock if you'd like to see it to convince yourself.

"No. That wa'n't why. It was this rheumatiz. When there's anything I want particularly to 'tend, it takes me down. That was why I was took down yesterday.

"But don't you think for a second that Lavinia 'll forget me. She ain't that sort. There ain't a kinder hearted soul in this here town than Lavinia. She'll send me some of every little thing she's got on the table an' a piece of the weddin' cake besides to dream on tonight.

"Lavinia's already sent me some of the flowers what belongs to her weddin'," Ann continued. "There they are on the little table in the corner. Get up an' smell 'em.

"You hardly know," she went on as Sally obediently got up, buried her nose in the roses for the space of a fragrant moment and sat down again, "what to think of this here weddin' of Lavinia's. It's mightly strange the way it come about. You see, I know it all from beginnin' to end, from the very start, datin' back to that first husband of her'n, what was, without any eggsageration, the meanest white man that ever put foot on top of earth.

"Yes, it's jest as I say—the meanest white man what ever put foot on top of earth. You couldn't, that is to say, lay a finger on him an' say, 'This man's a burglar or a thief or a cutthroat or an all round desperado.' No. He might 'a' been a better man if you could. An out an' out desperado ain't often underhand an' mean, like this husband of Lavinia's—mean clean to the bone—one of them men what's afraid to tackle a good sized man of his own sex, but what 'll delight in breakin' the heart of a woman by inches in wringin' it an' wringin' it till she's nothin' but a bundle of sobs an' moans an' tears.

"Well, it was them tears he made Lavinia shed what brought the wrinkles under her eyes. He wa'n't worth no tears. No man is; not a tear nor a sigh nor a sob. But what woman will believe that? Lavinia wouldn't for one. She'd let every little, mean, triflin' thing he said to her set her palpitatin' with misery, same's if it had been said by somebody worth troublin' about, somebody whose opinion was worth somethin'. It's the way with women. Well, in the course of time he died, an' I was glad."

"Lookin' at the wrinkles under Lavinia's eyes cut by the tears he had made her shed, I wa'n't much inclined to grieve for her husband. But Lavinia! A softer hearted woman never lived in this town than Lavinia. She followed him to the grave, sobbin' fit to kill, exactly 's if he'd been the best husband in the world, the best the Lord had ever made, instead of one he'd accidentally sp'iled in the makin.'

"Anyway Lavinia, as I say, followed him to the grave sheddin' big tears an' tremblin', all over black from the crown of her head to the soles of her little feet. I didn't go to the funeral. I didn't have it in my heart to pretend to grief I didn't feel. But when she come back I went over to her house an' says to her: 'Cheer up, Lavinia. Dry them tears of your'n an' don't cry no more. The cherries 'll be ripe for your pickin' yet, if I know anything about it.'

"I was right. The better days did come, an' soon too. Once forgettin' the ghastliness of death, the horror of it—an' 'tain't nothin' but that makes these widders take on so for awhile—Lavinia begun to feel the happiness of bein' free. There was nobody about to say, 'Do this' or 'Do that' or 'Come here' or 'Go there,' a-sneerin' at her when she laughed an' snarlin' at her when she cried. An' 'twa'n't long before, with them fetters dropped off away from her for good, she sprung up in the blessed light of freedom an' commenced to bloom like any flower. An' pretty! Lavinia got to be pretty as a picture, exceptin' for them wrinkles under her eyes.

"You'd think, wouldn't you, now, that when a woman 'd once found out what a good thing freedom was she'd stick to it? But I s'pose if she did that she wouldn't be a woman. Lavinia wa'n't no exception. She hadn't more'n got good an' used to doin' without her shackles than she made up her mind to put on some more. It appeared she was sort of fated, Lavinia was. You'd be surprised to see the man she settled on. Tom Wofford! Oh, yes, of course, you know him. He don't live far from you. I'd forgotten that. Well, he was the man. Of all the onnery men that ever lived in this town, with the exception of her first husband, he is the onneriest. I ain't meanin' 's far 's money's consarned or clothes or way of livin', but disposition.

"Heigh, ho! I'll never forget the night Lavinia come over here after he'd gone an', without sayin' a word—Lavinia an' me 's such friends that words ain't allus necessary atween us—walked to the mirror over the mantelpiece there an', takin' up the light, raised it above her head, gazin' at her eyes. From where I set, which was jest about where I'm settin' now, I could get a glimpse of her face, the prettiest pinky white complexion you ever see, with a bow mouth like a child's an' a dimpled chin, an' nothin' the matter with it at all but them there wrinkles under the eyes. 'S far 's I was consarned them wrinkles didn't make no difference. I couldn't see 'em half the time for the shine of the eyes. But Lavinia, she puts the lamp back on the table where she got it an', turnin', stares at me.

"'He says,' she commences, 'that I would be pretty, awful pretty, if it wa'n't for these here wrinkles under my eyes.'

"'Lavinia,' I admonishes, 'you're pretty enough as it is. Don't you be worryin' a minit about them wrinkles under your eyes.'

"She promised she wouldn't an' went away. But 'twa'n't many days before back she come again, an', takin' that little stool you've got under your feet, puts it close to me, same 's you're settin' now, an' lays her head on my knee. I rests my hand on it, silentlike, comfortin' of her. 'Twa'n't the first time. A woman can get along all right generally till she falls in love with a man. Soon 's that happens she begins to need comfortin'.

"'He says,' she begins by an' by, 'that there are doctors up in New York what can take the wrinkles out from under the eyes. 'Tain't no trouble,' he says. 'All they've got to do is to cut away some pieces of flesh an' sew up the places. Then when it's well the wrinkles is gone, an' they never come back no more; never no more.'

"'Lavinia,' says I, answerin', 'better let well enough alone. Better stay 's the Lord made you. He knows best. He knows what he's about, if it does seem sort of strangelike at times the way he manages. When he put them wrinkles in your face, he meant for them to stay there till he gets ready to smooth 'em out.

"'Anyway, Lavinia,' I goes on after a minit of studyin', 'if this here young man of your'n don't love you enough to forget them wrinkles under your eyes he ain't much good to tie to. That's my opinion. I give it to you for what it is worth.'

"'But I want to be beautiful!' she sort of moans. 'I want to be beautiful!'

"Well, when a woman once makes up her mind to win a man's love there ain't nothin' short of choppin' off her head goin' to stop her. So I wa'n't to say surprised when Lavinia come runnin' over a day or two after a-tellin' me goodby an' sayin' as how she was about to take a little trip up to New York to look up them doctors Tom Wofford had been talkin' to her so much about.

"'When I come back,' she smiles, but with a scared look in her eyes, 'I shall be beautiful.'

"While she was gone I got to inquirin' about them New York doctors what cut an' slashed into people's faces so reckless, smoothin' out wrinkles put there by the hand of God, shapin' noses over, settin' back ears an' takin' reefs out of double chins to make 'em single. An' what I heard about 'em, Sally, didn't tend to encourage me much about Lavinia, I can tell you that. On the other hand, it scared me about her. If you could 'a' heard some of them tales they told me, your hair would 'a' stood straight up. One feller's nose, they said, had been made a good enough shape, but what with tinkerin' away on it, the same's if it had been wood, it had got so delicate he was afraid of blowin' it, afraid it would come to pieces altogether an' he wouldn't have no nose. Another had his ears set back too far. The flesh clean covered the hole he had to hear out of an' made him deaf as a post natcherally. Why shouldn't it?

"You can understand, then, Sally, that it wa'n't nothin' but natcheral—hearin' all these stories an' more what I haven't got time now to tell you—I was gettin' mighty oneasy about Lavinia an' them wrinkles of her'n. In a few weeks she come back alive, though, an' of course, her an' me bein' such fast friends, the first thing she does is to come straight over here to me. There ain't a sweeter soul in this here town than Lavinia. Well, she stands still right here facin' the winder with the light floodin' her like an' says to me:

"'Is the wrinkles gone, Ann?'

"Now, Lavinia had eyes—they had left her eyes—an', havin' eyes, she could see them wrinkles of her'n jest the same as I could see 'em. She could see that they was jest as bad as they allus was, if they wa'n't to say worse. So when I didn't say nothin' at all to her, seein' I couldn't say nothin' comfortin', she walks to the winder an' looks out pitiful like an' says, 's if she was talkin' to herself, me settin' by mute, actin' dummy:

"'An' the pain of it! The awful pain of it! An' all for nothin'! Fool, idiot! When I wake up in the mornin', it's the first thing I call myself an' the last thing at night—idiot, fool!'

"An' she wa'n't to say altogether wrong. If people will deliberately set in a chair an' have their faces whacked into, they'd oughter be disfiggered for life, an' that, candidly expressed, is my opinion. Of course, though, I didn't say nothin' of that sort to Lavinia. Spilled milk is spilled milk, an' there ain't no use cryin' over it, but—

"'You can call yourself names like that, Lavinia,' says I, with a grunt of a laugh, 'but if somebody else did it you'd up an' slap 'em.'

"As I say, Lavinia an' me, we'd been such friends we didn't have to talk to understand. So when she come to me one day at twilight an' set at my feet on the little stool an' put her head in my lap, moanin' like any hurt child might 'a' moaned, I knew what was the matter. That Tom Wofford, that onnery sweetheart of her'n, had complained because the wrinkles was there same as ever an' would stay there till the good Lord got ready to smooth 'em away all in his good time, an' I never said a word. I bent down an' kissed her on the hair an' took hold of her hand to let the feel of my sympathy go through it to her, an' that was all."

Suddenly Sally sprang up and drew aside the curtain.

"There they come!" she cried. "Look! The groom and Lavinia! See! She's glancin' this way. She's throwin' a kiss to you, Ann. Throw one back to her, quick. Ah-h-h! Don't she look pretty? An' them orange blossoms! Beautiful! But, Ann, Ann! That don't look like Tom Wofford with her. He's taller somehow. Wa'n't it Tom Wofford she married, after all?"

"Tom Wofford!" grunted Ann. "I reckon not. A man what would let her go an' have her face cut to pieces an' then complain!"

"Oh, tell me who she married, Ann. I've been away. I've just got back home. How can I know? Tell me!"

But Ann, who was in no hurry, philosophized.

"It seems, 's far 's I can hear the straight of it, that while she was waitin' her turn in them doctors' office some other idiot—they ain't all dead yet even up there in New York—was waitin' his turn, too, to be made shorter or longer, jest as the case happened to be; I've forgotten exactly which it was, shorter or longer.

"Well, anyway, they got into a sort of sympathetic conversation, her an'

"I BENT DOWN AND KISSED HER ON THE HAIR."

him, waitin', an' it seems they kept it up, an' when Lavinia's wrinkles wa'n't gone, like they promised they would be, an' when he wa'n't made no shorter—now that I remember it was shorter he wanted to be made—exceptin' in the pocketbook, of course, they got to be great chums, talkin' it over an' sympathizin' with each other. He's a fine feller, aside from this fool notion of his'n to be carved into an' changed, an' rich. He's handsome too. An' what does he do but come down here from New York an' marry Lavinia!"

Sally could not contain her delight.

"Wrinkles or no wrinkles!" ejaculated she.

"Wrinkles or no wrinkles!" echoed Ann Simpson and smiled a smile indicative of pure content.

"Still I don't know," she added presently when Sally had put back the curtain and deposited herself in the depths of her armchair to think it over. "It was about even when you come to study the sides of it. It's six of one an' half a dozen of the other. He's got a sort of limp in the left leg where them New York doctors lamed him."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 18—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Endeavorers in training for church work.—Acts ii, 17, 18; Prov. ii, 1-8; Mark i, 16-20.

"For Christ and the church" is the motto of the Christian Endeavor society. Its purpose has ever been not simply to lead the young to Christ, but to train them for service in His church. Christian Endeavor has ever claimed to be a means and not an end, and perhaps if more practical emphasis had been placed upon this fact Christian Endeavor would be stronger today in its old centers than it is. In many cases, instead of graduating its members into church work and taking up a new band to train, the early members have continued to do the work and hold the offices, with the result that as they did for one reason or another drop out no one remained to take up their labor. One may always remain an Endeavorer at heart, but not always in activity in the society if it is to be a young people's society and to develop the young for the church.

The training of the young for the important work and responsible positions in the church of Christ on earth is a most praiseworthy mission.

1. It is possible. The essential element in the performance of Christian work is the possession of the Holy Spirit. Spiritual work must be under the direction of the Holy Spirit. The possession of the spirit for service is possible to the young. "And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of My Spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions." First on the list of those to receive the Holy Ghost were the young—the young men and also the young women. It is therefore possible for them to engage in real spiritual work and by constant practice to be developed into more proficient workmen for God.

2. It is Scriptural. God trained men in their youth for great missions in after years. He trained Joseph and Moses in Egypt, Samuel in the temple and Josiah in the royal palace. Christ also called men into a training school for future service. For three years He trained the apostles for the great mission of preaching the gospel to the whole world. Paul selected young men—Mark, Timothy and Titus—and developed them into workmen that needed not to be ashamed. And not only do the clergy need to be trained for their work, but also the laity. We live in a day of consecrated lay workers, and that their labors may be blessed to success these workmen need to be trained while young for their service.

3. It is practicable. Youth is the training time. The mind is plastic and may be molded. Methods of work have not become fixed habits and may be changed and directed. Proficiency in any vocation in life can only be attained by careful training in youth. Any instance to the contrary is the exception and not the rule. How important, then, that in the days of one's youth we should not only be taught to remember God and to consecrate our lives to Him, but also trained for His service! The youth of today must be the men and the women of tomorrow, and if enabled to do the work of men and women they must be trained for it. The Christian Endeavor society can perform a grand mission in training Endeavorers for future church work. This is its supreme purpose, and every effort should be made to effect this purpose.

BIBLE READINGS.

I Sam. iii, 10-21; Prov. xxii, 6; Eccl. xii, 1; Luke ii, 40-52; Acts xii, 12, 25; Rom. xii, 1, 2; I Cor. xv, 58; Gal. vi, 1-10; II Tim. ii, 19-26; I John ii, 14.

Echoes From Elliott.

The consecration meeting is as old as the Bible.

Happy the man whose hands are just full of service.

Some people work harder to escape work than they would work if they did work.

It's the "overflow" of your life that will make you a blessing.

We must "fill up" on something. Some people try to put in a little religion and a good deal of the world, and it makes very bad filling.

Many Christians are spiritually "balky."

We may consecrate ourselves and yet withhold our service, and we may render a deal of so called "service" and yet withhold ourselves.

God wants an offered service, a willing service, a service not to men, to the pastor, the church, the society, but a service unto the Lord.—Rev. Dr. John H. Elliott in a New York Convention Address.

Paragraphs From "Farmer John."

"Next to an out and out bad man the devil dotes on the man who is of no particular use in the world."

"It pays better to endeavor to become what you ain't than to try to fool people into thinkin' you're it."

"A man can't be a good Christian very long by just sittin' around an' watchin' others work at it."

Quiz Box.

[Any question may be asked that pertains to any phase of Christian Endeavor work. Address Lock Box 674, Binghamton, N. Y.]

27. A. H. O., New Jersey.—Mr. Robert A. Alberts of your own state union answers your question thus: "Missionary libraries are found now in all up to date societies. They have proved a wonderful benediction when pushed by a good live missionary committee. The Student Volunteer library of sixteen volumes and the Conquest library of ten volumes are both excellent, and will do very well to start with."

28. C. K., Connecticut.—Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman was at one time vice president of the New York state union.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Manufacturing Plants Closed Because of Inadequate Coal Supply

New York, Jan. 17.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Fuel shortage is still the one seriously disturbing element in the industrial situation. Transporting facilities have been diverted from other merchandise to the disadvantage of shippers, yet iron furnaces are unable to secure sufficient supplies of coke and many other manufacturing plants are closed because of inadequate coal deliveries. Mines are more fully operated, but there is no prospect of normal conditions until spring.

Extremely low temperature during the past week stimulated distribution of heavy clothing and other seasonable goods. Retail trade was accelerated by the customary clearance sales, especially in dry goods and kindred branches. Traveling men are sending in large orders for spring goods, the volume of advance business surpassing the customary amount for this time of year.

Stock market operations have exceeded the corresponding week last year.

Isthmian Commission's Wages

Washington, Jan. 17.—The secretary of state has supplied Senator Morgan a statement of the expenditures made on account of the isthmian canal commission. It shows that each member of the commission has been allowed compensation at the rate of $1000 per month, with traveling and incidental expenses added. The aggregate amount paid to the nine commissioners as salaries up to Feb. 28, 1902, amounted to $225,289. The traveling expenditures of the commissioners at that time averaged about $1800 each.

Fatal Fire In Dry Goods Store

New York, Jan. 17.—In a fire which totally destroyed the dry goods store of Aarons & Wirtheimer last night, Herminia Josephson, a bookkeeper, and John Cottain, the engineer of the store, were burned to death. The store occupied a range of five ancient frame structures which burned like tinder, making difficult the escape of 125 employes and many customers. The cause of the fire is unknown. The damage is estimated at $80,000.

Six Men Fatally Burned

Johnstown, Pa., Jan. 17.—An explosion of four kegs of powder in a Slavian boarding house in Windber last night horribly burned six men and their condition indicates that not one of them will recover. The men were seated in one room, and one of them was endeavoring to dry a quantity of the explosive when the four kegs of the stuff let go.

Why Railroad Rates Are Increased

Washington, Jan. 17.—Several railroads have submitted statements to the interstate commerce commission that the increase in freight rates on grain and grain products, dressed meats and packing house products and a few other commodities are merely restorations to a usual or reasonable basis and are justified by increasing expenditures.

A Chicago Love Tragedy

Chicago, Jan. 17.—E. J. Conlin, lying in wait for his sweetheart, Jennie Dwyer, who had gone to a party last night with another suitor, shot and killed her upon her return home. He also shot Frank F. Merritt, of whom he was jealous, and then turned the weapon on himself. A bullet entered his head and he will die.

Buck Buried In Arlington

Washington, Jan. 17.—The body of Colonel Alfred E. Buck of Georgia, late minister to Japan, who died there some time ago, arrived here at a late hour last night. The widow and Major Wood, the United States military attache at Tokio, accompanied the remains. Interment was made at Arlington cemetery today.

CHANCES AGAINST HIM

But Little Hope of Recovery of Editor Gonzales

PRAYERS IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

That Life of Victim of Tillman's Rash Act May Be Spared—Assailant Taking Things Easy and Declares That His Action Was 'Justified"

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 17.—Physicians, after consultation at midnight, issued a bulletin that the condition of Editor N. G. Gonzales, who was shot by Lieutenant Governor Tillman, was very critical and the symptoms very grave. The crisis is expected today. The best doctors in this part of the state are doing all they can to save his life, but hold out little hope of his recovery. His condition and the details of the tragedy are almost the only topics of conversation in South Carolina. Telegrams from all parts of the state and from many places beyond its borders expressing sympathy are being received.

All day long sympathetic crowds gathered around the bulletin board on Main street and expressed ardent hopes for the recovery of the stricken man. All the information obtainable was the bulletins of the physicians posted on the boards. Not even members of his family were permitted to see the patient.

When the city schools assembled yesterday and prayers were said, they included an appeal for the recovery of Gonzales. At the South Carolina college prayers were offered for the recovery of the stricken editor, and even in the senate chamber, where Lieutenant Governor Tillman had presided shortly before the shooting, the chaplain prayed that God would save the life of the stricken editor.

While there is a great deal of feeling over the affair, there is no thought of violence against Tillman on the part of Gonzales' friends. All sensational reports of threats against Tillman's life in the event that the case should prove fatal are baseless, as it is the wish of Gonzales and his closest friends that the matter should be left for the courts to settle judicially.

Tillman took things quietly and calmly during yesterday in the county jail, where he had a comfortable room on the second oor. He had some new furniture brought to his place of confinement and made himself comfortable. Some visitors called on him, but most of the day he spent in consultation with his lawyers. Two of his counsel gave to The Associated Press the following statement prepared by Tillman himself in response to a telegram from a New York newspaper:

"I can only say that when the truth of the unfortunate affair is known, my friends, as well as the people, will know how thoroughly I was justified in acting as I did. The statements already published in the papers are untrue, and at the proper time this I will be prepared to show. Beyond this I do not care to make further statement."

It is understood here that Tillman's line of defense will be that he thought Gonzales was armed and that he had a weapon in his coat pocket and that he had his hands in his coat pocket. Gonzales' friends state that he was not armed. Tillman will also claim that when he aimed his pistol the second time at Gonzales he expected Gonzales to defend himself, and that he lowered his weapon because there was no response and not because of anything Gonzales said. Tillman, it is understood, also will say that he had not met Gonzales before. This is denied by Gonzales' friends, who say both men had been in the senate chamber and state capitol together.

Cuban Politics Warming Up

Havana, Jan. 17.—The definite organization of the opposition party was begun here last evening with a convention of delegates from all parts of Cuba. Representatives of all the elements in the island opposed to the administration were present. The differences among the various opposition elements, however, threaten to prevent party unity.

Police Officer Sent to Prison

New York, Jan. 17.—The appellate division of the supreme court handed down a decision yesterday affirming the conviction of former Wardman Glennon for wilful neglect of duty. On his trial he was charged with having failed to close a disorderly house. Glennon was sentenced by Recorder Goff to serve six months in the penitentiary.

Permanent Campground Wanted

Washington, Jan. 17.—The secretary of war has returned to the senate committee on military affairs, with an expression of hope for its passage, the house bill for the establishment of a permanent campground for troops of the regular army and the National Guard in the vicinity of Camp Douglas, Wis.

Relief For Starving Finns

WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. KATY WALKER.

She Has Charge of Robbins Reef Lighthouse In New York Bay.

The only woman in the world in charge of a lighthouse entirely surrounded by the waves lives in New York bay. She is in the very center of a population of 6,000,000 people, yet she is not a part of it and has not its ways, for when she leaves her sea swept home once or twice a year to shop in New York the rush and confusion of the great crowds all about so fill her with loneliness that before she has scarcely begun her purchases she turns her back on the things dear to the feminine heart and flees precipitously to Robbins Reef lighthouse. There, she says, she has not known a lonely minute in the seventeen years that she has been in charge.

This woman is Mrs. Katy Walker, and the sailors' beacon which she has in charge rises sheer out of the water five miles south of the Battery. It is her ever constant vigil to warn and to succor the men who go down to the deep that has led them to speak of Robbins Reef lighthouse for years as "Katy's light." So conscientious is Mrs. Walker in taking care of the lighthouse that every night since her husband died fourteen years ago she has not failed once to look after the lamps.

It has been twenty-two years since Mrs. Walker landed on Sandy Hook with her son, whose father had died in Germany shortly before she set sail for this country. She had been working on the Hook only a few months when Jacob Walker, the assistant keeper of the Sandy Hook lighthouse, met her and fell in love with her, and in less than a year after her arrival she was taken to the lighthouse as Jacob Walker's bride, her boy going along as Walker's adopted son and taking his name.

There she helped her husband for four years. At the end of that period he was transferred to Robbins Reef light, where he remained until he died.

After the funeral Rear Admiral Rodgers, who was then a captain and inspector of the Third lighthouse district, found out that Mrs. Walker wanted to be appointed keeper of the lighthouse. Although it was and still is against government regulations to put a woman in charge of a lighthouse out at sea, he interested himself in Mrs. Walker's behalf. For three years the government refused to break a rule that it had made, but in the meantime, while it hunted for a man willing to go to the lonely post, Mrs. Walker was left on Robbins reef. Twice the lighthouse board thought it had a man to take charge of the light, but each one, after he had gone down the bay and viewed its isolated position, refused the job. So finally the board, despairing of ever securing a man as keeper, adopted Captain Rodgers' suggestion and appointed Mrs. Walker.—New York Letter in Washington Star.

The Baby's Bath.

The skin cannot be beautiful unless it is healthy; it cannot be healthy unless it is clean and the pores kept open by frequent bathing. Strong soaps should be carefully avoided. The soap should be the finest and best make that can be had, and even then should be used sparingly and the body very carefully rinsed after its use. Soap the body first before putting the child in the tub and use a different washcloth for rinsing. Do not put the soapy one in the tub at all.

Don't be afraid of the water. A gallon or two in the bottom of a tub means little. Fill the tub as full as possible, so that it comes well up to the armpits. First rinse the head and rub the child all over gently with the cloth. The child himself will feel the refreshing influence, and often a tiny baby of but a few months will splash and kick and enjoy the whole proceeding immensely. This exercise alone is most healthful. It starts up the circulation and eliminates any substance which might clog the pores of the skin.

Now take the baby from the tub, wrap him in a soft linen towel and blanket, then gently pat him all over his little body, rolling him from side to side to accomplish this. With an older child a moderate rubbing can be indulged in, but do not rub a child's skin briskly or harshly. The skin is very tender and easily irritated. This method of drying the skin acts as a gentle massage, aids circulation, draws the blood to the surface, causes the skin to glow and gives the child warmth and vigor.—Marianna Wheeler in Harper's Bazar.

The Woman of Forty.

The woman who has passed the confines of youth, said Miss Janet Achurch in a recent lecture on "The Woman of Forty or Thereabouts," has come to be regarded as of much greater importance than she was, say, twenty years ago. The changes in her status can best be seen by consulting the novelists. From the period of Fielding to that of Thackeray the girl of seventeen was always the center of attraction, and she always disappeared after her wedding day. After Thackeray came the long innings of the woman of thirty.

The woman of forty ought to be the happiest of women. She has peculiar privileges possessed by no other woman. She is not troubled with anxiety like her younger sisters at crossing the borderland of youth. Her future is more clearly defined—for at forty has she not chosen and settled down in her career, irrevocably chosen, too, her man? Loneliness is a bogy. Remorse is the only thing she need beware of. If she has a profession, she is at her best at forty. She can act better, paint better and write better. In conclusion Miss Achurch thought that the age of forty should be looked forward to as an inheritance rather than dreaded by every woman.—London Chronicle.

L'Art Nouveau.

In our houses, in our clothes, in our furniture and even in the jewelry that we wear there has arisen a new era, and it is designated as l'art nouveau. While this may seem a very formidable term, it is really quite the reverse. Simplicity has a great deal to do with all that comes under this title. It is really merely a catch word for the emancipation of all that is worn out in artistic or mechanical ideas. It is nothing more than the renaissance of the present time in personal and household adornment from the ugliness of the half century ago period. As applied to the jewels that adorn fair women, and it is to this ornamentation that the term is most frequently applied, it simply expresses under one general title a dozen or more artistic departures in the jeweled decorations of the gentler sex.

Bandbox Economy.

When a girl is poor, she is careful not to advertise her poverty by wearing tawdry hats. Her hat is the keynote to her character. Cheap feathers and light colored velvets are not pleasing even when they are new, and when worn for a short time they become odious. The girl with good taste and a slender purse confines herself to quills and wings, which are smart in all weathers, without being expensive, and she uses a good velvet and rhinestone buckle. She cannot afford a new hat every other week, so she takes care to keep the one she owns in repair, brushing it after wearing.

Flavorings For Apples.

The flavorings for apples are many. One of the most popular is fresh lemon, while a very general favorite is that of a few cloves, but in addition to these almonds, candied peel, essence of lemon, cinnamon, nutmeg and ginger may be used. A spoonful or two of apricot jam or orange marmalade is sometimes added with good effect. The addition of rhubarb or muscatel raisins also makes a pleasing combination, and glace cherries or strips of angelica may be used for ornamentation.

Mrs. Henry W. Poor.

Mrs. Henry W. Poor, one of the society leaders of New York, when receiving any one with whom she is not acquainted has herself announced by her footman before she enters her drawing room or reception room, as the case may be. The stranger waiting for her is startled by the door being thrown open, a footman in livery entering and announcing in loud and imposing tones, "Mrs. Poor."

The Sunshine of Home.

Don't shut up your house lest the sun should fade your carpets and your hearts, lest a merry laugh should shake down some of the musty old cobwebs there! If you want to ruin your sons, let them think that all mirth and social enjoyment must be left on the threshold without when they come home at night.

Fruit on Pewter Platters.

Artistic people are taking down their old pewter platters and basins from the plate rails, where their function was purely decorative, and are using them on their tables. A polished pewter dish filled with fruit and trimmed with green leaves makes a beautiful centerpiece for the table or sideboard.

Dinner Bonbons.

Delicious dinner bonbons are made by chopping peanuts or almonds very fine, mixing them with the white of an egg, a little sugar and pressing the paste into the cavity made by removing the stones from fresh prunes or dates. The fruit is then rolled in powdered sugar.

Aluminium Teakettles.

Teakettles of aluminium are desirable owing to their lightness and cleanliness, as with little attention they can be kept looking bright and clean. They are cast in one piece and are consequently as durable as the ordinary types.

Make the covers of couch cushions rather smaller than the pillows themselves, and they will not flatten out and look thin as pillows usually do after being used for a few weeks.

A careful housekeeper has banished her tin dishpans and substituted small wooden tubs. The breakage of china has been lessened by the change.

Never put warm food of any kind away in a covered dish if you want it to keep well.

An economy that wears out the mother of a family is dear at any price.

Neuralgia of the Heart For Years.

Pain Went From Heart to Head.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine Cured.

"About three years ago my sister was so badly affected with heart trouble and neuralgia of the heart that we did not expect her to live. Although we had a first-class physician she grew worse under th s treatment. She had a swollen dropsical look and had frequent spells of neuralgia pain at her heart when she would render the most heart-rending moans and shrieks. At times the pain would go from her heart to her head when a lump would appear on her temple half as large as an egg. One night she got up in bed and ran into the back yard crying with pain; she was not conscious of it, however, and was brought back to the house by neighbors. I bought for her a bottle each of Dr. Miles' Nervine and Heart Cure which helped her greatly. She afterward used some five or six bottles and has never had a spell since. I had used your medicine with great benefit myself. I know that Nervine and Heart Cure not only saved my sister's life but also saved me from insanity and death. I was so nervous I could not bear the slightest noise or movement around me and I suffered from palpitation and pain in the heart. I had choking sensations, dizzy and faint spells, smothering spells when I could scarcely get my breath; I was so nervous I was treated like a child and at one time it was thought I was losing my mind. Nervine saved me from insanity."—KATIE ACKES, Clover Creek, Pa.

DAINTY EFFECTS.

Tassels and Embroideries Figure on Many Gowns.

A popular fancy dies hard, and the blouse still lives to defy its detractors. For winter wear it is made of white cloth or white nuns' veiling, and elaborate insertions of Irish lace vie with stripes of Russian embroidery for the privilege of trimming it.

A remarkably pretty effect is achieved at a small cost by embroidering in colored cottons on a white flannel blouse.

Embroidery touches are now seen on nearly all the handsomer gowns. A gray zibeline costume in particular bore as its decoration straps of black velvet, hand embroidered in white silk in a small leaf design.

Tassels of every sort are a popular trimming. Pure black and pure white are of course favorites, but Persian tassels, combining all the colors of the rainbow, and tassels of cut amber pears and crystals are much worn and make a handsome effect on dressy gowns.

The pretty little coffee coat in the illustration is of pale pink brocade and accordion plaited chiffon. The underSleeves and main part of the body are of accordion plaited chiffon. The bolero and the sleeve uppers are made of brocade edged with mink.

DON'TS FOR GIRLS.

Don't talk of your ailments in company or discuss your diseases.

Don't be profuse with terms of endearment and kisses in public.

Don't wear a fine gown and shabby boots. To do so stamps a woman at once.

Don't fail to converse at a luncheon or dinner, but don't discuss the food provided.

Don't speak of persons by their Christian names as soon as you get to know them.

Don't wear a number of diamonds or other precious stones by day. It is never in good taste.

Don't have dirty nails, soiled handkerchiefs or soiled linen. Don't use quantities of perfume.

Don't keep touching your face or your hair when once the latter is arranged in your bedroom. Try to forget it.

Don't make a point of being late for church or for any entertainment to which you may be invited. It is a habit which does not increase your importance and sensibly decreases your popularity.

Girls In Business.

"The girl who enters a business career has many things to consider before she can hope for advancement," said a business man. "Her success depends on three things—namely, punctuality, strict attention to business and making her employer's interests her own. The girl who is always on time establishes for herself a quality that is indispensable to work in whatever line. Every moment of business hours belongs to one's employer, and the girl who realizes this cannot fail to elevate herself in his estimation. Thus she is not only helpful to him, but she is also helpful to herself, for it is upon his interests that her success depends. There are some girls who regard their employment as a temporary affair that will terminate at the first offer of marriage. As a rule the girl who lacks good business qualities will make a poor housewife, for she lacks that intelligence upon which good housekeeping depends."

Household Tools.

The house unprovided with hammer, screwdriver and brad awl lacks perfection. The house in which these tools have to be searched for calls for improvement. On the doorcasing, behind pantry, cellar or closet door may be found an out of sight yet near at hand spot for them. Between two stout pans two inches apart you can hang the head of the hammer. Inch wide strips cut from a man's leather shoe can be fastened to the doorcasing by means of a large tack at each end to form a sort of loop behind which the screwdriver and brad awl can be slipped. Have the leather strips about four inches long; nail one end, then try the tool to see how much fullness will be needed to hold it firm, slipping more than half through. One doorcasing will accommodate four or five tools, one above another.

Useless Ornaments.

An observer of a statistical turn of mind made an inventory of his hostess' reception room while waiting for her appearance and noted forty-seven wholly useless "ornaments," the majority of which were most inartistic as well. The fever for possession of the cheap and unconsidered desire for "art" has converted otherwise agreeable rooms into little more than curiosity shops and auction rooms. Before placing any ornament in a room it would be well for the owner to put to it and herself three questions: "Why is this placed here?" "What idea does it stand for?" and "Isn't its room, just simple, unobtrusive space, more desirable than the object itself?"

The Virtues of Woman.

A Paris paper has been inquiring what virtues are most essential in woman. The question submitted to its readers brought many thousand answers. Faithfulness had 8,278 votes; economy, 7,600, and orderliness, modesty, devotion, charity and gentleness follow in the order named. Cleanliness had 3,594 advocates; patience, maternal affection and industry had between 2,000 and 3,000 each, while courage, discretion, simplicity, wisdom, honesty and amiability were between 1,000 and 2,000. Abnegation came last in the list with 868 votes.

A Hint to Mothers.

"If a child has swallowed anything that will not digest," said a noted physician, "particularly if it is sharp, let him eat immediately two or three pieces of dry bread. This is very apt to surround the object swallowed with a sort of coating. In addition let the food for several days be more solid than usual and under no circumstances give purgative medicine. The chances are that the child will feel no trouble from the carelessness."

The Built In Seat.

The built in seat only increases in popularity as time goes on instead of losing its vogue from length of service, as so many things do. For one reason it presents such possibilities for both large and small houses. In the small rooms of an apartment or flat, where a divan or colonial sofa would be impossible, a small seat adds much to the artistic effects and coziness.

To Cook Bacon.

To cook bacon properly cut it very thin, lay the slices on the broiler, rest this on a dripping pan and put in a hot oven. Turn once. You avoid all smoke and smudge, and your bacon is pink, crisp and delicious and easily digested. Bacon is the best possible meat for breakfast.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

"Sweet Clover," which will be the attraction at Boston Music hall next week, a comedy drama in four acts by Pauline Phelps and Marion Short, must be credited with one of the most pronounced and substantial hits of the season. It tells of a sweet young girl, reared by an old father with zealous care least she fall into the path that years before led her mother to forsake her baby and husband. The plot leads with rapid sequence through events wherein the girl learns that her secret lover is the son of the man who lured away her mother. She then marries the man her father chooses for her, and while happy in his love, and learning to return it in full measure, the frantic lover enters the house and seals his doom when he tries to force his caresses upon her. Banished and loathed he leaves, but the husband, whose suspicions have been aroused, discovers the recent presence of a man and casts off his wife. But, like all were "Sweet Clover" ends happily for all concerned. The characters are all exceptionally well drawn, the rural atmosphere is perfect and the comedy element so strong as to make the play seem like an April day, alternating between sunshine and showers.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

Klaw & Erlanger's America production of the famous Drury Lane spectacular extravaganza, "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast," will be presented in New England for the first time at the Colonial theatre in Boston, Monday evening, February 2d. Klaw & Erlanger imported all the scenery, costumes, armor, properties and effects used in its original presentation at Drury Lane, London, which comprise fifteen great scenes, over twelve hundred costumes and other paraphernalia sufficient to fill seventeen baggage cars 64 feet long. The original production entailed an outlay of $100,000. An additional expense of $65,000 was paid to import it to this country, and place it on the American stage. Never content unless their productions represent the highest attainment of artistic excellence and brightness, they expended a large sum at the opening of the present season in new costumes and scenic effects. There is a romantic drama, musical specialties, ballets, processions and a marvelous blending of dazzling color effects in scenery and costumes. A strong response to the artistic in the American mind has never been made than in the ballet of "The Four Seasons," presented at the finale of the second act in which over 400 people are seen in costumes which represent the features of the changes of the seasons. This is an entire entertainment in itself. The advance sale of seats will begin a week ahead of the opening date, February 2d. Seats may be ordered by mail, accompanied by remittances, letters to be directed to Mr. Isaac B. Rich, Manager, Colonial theatre, Boston, Mass.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The management of the Castle Square theatre again shows a determination to afford the patrons of this play-house an opportunity to become acquainted with the best examples of every class of dramatic attractions by securing the "Pride of Jennico" for production next week. This stage version of Edgerton Castle's novel of the same name enjoyed great favor throughout the country two seasons ago, and the Castle Square company is to give the first performance in this city at popular prices. It will be remembered that the scenes occur in the hall of portraits at Castle Tollendhal, in the Courtyard of the Silver Stork Inn, and on the plateau in the mountains on the way to Dornheim, giving opportunities for scenic effects that will be fully improved in coming production. "The Pride of Jennico" is announced for a single week and the usual distribution of souvenir boxes of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

A delightful comedietta from the pen of Augustus Thomas, entitled, "The Man Upstairs," is to be played at Keith's the week commencing Jan. 19 by Howell Hansel, formerly of the Boston Museum stock company, Mrs. Chas. Peters, who created the role of Widow McNally in "The Sunshine of Paradise Alley," and other equally talented players. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Kelcey will appear for the second time in "Uncle Phineas," a mirth-provoking sketch; Tom Brown the noted impersonator of national types, and Mille. Navarro, will present their pleasing specialties; the Juggling Johnsons are to perform marvelous feats with clubs, and Lew Hawkins, a favorite blackface artist, will have a new monologue and topical songs. Nevins and Arnold, a singer and a midget funmaker, and Ozay and Delmo, expert jugglers, are some of the others under contract to furnish amusement. It is one of the best bills of the winter.

If Backed With $150,000, He Offers to Make Dash For the Pole.

Despite the fact that he recently announced his intention of never again attempting to find the north pole, Lieutenant Robert Peary, the arctic explorer, declared the other night at the conclusion of a lecture upon his last journey to the far north, delivered before the Philadelphia Geographical society in Witherspoon hall, that, provided any one would place $150,000 at his disposal, he would be willing to undertake another expedition next summer in a final endeavor to reach the pole, says the New York Times.

He said that he believed the discovery of the pole was practicable, although it was his opinion that there was no land there and that the pole could be reached by the man who could secure a footing on the northern shore of Grinnell Land with proper supplies to enable him to make "a dash across the ice packs." He expressed his belief that he had reached the farthest point of land toward the pole during his last expedition and that a trip over the ice to the northward would realize his dream of discovery during sixteen years.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The Berlin police have forbidden the sale of postcards having on them portraits of the crown princess and Professor Giron together.

The Pawtucket, R. I., Plumbers' union is agitating for a state license law the same as is in force in New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut. It asserts that at the present time Rhode Island is the dumping ground for incompetent plumbers, who are unable to secure employment in licensed states.

The champion $1000 challenge cup for pigeons was won by Harry Waldron of Providence with his oriental breed. The award is the highest given at the annual poultry show at Boston.

While riding on an elevator in a Boston grocery store Charles Wernicher, 22 years old, was caught between the car and a floor and crushed so badly that he died.

The New York Central railroad has completed the purchase of practically the entire Sputen Duyvil water front.

BAER'S DOUBLE HONOR.

Railway Head Wished For a Grandson and Got Two In One Day.

George F. Baer, president of the Reading railway, has often said, "I would rather have a grandson than any other honor that is possible to have conferred upon me in this world."

While Mr. Baer was at the office his wife received a sudden call to Lancaster, Pa., says a Philadelphia special to the New York Herald. Before she arrived there her daughter, Mrs. William N. Appel, had given birth to a son. Mrs. Baer had scarcely had time to telegraph the joyful news to the president of the Reading when there came an urgent message from Reading.

The second message stated that another daughter, Mrs. Frank L. Connard, had given birth to a son. If a report published some time ago is correct, Mr. Baer will present $50,000 to each of his grandsons, both of whom have been named after him.

Mascagni In a Snow Fight.

Maestro Mascagni, the musician, on the way to a luncheon in Chicago heard the shouts of young people on the Lincoln park toboggan slide. He went to try the sport, says the New York World. First he joined the boys in a snowball battle. He took sides with the small boys and shouted and laughed at the fun. Then he made a trip down the slide amid a storm of snowballs.

"It was fun," said Mascagni as he trudged across the snow half an hour later to the luncheon. "The boys are like my boys."

Talking In Their Sleep.

"You think I'm dead,"
The apple tree said,
"Because I have never a leaf to show,
Because I stoop,
And my branches droop,
And the dull, gray mosses over me grow!
But I'm alive in the trunk and shoot;
The buds of next May
I fold away,
But I pity the withered grass at my root."

"You think I'm dead,"
The quick grass said,
"Because I have parted with stem and blade,
But under the ground
I am safe and sound,
With the snow's thick blanket over me laid.
I'm all alive and ready to shoot
Should the spring of the year
Come dancing here,
But I pity the flowers without branch or root."

"You think I'm dead,"
A soft voice said,
"Because not a branch or root I own!
I never have died,
But close I hide
In a plumy seed that the wind has sown;
Patient I wait through the long winter hours;
You will see me again;
I shall laugh at you then
Out of the eyes of a hundred flowers."

SHOE WORKERS' WAR

Evident Intention to Continue to a Finish

ONE UNION MUST SUCCUMB

In the Conflict Between Boot and Shoe Workers and Knights of Labor —Latter Have Many Sympathizers Who Will Do Picket Duty at Lynn

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 19.—The first real test of strength between the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and the Cutters' assembly of the Knights of Labor in the war now being waged between these rival labor organizations may come in this city today, when the Boot and Shoe Workers' union will make an attempt to send its own men into the shoe factories to fill the places of the Knights of Labor shoe cutters now on strike. Should the union succeed in doing this to the satisfaction of the manufacturers using the union stamp the victory will be an easy one, but if it is unable to do this immediately there is no telling where the fight will end, and the men who suffer most will be the manufacturers who have the union stamp and who have nothing whatever to do with the trouble.

The fight is now looked upon as one of extermination for one or the other of the unions involved, and it is not easy to see how either can be victorious without causing the downfall of the other. The women employes in at least four of the union stamp factories are, to some extent, victims of the present contest, for, although members of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, they have struck against the high system of dues imposed, and any of them who may be in need of financial assistance will have to look to the Knights of Labor assembly for help. In addition to the 450 women workers who are now on strike in four of the shoe factories it is regarded as almost certain that the 100 women stitchers employed at Harney Bro.'s factory will strike today. They are to hold a meeting at Knights of Labor headquarters to consider the matter.

The struggle for supremacy between the two organizations that seems sure to come is expected to prove the greatest ever witnessed in the history of organized labor in this city. All Knights of Labor cutters employed in the nearly 100 Lynn shoe factories where no strike is on will remain away from work to assist the strikers in preventing the out of town cutters from going to work, which means that over 700 Knights of Labor cutters will be put on guard. In addition the 390 members of the Grain Counter Workers' union and about 200 members of the Heel Workers' union, affiliated with the American Labor union, have remained out today to assist the strikers, together with the members of the Hand Turned Workers' union, which will make up a force of nearly 1500 men in all who will endeavor to prevail on the new cutters to leave the city.

There is a report that the striking women stitchers have offered their services to the Knights of Labor cutters for picket duty. There is also a rumor that the Boot and Shoe Workers' union already has 100 cutters in Lynn who are to go to work in union stamp factories, but the Knights of Labor pickets have only been able to locate about 20 of them. It was stated at Knights of Labor headquarters that seven of these cutters, who came here from Rochester, N. Y., had promised to return home. Headquarters for the Boot and Shoe Workers' cutters has been established at Boston, and a committee was sent there to post the new comers on existing conditions in Lynn and advise them not to come to the city.

The Board of Trade's arbitration committee, none of whom is a shoe manufacturer, is straining every nerve to bring about a settlement of the labor war, and President Hastings has already held conferences with the leaders on both sides, but as yet has been unable to accomplish very little, as the contending unions seem bent on fighting the battle to a finish among themselves. The Boot and Shoe Workers' union will have the backing of the American Federation of Labor and will also receive the united support of the Lynn Central Labor union, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Officers Shifted About

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 19.—An interesting feature in the struggle for supremacy between the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and the Shoe Workers' Protective association is the announcement that beginning today there will be a new hand at the helm in the headquarters of the former organization. For some time there has been friction between two factions of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, one of whom supported General Organizer Donovan and the other Agent Scates. In view of the present trouble, Donovan will go to the union's general office in Boston, Scates will go on the road in the interest of the union stamp and General Organizer Martindale, who has been located in Rochester, N. Y., will come here to manage the affairs of the local branches. The affairs of the Shoe Workers' Protective association will be conducted by the shoe council of that body.

At the Boston Headquarters

Boston, Jan. 19.—There is considerable activity at the temporary headquarters of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union at the United States Hotel in this city. National President Tobin and other leaders are urging their members to stick together and uphold their rights against the Knights of Labor. It is asserted that about 200 cutters have been brought to Boston to fill the places of the Lynn cutters and these men are quoted as declaring that they will go to Lynn today and that the Knights of Labor cutters cannot stop them. A report reached here from Lynn that a movement had been set on foot by the Lynn manufacturers to secure an injunction restraining the Knights of Labor cutters from interfering with their business.

Guarding Against Plague

Guayaquil, Jan. 19.—The board of health of Guayaquil has decided to close the port to steamers from Panama or Mexican ports. This measure was taken when it was learned that the steamer Acapulco had arrived at Panama from Mazatlan, Mex., where plague exists.

Washington, Jan. 19.—For the reason that no suitable person is available to take the office, the postoffice at Keokea, Island of Maui, Hawaii, has been discontinued. The postmaster, whose compensation was $24 a year, resigned some time ago.

MUCH GOOD EXPECTED

From British Colonial Secretary's Visit to South Africa

London, Jan. 19.—Colonial Secretary Chamberlain's frank admission at Johannesburg that he started for South Africa with the idea of obtaining a much larger war contribution from the Transvaal than the one he has secured explains the rumors which have been current for the last few days that his mission had resulted in disappointment to himself. It is recognized that if he had not gone to South Africa no contribution at all might have been forthcoming, and also that the contribution is not forced, but voluntary on the part of Rand interests. Great relief is felt that everything possible is being done to avoid the introduction of Chinese labor into the colonies.

Mr. Chamberlain's references to the labor problem have been construed as indicating his desire for measures either to restrain Kaffir polygamy or for a system of taxation to compel the natives to work by placing a heavy impost upon every additional wife.

In Johannesburg the idea has been mooted that the $150,000,000 war contribution might be spent in building new warships. This suggestion does not meet with much approval in London, where it is thought the contribution ought to be applied to the relief of taxation.

In editorial articles this morning great hopes are built on Mr. Chamberlain's optimistic view of the colonies' future and the fact that the settlement errs, if anything, on the side of generosity to the colonies.

This Week In Congress

Washington, Jan. 19.—The indications are that the present week will witness the passage by the house of the anti-trust measure which is being prepared by the judiciary committee. No decision has yet been reached as to the length of time which will be allowed for discussion, or whether opportunity will be given for amendment.

The statehood bill, the immigration bill and the Cuban reciprocity treaty will vie with each other in demanding the attention of the senate during the present week and probably all of them will be displaced temporarily by the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill.

Not Anxious to Work Overtime

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 19.—As an experiment the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company operated three collieries in this city Saturday night until 10:30 and another colliery until 8 o'clock, making 15 and 12 hours, respectively, for the day. The result was entirely satisfactory and the mines can be run every night if the men will work. A canvass was made of the men working at the different collieries of the company, but only at four would the men volunteer to work.

Rich Strike In Klondike

Seattle, Jan. 19.—A special from Dawson says a tremendously rich strike of gold has been made 15 miles north of a point on Tanana river, 300 miles from its source in American territory, and a stampede to the scene is in progress.

BRAVE VOLUNTEERS.

Risked Their Lives to Save the Crew of a Stranded Vessel.

Chatham, Mass., Jan. 19.—Two life saving crews, one from Monomoy and the other made up of volunteers from this town, rowed out into Nantucket sound yesterday to the assistance of the crew of the schooner Emeline G. Sawyer in the teeth of an icy northwest gale. The volunteer crew won the race and carried the ship-wrecked mariners to land. The schooner will probably be a total loss.

The Sawyer, which was bound from Boston to New York with a cargo of tar, was sighted about 9 o'clock yesterday morning, driving before a northwest gale, apparently helpless. She struck on Common flats a few hours after and at once set signals of distress. The nearest life saving station was that of Monomoy and the crew in command of Captain Ellis at once put off. But it was a long, hard and cold row, and as the life savers made slow progress a volunteer crew was hastily organized from among the fishermen of this town.

This second crew, being somewhat to the windward of the vessel, had a better chance, but still it was a hard pull and it was afternoon before they reached the vessel. The Monomoy crew arrived not long after, but by this time the five men in the schooner were all in the Chatham boat. Rather than row back in the face of the gale both boats went down to Monomoy where the frost bitten mariners were cared for. The volunteer crew was composed of Captain George Bloomer, George Gould, Reuben T. Bearse, Francisco Bloomer, William Bloomer, William Bearse, Seymour Patterson and Daniel Harding.

Armenians Depart From Amesbury

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 19.—The striking carriage makers, who have been out since Jan. 1 because of the manufacturers' refusal to grant a nine-hour day with the pay formerly received for 10 hours, were jubilant yesterday when they learned that 53 of the 35 Armenians brought here by the manufacturers a week ago from New York had left town. The Armenians received their wages Saturday evening and all but two of them left here yesterday. It is said by the strikers that the foreigners were dissatisfied with their positions soon after they went to work, and only waited for the end of the week to earn money to take them back to New York.

Strikers Won't Desert Barrett

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 19.—Sunday was a quiet day in Waterbury so far as the trolley strike situation was concerned. The cars did not carry a great many passengers. At the present time there seems to be no change in the situation. The whole question, apparently, hinges upon the reinstatement of W. J. Barrett, president of the Trolleymen's union. The company agreed to practically every demand of the strikers with this one exception. The men, however, are still firm in their decision to stand by Barrett.

Mrs Richardson In Sanitarium

Chelsea, Mass., Jan. 19.—Mrs. Harley Richardson, who alleged that her daughter, Katherine V. Richardson, attempted to poison her by putting arsenic in her medicine, has been taken to a sanitarium. When brought to Chelsea Mrs. Richardson was violent. One of the points upon which the defense at Miss Richardson's hearing laid stress was that her mother was insane.

Not a Case of Kidnapping

Ware, Mass., Jan. 19.—The body of Frank Lubelozyk, aged 5, was found in the Ware river yesterday. The boy had been missing since Christmas day and there have been reports that he was kidnapped and was being held for a ransom. He had fallen through a trap in the rear of the house, which hangs over the river.

Good Afternoon.

The backbone of winter is not bro ken.

The drop in coal by Quincy dealers came at a time when it will be appreciated.

The independent coal operators of New York announce a reduction of $1.50 per ton in coal f. o. b., and a further reduction is hinted. Perhaps they find it don't pay to be too independent.

The population of Quincy, Jan. 1903, according to the estimate of the State Board of Health is 26,042, an increrse of 735 over their estimate of 1902. The estimate is none too high, as the school census and list of voters give a reliable basis.

Eight Hours in Shipyards.

Some of the labor leaders who are advocating the passage of the eight-hour bill have been embarrassed, says a Washington dispatch to the Herald, by the recent request of a number of employes of the Washington Navy Yard to be allowed to work overtime.

The opponents of the bill have always argued that the absolute rigidity of an eight-hour day is not agreeable to many laboring men. In the Washington Navy Yard there are nearly 2400 employes, and, except in case of emergency, they are not permitted to work more than eight hours a day.

The navy yard is behind in its work, and the men suggested that the force be divided into two shifts working twelve hours each, instead of three shifts working eight hours. The wishes of the men in this matter will not be carried out, because the law does not permit employment of extra hours except in cases of emergency.

There seems little probability of the passage of the eight-hour bill at this session, on account of the press of more important business, says the dispatch.

THE NEW BLOCK.

Rooms for the District and Probate Courts.

Elaborate Quarters for the Masons.

An Up-to-Date Furniture Warehouse for W. G. Shaw.

On Saturday, plans for the new block, to be erected by the Quincy Real Estate Trust, near the old street railway building, were on exhibition at Music hall for contractors to bid upon. During the afternoon several local builders figured upon them.

The building, which will be of brick, will have a frontage on Washington street of 40 feet, and a total depth of 252 feet. It will be occupied by W. G. Shaw, furniture, on the first floor; the District and Probate courts on the second floor; and the Masonic orders on the third floor.

Entrance to the building will be by a large doorway midway front, which leads into a wide vestibule. From here a door on the north leads to the first floor, and a stairway to the floors above.

On the first floor will be a main office, 14 by 15 feet; a private office, 10 by 10 feet; a store room 25 by 40, a shipping room 25 by 39 feet; and a shipping office. There is also an elevator to a store room in the rear of the second floor, a large vault, lavatories and a stairway leading to the basement.

The stairway to the second floor is of marble. The whole front part will be occupied by the courts, and the rear by Mr. Shaw.

Facing Washington street is the Judge's room, 16 by 17 feet. Back of this is the clerks room and library 12 by 20 feet. On the north side are two offices, 6 by 12 feet and 12 by 16 feet; a consulting room, 10 by 15 feet, and probation officer's office, 10 by 12 feet.

The main court room is 32 by 49 feet, and in the rear of this is the Probate court room 28 by 32 feet.

From the stairway landing in front is a corridor which extends along the north side toward the rear, ending in a stairway leading to the upper story which will be occupied by the Masons.

On the third story front will be six offices, reached by a separate stairway.

The rooms to be occupied by the Masons will consist of a main lodge room 40 by 59 feet; prelate hall, 20 by 35 feet; parlor 13 by 20 feet; banquet hall, 26 by 39 feet; reception room, 24 by 37 feet, so arranged that it can be used with the banquet hall; commandry room, 12 by 14 feet; coat room, 7 by 31 feet; a kitchen, 12 by 19 feet; closets for the chapters, lodge, master, tyler, stables for the goats and numerous anti rooms.

Co. K. at Hingham.

All hopes of securing a reinstatement of Co. K of Braintree in the 5th regiment were dispelled by the orders issued Saturday authorizing the organization of two new companies of the MVM, one of which is to be attached to the 8th and the other to the 5th infantry.

The former is on the petition of Elmer L. Curtiss and others of Hingham, and this company will be attached to the 5th infantry. The latter is on the petition of Daniel T. Cllahaan of Charlestown, and will be attached to the 8th infantry.

In compliance with orders, Col. William H. Oakes, commanding the 5th infantry, 2d brigade, MVM, will at once arrange to muster into service the new company in Hingham, and it is attached to his regiment and will be known as Co. K, 5th infantry, MVM.

The Hingham people, says the Herald, have been trying for years to secure representation in the M. V. M., and the 5th infantry is to be congratulated upon securing such a fine body of young men to take the place of the Braintree company disbanded. This company will be lettered K.

WOULD YOU INVEST

BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S

STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $415.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 22 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property; that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 50c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $2.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions. HERBERT S. Freedom Party.

An enjoyable birthday party was given at the residence of Mr. Washington Williams, of Elm avenue, Wollaston, on Friday evening, Jan. 16, in honor of the twenty-first birthday of his son, Ellerton T. Williams. Many of the young man's friends and relatives were present to celebrate the occasion. Music and dancing were enjoyed throughout the evening. Misses Osborne and Schillander contributed to the pleasure of the evening by rendering several piano selections and Mr. Clinton Batchelder of Boston, played some fine cornet solos. Refreshments were served during the evening by the hostess, Mrs. Williams.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Washington Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Weston Osborne, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Burgess, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Schillander, Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Mower, Mrs. Batchelder, Miss Zinn, Miss Ida Williams, Miss Arra Williams Miss Marie Schillander, Miss Annie Purchase, Miss Mabel Hastings, Miss Anna Schillander, Miss Florence Osborne, Miss Ethel Osborne, Miss Ruth Lincoln, Miss Lizzie Lincoln, Miss Mattie Mower, and Messrs. A. Wilson, George A. Lincoln, Everett Atkins, Forrest Burgess, Robert Mills, Clinton Batchelder, George Stebbins, Carl Schillander, Edward Williams.

Services Appreciated.

William Gellotte, for some years superintendent of the Sunday School of the Swedish St. Paul's church was surprised at his residence at No. 11 Nelson street Saturday evening by about 60 or 70 of his friends. It was a complete surprise, and Mr. Gelotte was not in full evening attire, but that made no difference and everyone was soon enjoying the occasion. A substantial purse was presented by Rev. Henry Hanson, Mr. Gelotte responding. There were also remarks by L. Dalberg, Andrew Olsen, Gusta Carlson, T. Kjelender and others. It was a good time for all.

A Cold Day.

But one cold day this winter than today. Many thermometers registered below zero at sunrise, and at noon a reliable glass recorded but 10 above 0. On Dec. 9 the noon temperature was 2 above, Dec. 14 and Jan. 9 but 18 above and yesterday 19 above. Last winter there was only ten days with noon temperature below 20, and only 27 below 30.

On the St. Louis.

W. H. F. Brown of Wollaston, a buyer for the Jordan, Marsh Co., was a passenger on the steamship St. Louis. He is glad to get home once more. He says the resolutions adopted revealed the feelings of the passengers. The whole trouble he said was with the boilers, and the company should not have taken passengers on the trip.

Schools Save Money.

Mayor Bryant had one hundred tons of coal arrive Friday for the school department. The department advertised for bids for 125 tons and the lowest figure they received was $14. This was refused, and the Mayor succeeded in getting one hundred tons at a much smaller figure.

Committee Meet.

The special committee of the Legisture on the coal problems will meet this afternoon at 2.30 and 4 but will not begin hearings before the latter part of the week. It is now the intention of the committee to have Attorney-General Parker represent the state.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

Passengers and Crew Perished

London, Jan. 19.—The steam packet Upupa, from Cardiff for Cork, has been missing since last Friday. Wreckage which has been washed up on the coast near Cork leaves no doubt that the vessel foundered during a gale. She had a crew of 20 men and some steerage passengers on board.

Canada's Winter Resorts.

The great majority of winter visitors to Canada make their objective points Montreal or Quebec, some few going to Ottawa, the Dominion capital where the altitude is 330 feet above sea.

The winter life of Montreal is, of course, quite different from that enjoyed by the thousands of summer visitors from across the borders. Sleigh rides in the suburbs, a wintry view of the city from the top of Mount Royal, tobogganing, snowshoeing, a visit to the numerous cathedrals and other public buildings and shopping excursions to the attractive stores of the metropolis are all pretty sure to figure on the program of the visitor.

There is much to interest on every hand, and even the markets do not wholly lose their attractions with the coming of the frost king.

One goes to Quebec, however, for participation in the "strenuous life" of Canada in midwinter. This quaint, historic city, which is not half well enough known to the average American, is fairly bubbling over with joy and excitement at this season.

From December till March there is a long and variegated program of outdoor and indoor sports to be enjoyed, and life seems to be as much a continual holiday here in winter as it is in summer.

The transportation facilities from Boston and other American centers are all that could be desired. The Boston & Maine Railroad maintains several through express trains a day between Boston and Montreal, connecting with the Canadian Pacific and Central Vermont systems and between Boston and Quebec in connection with the Quebec Central Road.

Through parlor and sleeping cars are maintained and the service is up to-date in every respect. Time-tables and other information relating to the Canadian winter resorts may be obtained from the General Passenger Department, Boston & Maine Railroad, Boston.

Flooded the Turret.

Ensign Clarence A. Abele, a brother of Dr. and George W. Abele of this city, obtained distinction for doing the right thing at the right time on the battleship Massachusetts on Saturday. After the explosion which killed six or more men the report says: "Magnificent discipline was immediately shown by the officers and crew of the battleship. Capt. Harry Lee, commanding the marine guard of the vessel and Ensign Clarence A. Abele immediately flooded the turret with water, and Lieut. Charles F. Hughes and gunner Kulwein went below to the magazine, picking up powder charges, and prevented further explosions, while Lieut. William C. Cole and gun captain Coneman entered the turret and withdrew the charge from the other gun, whose breech was open.

THE MAN WHO HAS MY NAME

[Original.]

I am a real estate agent. In the city in which I live is a man of the same name. My name is Edward Arthur Mills. The other fellow's name is Edward Allen Mills. He is a disreputable character, always getting into trouble, and, as we are both known as E. A. Mills, I, being the better known, usually get the credit for his misdeeds. His father many years ago was prominent and was presented with a silver service. The son pawned it, and it was soon reported that my father's testimonial was to be seen in the window of a pawnshop. This alone cost me hosts of friends. The only business Mr. Edward Allen Mills followed was that of detective, at which he was very expert. Being dishonest himself, he knew how to track dishonesty.

One afternoon a messenger came into my office with a note for E. A. Mills, which I opened. It read:

Call at once at the Bingley hotel.
P. Y. BROWN.

I knew the man to be a large real estate operator in a neighboring city and hoped for an important order. Going to the hotel, I found Mr. Brown, who, upon learning that I was Mr. Mills, told me that during the preceding night his room had been entered and he had been robbed of $5,000 in bills which he had with him to make a tender for a piece of property he claimed to have purchased, the owner asserting that it had not been sold.

Mr. Brown was a steady talker who would permit of no interruption and insisted on giving me all the facts before I could get in a word. By that time I concluded to let him remain for awhile in ignorance of my true vocation, trusting that his mistake might turn out to be of some advantage to me. It was near 6 o'clock when I called, and he invited me to go down to dinner with him, when he would have plenty of time to give me the facts. It was plain to me that I was supposed to be Mills the detective instead of Mills the real estate dealer. I resolved to take advantage of the mistake to get some satisfaction for the damage done me by Mr. Mills' unenviable reputation by eating a good dinner meant for him.

Mr. Brown was an epicure and set before me a feast with plenty of wine. The consequence was that before we had finished I had drunk my share of two bottles of champagne. Wine makes me stupid and sleepy, and I asked my host's permission to go up to his room and lie down. He told me to do so and said he would be up presently himself. He gave me his key, which I inserted in the door, but found that it had not been locked. I went in, felt my way in the dark to one of two beds in the room and, being somewhat "absentminded," took off my clothes and went to bed.

Suddenly I was awakened by some one in the room. I expected to see Mr. Brown light the gas, but instead it was lighted by a woman. Her back being turned to me, I had time to slip out of and under the bed. From my hiding place I saw the woman take out a large bundle of bills, count them and place them under her pillow. Then she went to a door leading to an adjoining room, turned the knob stealthily and listened. Finally she turned out the gas and got into the other bed, which, fortunately for me, was farthest from the door.

It was plain to me that I had got into the wrong room, which, I suspected, was the one next to Mr. Brown's. If so, this woman was the thief and had obtained access to his room through the intervening door. Waiting till I heard her snore, I stealthily gathered up my clothes and, crawling to the door, unlocked it and went out. Just as I did so the night watchman came along and, seeing me stealing out of a room undressed, took me in charge. However, I succeeded in getting him to let me prove the story I told him, and after dressing I went downstairs with him. The room I had slept in was found to be next to Mr. Brown's, and, calling for the police, we made the raid.

The woman told a very straight story, which of course convinced no one, and she was ordered to dress and come along, but before we left the hotel the proprietor was called up and identified her as one of the most respectable patrons of the house. Then the bills were examined and found to be no more than necessary for her traveling expenses. The result was that she was permitted to go back to bed after receiving a humble apology, and I was taken to the station and locked up.

Words cannot describe the horror of that night in a cell. A drunken prisoner was brought in fighting, a woman screaming. While these people were making night hideous without my cell the rats were scurrying about within. Fortunately I had not been imprisoned till 2 o'clock in the morning, so the night was short, and when brought up for examination in the morning I found no difficulty in proving my identity as a prominent real estate man and was discharged with a warning from the justice to stick to my own trade and let detective work alone.

The next day a newspaper gave the case of Mr. Edward A. Mills, arrested for putting up a job to rob a prominent lady of a neighboring city, and berated the justice for accepting his "gauzy story." Of course the item was seen by many of my acquaintances, with great detriment to my reputation and my business, while my intimate friends have since hounded me with their jeers as to my episode in the detective business.

PHILIP TOWNE ANDERSON.

"HARDENING" OF CHILDREN

And Some of the Ill Results That Are Apt to Follow.

Hecker is outspoken in his objections to the methods pursued in the so called "hardening" of children by the means of cold douches or baths. As a rule children thus treated are more susceptible to nasal catarrhs, throat affections, bronchitis and pulmonary inflammations than those who have not been subjected to the "hardening" process. Furthermore, such measures frequently give rise to pronounced anæmia and various disorders of the nervous system. Children so "hardened" are especially prone to acute and chronic intestinal disorders.

While in healthy children a properly conducted "hardening" process is often of advantage it must be remembered that there are no hard and fast rules, and that every case must be treated according to the individual indications. The fundamental principles of a proper "hardening" system are as follows: (1) Gradual acclimation to the air of the room; (2) gradual acclimation to outdoor air; (3) gradual acclimation to cold water; (4) suitable clothing—varied according to the weather and time of year. Great care should be observed in acclimating the child to cold water, and the effects of the same should be carefully watched, the endeavors being at once suspended on the first appearance of any unfavorable symptoms.

On no account should any of the "hardening" measures be commenced until the nursing period is passed, and in all cases the process should be one of gradual advancement.—New York Medical Record.

Handy Piano Seat.

This is an improvement on the round music stool and is contrived from an old packing case fitted with two shelves for music. Two sides are knocked out and the whole wood must be well sandpapered or enameled.

A quaint seat would be one stained a dark oak with a thickly padded flat brown serge cushion fixed on the top and kept in its place with bands of natural colored leather. Curtains of chestnut brown pongee silk hide the sides and can be easily drawn aside when music is wanted. These combined music cases and piano seats are to be recommended for use in flats where space is limited, and they possess the merit of being inexpensive and easily made by the amateur carpenter.

Sleeping and Sitting Room.

If one has to use a room for both sleeping and sitting in, it is a good plan to fit up one corner with shelves not more than four feet from the floor where the bath and all other washing appliances can be kept. This corner should be cut off from the rest of the room by a handsome cretonne or tapestry curtain, which should be suspended by a rod hidden by a piece of cornice molding. Having the corner of the room thus cut off will add to rather than detract from its appearance, for the convenience of this little private nook will be a very great comfort to its owner, who will probably put up another shelf a few feet higher than the first to keep her boots and shoes upon.

To Clean Silk or Wool.

For silk or fine wool goods, such as cashmeres, flannels, etc., gasoline is a much better cleansing agent than water. For a dress waist about one gallon of gasoline will be required. Take one-half of this and place in a clean pan or washbowl. Put the garment in and wash with the hands, rubbing good white soap on the soiled spots same as with water. Squeeze and rub until the dirt is loosened, then squeeze dry and rinse in the remaining fluid. Squeeze dry or partly so and hang in the open air until the odor has evaporated. Never use this in any room where there is a light or fire, as the gasoline is very inflammable. Goods cleansed in this way require no ironing.

New Silver.

New silver frequently is lacquered. In other words, the surface has been varnished with a solution of gun cotton and ether. This is done by manufacturers to prevent the silverware being tarnished, also to keep the surface in good condition. The varnish sometimes peels off, leaving the exposed surface to tarnish. In this case there is nothing to do but to place the silver in boiling water for two or three minutes, after which the lacquer can be easily removed. Silver can be relacquered if desired.

Dusty Books.

To free books from an accumulation of dust, first brush them carefully. Then, holding with the backs uppermost, rap them gently upon a table or other solid surface so that the dust will drop out from between the leaves. Repeat this operation, holding the book on end. Then carefully wipe again and return to the shelf. This is the way a librarian does it.

Wooden Tubs.

When wooden tubs or pails have to stand for some time, instead of filling them with water, which is sure to become stagnant, try painting them over with glycerin. The wood will not shrink until the glycerin dries on, and that will not happen for months.

General Gordon says before he went into the battle of Bull Run his wife, who was in in camp, threw her arms around his neck and said with streaming eyes, "I don't want you to be killed. I would rather a thousand times die myself — but — don't — run." He said the men could not help fighting with such women behind them. The passionate devotion of the Southern women to the cause of the Confederacy has been the theme of song and story for a generation. Nowhere has it been more strongly portrayed than in

SMART HATS.

The Fashionable Shapes Are All Large.

Such a thing as a small toque or turban is not obtainable. All the shapes are much larger this year.

Some of the picture hats are really enormous, but have beautiful curves, the best being copied from old prints. White felt, white beaver and white caracal hats are much worn in Paris. A bordering of dark green leaves on a white picture hat is very effective, especially if the wearer puts some green chiffon about her neck and keeps the rest white.

White is really a craze and is likely to continue so.

It is permissible to utilize one's summer dresses for indoor wear, and the clever woman makes many little changes in this manner. The vellings and crepe de chines can be given a heavier appearance by the addition of heavy guipure collars.

The jaunty sailor hat here shown is of champagne colored cloth, bordered along the brim with a wide band of reseda velvet. The hat has a soft crown, surrounded by a reseda velvet band finished on one side by a pearl and steel ornament, while on the opposite side clusters of reseda ostrich tips are arranged most picturesquely.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

A Memory Lesson.

"It seems to me," said the worried looking man, "that memory is very much a matter of habit. Now, for instance, there's the umbrella, generally supposed to be the most easily forgotten of all things. I never forget mine, for I am accustomed to carry it daily, rain or shine, and I should miss it almost as much as I would my hat.

"But I am not accustomed to carry parcels home, so in order to remember them I manage in this way:

"I carry my luggage in a certain number of pieces. I have, say, big parcel, little parcel, two overcoats and umbrella. When I enter or leave the train, I know that I ought to have five pieces, and I never forget them. Another way of remembering is to put the package on the floor of the carriage where I must stumble over it in going out. The other way is to carry it in my lap or to lean it up against me so that it will fall and attract my attention when I get up. If I neglect to take one of these precautionary measures the package is gone."

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medinineas directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS

Foreign to Purposes of Organized Labor

CREATORS OF SUFFERING

But President Mitchell Declares That Workers Must Protect Themselves Against Organized Capital—Thinks Miners and Operators Will Agee

Indianapolis, Jan. 19.—The 14th annual convention of the United Mine Workers of America begun here today A dinner was served last evening for Mr. Mitchell and the reception committee. After the dinner President Lovering of the Columbia National bank welcomed the miners' leader. Later Mr. Mitchell spoke briefly. He said in part

"To live up to the measure that has been set for me by the people of the United States is indeed difficult. The greatest number is prone to think that a man whose name has appeared in the press daily for the last few months and whose picture has been printed in the newspapers from one coast to the other is a great orator. To be a great orator and to be able to make eloquent utterances has always been my wish. I am just a plain talker.

"I have perhaps been honored by organized labor as much if not more than any one of its many leaders today Whether I deserve these honors or not, I cannot say. I have tried to do my duty toward the men who have chosen me as their leader and I have striven hard for them.

"I am not here to speak of the merits of the controversy between the operators and the miners in the anthracite fields Strikes and lockouts, however, are foreign to the purposes of organized labor. I do not believe in strikes. I regard them as horrible and the creators of suffering. But I do believe that the laboring men of the country should never surrender the right to strike and to protect themselves against organized capital.

"I, for one, do not regard the interests of capital and labor as so much opposed to each other that they can not be reconciled. I have abiding faith in the citizens of this country and believe that they can solve the great labor problem which confronts us and solve it right The labor principles are considered more lofty now by that class of the people who heretofore did not understand the purposes of trades unions. The anthracite strike will result, I believe, in the establishment of proper relations between employers and employes."

Concerning the probability of the anthracite workers and the miners ever being able to get together in joint conference, Mr. Mitchell said: "I see no prospect of that coming to pass now, but it will have to come at some not far distant time. The miners in the anthracite region are now mining more tons of coal a day than they have ever done before. Their condition, of course, is not what could be desired. It is worse just now than if there had been no strike and it will take some time for the old conditions to readjust themselves."

The convention begun this morning It was called to order by President Mitchell, who gave way to Mayor Brookwalter, who welcomed the delegates to the city. He was followed by President Peltmam of the Central Labor union, who welcomed the mine workers on behalf of local organized labor. The organization and opening speeches occupied all the forenoon. The report of the committee on credentials will be submitted this afternoon.

Our Most Powerful Gun

New York, Jan. 19.—The most powerful gun ever built in America, a huge 16-inch coast defense rifle, was successfully tested at the government proving ground, Sandy Hook, Saturday. The gun was fired three times. The gun cost $100,000. It undoubtedly will be mounted at Sandy Hook. While its range at its highest elevation is about 20 miles, it can be used to hit objects only at a distance of four or five miles.

Coal Dealers to Be Indicted

Chicago, Jan. 19.—When the grand jury, especially convened to investigate the coal famine in Chicago, shall make its report today, it is expected that there will be 29 true bills returned against coal dealers. The indictments, it is said, will charge the coal dealers with violations of the anti-trust laws and with blacklisting.

WITHOUT APPARENT CAUSE

Venezuelan Fort Is Shelled by the German Gunboat Panther

Maracaibo, Jan. 19.—The German cruiser Panther shelled Fort San Carlos at the entrance to Lake Maracaibo, for one hour. The fort returned fire with four guns. The Panther withdrew in the direction of Curacoa.

Fort San Carlos is 22 miles from Maracaibo and commands the entrance to the lake, or inner bay.

The local correspondent of The Associated Press has received the following letter from General Bello, the commander of the fort:

"Saturday afternoon at 12:30 Fort San Carlos was attacked and shelled, without any provocation on our part, without previous notification or the delivering of an ultimatum, by the German cruiser Panther, which tried to force the entrance. After a fight lasting an hour, during which the fort used only four guns, the Panther was obliged to abandon the fight and retreated in the direction of Curacao. The fort has suffered no damage and only three men were wounded."

There have been popular demonstrations on the streets here as a result of the shelling of the fort.

Death of Abram Hewitt

critically ill for 10 days. With him at the moment of death were his wife, three sons and three daughters. Mr Hewitt was attacked with obstructive jaundice on Jan. 8 and from the first it was realized that there was practically no hope of his recovery.

May Be a Court Martial

Washington, Jan. 19.—A cablegram to the navy department yesterday from Admiral Higginson announces the death of A. S. Tacke, the coxswain of the U. S. S. Massachusetts, who was fatally injured in the powder explosion in the eight-inch turret of that vessel Friday while off Culebra island, when five men were killed. The officials here are awaiting the report of the board of inquiry into the cause leading up to the accident and on its conclusions will depend whether or not a court martial will be necessary.

Bad Wreck In Illinois

Sycamore, Ills., Jan. 19.—In a railroad wreck near here yesterday an engineer was killed and 30 people were seriously injured. Of those several may not recover. A special running at a high rate of speed struck a broken rail just as it was about to cross a bridge. The speed of the train carried it across the bridge on the ties, then the entire train pitched down a 20-foot embankment and the cars were jumbled together in a hopeless wreck.

Long Record of Accidents

Washington, Jan. 19.—A statement prepared by the interstate commerce commission shows that during the three months ended Sept. 30, 1902, there were 263 persons killed and 2613 injured in train accidents. Accidents, including those sustained by employes while at work and by passengers in getting on or off the cars, etc, bring the total number of casualties up to 12,007, the killed numbering 845 and the injured 11,162.

CURING CONSUMPTION.

When Scott's Emulsion makes a consumptive gain flesh it is curing his consumption.

The weight is the measure of the consumptive's condition. Every pound of weight gained is a matter for congratulation.

Exactly what goes on inside to make the consumptive gain weight when taking Scott's Emulsion is still a mystery.

Scott's Emulsion does something to the lungs, too, that reduces the cough and the inflammation.

More weight and less cough always mean that consumption is losing its influence over the system.

For all stages of the disease Scott's Emulsion is a reliable help.

CONDITION OF GONZALES

Stricken Editor Hovers Between Life and Death

HAS CHANCE OF RECOVERY

If He Lives Another Day Without Unfavorable Developments—Prayers In His Behalf In Columbia Churches—Tillman Remains In Jail

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 19.—There have been more encouraging symptoms in the condition of Editor Gonzales than have appeared at any time since his wounding by Lieutenant Governor Tillman last Thursday, yet it is impossible to give any promise as to the ultimate result of his case. The physicians say simply that he is holding his own and that he probably has passed the period of danger from peritonitis.

The wounds in the intestines have shown an improvement. The obstruction has been relieved and the wounds themselves have progressed favorably in healing. The wound in the liver is not a source of immediate danger, but serious developments may occur within the next few days. One of the physicians says that if Gonzales lives until tomorrow without unfavorable developments he likely will have an even chance of recovery. Last evening there was a return of nausea and more restlessness than the physicians wished to see and they are watching with considerable anxiety for a relief from these disturbances.

Dr. W. G. Wylie of New York, who left here Saturday night for Rockhill, is returning. It is desired that he should be in consultation at the present stage of the patient's condition.

In the churches of Columbia yesterday there were offered earnest prayers for the life of the stricken editor. In all the leading churches the ministers offered special supplications, either from the rituals or improvisations. Some of the latter were very eloquent and referred in high terms of tribute to the services of the wounded man to the city and the state.

There have been no developments in the deplorable affair beyond the fluctuations in the wounded man's condition. No statements of any sort have been issued and no changes have occurred in the position of Tillman. He is still in the county jail and no applications have been made for his release on bail. It is considered practically certain that none would be entertained so long as the condition of Gonzales remains critical. Except for an untrue newspaper report that one of the Gonzales' family connection had expressed a desire to get a chance at Tillman, there has been no recurrence of the talk of violence to the lieutenant governor. There has been no expression from any of the Gonzales family that could be interpreted into a threat against Tillman and there never has been any trace of mob spirit.

China Could Settle If—

Pekin, Jan. 19.—China has not yet replied to the note signed by all the foreign ministers here, with the exception of United States Minister Conger, informing the Chinese government that the failure to fulfill its obligations in refusing to pay the war indemnity on a gold basis as provided for by the peace protocol would entail grave consequences. The government is hard pressed for money, although if the provincial officials collected the revenues honestly the indemnity easily could be raised.

Passenger Steamer Struck Bottom

Gibraltar, Jan. 19.—Steamer Lahn, from Mediterranean ports for New York, went ashore yesterday morning at Tumura, 10 miles east of the Rock of Gibraltar. There was a heavy fog and rain was falling at the time. On board the steamer are 300 saloon passengers and 1200 emigrants. The Lahn probably will be compelled to transship her passengers and cargo. Strong efforts to pull off the stranded steamer were made at high water, but the Lahn remained fast on the sand bank.

Army Officer Goes Wrong

Washington, Jan. 19.—Secretary Root has directed that the resignation of Second Lieutenant Kistler, Eighteenth infantry, be accepted "for the good of the service." This action is taken to avoid scandal and expense of trial. Kistler has been absent without leave from his post at Fort Logan, Col., since Dec. 15 and he has duplicated his pay accounts.

Von Ketteler Arch Dedicated

Pekin, Jan. 19.—The dedication of the Von Ketteler memorial arch occurred yesterday. The arch was erected by China. Baron Von Ketteler was the German minister who was killed by Boxers at the outbreak of the Boxer trouble. The dedication took place in the presence of a brilliant assemblage.

Jackies Have Diphtheria

Washington, Jan. 19.—The navy department is informed of the arrival of the U. S. S. Buffalo at Port Royal, S. C., from Pensacola, Fla. While at Port Royal the ship will be thoroughly disinfected because of the prevalence of some cases of diphtheria.

BOWEN A SPECIAL ENVOY

Venezuela Entrusts Her Interests to His Care

AGAINST JOINT COMMISSION

Claims of Private Citizens For Injuries Sustained Will Be First Heard—United States Will Not Take a Hand In the Conferences

Washington, Jan. 20.—Minister H. W. Bowen arrived here this morning. It is understood that the representatives of Great Britain and Italy do not feel it incumbent on them to await the coming of Baron Speck Von Sternburg before beginning their conferences with Mr. Bowen. Neither the London nor Rome foreign offices are inclined to favor settlement of their claims by a joint commission, the point being made that they are not interested in the claims of each other or of Germany.

The plan outlined and which will be submitted to Minister Bowen contemplates the adjustment of the claims of each power by its representative with Minister Bowen, each nation taking up its claims separately, but along the same broad general lines of procedure.

It has been agreed that the claims of private citizens for injuries suffered in Venezuela shall be the first to be adjusted. These claims in the case of Germany are believed to aggregate nearly $500,000, while those of Great Britain are between $200,000 and $300,000. The powers will insist upon an early settlement of these obligations and so far as Great Britain and Italy are concerned they are prepared to accept a reasonable guarantee for prompt payment.

All hope that the United States intends standing surety for these obligations has been dismissed, but an effort will be made to secure them either on the customs collections of Venezuela, or the proceeds of a Venezuelan loan. A cash demand will not be demanded so far as Great Britain and Italy are concerned, provided a satisfactory guarantee by Castro is offered. The method of procedure in settling the claims will not be decided until Minister Bowen's plan is known, as the representatives of the powers have been instructed that the first move along this line is to come from Venezuela's representative.

Mr. Bowen, while here, will act solely as Venezuela's special envoy. The state department has made it plain to the powers that the United States does not intend to take a hand in the Washington conferences and merely will act as the means of communication between the Venezuelan envoy, Mr. Bowen, and the representatives of the powers.

The allied powers have not committed themselves as yet regarding the raising of the blockade. No such request has been made and as one diplomat put it: "We do not intend to cross that bridge until we come to it." But intimations have reached Washington that Italy and Great Britain are not inclined to favor a continuation of the blockade after the opening of the negotiations and that Germany will be requested to give her consent provided Mr. Bowen presents such a request. Should Germany refuse the request of Great Britain and Italy these powers, it is stated, will not postpone favorable consideration of Minister Bowen's request, but will withdraw their ships.

Concerning the published reports that he had been offered extravagant sums of money by President Castro to represent the government of Venezuela in the dispute with Germany and Great Britain, Minister Bowen says that many false statements have been circulated. "When the question of remuneration was mentioned," he said, "I informed President Castro that I would not accept more than was required for my actual expenses, and I put an outside limit of $5000 on the agreement. This was paid me in gold on my departure from La Guaira. This is all I asked and it is all I will receive."

Panther's Attack on San Carlos

Maracaibo, Jan. 20.—There is no communication between Maracaibo and the fort of San Carlos, which was shelled Saturday by the German cruiser Panther and which returned the fire with the result that the warship retreated in the direction of Curacao. One hundred and twenty shots were fired from the fort during the engagement and the walls of the fort were slightly damaged. The Panther has resumed her position at the entrance of Lake Maracaibo, where she maintains the blockade.

The reports that the German gunboat at the time of the engagement was trying to force the entrance of the lake in order to capture the Venezuelan gunboat Miranda, which is in hiding there, are generally believed here. The Venezuelan government has given out a statement to this effect.

Gratifying to Venezuela

Caracas, Jan. 20.—The government forced loan, which amounts to $182,000, was subscribed entirely yesterday by the banks and the native and foreign merchants of Venezuela. The government is gratified with this answer to its appeal for funds.

ARGUMENT WITH FISTS

A Feature of the Lynn Labor Union War

NEW ARRIVALS ASSAULTED

By Members of the Knights of Labor Who Carry Off One Man—Agreement of Boot and Shoe Workers' Union but Partially Fulfilled Thus Far

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 20.—The intensity of the conflict between the Knights of Labor and the Boot and Shoe Workers union for control of the help in the union stamp factories of this city brought about a hand to hand conflict last night, during which half a dozen new men sent here to take the places of the striking cutters were severely handled, and one man captured and carried off by the Knights of Labor. The Boot and Shoe Workers' union with the assistance of a police officer made an unsuccessful effort to rescue the prisoner at the Knights of Labor headquarters, but were ejected from the building.

The fight was the leading event of the day, and has undoubtedly added to the bitterness of the contest between the two unions. The other features were the success of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union in partially fulfilling its agreement with the union stamp manufacturers by supplying 25 new men at the Walton & Logan factory, the meeting of these shoe manufacturers at which it was resolved to ask for an injunction restraining the Knights of Labor from interfering with the new men and the complete system of picketing, in spite of the severe cold, by the strikers.

During the afternoon and evening the Boot and Shoe Workers' union managed to get small batches of cutters into the city, and the officials claim that they will have over 100 men at work today in the positions left vacant by the strikers.

On the other hand, the ranks of the strikers remain unbroken, and the leaders claim that the inability of the opposition to fill but 25 of the 209 vacancies at the factories indicates a successful outcome of the strike, as the manufacturers have given out that they will wait only a few days more for the Boot and Shoe Workers' union to fulfill its agreements.

Last evening was entirely devoted to meetings. The women stitchers to the number of 250 met in Knights of Labor hall and organized a local association. A majority of the members are now out on a strike in sympathy with the strike of the cutters, while other members are from factories which do not use the union stamp. A union of McKay stitchers was also formed, with 35 charter members.

The Boot and Shoe Workers' union held a large meeting in Lasters' hall, at which there was considerable enthusiasm. Speeches were made by a number of the leaders and among those present were all the cutters which had come to the city during the day to take the places of the men now on strike.

Both sides are preparing for a continuation of hostilities.

Haverhill's Labor War

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 20.—The officials of the Shoe Workers' Protective union, an independent organization bitterly opposed to the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, threaten to call out all the turn workmen in the city unless the manufacturers using the union stamp consent to recognize their union. A formal demand was made on the manufacturers today. The manufacturers want a few days in which to consider the demand, but the Shoe Workers Protective union officials state that an immediate answer is requested.

Brought Out Nothing New

Philadelphia, Jan. 20.—The examination of Colonel R. O. Phillips of Scranton, general superintendent of the mining department of the Delaware Lackawanna and Western Railroad company, took up the greater part of yesterday's session of the coal strike commission. Like some of the other superintendents who have testified, he believed the men had a right to organize if they wanted to, but no person who is not employed by the company had a right to come in and tell the men or the company what they should do. Most of the witness' testimony was along the same lines as that already given by other superintendents.

Mitchell Honored

Indianapolis, Jan. 20.—The city of Indianapolis and its organized labor societies united last night in a reception to John Mitchell. A parade with 2000 men in line escorted Mitchell and other prominent labor leaders to Tomlinson hall. Addresses of welcome were made by Mayor Bookwalter and others. President Mitchell said he believed in the honesty of the tribunal which has in its hands the settlement of the miners' strike. It was not so much the strike of the miners against the owners, as it was the strike of the railroad proprietors against the American people.

Not Worried About the Public

Cleveland, Jan. 20.—With the temperature only a few degrees above zero and hundreds of families throughout the city in urgent need of fuel, a strike was declared yesterday by Teamsters' union No. 267, which is almost exclusively composed of drivers of coal delivery wagons. The coal dealers declare that they will not grant the demands of the drivers.

Peace Agreement Rejected

Cincinnati, Jan. 20.—After being in session here yesterday afternoon and again until late last night the National Baseball league failed to accept the proposed peace agreement. Even if there had been no injunction issued in anticipation of ratification, it is doubtful whether the result would have been different.

Slave's Son Became Sultan

Manila, Jan. 20.—The Sultan of Jolo is dead of cholera. His mother went to Jolo as a slave. Her career has been compared with the rise in power of the Dowager Empress of China. She once unblushingly asked the Philippine commission for poison in order to enable her to protect her son in the sultanate.

Pennypacker Assumes Governorship

Harrisburg, Jan. 20.—Samuel W. Pennypacker was today inaugurated as governor and William M. Brown was inducted into the office of lieutenant governor. After the inauguration the senate and house met separately and elected United States Senator Penrose to succeed himself.

Kenney on Retired List

Washington, Jan. 20.—Rear Admiral Albert S. Kenny, chief of the bureau of supplies and accounts, was transferred from the active to the retired list yesterday on account of age. He was appointed to the navy from Vermont in March, 1862.

No Coal to Heat Schools

Philadelphia, Jan. 20.—Three of the public schools of this city closed yesterday because of the lack of coal. Five more schools will be forced to close today unless coal is supplied them.

Pretender's Forces Defeated

Tangier, Jan. 20.—The troops of the sultan have severely defeated the pretender's forces in the Hyana district.

ACTIVE AT HEARING.

Representative Freeman Has a Long List to Summons.

Representative Freeman is taking a prominent part in the investigation by the Legislature of the coal problems. He has been appointed on the sub committee to consult with Attorney General Parker, who will conduct the hearings.

Mr. Freeman has already prepared a long list of persons whom he thinks might shed some light, and they will probably be summoned.

Drift of Opinion.

☞There is just one way to meet such a situation. Take off the coal duties. Let coal in free. Soft coal is more than treble its usual price. There is gross trickery there or else there is not enough to go around. Either condition is enough to justify the admission of coal from outside and a reduction in the price of this absolutely necessary article. As for anthracite, which is all located on one little corner of the country, and where owners and miners are equally ready to skin all the rest of us, we do not imagine anybody seriously cares whether the removal of the duty would have an effect or not. The first thing to consider is that the country is short of coal. There is duty on coal today and that stands in the way of liberal and continued imports here. Nobody in the coal business has shown any of the sort of disposition that would make the country anxious to save their feelings, if those were involved. But the feelings, really to be considered are those of the 75,000,000 people in this country who are being skinned down to the bone by those in charge of the coal supplies.—Hartford Courant.

The Tannery Centre.

The current number of the Boston and Maine Messenger has a discriminating paper on "Woborn, the tannery centre, a famous manufacturing community that is also a city of homes." There are views of the public library, the savings bank buildin , and the Main street and Common, making in all a very attractive article. The Messenger, now in its third volume, has each month a paper on some of the cities or towns covered by the B. and M. system, the object being to increase interest in them, building them up and incidentally increasing the income of the railroad.

The Mayor announced the appointment of the following weighers of coal and measurers of grain, which were confirmed.

Weighers of Coal: Herbert D. Adams, E. Frank Mitchell, Frank S. Patch, Frank W. Crane, Willie E. French, William H. Hildrith, Edward W. Hall, William W. Cushing, George P. Mead, Eben W. Sheppard, George B. Pray, Herbert A. Newton and George B. Wendell.

Measurers of Grain: Frank W. Crane, William C. Hart, William Q. Bent and Fred P. Loud.

Q. Y. C. ANNUAL.

The Mayor forwarded a request from the Quincy Yacht club for the use of the City Council chamber Feb. 7, for its annual meeting.

Laid on table until later when an order was passed granting the request.

PETITIONS.

The New England Telephone Co. petitioned for a location for three poles on Kemper street. To committee on Streets.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

The Committee on Legislative Matters reported resolution endorsing removal of tariff on coal, and recommending that Congress remove tariff on beef. Adopted.

IMPROVEMENT ORDERS.

Councilman Whiton offered an order for a stone cross walk on Wharf street at its junction with Washington street. To committee on Streets.

Councilman Diack offered an order for $200 for filling Independence avenue to its full width near Bennington street. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Diack offered an order replacing the incandescent light at Bennington and Independence avenue with an arc light and removing the incandescent light corner Independence avenue and Lawry street. To Executive department.

Councilman Whiton offered an order for an incandescent light on Washington street between the residence of J. L. Whiton and Hall's store. To committee on Streets.

BOULEVARD.

Councilman Johnson offered an order that the Mayor petition the Legislature for $200,000 to build that part of the boulevard between Hancock street and the Blue Hills Reservation, and that a committee be appointed to act with the Mayor in representing the city's interest before the committee of the Legislature.

The Mayor stated that matter had already been acted upon by the last Council.

Councilman Bass,—Not in its present form. The first asked that the boulevard be built the entire length but this covers only part. He thought it impossible to get an order for the whole through. But if we ask for this, the most important part, there is some prospect of it going through. The land damages on the Blue Hill end had been settled, the other part had not. This will open up a great deal of taxable property. He moved the order take its final passage.

Councilman Polk failed to see how this would advance matters.

Councilman Nickerson—The order passed contemplated building from Atlantic beach to the Blue Hills.

The Mayor asked of Councilman Bass what territory between Squantum street and the Blue Hills had not been taken and paid for.

Councilman Bass had not sufficient information to answer. He hoped Mr. Swithin would be allowed to appear before the Council and answer questions.

President Alden ruled that it would not be in order for Mr. Swithin to appear before the Council.

Councilman Bass said he understood the estate not paid for was the Pope property.

Councilman Langelier said that he understood that had been settled.

Councilman Johnson understood there was a suit for $15,000 by the Pope heirs against the State still pending.

Councilman Whiton—It looks as though one faction wanted the Atlantic end built first and another the Blue Hill end. The Mayor was doing all he could.

Councilman Nickerson—The difference between the Pope estate and the state was on the reservation taken and not the boulevard.

Councilman Bass had it from good authority that the Park Commission would favor an order of this kind but if the whole was asked for it would be turned down.

Mayor Bryant stated the last Council passed an order to petition for building the boulevard. If we get the bill for $200,000 through it will not say what part will be built. They will probably not even say $200,000 is to be expended in Quincy. If you want to kill the whole matter, pass this order. If you let us get the order for $200,000 through and the Commission think it desirable to do this end then they will do it. If you let the matter alone we may get part of it built. If we go the Legislature with two bills we get nothing.

Councilman Bass moved a recess of five minutes. Voted.

After the recess the motion of Councilman Bass was voted down.

SIDEWALK WANTED.

Councilman Johnson offered an order for $1500 for a tar concrete sidewalk on the north side of Water street, between the Presbyterian church and Granite street. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Langelier offered an order for cross walk on Hancock street at Billings road. To Committee on Streets.

MORE LIGHT.

Councilman Gassett offered an order for two incandescent lights on Squantum street near Ocean street; also one at the corner of Farrington and Squantum, and one on Sagamore street. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Loud offered an order for two incandescent lights on Hall place. To Committee on streets.

Councilman Hughes offered an order for printing of 150 copies of the rules of the Council. Adopted.

PAVING ORDER.

Councilman Hughes offered an order for $10,000 for paving Willard street from the end of the present paving to Milton line on the west side and between Copeland and Crescent street on the east side. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Hughes offered an order for two incandescent lights on West street. To Committee on Streets.

CEMETERY PLAN.

Councilman Piper offered an order for the City Engineer to make a survey and plan of the old Hancock cemetery. To Committee on Public Buildings.

Lawson a Hoodoo.

The Thomas W. Lawson, the big new seven-masted schooner, is a hoodoo, say the sailors of the North End. Manned by "wharf rats" and in the wake of the big ocean tug Gypsum King, she was towed out of the harbor for Norfolk, Friday night. She was unable to ship a full crew in Boston, although her owners offered as high as $40.

It will cost $1100 to tow the vessel to Norfolk. The vessel could get but two mates, two engineers, a cook and steward and a landsman.

Twelve seamen are needed to sail her. The secretary of the Seamen's Union said that there were plenty of men available, but that they did not care to go on the Lawson. A coasting fleet had just come in as the Lawson was preparing to leave, and the men did not feel ready to go. Moreover, he said the forecastle ought to be sheathed so as to allow the bunks to be kept dry and healthy.

Whatever is the true reason for black-balling the Lawson, it is evident that the seamen of the North End do not consider her a lucky boat.—Boston Post.

WOULD YOU INVEST
BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S
STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $115.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 20 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property, that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 50c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $2.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions, HERBERT S. The fire was extinguished with some difficulty. The loss will not exceed $5.

TO WIPE IT OUT.

Debt Has Been Set Back to City Hospital.

Will Be Enlarged When Free.

Annual Meeting of Corporation.—Reports Made.

The assurance of Hon. William B. Rice, the donor of the Quincy Hospital, that the institution would be enlarged this year if pledges were first made to wipe out the debt, resulted in voluntary subscriptions of $850 at the annual meeting of the Hospital corporation Monday evening, and a committee will be appointed to devise ways and means to raise the whole amount.

Mr. Rice presided at the meeting, and Warren W. Adams was reelected clerk.

Henry M. Faxon, the treasurer, reported the receipts and expenditures for the year and compared them with the preceding year. The receipts had paid all bills, but no reduction was possible in the debt.

The current receipts were $13,131.08 and the total expenditures $13,072.06 leaving cash on hand $59.02.

The receipts from patients were $4,092.58; income from endowment fund, $1,493.12; collections, $3,440.37; city appropriation, $3,500.

The Hospital received during the year a gift of $500 for special purposes from Mayor C. M. Bryant, also $66 from Quincy Mansion school.

The endowment fund was increased $100 during the year.

Report accepted and referred to auditors.

The Committee on Nominations report a list of 36 gentlemen from which to elect 12 trustees.

The ballot resulted in the election of the following: William B. Rice, Timothy Reed, Henry M. Faxon, John A. Gordon, M. D., John F. Welch, M. D., Edward H. Angier, Fred B. Rice, Arthur W. Newcomb, Henry McGrath, James F. Burke, Chas. P. Hutchins, and Harry W. Reed.

Dr. Gordon for the trustees reported 291 patients during 1902, from 80 to 90 more than usually. For want of rooms 26 paying patients had been rejected. Today the hospital has 20 patients. There were 21 beds, 2 of which were for children. At times 3 extra cots have been used, and we have been considerably crowded.

The cases too are becoming more difficult and are crowding out those whom it was intended the hospital should benefit. At present there were 2 cases of appendicitis, 1 of typhoid fever, 8 fractured bones, etc. The expenses have not increased in proportion to increase in patients but are naturally larger. Six nurses are required and more help.

Before enlarging, it is imperative that debt should be paid. It is a weight upon the institution. A great effort should be made early this year to raise it.

Mr. Rice said the Hospital collections of 1902 had been fairly generous, but he had hoped they would be larger. Those who couldn't afford to had given generously, while many who could afford to give, had not contributed what they might. We should arouse the latter and pay off the debt this year. The hospital was crowded and not doing its best work.

The people should not be deceived. If enlarged expenses of institution may be $20,000 per year instead of $14,000. I pledge my word that hospital shall be enlarged this year if debt is paid.

Mr. Rice paid a tribute to Miss Thayer, the matron since hospital was opened. She had resigned and gone abroad, but her resignation had been laid on the table.

Ex-Mayor Hall asked about debt and ncome.

He was told endowment fund was $45,000, only the income of which was used. That the debt was $7,200.

After more enquiries as to wants, Mr. Hall favored the appointment of an efficient committee.

Mr. Rice was against another canvass among the laboring men. One canvass a year was enough. The well to do ought to raise the debt.

Albert Keating thought it was the heavy taxpayers who should pay more generously.

R. D. Chase asked about the debt, and whether it had been reduced of late.

Treasurer Faxon said debt accumulated in 1892, '93 and '94 and had remained about the same, but was reduced $500 in 1901.

Mr. Chase thought endowment fund would soon take care of all expenses, but meanwhile all must help. He agreed with his brother, D. L. F. Chase to give $200 toward debt if whole amount was pledged in three months.

Mr. Rice added $500, and E. H. Angier $100, and John Shaw recently agreed to give $50.

Dr. Gordon favored a committee of five ladies and five gentlemen to consider the debt, and work to raise it. Voted.

A committee to nominate this committee was appointed and will report later, viz: R. D. Chase, E. H. Angier, H. M. Faxon and Mrs. Keyes.

Dr. Welch, R. D. Chase and L. S. Anderson were appointed a committee to nominate trustees next year.

The meeting dissolved about 9.30.

Nearly All Norfolk County Towns at Quincy Convention.

The winter convention of the Norfolk County Woman's Christian Temperance Union is being held today at the Bethany church. The morning session opened at 10 o'clock with an attendance of about sixty ladies, representing nearly every union in the country.

Mrs. Ida S. Brown of Wollaston president presided and the convention opened with a devotional service led by Mrs. Charles S. Morrell of Highlandville. This was followed by reports from the secretary and treasurer, these reports were very gratifying, showing the Union to be growing in numbers, while the treasurers report showed the financial condition to be a healthy one.

From 10.30 to noon reports were made by the county superintendents, each of whom presented the claim of her department and gave practical suggestions for carrying on the work.

At noon there was a prayer and Bible reading led by Mrs. E. M. Billings of Sharon, followed by a short business session.

At 12.30 an adjournment was taken during which tea and coffee were served with basket lunch.

During the exercises, Mrs. Laura Tirrell sang several solos.

The programe for the afternoon session, which opened at 1.15, included an executive meeting, opening exercises, roll-call and reports of committees.

Then there will be an address by Mrs. K. L. Stevenson state president on "The scope, purpose, work and claims of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union."

A short business meeting will follow with adjournment at 4.30.

Quincy Girl in Pulpit.

A Milford item in the Globe says: Rev. E. W. Whitney, pastor of the Milford Universalist church, was absent on Sunday and Rev. J. J. Mead of Boston, who was to have filled the local pulpit in exchange, was delayed at Holliston by a trolley accident until after the time for service to begin.

When this became known Mrs. E. W. Whitney, wife of the pastor, entered the pulpit and began services at the usual hour. She read the Scriptures, announced the hymns, led the devotional responsive service and caused the collection to be taken.

Rev. J. J. Mead came just then in season to deliver the sermon and continue the services to their close, but the parish is delighted with the unusual success of the first pulpit effort of the pastor's wife.

Mrs. Whitney was a Quincy girl, Miss Mary Frances French, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. C. S. French, a graduate of the Quincy schools and of the Boston normal school. She married Rev. E. W. Whitney, Sept. 8, 1875.

POLITICS.

Mr. Faxon Says They Are Shocking in Quincy.

Young Women Clerks Do the Work.

While Male Employers Are Mending Political Fences.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

As Mayor Bryant in his inaugural recommended an increase in the number of police, and an addition to the army of city officials, the public may be interested to know the amount paid for salaries the past year. In this connection I desire to emphasize the fact that the young women at city hall are doing most of the work, while the male employes are mending their political fences and drawing the lion's share of the salaries on pay day.

The list below has been carefully prepared and is substantially correct. I hope that it will so open the eyes of the tax-payers that they will give the Council to understand that the practice of raising salaries, and creating offices to reward political wire-pullers, will not be longer tolerated. Politics have entered into the conduct of the city's business to a shocking extent when such a scene as that which marked the last session of the Council of 1902 is possible. On this occasion the mayor, intensely desirous of accomplishing a change in a certain salary, utterly disregarded official dignity and modesty, and resorted to bulldozing tactics that are rare in a city's executive and deserve public condemnation.

The salaries of city officials, employes, etc., follow:

Charles M. Bryant, Mayor,	$1,000
C. F. Knowlton, Com. of Public Works,	2,400
H. W. Gray, City Treasurer,	1,200

Lahn Stuck Hard and Fast

Gibraltar, Jan. 20.—Further attempts made yesterday to float the stranded steamer Lahn were unsuccessful. The steamer is imbedded in seven feet of sand amidships. They say that a panic occurred when the vessel struck, but that owing to the coolness of Captain Malchow it soon abated.

Sciatic
Trouble From Sprain of Back.
Dizzy, Dull, Nervous, Constipated.
Dr. Miles' Nervine Completely Cured Me.

A frequent complication of rheumatism and sciatica is constipation. The use of Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills in conjunction with Restorative Nervine makes an ideal treatment for such cases. The Nerve and Liver Pills, by their tonic influence upon the nerves of the stomach, liver and bowels, cause them to act naturally. Thus the system is readily cleansed of the impurities which cause the trouble and the nourishing and soothing effect of Nervine is allowed to do its wonderful work of restoration without hindrance from the complication.

"About ten months ago I sprained my back. This ran into sciatic trouble from which I have suffered more or less ever since. This was complicated by chronic indigestion. I had sick headache every day with a dizzy, dull feeling, also quite a little confusion. Was extremely nervous and suffered much from constipation. I was influenced to try Dr. Miles' Remedies and decided to give them a trial. I procured a bottle of the Restorative Nervine and a box of the Nerve and Liver Pills. I used them as per directions and received much relief. I continued the Nervine until I had used several bottles of the same and I am glad to state that it has cured me completely and permanently. I now enjoy good health, relish my meals and can eat any kind of food without fear. I take pleasure in recommending Dr. Miles' Remedies to the public."—REV. A. B. MOWERS, Taneytown, Md.

DAKOTA DIVORCE LAW

Cannot Interfere With the Rights of People of Other States

Washington, Jan. 20.—The United States supreme court yesterday again passed upon the validity of divorces granted in South Dakota to non-residents. The case was that of Annie Andrews vs. Kate H. Andrews and the question at issue was which was entitled to administer the estate of Charles S. Andrews, whom each woman claimed as her husband. The record showed that Mrs. Kate Andrews was the first wife and that her husband secured a divorce from her in South Dakota after having remained there six months, the time required by the statute of that state.

The Massachusetts court held that the decree had been fraudulently secured, refused to recognize it, and recognized the first wife as the legal widow of Andrews. That was the decision of the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, and yesterday's opinion, which was delivered by Justice White, affirmed that holding. He said that Andrews' residence in the state of South Dakota did not constitute legal domicile. The case arose out of the fact that Andrews' father bequeathed certain property to "The wife of my son, Charles S. Andrews."

Justices Brewer, Shiras and Peckham dissented.

Justice Holmes took no part in the decision for the reason that as chief justice of the state of Massachusetts he had delivered the decision declaring the Dakota decree invalid.

Police Captains Get Back Pay

New York, Jan. 20.—Supreme court Justice Gaynor granted writs of mandamus yesterday to 18 of the 19 police captains appointed in December, 1900, by the York-Sexton police board, directing the comptroller of New York city to pay the calaries of the captains accumulating since the date of their appointment. These salaries have been held up by reason of litigation questioning the validity, since passed upon favorably, by the appointment of the captains.

DEATH OF GONZALES

Casts Gloom Over Capital of South Carolina

TILLMAN REMAINS SILENT

Showed No Emotion When Notified of Fatal Result of His Shooting—Autopsy Performed and Body Viewed by Coroner's Jury of Business Men

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 20.—The whole city of Columbia is deep in sorrow over the death at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon of N. G. Gonzales, editor of The State, who was shot by Lieutenant Governor Tillman last Thursday. There is no apparent anger or excitement, but an unnatural quiet, as though a great calamity had occurred.

Soon after the death of Gonzales a telephone message carried the news to the county jailor and he apprised Tillman. It is stated that the latter received the intelligence without any expression and showed no emotion one way or the other. He was asked last night if he would make a statement and replied that he had nothing to say.

Throughout the day and last night hundreds of telegrams of sympathy poured in not only from communities, newspapers and citizens of South Carolina, but from many American cities north and south.

When the bulletin was posted announcing the death, the crowds which have been about the bulletin boards almost constantly since the tragedy increased rapidly and all phases and details of the tragedy were discussed.

It was evident Sunday night that the crisis had arrived. Mr. Gonzales became more nervous and was subject to vomiting. He continued to lose ground and at 3 o'clock yesterday morning hope was practically abandoned. The last treatment resorted to was the use of formalin. One-fiftieth of a grain was injected into his veins in the hope of stopping blood poisoning. At 7 a. m. all of the patient's relatives who were not at the hospital were summoned.

His wife, two brothers and a sister, besides members of his editorial staff on The State, responded.

Late yesterday afternoon an autopsy on the body was held by County Physician Knowlton, assisted by the attending physicians. Every vital organ was examined and found to be typically normal. It is understood that the finding of the autopsy will be that death was due to profound septic infection from the gangrenous conditions of tissues consequent upon bullet wounds. A coroner's jury, composed mainly of well known business men, viewed the body late in the afternoon and then the inquest was adjourned until Thursday night. The body was then taken to the residence of Mr. Gonzales.

Shot While Saying Mass

Constantinople, Jan. 20.—While celebrating mass in the Kumkapu cathedral yesterday, upon the occasion of the Armenian Christmas, the Armenian patriarch was wounded by a shot from a revolver in the hands of a drug clerk. The patriarch's wound is not fatal. The shooting is believed to have been the work of a committee of agitators. The drug clerk was almost lynched after he fired the shot.

An Election Law Overturned

Albany, Jan. 20.—Justice Herrick of the supreme court yesterday handed down a decision declaring unconstitutional that portion of the election law requiring candidates for public office to file within 10 days after election a statement of their election expenses. The question involves, if sustained, every public office in the state from governor down.

FLAMES WORKED QUICKLY

Ten Aged Women Removed Without Injury From a Burning Home

Bath, Me., Jan. 20.—Ten aged inmates of the Old Ladies' home were hastily removed last night while the home was burning over their heads. Fortunately they all showed remarkable presence of mind, so that there was no panic, nor was any one injured. The fire was discovered in the attic about 10 o'clock and the flames spread downward quite rapidly. The attendants went hastily through the house, rousing the inmates, and in a few minutes they were all down stairs. Here they were bundled up in warm wraps, as the weather was very cold, and taken to the homes of William H. Nauman and Henry Langdon.

The home was practically ruined, only the walls being left. Much of the furniture in the main portion of the house was saved, but all in the upper floors was destroyed.

There was a fire in the chimney during the afternoon, which was extinguished without damage. Later there was a blaze in the basement, near the furnace, which was also put out. After the firemen had left the second time a maid smelled smoke again, and finally traced it to the attic.

The home was valued at $3000 and there was some insurance on the building, but none on the furniture.

A Boston Railway's Generosity

Boston, Jan. 20.—The Boston Elevated Railroad company last night issued an order to its employes, granting an increase in wages amounting to nearly $250,000 annually. The order also provides for a system of pensions after a certain term of years. Learners, who previously have been paid nothing while under instructions, are to receive wages, and extra men will be paid while on waiting orders. Previously the Boston Elevated company has paid a higher scale than any other street railway company in the country, and the increase was a total surprise to the employes and was unsolicited by them.

Incidents Out of the Ordinary

Boston, Jan. 20.—Rev. William A. Knight was formally dismissed from the pastorate of Berkeley temple last night to accept a call to the Brighton Congregational church. Mr. Knight was asked last night as to whether or not he made a statement credited to him to the effect that in 10 years there would not be a Protestant church in the South End. To this he replied that he did not say so. The second incident was when he was asked why he had resigned and he replied that certain officers of the temple had requested him to do so.

Town Offers $1000 In Settlement

Marshfield, Mass., Jan. 20.—The sum of $1000 was appropriated by a special town meeting yesterday to settle the claim of damages made by L. B. Howard through an explosion at his summer cottage two years ago, caused by the fire wardens in their effort to stop the spread of a fire. Howard had brought suit for $4000 to recover damages. The legislature will be asked to make legal the action taken by the town. This case was watched with great interest by officials of all the Plymouth county towns.

Waterbury Strike May End Today

Waterbury, Conn., Jan 20.—It is quite probable that the strike of the motormen and conductors of the Connecticut Railway and Lighting company will be settled by mutual concessions today. The committee of business men appointed to take the matter in hand have succeeded in arranging a sort of a peace protocol. By the latter the men are granted their demands in part, but the company still refuses to reinstate the discharged men, including the president of the union.

Lyman's Case In Jury's Hands

Boston, Jan. 20.—Louis Lyman was tried in the superior court yesterday on a charge of manslaughter in causing the death last month of Charles Bruckner, during a street quarrel, and the case being finished the jury will bring in a sealed verdict today. Lyman, who is married and has six children, was jealous of his wife and had quarreled with her. Bruckner was a young butcher who, it is said, forced his attentions upon Mrs. Lyman.

Every man of the volunteer crew is in very moderate circumstances.

A STRENGTHENER

Vinol Promptly Overcomes Weakness.

DEBILITY OFTEN PRECEDES COMPLETE COLLAPSE.

We Want Every One to Know How to Get Strong.

OUR VINOL IS A STRENGTH CREATOR.

The saddest sight on earth is a broken-down man or woman.

We see such people every day right here in our city.

It is pitiful to see a man that should be in his prime dragging himself through life dejected, discouraged and broken down, due to some premature weakness. It does not make any difference whether this weakness is the result of dissipation, indiscreet living or disease; it can be overcome.

We have known of many very serious cases of debility quickly overcome by Vinol.

Vinol is a scientific rebuilder and strength creator. It contains the active curative principles of Cod-Liver Oil in a highly concentrated form. The benefit that can be derived from the use of these properties is so well known that there is no need for us to enter into that subject.

We could quote many instances where Vinol has done good; as an example, here is one coming from Jane S. Fenfren, a prominent member of the W. C. T. U., and a resident of Suncook, N. H. She writes:

"I was run down, was in bed from May to March. Was so nervous and sickly that every one thought I was in a most precarious condition. My weight was reduced to 120 pounds. I was advised to take Vinol, which I did, and am now very much better, and am able to be about again. As a rebuilder and a strength giver nothing can equal it. Vinol is a God-blessing to anybody."

Because Vinol is delicious, and because it does contain these much-sought-after medicinal properties we endorse it, and we unhesitatingly proclaim that it is better than any preparation of cod-liver oil or tonic rebuilder we have ever had in our store.

CHAPTER I.

THE DREAMER.

WINTER in the south, and the morning of a day.

Three years had elapsed since Boyd Peyton had been in Alabama in the month of December. The young breeze, carrying with it the fragrance of lingering fall as it swept across his face, filled him with surprise, for the season had been unusually pleasant and mild. The air was almost balmy despite its touch of early morning coolness, untempered by the new risen sun, yet there was a freshness in it which reminded him of springtime in New England.

The train on which he had been a passenger had been delayed yesterday, and he had reached home after nightfall—too late to see anything outside, at any rate. Then, in the excitement of seeing his family once more after a long period of separation, he had given no thought to climatic conditions or to anything external to them. Stop! The statement is hardly accurate, for in not one single moment in all the joyousness of greeting, in all the exuberant affection given and received in his welcome home, had he lost mental sight of Mary Annan. This morning, as he stared down at the garden of roses in winter, his heart was full of her. So conscious of her had he been, in fact, so possessed of a sense of her nearness to him at last, that he had scarcely slept during the night.

In his restless anxiety to see her he had risen before any of the family, who slept later this morning than usual, possibly because they had remained up longer the night before. As soon as he was dressed he came out on the gallery, where he stood gazing alternately upon the roses or staring down through the long avenue of live oaks toward the St. Francis road, which led into the town where she dwelt.

Presently he turned from the railing and began to pace the gallery.

The young man was a sailor, an officer in the United States navy, a passed midshipman awaiting his commission as ensign, just returned from a three years' cruise in European and north African waters, subsequent to his graduation after four years of study in the United States Naval academy at Annapolis, Md. He had been appointed to the academy from Alabama seven years before and was now just turned twenty-two. No one could look more unlike the typical bluff sailor than he. He was tall, slender and brown eyed, and the native darkness of his complexion, which his seafaring had deepened, with his thick brown hair, worn rather long, as was the fashion of the time, and slightly curling at the ends, would have betrayed him as a southern man anywhere. His appearance was gentle, his aspect dreamy. One would have pronounced him a poet, an artist, a musician—anything rather than a man of action. Without being gloomy there was a touch of gentle melancholy in his appearance.

There was a little timidity—which did not spring from fear—in his address, a deferential modesty, especially when in the presence of women or older men, that was charming, if somewhat lacking in decision. Yet he carried himself well. His movements were easy and graceful. He held his head high and had about him that air of inborn authority peculiar to the southern slave owner and gentleman, which his naval rank and position had served to emphasize.

What he might become in times of stress and danger was yet to be determined; what he was at that moment was quite evident—a dreamer! Like most of the dreams of youth, the object of his imagination was a woman. Just a year since, his ship, returning from the Mediterranean, had wintered at Boston. When he had arrived there he had rejoiced to learn in letters from home that Mary Annan was attending school in Cambridge. Miss Annan was a young Alabama girl whom he had known from childhood.

He had welcomed with an eagerness only possible to a southerner and a young man the opportunity of renewing his deepening acquaintance with his childhood friend and fair compatriot, and he had striven to make the most of it. Every moment he could take from his ship duties or which she could steal from her not too engrossing studies during the winter the two had spent together in the quaint old Massachusetts town.

The school was described in the catalogue as a "finishing school," a very popular sort of institution in those days and not unknown to history even now. So far as Mary Annan was concerned, its efforts were fruitless. She did indeed graduate from it in June with all the honors of the school, but she was very far from being finished, and he would be a very hardy prophet who could predict what the bright, beautiful and charming southern girl would be in the end. There was latent force in her—plenty of character, energy, self will and greater possibilities—but only the larger school of life could develop her.

A great besom of war and privation and anguish was then preparing for this country. A period of conflict was to ensue in which the finishing touches that only suffering could add should be put upon the characters of men and women all over the land. For the day on which Boyd Peyton returned to the home of his ancestors and the focal point of his heart's love was Dec. 19, 1860, six weeks after the election of Abraham Lincoln to the presidency of the United States.

As a sailor, an officer in the navy, on active service in foreign waters, Peyton had hardly realized the well nigh inevitable consequences to the country of that overwhelming declaration of popular opinion by the north.

In the early spring of the year, after the winter in Boston, his ship had gone on a cruise to the north African coast, whence it had just returned and been put out of commission the week before. Peyton had escaped the great debate and discussion of the spring and summer, the breaking up of the old Democratic party into two or three new ones, the forcing of sternly repressed and long avoided issues to the front, the strife and bitterness, the threat and the counter threat. What little Peyton knew of the situation had filtered to him through incomplete sources. Being removed from personal contact, he had not realized the situation at all. The matter had only been touched upon last night at his welcoming, and he was yet to learn the feeling of his father, his friends, his people, his love, upon the subject.

On this morning Peyton had given no thought to the election or its consequences. At that moment, if he reflected upon it at all, he cared neither what the north might do nor what the south might do. He thought nothing as to what might be demanded of him, or what his course of action should be in any possible contingency—unless it concerned Mary Annan and his love for her.

Well, the world about him might do what it would. It mattered nothing to him in that bright morning of hope. In an hour or two at most he would see her. He could look upon her in her proper person and see her as he had imagined her in his dreams through the long night watches of the cruise.

In his letters to his sister he had taken care that news of his homecoming on a two months' leave of absence should reach Mary. He had so contrived that the very day and hour of his arrival had been made known to her. Indeed, had it not been that the train had been so delayed last night he would have gone to see her in the evening, but it was too late, and he had been forced to content himself with anticipating this meeting in the morning.

No avowal of affection had yet passed between the young people. That certain timidity, that unwillingness to take the initiative, which was constitutional with him and which he had not yet overcome, but more especially a certain chivalry which made him loath to take advantage of their frank comradeship in that strange Yankee land where a premium might have been put upon him, he feared, merely because he happened to be a fellow southerner, an Alabamian, kept him from declaring in outspoken words his heart. Nevertheless, he was thoroughly sure that Mary Annan knew he loved her.

His assurance all ended there, however. With airy mockery, with youthful audacity, with deliberate yet delightful elusiveness, she had met his advances. The most presumptuous wish could not delude him into the belief that she loved him. How could she? he had often thought in dejection. There was a strange mingling, therefore, of foreboding and hope, anxiety and assurance, in his meditations on this morning.

There was no wavering in his desire and determination, however. He was resolved to win her. He would count no sacrifice too great for that end. As the resolution took shape in his fertile brain a keen observer—a woman who loved him, for instance—might have noticed a tightening of his lips, which now, under the influence of some compelling internal force, seemed to lose something of their sensitiveness. His gracefully rounded chin protruded slightly. There was an unnoticed bluntness in it, after all, perhaps. The softness in his eyes gave place to a harder expression. The brows straightened and drew together in lines. His face grew suddenly strong. His whole appearance was that of resolution.

CHAPTER II.

A HARD SITUATION FOR A MODEST MAN.

"I WILL, I will!" he murmured, staring down at the road through the live oaks.

As he spoke there was a step on the porch behind him, and a deep voice broke his reverie. The youth turned to meet his father.

"Dreaming again, Boyd!" said the elder reprovingly.

In appearance he was nearly the counterpart of his son, but with resolution added, decision acquired and dreams long lost in tempering experience. His bushy hair was snow white, although not from age, for he was just turned fifty. His thick drooping mustache and tufted imperial were also white. As he looked at his son he presented a stern, weather beaten, war worn face. Colonel Peyton had been a soldier. He had fought with distinction in the Mexican war fourteen years before. Old soldiers usually develop into the fat and red or the thin and lean kind of men. Colonel Peyton was one of the latter class, although his temper was as quick and fierce as that of the most choleric and gouty old veteran. His voice was full and rich, and in pronunciation and accent betrayed his southern characteristics beyond question. Boyd's voice was different. It was still southern, but not markedly so. He had lived so long in the north and on the sea, and he had tried so hard to mold it in sterotyped form, that it had lost most of its distinguishing characteristics, and except when he was excited it was cosmopolitan and therefore monotonous.

"Dreaming again, Boyd! It's not good for an officer. I had hoped that your Naval academy training, your experience as an officer, might get you out of that bad habit. But here you are at it again, I see."

The old man frowned and shook his head hopelessly toward his son.

"No, father," said the young man quickly, "not dreaming when you spoke, but"—

"But what, sir?" Only he pronounced it "suh."

"Resolving."

"Ha, that's better! And resolving upon what, pray?"

"Resolving to take a wife, sir. If I can get her, that is, sir."

"A wife! A wife!" in sudden suspicion.

"A wife, sir," answered his son firmly.

"How old are you now, sir?" asked his father, having partially digested the unexpected announcement.

"Just twenty-two, sir."

"You are young to speak of marriage, lad."

"Yes, sir, I am," answered Boyd promptly. "But it is a habit of our family, sir, as I have heard. Mother was sixteen, I think, when she married you, and you were no older than I am yourself then, sir."

"Well, er—yes, of course," said the colonel, rather taken aback by this strikingly direct, if smiling, charge. "I—er—who is the lady? I hope, Boyd, that you have not fallen in love with some foreigner in Europe or"—

"No, sir."

"Or with any Yankee girl. A man should marry among his own people, especially now. I"—

"Well, sir," said Boyd hesitatingly in a spirit of fun, "I met her in New England, at Boston, last winter, and I"—

"Boyd Peyton, don't tell me that you are going to marry outside of your own class," thundered his father; "that you are going to ally yourself with one of those northern tradespeople—with one of Lincoln's"—

No one could have exceeded the bitter contempt with which he spoke.

"Father," cried the young man hastily, seeing evidences of an explosion in the reddening face and excited manner of his father, "it is Mary Annan."

"Why, God bless me!" returned the old man, greatly relieved, grasping his son by the shoulders and giving him a little shake. "Why didn't you say so? Why, that girl is the pride of my life, the prettiest girl in Mobile, the belle of Alabama. You young dog! What do you mean by trying to fool your father in this way? My heart's been set upon it. It's the best thing that could have happened. I could not"—

He kissed the plump white fingers with charming old fashioned grace.

"Hold on, father! It hasn't happened yet."

"Ha—what's that?"

"Well, sir; you see, I haven't said anything to her as yet, and I don't know what she will do."

"Boyd Peyton, do you mean to tell me that you were a whole winter with that girl—and you a sailor, sir, an officer, damme!—and you have not proposed to her yet?"

"Yes, sir, I"—

"Well, by gad, sir," exploded the older man, "when I was a young man if I were with a charming girl like that for a week and didn't propose to her I would consider that I was reflecting on her character, by Jove! I always proposed to all the girls I"—

"What's that, Willis?" interrupted a sweet voiced young matron, joining the group on the porch, through the open door of the hall. "You always proposed to whom, sir?"

"Er—my dear—Lucy, I—er"— stammered the colonel in much confusion. "You see, I meant to say I proposed to you the first time I saw you and kept it up regularly every week until you accepted me. That's all, my dear," he went on, with pardonable mendacity.

"Oh, indeed, sir!" laughed the lady. "Well, what are you rating Boyd for?"

"Because he doesn't propose to Mary Annan."

"Mary Annan!" cried the young man's mother. "Does he love her?"

"Gad—begging your pardon, my dear—how could he help it? I almost love her myself," chuckled the colonel.

"Don't make any reservation on my account, colonel," retorted his wife composedly, coming nearer to him as she spoke and laying her hand affectionately on his shoulder. "We old women cannot compete with young girls like Mary Annan, I know."

"My dear," said the colonel, taking her hand and bowing low over it while he kissed the plump white fingers with charming old fashioned deference and grace—a very polished gentleman indeed was her gallant husband, she thought—"Mary Annan can't hold a candle to you, and no other girl can or could that I ever saw, young or old. By Jove, Boyd, you should have seen your mother when she was Mary's age! The belle of the Old Dominion, sir, and the toast of Richmond, Washington, Baltimore, the White Sulphur, everywhere! Gad, sir, I was out with three young bucks before I"—

"Fie, colonel, what an example for your son! But tell me, Boyd, dear, do you love her?"

"Love Mary Annan, mother!" said the young man, much abashed at the publicity given to his love affairs, yet forcing himself to speak boldly and answer her question, when he was interrupted a third time.

"Why, mother," said Miss Pinkie Peyton, his sister, a young woman just turned eighteen, as she joined the group on the porch, "if you could have read his letters to me you would think the sun rose and set and the earth began and ended in Mary Annan. Love her!"

"That's as it should be," said the colonel decisively. "I used to feel that way about your mother, children."

"Used to feel that way, Colonel Peyton?" queried the matron, with an emphasis, easily understood, on the first word.

"I do now, indeed, and more and more every year," said the colonel hastily, anxious to repair his blunder.

"Sir," said Boyd, smiling, "it only remains to take Willis into our confidence now and hold a family council upon the situation."

"I know all about it," nonchalantly remarked Willis, the last member of the family to appear on the scene.

Willis Peyton was small of stature, being twin brother to Pink, but an alert, bright appearing young fellow, with no whit of his brother's abstracted habit of mind, apparently. He had overheard the latter part of the conversation.

"Pink, here, can't keep anything from me, her beloved twin brother, you know," he rattled on, "and always asks my advice in affairs of the heart—her own or another's. I think I have been most judicious in getting your messages delivered to Miss Mary without her suspecting it, and if she ever marries you you'll owe me a debt of gratitude."

"Thanks, Willis," answered Boyd dryly. "And how about the lady?"

"Oh, she'll owe me nothing. Don't for the world tell her I had any hand in it. I don't wish to lose her regard on any account."

"Well, my son, have not you spoken to Mary?" interrupted his mother.

"No, mother; not yet."

"You have been most infernally—I beg your pardon, my love, but it's true—slow about it," said the colonel decisively, "but you must do it this very day."

"I know, of course, that she must know that I—that I—but I—you see, father," he went on lamely, "I did not like to take advantage of her being alone in Boston. I was the only one of her people there, you know, and I thought it was proper to ask Judge Annan"—

"Ask nobody, sir, but the lady herself, sir!" snorted the colonel. "Bless me! Young men of today haven't any spirit at all!"

"Do you wish that rule to be carried out when somebody comes here for Pink?" asked Willis quickly.

"I reckon nobody is coming around after me at present, or at any time," interrupted Pink pertly, with a toss of her head.

"Well, if they know a good thing when they see it, they will," responded Willis. "Don't you worry, Pinkie, dear, I'll look out for you and steer you through the troubled waters of your love affairs, if you will trust yourself to me. You'll be all right. Meanwhile"—

"Meanwhile," said Boyd, "I am going down to see Miss Mary as soon as breakfast is over."

"The idea of waiting until breakfast is over before you go to see your sweetheart!" exclaimed the provoking Willis, with exaggerated disgust. "Breakfast before love! That's modern chivalry!"

"It isn't that, youngster," said Boyd, catching him by his shoulders with a gesture strikingly like his father's; "you'll know when you're older that it isn't respectable to call on young ladies at such an hour."

"Oh, well, for that matter, being in love is not respectable anyway," answered Willis contentiously.

"Boys, boys!" said their mother, half laughingly, wholly in earnest, "a man is never so worthy of respect as when he is in love—and remains in love. That's why I have such a high esteem for your father here."

"Of course, of course," said the colonel, swelling visibly at the compliment, "but here's Dinah, and breakfast is ready. Come on, Lucy. Love and breakfast I always found to harmonize admirably in my case—both charming and both necessary. Come, children."

Good Afternoon.

Many unkind and probably unwarranted things have been said relative to coal dealers during the strenuous times of the last few months. They have been trying times for retail coal dealers, who have not become fabulously rich as rumored. The gift by J. F. Sheppard & Sons of ten tons of coal at this time to the Quincy Charitable Society shows that this firm desires to do the proper thing. Attempts to excuse the coal operators for shortage of coal and high prices is all wasted ammunition, as they alone are responsible first and last. In the first place they should have paid all employes living wages; they should have arbitrated sooner all differences, and thereby prevented the long strike. The operators will make money by the strike, and their employes and the public generally have been the sufferers in comfort and cash.

Mr. Richard D. Chase and his brother Mr. Daniel F. L. Chase showed in a very practical way, Monday night at the meeting of the Hospital corporation, how the debt of the Hospital could be reduced, as each contributed one hundred dollars. This gift was received with much enthusiasm. To this two hundred, Mr. Rice added five hundred, Mr. Edward Angier one hundred, and Mr. John Shaw had already contributed fifty dollars, so that nearly a thousand was pledged. If the meeting had been better attended it is possible the whole amount would have been raised.

However, it is not too late now for others generously disposed to contribute, for Mr. R. D. Chase, Mr. E. H. Angier, Mr. H. M. Faxon and Mrs. Keyes are a committee which is to be enlarged to five men and five women to consider ways and means to wipe out the debt during the next three months, and any amount pledged to them will help solve the problem. If a hundred or more citizens would pledge one hundred, fifty, or twenty-five dollars each it would only be a short time before the Hospital would be free from debt. Who is the next to contribute? Don't be bashful gentlemen, step right up, you will be cordially received by the committee.

The Daily Ledger offers today the first chapters of a story of extraordinary merit. Sir Walter Besant said his one demand for a novel was that it should take him in its grip and refuse to let him go. Judged by this standard "The Southerners," by Cyrus Townsend Brady, easily takes first place among stories. But "The Southerners" is more than an exciting story which holds the reader in its grip. It is an intense drama of the Civil war. It is not description, but expression; not drawing room twaddle, but action. The characters impress their individuality upon the reader by what they say and do, not what is said of them by the writer.

Were there ever since Romeo and Juliet two lovers so unhappily situated as Boyd Peyton and Mary Annan? In December, after Lincoln's election, Boyd Peyton, an officer in the United States navy, finds himself at home in Alabama on three months' leave of absence. He has just returned from a cruise and has given no thought to the questions which racked the country. He is a dreamer, and dreams have been of Mary Annan. And now he has come home with all of a young sailor's pent up ardor to tell her how much he loves her and to ask her to be his wife. You will enjoy every chapter.

NO LABOR TROUBLE

In Quincy Granite Industry for Two Years.

Two Matters Only for Arbitration.

Otherwise the Committee Reach an Agreement.

According to the agreement between the Granite Manufacturers' Association and the Unions, Tuesday was the last day the committees, representing these two organizations, had in which to come to an agreement as to the changes asked the first of December. All matters unsettled on that date were to be left to arbitration.

As stated in the Ledger of last week an agreement had been reached with the cutters upon all but one item which is to be settled by arbitration.

It was not until Tuesday night that the committees agreed on the blacksmiths' bill. Several meetings have been held but little or no progress was made until this date. They came to an understanding and adopted a bill to run two years.

The only item they failed to agree upon was that desired by the blacksmiths in relation to surface machines. They asked that surface machines be classed as five men. This is an entirely new matter and as the committees could not agree, this clause will be settled by arbitration.

The blacksmiths asked for an increase from $2.90 to $3 per day; that surface cutting machines be classed as five men; and that no apprentice be employed in a shop unless a journeyman is also employed; and that in care of men being laid off the journeyman shall be kept at work.

The bill as adopted with the exception noted above, remains practically the same as that in force today the blacksmiths agreeing to accept it for the next two years.

The meetings of the two committees have been conducted with the utmost good feeling, the desire of both sides being to come to an understanding at the earliest possible moment. The settlement of the differences at such an early date will enable manufacturers to figure on new work with a better understanding, and there is no reason why business should not boom in the granite line for the next two years.

The settlement is also a source of gratification to the business men and citizens of Quincy in general.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

H. H. Faxon on Suffrage.

Henry H. Faxon addressed the convention of the Norfolk county W. C. T. U. at Quincy, Tuesday afternoon, and expressed regret that women are denied the right of suffrage. He authorized the union to draw on him for $100 if short of funds.

THE ATLANTIC CLUB.

Listen to Convincing Arguments in Favor of Woman's Suffrage.

The Atlantic Monday Evening club experienced one of its most enjoyable evenings at its meeting this week.

Mrs. Park of Cambridge a Radcliffe graduate and speaker on "Woman Suffrage" captivated the club with the ease and grace with which she presented her subject. All listened with rapt attention to her clear statement of facts concerning woman suffrage as it exists today; the great advance it has recently made and the reasons why it should be granted all women. She met various objections urged against it and quoted from statistics to prove the value of the additional vote of women. Her address was altogether one of enlightenment, convincing and converting.

Mrs. Park was followed by Miss Alice Stone Blackwell who was brightness itself in the interesting manner in which she answered the questions, from a question box, regarding woman suffrage. Her answers were full of wit and wisdom and were right to the point. With so brilliant a mind to serve the cause of woman suffrage there is good reason why it should progress.

The musical program was under the direction of Rev. J. H. Whitaker, the president, and consisted of two solos by Master John Findlay, soloist at the Emmanuel church, Boston, and selections by The Sterling Trio of the Mandolin and Banjo club of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Master Findlay sang "Lullaby" by Clayton Johns, and song from "Child's Garden of Verses,"—When I get up in the night," by Robert Louis Stevenson, the music by Nevin. He was suffering from a severe cold, but it did not disguise the fine quality of his voice and his singing gave much pleasure to the club who applauded generously.

The trio played several numbers all of them exceedingly pleasing,

There was a large attendance.

The social intermission was under the direction of Mrs. Borst.

At the next meeting, Feb. 2, Rev. Charles F. Dole, D. D., of Jamaica Plain, is to address the club on "What is business for?" and Mr. Levi H. Turner of Atlantic is to give "An Outline of Socialism."

Opposition to Cramps.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

Rainy today.

Awful slippery this morning.

Another whist party at I. O. O. F. hall tomorrow evening.

No session of the public schools this afternoon because of the rain.

News from all parts of the city appears in the Ledger every day.

George Gregory and family of Central avenue, have moved to Pittsburg, Penn.

Miss Annie D. Marden of the Wollaston school is confined to her home on Prospect avenue with la gripe.

The Granite City club play the Braintrees at Braintree in the Norfolk County league tomorrow evening.

Councilman Johnson measured his length in City Square this morning, but fortunately escaped injury other than getting a little wet.

Appearances were deceiving this morning and people were surprised when they ventured out to find the streets and sidewalks so icy.

While on his way to the depot this morning Jesse F. Curtis of Miller Stile road fell near City Hall and dislocated his knee. He was conveyed to his home.

A whist party for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid society, No. 3, will be held this evening at the residence of William C. Hart, No. 99 Independence avenue.

If the saying "The wicked walk in slippery places" is true, those unfortunate enough to fall this morning on the slippery streets and sidewalks must be good people.

C. W. and G. W. Nightingale are a new business firm of the city. They have established themselves in the grain business off Penn street, directly on the railroad.

Owing to the illness of his mother, Rev. Edward Chase was called suddenly to Chelsea after the morning service on Sunday, and Mr. Chas. Finch conducted the J. S. C. E. in the afternoon.

The annual church supper of Bethany Congregational church will be held at 6 o'clock this evening. It will be a "Franklin banquet," over which there is some mystery. The annual meeting of the church corporation will follow at 7.45 with reports and election of officers.

The Pierian Sodality are going to give a concert in Quincy Music hall on Feb. 27. The society which is the oldest musical organization in the United States, was founded at Harvard in 1808. This year it has an orchestra of fifty pieces and a Glee club of 24 voices and it is intended to bring the entire body out to the Quincy concert.

The members of St. Chrysostom's church who reside in Atlantic are glad to hear that the financial resources of the church will not allow of it being moved to Wollaston. The land in the Downs is given to the church, but if it were moved, new land would have to be bought, and the limited attendance, does not merit the financial outlay. In spite of its disadvantages, the church is well supported by earnest workers, and Rev. Carlton Mills is beloved by his parishioners.

New Patrolman.

Mayor Bryant has appointed Edward Johnson a member of the permanant police force to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Timothy J. Mc Carthy. Officer Johnson was born in Sweden June 27, 1866, but has lived in Quincy about eighteen years. He is a machinist by trade.

—Editor Moseley of Hyde Park has been reappointed postmaster.

WOULD YOU INVEST
BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S
STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $115.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 20 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property, that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 90c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $2.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions. HERBERT S. SHAW, Offices, 14 and 15, Brown Palace Hotel, Denver, Colo. REFERENCE: Western Bank of Denver.

COAL FOR THE NEEDY

Generous Gift by J. F. Sheppard & Sons Where It Will Do Good.

Editors Quincy Daily Ledger:

The Quincy Charitable Society has received a gift of ten tons of coal from J. F. Sheppard & Sons to be distributed in one-quarter ton lots to the worthy poor of the city by its treasurer, Mrs. Helen L. Bass. This is a very generous gift and will be greatly appreciated by the society as well as those who are personally benefited.

"One-Man Plan."

During the committee hearing on coal problems on Monday, says the Journal, Bepresentative R. R. Freeman was very active in the discussion and submitted a list of witnesses concerned in the sale and transportation of coal who, he thought, ought to be called. He also offered a plan, which he thought a good one for the committee to pursue, but which was not accepted at once by the committee, many of the members thinking it better to study the subject more before adopting any fixed plan just yet.

On this subject one member said: "While Mr. Freeman is apparently in possession of knowledge which he has gained from practical experience as a ship owner and ship broker, we feel that it will be better for all concerned to study the matter more, so that we shall all be prepared to handle his suggestions intelligently and to know whereof we speak when we question any witness who may be summoned."

Representative Freeman was elected from Quincy, and this is his first year in the House. It is known that some of the members of the committee do not care to adopt any "one-man," and so will attempt to have the committee vote to regard Mr. Freeman's outlined plan only so far as it may contain the names of witnesses who may be needed.

Public hearings will begin at 10.30 A. M. on Friday.

Freight Railroad.

No opposition developed on Tuesday at the hearing by the Selectmen of Braintree on the petition of the Fore River Ship & Engine Company for a freight railroad to cross Commercial, Elm and Adams streets in that town, and the Selectmen took the petition under advisement.

It will now be necessary to go before the Norfolk County Commissioners and the Railroad Commissioners of Massachusetts.

Coal Catastrophe.

On the bottom of the river, near Patch & Sons coal wharf, there rests 300 pounds of coal. By rights that coal should be in a bin over in Germantown. The owner of the coal, whose name could not be learned, rowed across from Germantown in a skiff which he loaded with coal. Just about that time a tug came along and as the wash appeared likely to swamp the boat, the owner jumped aboard, intending to put the skiff's nose in the wash. The addition of the man's weight was too much for the skiff and over she went. The coal went to the bottom and the man got a ducking.

Coal for Mayor.

Mayor Bryant has been notified of the shipment of fifty tons more of nut coal which is expected Thursday or Friday.

It will be sold by the bag, only 100 pounds to an individual.

Nothing Wrong In "Love and Life"

London, Jan. 21.—Lady Henry Somerset, in an open letter, says she regrets the objections raised by "certain workers of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of America" against Watts' picture, representing "Love and Life," in the White House. She says that the majority of the great temperance society realizes that that wonderful allegorical picture has in it nothing but tender, beautiful teaching, with the purity of treatment and intention which marks all that great master's work.

DR LORENZ' PRAISE

No Nation Can Equal Doctors, Nurses and Hospitals of America.

Vienna, Jan. 21.—Dr. Lorenz, who arrived here yesterday from London, spoke freely to a representative of The Associated Press regarding his impressions of the United States. "Above all," said the doctor, "I was struck with the magnificent charity of the Americans and their immense gifts to educational institutions and hospitals. Their willingness, even their anxiety, to spend money in aiding others is almost beyond belief." Next to this condition Dr. Lorenz said he had marvelled most at the number of alleged healers in America, naming Christian Scientists and faith curists of every description, who seem to flourish there. The doctor was enthusiastic with regard to the practice of medicine in the United States, and declared that American doctors, nurses and hospitals lead the world.

"American physicians represent progressiveness," continued Dr. Lorenz, "while the English physicians are extremely conservative. In America it was difficult to accommodate the doctors and students who desired to attend my clinics, while during my last week in London many of the most eminent surgeons showed no interest in the new method, while others who were present declared the old way to be best."

President Eliot's Criticisms

Buffalo, Jan. 21.—President Eliot of Harvard university addressed the Collegiate Alumni association here last night on the subject "What the public schools should do for children." Among other things he said: "An all-important function of the teacher is the helping forward of the brightest children. Our schools tend too much to become machines with an average product; the bright are held back, the dull are pressed forward. What a hideous injury to bright children—almost as bad as the injury which a labor union works on the brightest members of the craft—the compelling them never to do their best. You can hardly do a greater injury to a human mind than that."

An Unwomanly Interruption

Washington, Jan. 21.—The house yesterday passed the District of Columbia appropriation bill. The general debate on the bill was largely devoted to discussion of the Alaska boundary line dispute. While Mr. Cochran (Mo.) was speaking of the "truckling policy of the United States to Great Britain," a stylishly dressed young woman in the gallery leaned forward and cried out: "You lie." She then left the gallery.

The senate passed the legislative, executive and judiciary appropriation bill.

Spain Sues For Breach of Contract

Edinburgh, Jan. 21.—The Spanish minister of marine began action yesterday to recover $375,000 from the Clyde Bank Engineering and Shipbuilding company because of the company's failure to deliver in contract time four torpedo boat destroyers which had been intended for use during the Spanish-American war.

BOWEN'S GREAT ABILITY

Is Highly Appreciated by the State Department

WILL RECEIVE EVERY AID

From Representatives of the Allies Concerned In the Venezuelan Dispute—Desirous of Hastening Matters, Especially the Raising of Blockade

Washington, Jan. 21.—Minister H. T. Bowen yesterday received a hearty welcome from the officials at the state department, to whom his tactful conduct of affairs at Caracas has given the greatest satisfaction. Assistant Secretary Hill and Second Assistant Secretary Adee congratulated him on the diplomatic ability he has shown.

Mr. Bowen is a man of great energy and has undertaken the important and delicate duties connected with the settlement of the Venezuelan difficulty with an arnest desire to discharge them with the greatest degree of speed consistent with safety. It is expected that the representatives of the allies, who, so far as is now known, are sincerely desirous of terminating the unfortunate situation on the Venezuelan coast, will lend him every aid in his task.

There must be frequent exchanges between the ambasadors here and their home governmnts, but it is fully expected that frequent recourse will be had to the Atlantic cables and that this new method of diplomatic exchange in large part will take the place formerly occupied by the mail exchanges.

Mr. Bowen, as soon as he had shaken the dust of travel from his clothes and paid a visit of ceremony to Secretary Hay, started out to call on the British and Italian ambassadors and at the German embassy, where, in the absence of Count Quadt, he saw Baron Ritter, the acting charge d'affaires.

Mr. Bowen, above all things, is anxious to secure the removal of the blockade; that is the heaviest charge laid on him by President Castro. So, when he called on the representatives of the allies, he urgently requested them to name an early moment for the beginning of the negotiations. The results of his requests have not yet developed, but it is hoped that Mr. Bowen will receive answers in the course of a day or two. The absence of Baron Sternburg and of Count Quadt, the charge of the German embassy, who is in New York, in the opinion of the other allies need not prevent the initiation of negotiations with Minister Bowen. In fact, it is not at all certain that there will be a joint meeting of the negotiators at any stage. Mr. Bowen is not clear himself on this point, and if the allies' representatives here prefer to discuss their issues separately he is perfectly willing to do so.

It is expected that the Italian and British ambassadors and the German charge will return the calls of Minister Bowen today, when they will take occasion to present the formal thanks of their governments for his service in caring for the foreign interests in Venezuela throughout the troublesome period there.

"Until I have reported to the officials here," said Mr. Bowen, "of course it will be impossible for me to discuss my mission or to announce any program for the conduct of the negotiations. I have not seen a paper in five days and therefore am not posted on any developments since I left Caracas, so that for the present I cannot say just when my conferences with the representatives of the powers will begin."

Forced to Return to Port

Noise and High Speed.

To the Editor of the Ledger:

Permit me the use of your columns to protest against the further use, by the street railway company, for one of the cars now running on Hancock street. Residents are seriously incommoded by the very loud noise made by this car.

Whether the clamor results from a "flat wheel" or from some other mechanical imperfection is unknown to the writer. Whatever the cause, however, the car should certainly be at once withdrawn from service until the necessary repairs are made.

At present, the car is certainly a decided disturber of the peace.

Very truly yours,
Hancock Street.

P. S.—I am told that over that part of Hancock street between City Square and the new car barns cars (especially if empty) are frequently run at rates of speed dangerously high, much in excess of the limit fixed by law.

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medinineas directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. KNIGHTS IN A FRENZY

Over Success of Boot and Shoe Workers' Union at Lynn

ATTACK ON NEW CUTTERS

In Which the Whole Police Force Was Almost Overpowered—Riotous Action In the Face of an Order of Notice For Injunction

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 21.—Despite the order of a notice for an injunction issued by the courts yesterday at the request of 15 shoe manufacturers of this city against the striking cutters of the Knights of Labor there was tumult, riot and almost bloodshed when the out-of-town cutters, supplied by the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, left their factories last night.

Rendered almost frenzied by the success of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union in getting nearly 100 cutters into the factories yesterday the strikers and their sympathizers twice almost overpowered the police in their efforts to capture the strike breakers. Three policemen were knocked down and others roughly handled, but the guardians of the peace, under the direction of Mayor Eastham himself, managed to beat off the rioters, and in addition arrested five men who appeared to be especially obnoxious. Three of these men were subsequently bailed out by the Knights of Labor, but the other two are not known to be identified with any union. At one time there were 1000 people jammed into Oxford street in front of W. H. Tuttle's factory, and here also the police fought valiantly to make way for the strike breakers.

As for the peaceful side of the contest the fortunes of the day seemed to favor the Boot and Shoe Workers' union. Cutters from other New England shoe centres, but principally from Maine, were placed in four of the 15 factories included in the strike, and in all about 44 strike breakers were given work.

The Boot and Shoe Workers' union side was also stiffened in the granting by Judge Waitt in the superior court at Salem of an order of notice for an injunction restraining the Knights of Labor cutters from visiting factories, inducing employes to leave work, loitering in the vicinity for the purpose of interfering with the workmen or intimidating any of the workmen.

On the other hand the Knights of Labor persuaded the 14 cutters who came here from Auburn, Me., and went to work at the Walton & Logan factory, to return home, and in addition received reinforcements from the treers at the Walton & Logan shop, who struck at noon. These treers announced that they would at once form a union in opposition to the Boot and Shoe Workers' union.

But these peaceful moves during the day all sunk into insignificance when real war broke out at the close of work last night. Realizing that something of the kind might occur Mayor Eastham ordered ou the entire police force of the city, including the specials and reserves, and distributed them among the streets in front of the four factories where the strike breakers were about to leave work. At the factory of Harney Bros. the 15 cutters were able to gain Lasters' hall with only a small demonstration and they were followed soon after by another batch of men from D. A. Donovan's factory. Both of these contingents were strongly guarded by police.

The main demonstration came when the cutters at the Walton & Logan factory started for Lasters' hall. When they made their appearance there were fully 3000 people gathered in front of the factory, and although Mayor Eastham ordered Washington street closed, the police were unable to clear the street and a rough and tumble fight ensued. The officers were unable to draw their clubs and only succeeded in getting the crowd back by main strength. The strike breakers were forced to run the gauntlet and many of them received blows on the way to the hall.

Just before they reached the entrance there came another rush, during which Sergeant Bessom was knocked down and severely injured. The cutters managed to get into the hall, followed by the angry threats of the mob.

While this tumult was raging in Washington street there was a still greater demonstration at the W. H. Tuttle factory on Oxford street. Here over 1000 people blocked all traffic, and though the police lined both sides of the street the crowd surged against them and at last became so violent that the police were obliged to make arrests. In all, seven men were arrested and taken to the police station, where all but two were bailed out.

A number of the officials of the Knights of Labor, as well as of the officers of the new Women's Stitchers' union, were served last night with notices of the injunction proceedings at Salem.

The stockfitters in the union stamp factories organized a union last night known as the Sole Leather Workers of Lynn. While it is an independent organization it is in sympathy with the Knights of Labor, and therefore in opposition to the Boot and Shoe Workers' union.

Both sides held meetings last night, as did the Lynn Board of Trade, which latter organization passed resolutions deploring the strike.

A BRIBE OF $5000

Said to Have Been Offered Congressman on the Naval Committee

Washington, Jan. 21.—A sub-committee of the house committee on naval affairs is investigating the charge that Representative Lessler of New York, one of the members of the naval committee, had been approached with a bribe of $5000 for his support of a proposition looking to an appropriation for additional submarine torpedo boats with a view to ascertaining whether there is sufficient warrant for the committee to ask the house to order a regular investigation of the matter.

The sensational charge was made by Mr. Lessler himself at a meeting of the naval affairs committee yesterday afternoon. The question of the Holland torpedo boats was up and Mr. Lessler, who was opposing the authorization of additional boats, told the committee that he had been approached with a bribe. His statement startled the committee and several members immediately suggested that so serious a charge should be investigated immediately.

A sub-committee was appointed and forthwith entered on its work and heard Mr. Lessler's complete story. The sub-committee will summon other witnesses. Their proceedings are secret and the members of both the full and sub-committee have bound themselves not to speak of the matter, pending the report of the sub-committee. How definite or specific Mr. Lessler's charge is, therefore, is not known.

The Squire Family Dropped

Boston, Jan. 21.—At their annual meeting in Jersey City yesterday the stockholders of John P. Squire & Co., corporation, elected a board of directors of nine members instead of 13, as formerly constituted, thereby eliminating all Squire interests from the directorate. The men dropped were F. O. Squire, F. F. Squire, J. P. Squire, all of Boston, and John G. Massie of Providence. Massie was friendly to the Squire interests. The Squire family holdings amount to about $1,000,000 out of a total capitalization of $3,000,000. It is said that the directors did not approve of the Squires serving as directors of the company and at the same time as owners and managers of a big meat business in the markets, buying and selling great quantities of meat.

To Fight Plague With Fire

Nogales, Ari., Jan. 21.—Advices from Guaymas state that orders have been received at Mazatlan by the federal authorities to burn the shipyard, which was erected a few years ago at a large cost to the federal government. It is now believed that the plague has been contracted from infected vessels coming from the east and probably carried ashore by rats or other animals. If necessary, all the adobe buildings in Mazatlan will be burned to rid them of plague-infested rodents.

Threshing Old Straw

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.—When the coal strike commission adjourned yesterday the 400th witness summoned before the arbitrators was being examined. Of the 400, 174 were called by the striking mine workers, 155 by the non-union men, 63 by the operators and 8 by the commission. Yesterday's testimony did not bring out anything that was particularly new.

May Go to Massachusetts Man

Washington, Jan. 21.—There are rumors to the effect that Commissioner Ware of the pension office may resign. Ware claims he has been abused just the same way Evans was, and is only holding on to please the president. If a change is made, it is said, Massachusetts G. A. R. men will urge one of their number for the position.

ANTI-CUBAN MOVEMENT

By Americans Who Make Isle of Pines Their Home

THEY REFUSE TO PAY TAXES

Mostly Fruit Raisers Who Hope For Freer Trade With United States If Island Remains Under Our Control —Matter of Ownership Still Open

Havana, Jan. 21.—The Americans residing in the Isle of Pines deny the general assumption of the Cuban government that the United States has no special interest in the island and that it is not likely to insist on the eventual ownership of it. They appear to be confident of having the support of the United States if necessary in their resistance to being governed and taxed by Cuban officials, pending a settlement of the question of the ownership of the island in connection with the settlement of the location of the coaling stations and other questions between Cuba and the United States.

Recently the American residents of the island unitedly notified the alcalde of the Isle of Pines and the Cuban government of their intention to resist, by force if necessary, the collection of taxes or any assumption of authority over the island by the Cuban government. The taxes are now falling due and every American has pledged himself not to pay them.

The Americans' contention is founded on the section of the Platt amendment which expressly omits the Isle of Pines from the boundaries of Cuba and leaves the title to it for future adjustment by treaty.

Some 300 Americans have, since the war, taken up their residence in the Isle of Pines, and it is estimated that 500 Americans have interests in the island. The American portion of the population is largely composed of people who have engaged in fruit raising. Their desire that the island remain American is not purely sentimental, since, they claim, as a Cuban possession it would receive no more than 20 percent tariff preference, while as a territory of the United States the islanders hope for freer trade with America.

The government, while acknowledging that the matter of the ownership of the island is open, holds that it has de-facto control over the island, for the time being at least, and that it is therefore authorized to levy taxes and perform other governmental functions. It is believed that the United States will approve this position as against the protest of the American residents who refuse to pay taxes, although they avail themselves of whatever protection and privileges the present government supplies.

During the American military government of Cuba the payment of taxes on the Isle of Pines was not questioned, nor were such payments opposed by the Cuban residents of the island, who constituted a majority of the population. Cuban officials are inclined to believe that the present anti-Cuban movement on the island has been instigated by the land companies.

THE ODD PENNIES.

For the sake of saving odd pennies do not buy an inferior emulsion of cod-liver oil when you really need Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion costs more to buy because it costs more to make.

The difference in price is pennies. The difference in results is pounds—pounds of flesh—and days of new strength and comfort.

The consumptive and others who have lost flesh get more cod-liver oil into their systems by means of Scott's Emulsion than in any other way.

GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Sentence Passed Upon Motorman of Car That Killed Craig at Pittsfield

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 21.—The distressing incident connected with President Roosevelt's visit to the Berkshire hills last summer, when his carriage was demolished by an electric car, and his secret service guard, William Craig, killed, was finally closed yesterday in the superior court. Motorman Euclid Madden pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter, and was sentenced by Judge Pierce to six months in the house of correction and ordered to pay a fine of $500, while Conductor James T. Kelley, who was also indicted, had his case placed on file.

The case was not tried, for after pleading not guilty last week to the indictment the two defendants retracted their plea yesterday and threw themselves upon the mercy of the court. District Attorney Malone severely arraigned Madden in his statement to the court, charging him with criminal negligence, especially referring to his reply to the president immediately after the accident that he had the right of way. Counsel for Madden denied this colloquy and claimed that the accident was due to misjudgment on Madden's part.

The court said that as each had pleaded guilty he was obliged to take the district attorney's statement and punish Madden accordingly. The court might have imposed a sentence of three years in state prison or a fine of $1000. Madden was at once removed to the house of correction in this city and began his sentence last night, while Kelley, against whom the government elected not to proceed, was released.

Likely to Cause Comment

New Haven, Jan. 21.—In an address before the Anthropological society of Yale last night, Professor Workman said that it was his belief that the human race originated at the North Pole, which at that time was of a torrid temperature. A skeleton found in Wyoming was exhibited to prove his contention that the people of today are descendants of the ape. In regard to the intellect of the race at that time Professor Workman said that its first knowledge was to realize what fire was.

All the members of the family suffered severely from exposure. The fire caused a financial loss of $3500.

Settlement Failed to Materialize

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 21.—There is an absolute deadlock in the strike situation. Two conferences were held yesterday, but no agreement whatever was reached. Union Stamp Shops Satisfied With Present Contracts

LYNN POLICE OUT IN FORCE

Instructed by Mayor to Carry Clubs and Use Them If Necessary—Large Crowds Line the Streets, but No Personal Violence Offered New Men

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 22.—One of the most important phases of the strike yesterday was the action of 10 shoe manufacturers using the union stamp, comprising all concerns where the Knights of Labor cutters are now on strike, who met yesterday afternoon and decided to employ only members of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union. They have an agreement with the union and declared that they would bind themselves to no other contract.

A number of new men to take the places of striking Knights of Labor cutters were brought here from Chicago yesterday by the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, but four of them were at Knights of Labor headquarters later in the day and gave the latter officials the assurance that they would not go to work.

Little trouble was experienced last night when the Boot and Shoe Workers' union cutters left their work and were taken under police escort to their headquarters in Lasters' hall, but this fact was due to the determined stand taken by the authorities, and not by any means to any change in attitude toward the strike breakers on the part of the crowds that filled the streets. Only one arrest was made.

Just before the police details, which included every special and reserve officer of the force, had been sent out on the streets, the men were addressed by Mayor Eastham and City Marshal Burckes.

The mayor told them they were to use every effort to prevent a repetition of Tuesday night's disorderly scenes. They were told to carry their clubs, and, while they were to use great discretion, they must not be afraid to wield them if it was found necessary to do so.

Soon after 4 o'clock the officers began their patrols in front of the factories, where the strike breakers were employed, and by this time the streets were lined with crowds waiting eagerly for something to turn up. City Marshal Burckes had personal charge of the arrangements. Officers were placed every 15 feet along the streets and the crowds were kept constantly moving. Three new cutters, whose presence in the factory of Arthur Gloyd had not been generally known, were the first to come out, and they were taken to Lasters' hall almost before the waiting crowds were aware who they were.

Six men soon after came out of the W. H. Tuttle factory and they had no trouble in reaching the hall. The same was true of a small delegation of cutters from the D. A. Donovan factory.

The greatest crowds, however, had gathered around the Walton & Logan factory and the factory of the Watson Shoe company, there being at least 6000 people massed at these points. A few minutes after 5 o'clock a special escort of 11 officers went into the Walton & Logan factory and in a short time emerged, each with a cutter by his side.

A passage way was cleared, other officers surrounded them, while the crowd surged in around the men as they started on the march down Washington street, shouting, hissing and jeering the cutters, the favorite rallying cry being "Eat 'em up."

No attempt was made to do the cutters any bodily harm until the Boston and Maine railroad crossing was reached, where a passenger train and lowered gates brought the procession to a standstill. Here the crowd tried to close in about the cutters and their protectors and became more demonstrative than at any time before.

Frank Garrigan, who was in the van of the disturbers and who, it is said, was assailing the cutters with epithets, was seized by City Marshal Burckes, but resisted arrest so furiously that other officers had to be called to the chief's assistance before he could be taken into custody.

When the gates were finally raised, the police, with drawn clubs, succeeded in checking the crowd, thus enabling the escort to get their men to Andrew street, which had previously been closed at both ends, thus allowing a free passage for the party into the hall.

There was little excitement attending the exodus from the other shops.

CHAPTER III.

MARY ANNAN WILL NOT BE MADE LOVE TO.

MISS TEMPE ANNAN was a singular mixture of the grave and the gay. This morning she was feeling deeply serious, not to say melancholy, for reasons various, but sufficient. In the first place, she was, as she would have phrased it, "dressed up." She was not yet old enough to enjoy at any and every time that process which she would find so delightful in later years. New clothes and best clothes made her miserable, especially when they were put on without rhyme or reason. The fact that she was at that moment seated in the great best room also oppressed her.

The child might have endured all these things, however, had it not been for an open book in the hand of a young lady who sat beside her. That open book meant to Miss Tempe an unlearned lesson. Most of Tempe's lessons were unlearned.

"Now, Tempe, dear," began her companion gently when the two had settled themselves, one comfortably and the other without any modification of her stubborn predetermined discomfort, before the wood fire crackling and burning cheerfully in the open grate—now, Tempe, you really must say your lessons. Yesterday I let you off, the day before you were ill, but you must do them today."

"Yes, Sister Mary," said Tempe meekly. Tempe spoke with a lisp, too slight to indicate, but just enough to be attractive. Her pronunciation was strikingly like her sister's.

At her sister's instigation Tempe arose and stood by her side, and both heads bent low over the volume, while with unspeakable agonies and violent contortions the child endeavored to extract from the printed page the information that "the cat had the rat."

"Now, honey," said her sister persuasively, "look at it; look at it hard! What is that first letter?"

"H," answered the child promptly, making a desperate guess.

"No," it's not 'h.' It looks a little like a part of an 'h,' but it isn't. What do we have for supper?"

"Cake," said Tempe triumphantly. "But it isn't cake, Sister Mary, is it?"

"No, it isn't cake, Tempe, and you know it isn't!" said Sister Mary severely. "It's 't'—tea; you know."

"I don't have tea for supper. You said I was too little to have tea for supper. I don't know how I could 'member that it was tea."

"Well, it is 't.' Now, remember that. Now, what is the next letter?"

But Tempe remained obstinately silent. The girl glanced up from the book to ascertain the cause of the sudden stillness, saw the petrified stare upon her little sister's face, turned her head in the direction of her gaze, dropped the book and sprang to her feet with an ejaculation of delighted surprise.

"Why, Boyd Peyton!" she exclaimed, utterly forgetful of her little sister. "How glad I am to see you! Welcome to Annandale! What a surprise!"

"Didn't you know I was coming, Miss Mary? I thought that Pink and Willis"—

"Oh, yes, I knew it, of course, but your coming upon us so suddenly, you know, startled me."

"Forgive me," he said contritely. "I would not let the man announce me. I wanted to surprise you."

"It's all right. But come in and sit down. When did you get into town? How long are you going to stay? Why haven't you been to see me before?"

She poured out her questions upon him in a perfect torrent.

"I got here only last night—quite too late to visit you then; so I rode down the first thing this morning. I wanted to come the minute I got into town. The fact is, I believe I thought of seeing you more than I did father or mother or anybody else."

"You believe you did!" with a toss of the head and a suspicious emphasis on the second word.

"I am sure of it," confidently.

"Please, ma'am, Sister Mary," interrupted Tempe, "may I go now?"

"Yes, dear, run and play."

"But my lessons aren't finished," persisted the child, who suddenly developed an unexpected and very unusual thirst for knowledge.

"Oh, that's all right. I'll hear them after awhile. Say good-morning to Mr. Peyton and run along."

"How do you do, Miss Tempe?" said Peyton gravely as the child walked over to him and extended her small brown hand.

"I am very well, sir, an' I hope you are the same."

"Thank you, I am," laughed the young man. "My, how you have grown! You were such a little girl when I saw you last. Now you are quite a young lady, and so dressed up too!"

"Yes, Mr. Peyton, Sister Mary dressed me up this morning. These are my best clothes. I don't see why she did it. It ain't—it isn't, I mean—Sunday, an' I'm not going to a party. An' I had my lessons in the best parlor too. Did you dress me up, Sister Mary, because Mr. Peyton was coming?"

Sister Mary blushed violently, and, to cover her confusion, Peyton slipped a box of sweets he had brought with him into the hand of the child and bade her run and eat them. In fact, he accompanied her to the door and stood looking after her for a few moments with thoughtful consideration before he returned to his seat.

Mary Annan had recovered her composure, in some measure, at least, by a violent effort, but when Peyton sat down again an awful silence ensued.

"You are the same old Boyd Peyton as ever, I see," she said at last to him. "You have not seen me for six months and haven't said half a dozen words to me, and now you are actually dreaming in my presence."

"I have been dreaming about your presence ever since I saw you last, Miss Mary, and it is natural that I should dream on while I'm here. Besides, I was wondering"—

He stopped again.

"Wondering about what?" she asked somewhat impatiently; not a bit of a dreamer, she, at least not yet.

"Wondering if the child spoke the truth."

"Children usually do," answered the girl lightly. "Duplicity comes later."

"At what age?"

"I've not lived long enough to find out, sir," wittily answered the girl, smiling at his confusion. "But you were wondering about Tempe."

"Yes, wondering whether you did dress her up for—whether you were—whether you really"—

He stopped lamely enough and looked gravely away from her. She laughed merrily.

"Whether I expected you? Of course I did. I knew you were coming. I expected you last night, and when you didn't come I was awfully disappointed, but I knew you would be here this morning. I have been anticipating this moment for a long time; hence this

WOULD YOU INVEST

$100 TO MAKE A PROFIT OF $10,000 BESIDES MANY TIMES YOUR MONEY BACK IN DIVIDENDS? IF SO,

BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S

STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $115.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 22 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property, that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 50c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $2.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions, HERBERT S. Good Afternoon.

They say the Daily Ledger now has metropolitan daily heads. Why not!

Why have no collections been made on the taxes of 1895 during the last two years? A balance of $4,330.63 is uncollected.

Even those who urged that the West Quincy end of the Metropoliton boulevard be built, would be satisfied if a start could be made on any part this year. Probably the Mayor will do all he can in this direction.

It is too be regretted that the good old practice of petition is discouraged by the City Council. It is not for the Councilmen to originate so many improvement orders, but they should wait for petitions. Probably, for example, the abutters on Water street do not want a concrete sidewalk with its big assessments. Others would not if they had to pay the bills. Then, again, the city should retrench this year.

GLEE CLUB SUCCESS.

A Grand Concert Given at Wollaston Last Evening.

The Wollaston Glee club gave its first concert of this season Wednesday evening in the Congregational church under the direction of Mr. William Lester Bates, with the assistance of Miss Florence R. Emery, soprano, Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith, organist, and Dr. Florence G. Olney, accompanist. The Glee Club appears to have entered upon its second year most auspiciously.

While the singing last season was very praiseworthy, the improvement since then is very marked, owing to the careful training that Mr. Bates has given in the rehearsals. The club has increased in membership and a new feature is the addition of honorary members.

The audience was large enough to nearly fill the church, and the work of the club was thoroughly appreciated by those present, as was evidenced by the hearty applause of all the selections. The program opened with an organ overture by Mrs. Smith and was followed by "O Saving Victims" by the club.

Miss Emery next sang a group of songs, "Lydia," "Fast Asleep," "A Roundelay," which were received with much enjoyment. "Far Away" by the club followed.

Mr. Peck and Mr. Habn gave "The Crucifix" with great power and expression.

"The Bold Fisherman" by the club received much applause as did also "Off for Phil." "The Image of the Rose" with Mr. Schaffer as soloist was an unusually sweet selection.

The organ and piano Triumphal march by Mrs. Smith and Miss Olney was grand in its execution. Both artists responded to an encore.

Especially fine was the soprano solo "Spring Song" by Miss Emery. It was adapted to the beautiful quality of her voice and the applause of the audience attested their appreciation of the song.

"Sanctus" the last number on the program was admirably sung. Mr. Shaffer with his sweet and sympathetic voice, sustained the solo while the chorus kept to the pitch, and the enunciation was unusually good. The club has for its honorary members: Edward A. Lyman, Charles G. Lee, George Henry Page and Mayor Charles M. Bryant.

GROCERS' BANQUET.

Old Colony Association Dine at the United States.

The Old Colony Grocers held their annual meeting and banquet at United States Hotel, Boston, on Wednesday, Quincy as usual being well represented. President Faunce presided.

At the business meeting in the afternoon these officers were elected:

President, A. T. Faunce of North Abington; vice presidents, Gordon Willis of South Weymouth and Frank S. Chute of Rockland; secretary, J. A. Radcliffe; treasurer, J. W. Nash of Quincy.

At the banquet Representative Horace R. Drinkwater of Braintree spoke on "The Grocer as a citizen." William Gray, vice president of the National Grocers' Association, spoke of the necessity of co-operation among grocers' associations. Other speakers were Representative L. B. Hatch of Whitman and George A. Bond of Boston.

Music was furnished by the Boston Ideal Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar club, and the Schubert male quartette.

The menu was presented in the form of a souvenir, and contained half-tone portraits of President Faunce, Secretary Radcliffe and the former presidents of the association—Frederick Humphrey, 1893-94; Archie McNeil, 1895-96; C. L. Keon, 1897-98; and John W. Nash, 1899-00.

STEAMER ON ROCKS

The Seaboard Almost Bumps Into Lighthouse on Dutch Island

Newport, R. I., Jan. 22.—Steamer Seaboard of the Joy line, while on her regular trip from New York to Boston, put into Dutch Island harbor yesterday owing to thick and heavy weather, and in trying to make an anchorage nearly knocked the little lighthouse on the south end of the island off the rocks. The steamer was so badly damaged that she will probably be a total loss. Her bow lies high out of the water, with her stem less than 30 feet from the lighthouse. As she is well inside of Narragansett bay, her captain and crew decided to remain on board last night.

Captain Kirby went by Whale Rock light on the western entrance and Beavertail on the eastern all right shortly before noon, although the fog at the time was very dense, and the guides were only the bells and the whistles on those points.

He then proceeded under half speed up the bay, but the tide carried him along quite fast, and before he realized it the little iron lighthouse on the south end of Dutch island loomed up out of the fog. Before the ship could be stopped, or her helm put over, she struck on the ledge and pushed far up on the rocks.

To the lookout forward and those in the pilot house it looked as if the speed of the boat would carry her right to the lighthouse building itself, and demolish it. But the friction of the jagged ledges proved too much and the Seaboard finally stopped with the bow scarce 30 feet from the little platform running round the light. The lighthouse, with its keeper and his family, certainly had a narrow escape.

Old Bill Reintroduced

Providence, Jan. 22.—The 10-hour law for employes of certain railways in the state, which was framed and passed at the last session of the legislature, but which was rendered inactive at the close of the session, when an amendment diametrically opposed to the intent of the original resolution was passed, was introduced in the lower branch of the general assembly yesterday. The resolution is in effect practically the same as that famous bill of last year, which was made a law and summarily laid aside. It provides for a work day of 10 in 12 consecutive hours.

tion," she went on audaciously, bowing low before him with mocking reverence. Now your first question is answered, tell me how did you leave Boston?"

"Cold, gloomy, frozen. You never saw anything like it."

"Did you see Miss Metcalfe before you left?"

"Yes; I called at the school, and the old lady sent you her best love."

"She was a sweet old soul," said the girl.

"Yes," he assented heartily. "You remember she let us go out together pretty much whenever we wanted to. It was so nice of her!"

"Oh, well, she looked upon you as my brother almost, of course."

"But you didn't look upon me that way, did you?" he asked anxiously.

"Why, no; not exactly," she answered; "you see, I have only one brother, and Beverly is only thirteen. He is away at school, by the way. Now, you are too old for me to regard you as that kind of a brother."

"Oh, Miss Mary, I don't want you to regard me as any kind of a brother at all. I have come a long way to tell you"—

"Oh, Mr. Boyd, don't!" cried the girl, springing to her feet again. "We had such a good time together in Boston that I counted on having the same good time while you were at home on this leave of absence, and now you are going to spoil it all, I know you are."

"Now please don't say that," he interrupted pleadingly; "I didn't think you would be so annoyed to learn that I"—

"But I don't care for you in that way," she continued impulsively, then suddenly stopped in great confusion, realizing that she had not been asked as yet to care for anybody.

"Well, Miss Mary," said Peyton greatly abashed, "I will respect your wishes, of course. I shall always do so. Everything you may say is law to me." Oh, the false promises of youth and love! "Whatever you wish me to do I will do. That is, I won't say anything now, but I have only a short leave of absence, you know, and before I go back you must at least let me tell you that I—I—well, I will tell you it when I tell you, you see."

His words were entirely confused and lame, but the girl easily comprehended.

"I wish you wouldn't," she said truthfully; "I do not believe it will be any use, but if you must, you must, and we'll put aside the disagreeable subject," with cutting but unconscious frankness, "until we—we have to. Do you know how old I am?"

"You will be eighteen on the 3d of January," he answered promptly.

"Dear me!" she exclaimed. "How did you get it down so pat?"

"Why—I—you see—I—oh, dear, it is so hard not to say it! I like you so much, Miss Mary—I may say that, surely?" deprecatingly.

"Yes, you may go that far, I think," with injudicious concession.

"Well, then, I like you so much that I have tried to learn all about you," triumphantly pressing his advantage.

"From whom have you learned about me?"

[To be continued tomorrow.]

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

FURTHER SEAWARD.

Sewage by High Level System Must be Taken 2000 Feet Further.

The annual report of the Metropolitan Water and Sewer board to the Legislature on Wednesday shows that the danger of pollution of the shores of Houghs Neck by sewage has been greatly reduced, as the State Board of Health have ordered that the outfall shall be 2000 feet or nearly half a mile further seaward than contemplated.

This, the board say, means an added expense of $230,000. The board has thus far approved payments of $5,621,869.52 for north metropolitan system; $3,841,988,11 for the high level sewer through Quincy; $1,899,997.82 for the Neponset valley sewer. All of the works authorized on account of the north metropolitan system have been completed and $522.94 remains, but several old suit for damages remain to be settled. It is estimated that $250,000 may be required for this work.

An additional pumping engine is necessary at the Ward street pumping station in Roxbury, and it is thought other sums not contemplated will run up in all to $405,677.96, while the commissioners think that $1,250,000 will be required to complete the high level sewer. A balance remains in the treasury of $759,607.70 for this purpose, so that an additional sum of $490,000 will be necessary. The board asked to issue bonds of not over $250,000 for the north metropolitan system, and $1,000,000 for the south metropolitan system.

COAL TO GIVE AWAY.

Unity Circle Acknowledge Gift From J. F. Sheppard & Sons.

In these days, when it is so hard even for people of means to secure fuel, Quincy is fortunate to have extremely generous coal dealers. Mrs. John O. Hall, Jr., president of the Unity Circle of King's Daughters, has this week received from the firm of J. F. Sheppard & Sons the generous gift, for the Circle, of ten tons of coal to be distributed among the worthy poor of the City.

The Wollaston Golf club elected these officers at its annual meeting at Young's hotel, Boston, Wednesday.

A vote of thanks was extended to R. R. Freeman, the retiring president.

Reports of officers showed that a material reduction had been made in the indebtedness of the club during the past year and a substantial cash balance on hand.

Ready to Build Warships.

For many months, says the Herald, there has been going on at the Boston navy yard the erection of a series of buildings, which, when completed, will make this yard one of the largest and most important in the United States, and place it in a position where it will be able to construct any kind of a modern battleship, and rank a close second to the New York navy yard.

A BLACK PICTURE

In a Note From Aguinaldo Relating to Conditions in the Philippines

Washington, Jan. 22.—The communication of Aguinaldo for creating a land bank in Manila, with various branches in the Philippine archipelago, upon a capital of $100,000,000, to be furnished by the United States, which has been transmitted to congress by the secretary of war, is regarded as an important contribution to the pending discussion, and it is hoped toward legislation, in spite of the essentially chimerical character of the project itself. No one expects that congress will put up the money or the credit for any such bank as Aguinaldo outlines. Bank institutions, like other devices for reviving the industries of the archipelago, will be of American designing, not of Philippine.

Aguinaldo's communication, however, serves the useful purpose of emphasizing the idea which Governor Taft and the war department authorities cannot sufficiently impress upon congress as to the darkness of economic conditions there. "He paints a very black picture," said an official of the civil government, who is now in Washington, "and yet it is all true. Think of the ravages of war, of 100,000 deaths from cholera, of the rinderpest and the swarms of locusts, besides the depreciation of the currency, and you have materials for a distressing condition. These are what he calls in his introduction 'the mournful heralds of the most horrible of all calamities.' That is his way of saying 'famine.'"

Hypnotism In Murder Case

Cleveland, Jan. 22.—The defense in the trial of Charles Janaski, charged with the murder of Ignatz Wiurkowski, will be that Janaski was under the hypnotic influence of the wife of the murdered man and that the crime was committed upon her suggestion. A medical expert testified that he made Janaski believe that he was talking to Mrs. Wiurkowski in his cell when the woman was not present. Judge Neff told the jury that they could take the testimony for "what it was worth."

Coal Conspiracy Alleged

Toledo, Jan. 22.—After an investigation of a week the common pleas grand jury indicted six officers of the Toledo Coal exchange yesterday on the charge of maintaining an alleged illegal combine to keep up prices for coal. The report says that 40 other persons are unlawfully engaged in the alleged conspiracy. They were arrested and gave bonds.

WHAT IS WORN.

All White Not Always Suitable. Cheap Millinery.

The prices of good millinery are greatly reduced, and it is just the time to invest in an extra winter hat.

Fur toques are much more elaborate than of yore, the only simple shape being known as the "shah," in ermine, astrakhan, moleskin and mink, with its big brush in black and white. This is not a shape that suits every one.

White still continues to be very popular, but for out of door wear it is very trying, for the sunlight on white cloth is not apt to prove flattering to any but dazzling complexions.

At smart "at homes" and receptions, however, there is nothing so dainty as a white gown, provided it is toned down with mink or sable, and is in keeping with its surroundings. A smart gown recently seen at such a function was composed entirely of cream colored crochet lace over crepe de chine in a deep shade of ivory. The bodice seemed to be an inner blouse of accordion crepe de chine with a loose hanging bolero of the lace ornament with a wide waistband of cream panne. The only color introduced was a large bunch of parma violets.

The picture shows a smart costume which can be made up in any shade of cloth. The hat is especially good and the plaited skirt worthy of notice.

STRUCK BLOCK ISLAND

Government Tug Leyden Is a Total Wreck

LIFE SAVERS RESCUED CREW

To Their Prompt Response Thirty-Three Men Owe Their Lives—Operation of Breeches Boy Attended With Considerable Difficulty

Block Island, R. I., Jan. 22.—United States tug Leyden, bound from San Juan P. R., for Newport, ran ashore on the south side of this island at noon yesterday and is a total wreck. She is fast going to pieces. Six of her crew of 33 men left the wrecked tug in a small boat, which was dashed to pieces on the rocks a short distance from the shore. They were rescued by the life savers. The remaining 27 men and Captain Wells were taken ashore in the breeches buoy with great difficulty by the New Shoreham life saving crew. Seaman Leylamb, who was in the small boat when it was demolished, swam until he was rescued, but he is not expected to live as a result of the injuries he received in the heavy sea.

The call for help reached Captain Littlefield at 1 o'clock and he immediately set out with his crew and a complete set of apparatus. A persistent effort was made to cast a line aboard the tug and it was finally successful. At 1 o'clock the end of a hawser 1700 feet long was made fast to the foremast and the breeches buoy was put into operation. One by one the remaining members of the crew were drawn through the surf and shortly after 3 o'clock the last man was hauled safely upon the shore.

Lieutenant Wells, the Leyden's commander, reports that during the night he picked up Shinnecock light and laid off until daylight, when he got Montauk light. In a very short time the fog shut in very thick. He had intended to go two miles south of the light and as his patent log indicated that his position was correct he proceeded.

He shaped his course for Point Judith whistling buoy, all the while expecting to hear the fog whistle at the south light. He was running at the rate of six knots an hour when, with a terrific crash, the Leyden brought up on the rocks. The life savers sighted the vessel in distress very soon after the accident, and to their prompt response the captain and crew owe their lives. A heavy southeast swell was running and the surf dashed high over the wrecked craft. She began to go to pieces in less than half an hour after she struck.

The crew was taken care of last night at the life saving station and this morning they were sent to the mainland.

The Leyden was of the largest type of naval tug, schooner rigged and of 450 tons displacement. She was built in Boston in 1866, of iron, at a cost of about $100,000. She was 137 feet long by 26 feet beam, and drew 9½ feet of water. She had no double bottom and made a speed of 10 knots an hour. Her commanding officer is Lieutenant Wells. Gunner Donnell was her executive officer. The Leyden was kept at the training station at Newport, R. I., before the maneuvers. For several years the Leyden was attached to the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H.

PRESIDENT ELIOT'S REPLY

To a Labor Leader Who Pronounced a "Curse" Upon Him

Buffalo, Jan. 22.—President Eliot of Harvard addressed 1500 high school pupils yesterday and in the course of his remarks said:

"In 1896 I took occasion to say in a public speech that 'A scab is a hero,' and I still see nothing wrong in that remark. I have been a believer in labor unions, but my remark angered one man high in the councils of unionism and he wrote a letter condoling me on my ignorance and winding it up with what he called a curse. It was: 'I wish that you may live long, have hard work, long hours and a hungering stomach while you live.' I believe that long hours of hard work are best for every man. Work is the foundation of civilization and work makes nations as it does individuals. No man can work too hard or hours too long if his health will permit."

President Criticised by Hoar

Washington, Jan. 22.—During the discussion in the senate yesterday, Senator Hoar severely criticized the president for what he called interference with the business of legislation. Senator Hoar in the course of his address said: "It is being continually stated in the newspapers that such and such bills are administration measures, and that a set of senators had called on the president and made arrangements for action on trust bills, the statehood bill and other measures. The time for the president to make up his mind about statutes is after we have passed them, and not before, unless he avails himself of his constitutional privilege to make communication to the entire body by message."

The contest will be open only to amateur reinsmen and an amateur is described in the deed of gift as one who never accepted wages or hire as a trainer or driver.

Judge Gray on Tyranny

Philadelphia, Jan. 22.—The feature of the coal strike commission sessions yesterday was Chairman Gray's rather strong remark in commenting on an incident where District President Fahy of the Miners' union would not grant "permission" during the strike to a contractor to erect a boiler house at a colliery which was necessary to preserve the mine from damage. Judge Gray said he hated tyranny, no matter whether it was practiced by an operator, a miner or any one else.

SECOND BOMBARDMENT

San Carlos Shelled by Three German Warships

TERRIFIC ROAR OF GUNS

Fishermen Report That Village of San Carlos Is Destroyed by Fire—Action Likely to Delay Settlement of the Venezuelan Imbroglio

Maracaibo, Jan. 22.—Three German war vessels, supposed to be the Panther, Vineta and Falke, began sheling the fort of San Carlos at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning. The fort returned the fire. The engagement was still in progress at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

The shelling of San Carlos has created much excitement among the German residents of this port, who have protested against the action of the warships.

The correspondent of The Associated Press, in a rowboat, approached to within three miles of the fort at noon. The roar of the guns was terrific. The Panther appeared to be not more than 500 yards from the fort. Her guns were being fired every minute. The fort could not be seen for the clouds of smoke, but it was plain that the Venezuelan gunners were answering the German fire splendidly and with great rapidity.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon an explosion occurred, apparently in the fort, and a denser cloud of smoke covered part of the ramparts. A number of Indian fishermen were intercepted fleeing from the direction of the fort in their dugout canoes. They reported that the smoke seen was from the burning village of San Carlos, which had been shelled by the German ships and was in flames.

London, Jan. 22.—The news of the second bombardment of Fort San Carlos reached London too late to be printed in the papers of this morning, which nearly all comment upon the "olive branch" which the German chancellor, Count Von Buelow, is holding out to Great Britain in his speeches in the reichstag, and upon the difficulties in which a chancellor, who is obliged to defend his imperial master's acts without being responsible for them, becomes involved.

President Castro's demand that the blockade be raised before the negotiations are opened is regarded here as certain to create further delays, and the belief has been expressed that the second bombardment of the Maracaibo fort will greatly increase the difficulties of the situation.

The Standard, referring to the previous bombardment of Fort San Carlos, says: "It is difficult to maintain a pacific blockade, and in the long run Venezuela must be the chief sufferer from such contretemps. It may be hoped that President Castro will see this and promptly authorize Minister Bowen to agree to the very reasonable preliminary conditions laid down by the aggrieved powers."

Revolutionists Routed

Caracas, Jan. 22.—The revolutionary force under General Riera, which attacked Coro Monday, was obliged to retreat, leaving 30 men killed and 115 wounded behind, as well as many prisoners, a considerable amount of arms and baggage in the hands of the government forces. At 1 o'clock Monday morning the revolutionists under Riera unexpectedly assumed the offensive. The government supposed General Riera was at Sabaneta, but instead he appeared outside Coro with 1000 men, his entire command, and attacked the town from two different directions at the same time. One rebel column succeeded in pushing nearly to the centre of the town. At first the government troops were thrown into confusion, but as soon as they recovered from their surprise they stood up against the rebel attack. After an engagement which lasted 10 hours, the fighting going on in the streets and from the houses of Coro, the revolutionists were obliged to retire. The government lost 10 men killed. The houses in Coro are riddled with bullets.

Means of Supply Cut Off

La Guaira, Jan. 22.—The Dutch cruiser DeRuyter arrived here yesterday. The cruiser has visited the islands of Los Roques, where she found the population, who are charcoal burners trading with La Guaira, and whose sloops have been seized by the blockaders, to be upon the verge of starvation. The cruiser left provisions and water for eight days. The plan to convey the inhabitants from Los Roques to the Dutch island of Curacao is to be pushed forward as rapidly as possible. A schooner will be dispatched from here for that purpose. Los Roques are 120 miles north of La Guaira.

Lenient Toward Venezuela

Paris, Jan. 22.—In the report of the committee on foreign office estimates, which was presented to the chamber of deputies today, satisfaction is expressed that France has abstained from participating in the action of the powers against Venezuela.

Wilcox Gets Thirty Years

Hertford, N. C., Jan. 22.—After being out 20 hours, the jury in the case of James Wilcox, charged with the murder of Ella Cropsey, returned a verdict of murder in the second degree and the defendant was sentenced to the penitentiary for 30 years, the full limit of the law.

Relief

From Headache and Neuralgia

In a Few Minutes After Taking

Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills. Chronic Case Cured.

"I cannot speak to highly of your remedies and I will always tell my friends how much they have done for my husband and myself for sudden attacks of headaches, neuralgia and rheumatic pains. There is nothing equal to Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They are simply splendid and give relief in fifteen or twenty minutes. I used to be subject to attacks of headache, which had become chronic, and I took a course of Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills in connection with the Anti-Pain Pills. The result is I now have very little trouble in that way. My husband has also taken these remedies and praises them very highly. We always have some of both kinds of pills in the house, and do not feel that we could get along without them.—MRS. KATE K. JOHNSON, McClellandsville, Delaware.

There are many reasons why you should take Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, but the best reason is that they will give you almost instant relief from headache or other pain. In cases of chronic headache, when the sufferer knows an attack is coming on, a Pain Pill will usually prevent it entirely. In cases of extreme nervous exhaustion, when the brain is too tired and the body too nervous to rest, an Anti-Pain Pill will sooth the nerves so that sleep may come. They never fail, yet contain no opiates and are non-laxative.

All druggists sell and guarantee Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They are non-laxative; contain no opiates, never sold in bulk, 25 doses, 25 cents. Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Twelve Soldiers In Fort San Carlos Killed by Germans

VILLAGE SUFFERS GREATLY

Owing to Inaccurate Aim of Warships, Whose Shells Fell Short of Intended Mark—Washington Officials See No Reason For Hostile Action

Maracaibo, Jan. 23.—The bombardment of Fort San Carlos by the German cruisers Vineta, Panther and Falke was continued Wednesday afternoon until 6 o'clock. It was resumed yesterday morning at daybreak. The first shells were hurled at the fort at 4 o'clock at long range. At 6 o'clock the Panther, being of light draught, closed in and again became actively engaged. The fort replied. At 8 o'clock the engagement was proceeding as fiercely as on Wednesday.

The Panther left her position, close in to Fort San Carlos, which she took up earlier in the day, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and joined the Falke. The ship was half a mile outside the bar and about five miles from the fort.

At 3 o'clock the correspondent of The Associated Press, in a rowboat, approached one side of the fort, out of range, and from this point witnessed the long range fire of the German cruisers, which was continued from 3 until 6 o'clock. The Vineta and Falke were close together and nearer the fort than the Panther. The first two vessels, at a range of 4½ miles, poured in a continuous rain of shell upon the fort and only stopped firing with the advent of dusk at 6 o'clock. At that hour the German vessels retired seaward, after having made a second ineffectual attempt to land troops in the village of San Carlos, situated at the base of the fort.

At 7 o'clock Wednesday afternoon the correspondent, who was accompanied by a government telegrapher bearing a telegram from President Castro to the commandant of San Carlos, landed on the island and entered the fort. The walls of the fort are terribly battered and there were many evidences of the fierce engagement. Twelve dead Venezuelan soldiers were counted behind the ramparts and 15 other men, seriously wounded, were lying on a low platform. The fort is literally covered with pieces of broken shells. It was seen that a great many of the German shells had not exploded. The magazine had a very narrow escape, two shells having come within an ace of penetrating it. The walls of the fort which face towards the entrance of the lake, suffered particularly and were greatly damaged. It is estimated by the commandant, General Bello, that the German ships fired more than 1600 shells at Fort San Carlos.

Although the damage inflicted upon the fort by the sustained fire of the German cruisers is very great it is not all that could be expected from such a continuous fire from modern high power guns. The village of San Carlos suffered greatly. The aim of the German gunners appears to have been inaccurate, for more than 60 percent of their shells exploded in the village before reaching the fort.

The cannon mounted at San Carlos have not sufficient range to reach the Falke and the Vineta, so the fire from these vessels was not returned, as they kept out of reach of the Venezuelan artillery. The Vineta and Falke are of too great draught to cross the bar. The Panther alone can do this and this explains why the last mentioned cruiser was the only one to come in close to the fort.

Some of the artillery on the fort has been destroyed by the German fire, but there are still five guns that can be used.

General Bello is a soldier of remarkable courage and daring. He has shown great bravery and is in no way intimidated. He will not abandon the fort, but will resist as long as it is possible for him to do so. He swears that on Jan. 17, the occasion of the first bombardment, the Panther fired upon him first without reason and without provocation.

The report that the biggest of the three attacking vessels was either an English or an Italian ship is untrue. It is known that all three vessels are German.

The Venezuelan gunboat Miranda is in Lake Maracaibo. It was doubtless the intention of the Panther, in trying to pass the fort and get into the lake, to capture this vessel. The passage over the bar that leads into the lake is narrow and the fort commands it. General Bello is confident that he can sink the Panther if she attempts to get by with the fire of the five guns that remain to him.

Wednesday night passed without incident and the garrison of Fort San Carlos rested from the fight of the day and made preparations for what the morrow might bring them.

Unfavorable Impression Created

Washington, Jan. 23.—The continued bombardment of Fort San Carlos by the Germans seems quite incomprehensible to the officials of the administration in Washington. They are casting about for a motive for this hostile action, but declare themselves unable to find one unless it be a simple desire of the Germans to make a show of force and recover what little prestige may have been lost in the retreat of the ship Panther when she was compelled to retire after shelling the same fort several days ago. This last act of the Germans, it is suggested, adds a picturesque feature to the whole blockading affair and gives to them an opportunity to demonstrate the effectiveness of Germany's naval strength on the Venezuelan coast. The bombardment has created a decidedly unfavorable impression here and a feeling of genuine regret at a time when negotiations looking to a settlement of the differences between Venezuela and her European claimants seems almost under way.

Paris Hears That Fort Has Fallen

Paris, Jan. 23.—From Caracas the correspondent of The Matin says upon the bombardment of Fort San Carlos that the fort has been totally destroyed and that the limited range of the fort's guns prevented them from being effective against the German cruisers. The Panther has entered Lake Maracaibo, according to The Matin, but other vessels were prevented from following by their greater draught.

The British cruiser Tribune and the Italian cruiser Carlo Alberto are anchored before La Guaira. The latter is in communication with the Vineta and the Gazelle by wireless telegraphy.

Viewed Unfavorably by Italy

Rome, Jan. 23.—The second bombardment of Fort San Carlos by the German warships has produced an unfavorable impression here generally, as the necessity for a recourse to violence is considered to have passed. Government officials are most cautious in expressing opinions of the matter in view of the peculiar situation of Italy, that country being allied with Germany independently of the Venezuelan affairs. Officials, however, say frankly that Italy will continue her efforts looking toward conciliation, as she has no resentment toward Venezuela and is seeking only to effect payment of her claims.

German Wisdom Doubted

London, Jan. 23.—The Daily Telegraph, The Morning Post and The Standard all admit that Germany may have been technically within her rights, but at the same time they doubt her wisdom in risking offense to the United States and in confirming President Castro in his irreconcilable attitude. What still more concerns the English press is the question how the bombardment of San Carlos will affect the Anglo-German agreement.

Official News Lacking

Berlin, Jan. 23.—The foreign office is very impatiently awaiting official news from Maracaibo. The German newspapers express amazement at the fact that the government had not arranged for prompt information, "particularly in view of the nervousness of public opinion in the United States."

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medicine as directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. For sale by all druggists.

Much of Value May Be Saved

Block Island, R. I., Jan. 23.—The entire upper works of United States tug Leyden, which went ashore while on her way from Porto Rico for Newport, have been washed overboard, and all that remains of the craft is the hulk. The hull appears to be practically intact and all the guns, armament, torpedoes and valuable instruments will probably be recovered.

Miles Snubs the Czar

St. Petersburg, Jan. 23.—The United States embassy was notified that the czar desired General Miles' presence at the first court ball of the season, his majesty's indisposition from influenza preventing his reception prior to that function; but the general was unable to wait. General Miles left here today for Berlin.

FIRE IN BOSTON CITY HOSPITAL.

Thirty-Seven Delirious Patients Rescued--Loss of Several Thousand Dollars.

Boston, Jan. 23.—Twenty-seven delirious male patients in Ward E of the city hospital were hastily removed through smoke and flames last night to places of safety, while 600 other patients in the big building, with the flames flickering at the windows, the firemen shouting and the engines puffing and shrieking outside in the yard, fairly quaked with fear.

Fortunately, the firemen were able to keep the fire confined to the ward where it originated, and a double force of nurses going from bed to bed were able to calm the excited sufferers and reassure the timid.

It was one of the male nurses who, in going to the basement, discovered a lively fire burning in the woodwork, and at that time rapidly working its way into the ventilating shaft. He rushed up stairs to the two rooms above constituting the ward, and the alarm was at once sounded.

From all directions came the employes moving at top speed, led by Foreman O'Brien of the ambulance department, and in a jiffy the threatened ward, with its moaning, helpless sick, was filled with nurses. The work of removal was already under way when O'Brien, with the main body of rescuers arrived.

But the fire almost won in the race for life. Before the three or four last patients were taken out the ward was choked with smoke, the flames were shooting up the ventilator shafts, and to further hamper the efforts of the men, the electric wires which ran up the shaft were burned off, leaving the ward in darkness. O'Brien rushed back and lighted the gas, so that the rest were removed, although badly affected by the smoke, to a place of safety.

The work of saving life happily ended that of staying the flames began. By this time the fire department arrived and took hold of the fire in the usual professional style, and after two hours of hard work the last vestige was extinguished. The property damage will amount to several thousand dollars.

For Women Factory Inspectors

Providence, Jan. 23.—A resolution was introduced in the lower branch of the general assembly yesterday providing for the creation of a department of labor and the consolidation of the officers of commissioner of industrial statistics and factory inspector. The appointment of a woman as assistant factory inspector, the object being to further the work already begun of minimizing the evil of employing child labor in some of the factories and mills, is also provided for.

Missing Steamers Cause Anxiety

Boston, Jan. 23.—Anxiety, in view of the heavy weather on the north Atlantic, is being felt here for some of the foreign steamers now on their way here with coal from British ports. Steamer Farnham left the Tyne Dec. 21, steamer Clematic sailed from Newcastle Dec. 30 and the Hazelmoor sailed from Shields the same day. The Exmoor left Cardiff Jan. 1, the Morocco left Hull Jan. 2, and six other steamers left coal ports on Jan. 3, none of which have yet been sighted.

Accidentally Shot Sister

Brookline, Mass., Jan. 23.—By the careless handling of a revolver George Brann, 14 years old, shot his sister Helen, aged 12, yesterday, the ball entering the left side of her mouth, knocking out a tooth and lodging in the right side of the neck. George, taking the revolver from his father's drawer loaded it and began fooling with it, when, just as his sister passed him, it was discharged. The girl was taken to a hospital.

A Case of Suicide

Wakefield, Mass., Jan. 23.—It is believed that despondency led Stratford J. Ryland of Charlestown, and receiving teller of the Boston Elevated road to commit suicide some time last night in the solitude of his summer home in this town. His body was discovered sitting in a chair in the library. On the floor was a 32-calibre revolver, while in the left breast was one bullet wound that told the story of his death.

Planning Shipping Combination

Boston, Jan. 23.—In connection with a plan for a combination of interests by vessel owners, a committee is making investigations to ascertain the feasibility of such a project and an appraiser acting under the direction of the committee has been viewing a number of vessels in order that some figures may be available upon which to base financial estimates.

Little Fellow Saved From Death

Brattleboro, Vt., Jan. 23.—L. D. Taylor snatched Willie Cudworth, 4 years old, from a canal yesterday just as the boy was about to roll under the ice in the mill pond. The boy had coasted into the canal, and when taken out was unconscious, but Taylor rolled him in the snow and the men at a near by factory completed the work of resuscitation.

Soft Coal Down

Boston, Jan. 23.—The price of soft coal was reduced from $10 to $9 a ton in Boston yesterday, thus making good the tentative promise of President Hamlin of the Metropolitan company that the public would ultimately benefit by the rebate of duty on foreign coal. No signs of a reduction on anthracite coal are apparent.

Not Much Hope For Seaboard

Fort Greble, R. I., Jan. 23.—During yesterday 175 tons of cargo was salvaged from the stranded steamer Seaboard and shipped to Boston, its destination. The glucose, starch and tapioca in the fore part of the hull have swelled so as to raise the deck. The steamer's back is bent and it may be broken.

Talked of Coal Shortage

Philadelphia, Jan. 23.—The question of who is responsible for the apparent shortage in the supply of anthracite coal was the subject of considerable debate yesterday by the attorneys representing the parties before the strike commission. It was testified to that the miners are not obeying President Mitchell's request to make extra efforts to produce more coal to relieve the situation. C. S. Darrow, for the miners, replied that he would show that it was the operators and not the men who were responsible for the shortage in the production. "If I don't," he said, "I will ask the commission to find against us."

Government Employes Caught

Washington, Jan. 23.—The treasury department has received a letter from Customs Collector Cruzen at San Juan, P. R., in regard to the indictment of a number of naval and army officers and other officials charged with bringing into Porto Rico cigars and liquors on government vessels without reporting or paying duty on the same. The collector says in effect that this violation of the law has been going on ever since the American occupation.

What Was Already Known

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 23.—At the inquest in the Gonzales tragedy last night the verdict was a plain statement that "The deceased, N. G. Gonzales, came to his death from a gunshot wound inflicted by the hand of James H. Tillman on Jan. 15, 1903."

Good Afternoon.

A writer of anagrams finds that William J. Bryan can be converted into a "brainy jaw mill."

The terms of the Cuban treaty will long stand as a monument to the diplomacy of the present administration.

The President is giving the country a magnificent illustration of genuine energy in the White House. He has convinced Congress of the necessity of anti-trust legislation and the result promises to be prompt relief from the evils attending the existence of certain trusts.

There is one lady in Quincy who is especially interested in our young men and women, especially former Coddington pupils. She is eager to note their success in life, and is pleased that so many have distinguished themselves and prospered in many ways. Coddington boys know that Miss Dearborn, who has been the principal of the school since 1876 is watching them, even though they were graduated five, ten or twenty years ago, and thus her influence and success as a teacher. A case at hand is the achievement of Walter E. Loud, one of her boys. Miss Dearborn was one of the most delighted in the large audience at the concert.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ It is one of the worst results of abject poverty that it starves ideals.—Zion's Herald.

☞ High school mathematics are in dispute in many places, It will be a sad day for America when mathematics fail to hold a leading place in high schools.—Journal of Education.

☞ In the game of "Jerusalem" that is being played at Haverhill, the Socialist mayor-elect, Mr. Flanders, seems to find it difficult to drop squarely into the mayoralty chair—Boston Transcript.

☞ Talk about trusts! There is more danger to free institutions in the buying of votes than in all the trade monopolies imaginable. Keep the ballot box and the legislative halls pure, and means will be found to do away with all the demonstrable evils of the trusts.—New York Evening Post.

☞ In brief, the congress has yielded to popular clamor, just as it did when there was a stormy demand for the abolition of the army canteen. Its action may serve this good purpose, that it will prove the error of the view that if there were no duty imposed on any coal there would never be a shortage of the supply in this country.—Albany Journal.

☞ The motorman and the conductor of the Pittsfield electric that killed Secret Service Officer Craig and wounded the President, got off very easy in the Berkshire court. The conductor went free and the motorman was sent to the House of Correction for six months and fined $500. If for such gross carelessness the penalty is to be so light, what effect will the sentence have on other electric car men who will observe the precedent? The termination of this affair was due to an agreement between council, the accused withdrawing their pleas of not guilty, and pleading to manslaughter. They may consider themselves as very lucky.—Lynn Item.

THE LEAGUE GAMES.

Granite City Club Led Braintree Club Last Night.

The Granite City and Braintree clubs met in the Norfolk County League Thursday evening at the rooms of the latter club, and as a result Granite City captured five points and Braintree two. A tie on one of the whist games leaves one point in dispute.

The Granite City won one game each at billiards, pool and whist and two points on bowling.

The alleys at Braintree are not of the best owing to a chimney which comes into one of them and the visitors did well to win out.

At billiards the two teams split even, each winning one game. The first game was won by Sears of the Granite City by a score of 75 to 56, and the second by Walker of Braintree, who defeated McGrath by a score of 75 to 58.

At pool B. Tenney defeated McDonnell of Granite City by a score of 50 to 40. In the second game, Woods of the Granite City defeated Walker 50 to 49.

At whist the Granite City won the first game by a score of 7 to 5, and the second game resulted in a tie, each team scoring 3 points.

The greatest interest perhaps was in the bowling. Braintree won the first string by nineteen pins. Granite City captured the second string by 25 points which gave them a lead of six points. Braintree fell down on the third string, Granite City winning out by 29 points, making the grand totals 1,189 for Granite City, and 1,154 for Braintree.

The highest single string was 96, which was bowled by Cuff of Braintree. Johnson of Granite City was a good second with 90.

Nightingale of Granite City was low man or single strings with 55. On three string totals Hill of Granite City led the bunch with 257, his average coming within one pin of being 86. Cuff of Braintree came second on three string totals with 253, an average of a little over 84.

Weakness for Perfume.

Someone who is evidently fond of perfume of the finest quality has been making a round of the drug stores in Quincy, and from the latest returns, if it is the same party who visited all of the stores, she, for it was evidently a woman, must have perfume enough on hand to make her smell sweet for several years. C. C. Hearn lost two one pound bottles, E. J. Murphy two one pound bottles and the Music Hall pharmacy a pound bottle. The perfume taken in every case was what is known as Roger & Gallett.

BARNABAS CLARKE.

Passes Away Suddenly at His Home in Dorchester.

Barnabas Clarke, a former well known resident of Quincy and a large real estate owner in this city, died at his home in Dorchester this morning aged 60 years. Mr. Clarke had not been in good health for some time, but it is only two weeks that he has been confined to his home and the end came suddenly.

Mr. Clarke came to Quincy in 1868, and worked first in the quarry of Frederick & Fields, and later for Henry Barker & Sons. He learned the trade of stone cutting at Charles R. Mitchell's and continued in the business here and Dix Island, Me., until 1874, when he started in the liquor business in Boston.

He had an attachment for Quincy, and during his life invested his money here in real estate and the development of the granite industries. He was one of the incorporators of the Quincy Quarry Railroad Company, which was opened for business September 8, 1894, and completed in July, 1895, also one of the directors of the Lyons Granite Co.

Mr. Clarke was one of the incorporators and directors of the Prout Brothers Granite Company, of which he was president and treasurer. At one time he was treasurer and a director of the Quincy Quarry Railroad Company. The first real estate boom was created here, when Mr. Clarke purchased of George W. Morton, who represented the Safford estate, the land now embraced in what is known as Smith street, Prospect Hill street and Clarke avenue, and he has from time to time kept adding to his real estate investments until he owned property in every section of the city, and was one of the city's heavy tax-payers.

He leaves a widow and daughter.

Baggage Transfer.

What will prove a great accommodation to the passengers on the Boston & Maine system is the company's new plan of checking baggage from the North to the South station. Heretofore this could be done only on a through ticket, but, under the present arrangement, a like privilege goes with a local, mileage or any other form. For instance, a passenger leaving Malden can, on application to the baggage agent, and by paying 25 cents for each piece, and have his effects transferred to the South station without further trouble. The charge on baby carriages and bicycles is 50 cents for each piece. This arrangement will prove of particular advantage to the large number of summer tourists who go from points on the Boston & Maine to the numerous resorts on the South Shore.

WALTER E. LOUD CO.

Give a Delightful Concert in the Teachers' Course.

An audience that completely filled the High School hall last evening, listened to a most pleasing concert given by Mr. Walter E. Loud and his fellow musicians.

The concert opened with the overture "Der Freischutz," by Weber, played by Mr. Loud, violin; Mr. E. J. Archiller, viola; Mr. William A. Hochheim, violin; Mr. Frederick Blair, 'cello; and Mr. John Hermann Loud, piano. Two numbers were given by the string quartette, each consisting of two pieces. Mr. Loud's own composition for four strings, an allegretto, was received with great favor.

The vocal part of the evening's entertainment was furnished by Mr. William W. Walker, baritone. He sang the Rhine Wine song, by Reis, and a group of three national songs. His renderings of the stirring Scotch border ballad, by Cowen, was most effective.

Mr. Blair played two 'cello solos, of which the fantastic and dainty Elfintanz was perhaps the favorite, though both were good.

Mr. Loud himself played a group of three selections, (a) Sarabande (violin alone) by Bach; (b) Canzonetta by Godard; (c) Hungarian Dance by Brahms.

The two last selections well showed the versatility of the player. Mr. Loud was recalled and in response to the encore played "The Holy City."

The concert closed with "Three Scotch Scenes," played by the quartette and pianist. This selection was reminiscent of the heather and the bagpipes and made a popular and altogether satisfactory ending to what was universally spoken of as a grand good entertainment.

Mr. Loud's concert tours in Canada and the South are always successful, and he is not heard every year in his own city. When he does play here he is always sure of a large audience and he never fails to win enthusiastic applause.

Mr. John Hermann Loud, as pianist, met every requirements, in a number of difficult selections, and showed himself to be an accompanist of rare ability. He is organist of the Harvard Street church, Brookline, and many Quincy people remember with pleasure recitals which he once gave on the Christ church organ.

☞Invitations are out for a masquerade by the pupils of Prof. Kaplan to be held Feb. 17.

Big Whist Party.

One of the largest whist parties ever held in I. O. O. F. hall was that of Thursday evening when 22 tables were in play. The prizes for women were awarded as follows: Parlor table, Mrs. John R. Richards; picture, Mrs. F. F. Prescott; and jardiniere, Mrs. E. J. Sandberg. For men—Punch bowl, Mark Gordon (who by the way is a Rebekah and a member of Naomi lodge of Worcester;) tumblers, Mrs. Hattie A. Newcomb; candelabrum, Mrs. Geo. Rand.

To Pool Coal Fleet.

Now Thomas W. Lawson plans to form a coastwise shipping combine which shall control the local coal-carrying trade. He is already a part owner in the big seven-master Thomas W. Lawson, engaged in the coal trade, and with the vessels known as the Crowley fleet as a nucleus he expects to gather in a large number of others and organize a big stock company.

—The Boston common council went on record Thursday evening in favor of a municipal coal yard.

AGAIN EXHAUSTED.

A Rush This Morning Soon Took All the Mayor's Coal.

City Messenger Tirrell did a rushing business in the coal line this morning. He commenced taking orders for coal Thursday and during the day about 500 bags were sold. This morning, however, there was a rush for orders, and at 9 o'clock the main corridor was packed with people in waiting. Only two bags were sold to each customer and at 10 o'clock 500 orders had been sold. As there were only 1000 bags in the lot received, no more orders could be taken. People kept coming, however, all the morning, and there were many that had to be turned way dissappointed. Probably a larger part of the orders will be delivered before night.

Forgot the Program.

T. L. Williams, the jeweller, became pretty well worked up Thursday afternoon, as it was thought at one time his young son had been lost. The little fellow attends the Coddington school and Thursday afternoon he was supposed to come to Mr. Williams' store after school closed. He did not, however, and as four o'clock came and passed, Mr. Williams became worried. A search was immediately inaugurated and City Square and even the brooks were thoroughly searched. Officer Murray learned that the little fellow had been seen going toward his home on Newcomb place after school and when the officer drove down there he found him there all right.

Victors to Meet.

A series of three bowling games in candle pins will be bowled between the crack Metropolitan team of Brockton and the team of the Granite street alleys. As neither team has yet been defeated this year some great bowling may be expected. The first game in series will be bowled tonight at the alleys on Granite street.

OLD OXFORD'S POVERTY

Famous University Said to Be In Dire Need of Funds.

GENERALLY SUPPOSED TO BE RICH

Correspondent Says Holders of Rhodes Scholarships Will Marvel at Lack of Equipment—Great English Seat of Learning Declared to Be Too Poor to Keep Abreast of the Times.

When Cecil Rhodes decided to found scholarships for American, German and colonial students at Oxford, he could not have been well informed as to the needs and the financial condition of the historic university, says the London correspondent of the New York Press. Had he been so, he probably would have made still another bequest to provide his beloved alma mater with modern equipments, the lack of which is daily becoming a greater embarrassment and handicap to the famous institution. For, although Oxford has the name of being one of the richest universities in the world, it actually is too poor to afford a large enough staff, or even sufficient books and accommodation to enable it to keep abreast of other institutions of its class, to say nothing of outranking them.

It is now being said openly in England that when the American holders of the Rhodes scholarships reach Oxford they are likely to be much less impressed with the beauty, age and stateliness of the classic university than by its lack of proper equipment. Simply because there is no money to provide them the celebrated Bodleian library at Oxford is practically without foreign works on philosophy or on political economy.

Its stock of books on modern history is so comparatively scant that it is no exaggeration to say that the scientific study of European history cannot now be carried on at Oxford. For the same reason there is no engineering department. There is no equipment at all for the study of mineralogy, a subject which, it seems likely, the holders of the Rhodes scholarships will be especially anxious to pursue. There is only one professor to teach geology, there is no mechanical laboratory, while the arrangements for the studies of electricity and magnetism were described by one who knows Oxford well as "nothing but a brilliant professor lecturing in a tin shed with scarcely any apparatus and on a scanty income."

The Assyrian language is now taught in almost every important American and German university, but it cannot be studied at Oxford, and neither can rabbinical Hebrew, a tongue with an important bearing on the study of the Old and New Testaments. Though there are now millions of Buddhists under the British flag, Pali, the sacred language of that faith, is not dealt with in the empire's most famous institution of learning.

Oxford is about the last place in the world which would strike the visitor as to the slightest extent in need of funds. Its buildings are impressive, and the ceremonials connected with them are stately. The great halls are decorated richly, and there is a general air of prosperity, if not luxury. The university has the reputation of being immensely wealthy, and so it is; but today its expenses almost equal its income. The different colleges all are well to do, but each one of them spends nearly all its income on its own needs and sets only a small percentage aside for the use of the university as a whole.

In Oxford's present state every additional student means an extra strain upon the university's exchequer. And Mr. Rhodes' scholarships will make an addition of one-seventeenth to the number of undergraduates.

Oxford is so poor today because she is supposed to be so rich. Huge gifts to colleges are not so common in England as they are in America, but there is no lack of rich men who would loosen their purse strings for Oxford's benefit quickly if they could be made to understand that the famous university is really hard up.

Defensive Submarines.

The Swedish admiralty, according to the Stockholm Dagbladet, contemplates utilizing submarines as an important part of the Swedish system of coast defense. A specially appointed committee has been for months at work upon a plan, which has now been completed and laid before the government. Immediately the scheme has been sanctioned work is to be begun and to be pushed vigorously forward until completed.

New Railway Car.

A new type of railway carriage was inspected at Newcastle, England, the other day. The dusty, cushioned, padded seats have been replaced by light cane armchairs, comfortably cushioned, four each side, easily removable and permitting of speedy and thorough cleaning of the compartments. The carriages will be put into three trains between Newcastle and Carlisle.

A New Army Fodder.

Germans have a new fodder for horses and cattle which Americans are favorably considering for army horses, says the London Express. It consists of nut husks, nutshells, molasses and "steam dried blood." The saving effected is 4 pence a day an animal.

New Brooches.

Odd and brassy looking brooches appear in the new French ware known as La Vert.

WOULD YOU INVEST
BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S
STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $125.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 22 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 50c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $2.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions. HERBERT S. FADS AND FASHIONS.

The Craze For Ornamentation—Evening Jewelry.

The craze for ornamentation of every description is getting daily more marked. A fancy for beautiful designs in precious stones is a very praiseworthy one, but if you would be well dressed avoid tawdry rubbish of every description.

Necklaces of jet are a fad with black gowns, and dog collars and pearls are considered very chic.

Solid ropes of pearls twisted together are used as girdles for priceless lace gowns by the favored few who can spend all they desire on dress.

The squirrel set—stole, hat and muff—though rather common, is undeniably smart and very becoming to a fresh young skin, though this fur should never be worn by a pale or fagged out woman.

GRAY SQUIRREL COAT.

Many hats still have most of their trimming on the underside of the brim, but milliners promise a complete change and predict the fall of the single drooping feather. In millinery decorations as well as in every other department of dress oddity is the keynote.

The illustration shows a fancy effect in squirrel fur. These coats are at present all the rage.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

CANAL TREATY SIGNED

United States and Columbia Reach an Agreement

TERMS NOT MADE PUBLIC

Expected to Meet Approval of Senate at Present Session—Principal Obstacle Up to the Present Has Been of a Financial Nature

Washington, Jan. 23.—The treaty between the United States and Colombia for the construction of the Panama canal by the United States was signed yesterday in this city.

No details of the signature of the treaty were obtainable, but at the presidential reception at the White House last night the news that the treaty between the countries at last was an accomplished fact leaked out and later was confirmed authoritatively on inquiry in official quarters.

It had been intended not to make the signature of the canal treaty public until today, but the news apparently was too good for some of the friends of the canal to keep after the long delay and suspense, and it transpired, as stated, at the president's official reception.

The canal treaty was signed at Secretary Hay's house yesterday afternoon, Mr. Hay acting for the United States and Dr. Herran, the charge d'affaires of Colombia, who had been specially given full powers to negotiate the treaty, signing in behalf of Colombia.

The treaty will have to go to the senate for ratification and it is believed it will be transmitted to that body today. Details of the agreement will not be made public in advance of transmission of the treaty to the senate. It is understood that Secretary Hay from time to time consulted leading members of the senate on the essential features of the treaty he was negotiating, so that it is believed it will meet the approval of the senate at the present session.

Fears had been entertained until this week that Colombia might not be willing to accede to the wishes of the United States in the matter and that recourse to the Nicaraguan canal project might be forced on the government of the United States. But this week events took a more favorable turn and Colombia transmitted instructions and authority to Dr. Herran, its representative in the United States, that made possible a conclusion of the long pending negotiations.

The principal obstacle for some time to the conclusion of the treaty, it is understood, has been the price that the United States was to pay in the shape of a cash payment and by way of annual rental for the strip of territory along each side of the canal right of way. It is not learned what was the price finally agreed on. Some time ago there was a hitch over the question of the extent to which control by the United States over this strip of land should go, Colombia objecting on the ground that the provisions requested in the treaty by the United States would mean a relinquishment of sovereignty by Colombia over part of her territory, but this matter was amicably adjusted, as was a difference as to the life time of the lease of the strip of land in question, the final result being a practical cessation in perpetuity of the strip to the United States for canal purposes and incidental police control and protection of the canal right of way.

Baseball War Ends With Love Feast

Cincinnati, Jan. 23.—The National Baseball league yesterday concluded its sessions of four days and nights. The closing day was as harmonious as the previous three were discordant. When the meeting opened two of the clubs had injunctions hanging over them and the representatives of other clubs came to the meeting with their war paint on. Before the members separated they had a love feast, in which all participated.

Boy and Girl Shot by Duelists

New York, Jan. 23.—Two unknown men fought a duel in sight of the Oak street police station last night, and both being bad shots escaped unscratched. There were two victims of their bullets, however, a boy and a girl. The boy was shot in the body and perhaps fatally wounded. The girl received a wound in the leg. The men emptied their revolvers and escaped.

Seeking Aid to Statehood

Santa Fe, N. M., Jan. 23.—Both houses of the legislative assembly of New Mexico yesterday passed a memorial to the United States senate asking that the omnibus bill now pending be passed. A similar memorial was addressed to legislatures of 12 western states praying those legislatures to memorialize congress on behalf of the passage of the omnibus bill.

Nova Scotia Miners Strike

Glace Bay, N. S., Jan. 23.—Because the manager refused to accede to the demand for more pay for working four shifts a day, the men employed at the Port Morien coal mine quit work yesterday. Only a few non-union men are now working about the pit. The strike was ordered by the Provincial Workmen's association.

Boy Convicted of Manslaughter

New York, Jan. 23.—Pietro Squazza, 11 years old, who has been on trial for manslaughter for killing Ambrose Kerrigan, aged 3, was convicted of manslaughter in the second degree yesterday. Sentence was deferred until next Tuesday. An investigation of the case will be made in the meantime.

VON HOLLEBEN EXPLAINS

That Abrupt Departure From Washington Was Due to Sickness

Paris, Jan. 23.—Dr. Von Holleben, the retiring German ambassador to the United States, who arrived here from Cherbourg, is still suffering from his recent illness. He will go in a few days to the Riveria. The ambassador says.

"My departure from Washington was quite devoid of significance, except that my government had granted me leave of absence on account of ill health. I regret that I was too ill at the time of leaving to call personally on President Roosevelt and Secretary Hay. As is well known, I have the highest regard and admiration for the president and I shall take an early occasion to assure him of my regret at my inability to see him before leaving."

Fear Wolcott Men

Denver, Jan. 23.—The capitol had a warlike aspect yesterday owing to the presence of armed men in the house chamber and of a strong guard of policemen in plain clothes at all entrances to the senate chamber.

An unfounded report that, under orders from Governor Peabody, the national guard had taken possession of the state house, was due probably to the fact that house Sergeant-at-Arms Plummer posted 30 guards in and about the house chamber to resist an anticipated attempt of the supporters of Edward O. Wolcott, Republican candidate for senator, to capture the hall. On every desk was a pair of revolvers, and in the corners stood many shotguns. These guards are commanded by Sherman Bell, formerly of the Rough Riders, and James H. Clark.

President's Hand Hurt

Washington, Jan. 23.—A feature of the president's reception last night that caused some inquiry was the fact that the president extended his left hand to his guests in greeting them. It was learned that he had hurt his right hand in single stick exercise with General Wood and that it had been deemed prudent for him not to undertake to aggravate the injury by using the injured arm in shaking hands with the large number of persons present. The injury to the president's hand is not at all serious.

Anti-Smoot Agitation

Salt Lake, Jan. 23.—The Ministerial association of Salt Lake City, which has been conducting a systematic fight against the election of Apostle Reed Smoot to the United States senate, has sent a telegraph protest to Senator Burrows, chairman of the senate committee of privileges and elections, against the seating of Senator-elect Smoot, and has notified him that a committee from the association will appear before the senate committee at the proper time to show cause for Smoot's exclusion.

Insurance of Children

Boston, Jan. 23.—An order was passed by the house yesterday requesting the insurance commissioner to inform the legislature as to the extent of the child insurance business in this state. The order asks as to the number of children under 5 years of age whose lives are insured and the average amount of the policies, and as to the number of children over 5 and under 10 years of age and the average amount of the policies.

Big Gun Torn to Pieces

Sandy Hook, N. J., Jan. 23.—During a test with shells loaded with high explosives, a 12-inch gun exploded yesterday at the experimental grounds here. No one was hurt, as such an accident was anticipated and every one was under cover. The gun destroyed was valued at $40,000. The heavy breechblock was found half a mile away, while great fragments were thrown in every direction.

Held For Further Hearing

Boston, Jan. 23.—John E. Fulenwider who was arrested by Deputy United States Marshal Waters as a fugitive from justice from Washington, D. C., was held in $500 for further hearing by U. S. Commissioner Fiske. Fulenwider is charged with having embezzled funds to the amount of $300 from the Third Division Benefit association, of which he was secretary and treasurer.

SEEKING A SETTLEMENT

Business Men Take a Hand In Lynn Labor Row

ARBITRATION PROPOSITION

Will Be Considered by Those Whose Interests Are Involved—Court Will Appoint an Auditor to Hear Facts In Injunction Petition

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 23.—The first move toward the settlement by arbitration of the strike in the shoe trade in this city was made yesterday afternoon by the special committee of the Lynn Board of Trade. As the controversy is not between employer and employe, but between two rival labor organizations, the state board, under the law, cannot offer its services in the matter.

The business men of Lynn were therefore obliged to step forward and yesterday afternoon the Board of Trade committee, Mayor Eastham and several officials of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union had a conference.

It was found that I. B. Armstrong, master workman of the Knights of Labor cutters, who have struck in an effort to annihilate the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, had consented to meet the committee, and it was at once decided to hold a meeting today and see if it is not possible to find some common basis of settlement.

While the efforts of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union to get their new cutters to and from the factories was attended by some excitement yesterday, there was a noticeable absence of the bitterness of the past two days. Still the men did not appear in the streets without police protection and several were yelled at derisively.

The Boot and Shoe Workers succeeded in putting a few more cutters in the places of the strikers, but the officials have not yet carried out in full their agreement with the manufacturers to replace all the vacancies. The court proceedings in Boston were also a feature yesterday, and Judge Richardson of the superior court gave both sides an extended hearing on the question of enjoining the strikers from interfering with the new men. But instead of complying with the urgent request of the manufacturers, Judge Richardson decided to turn the whole matter over to an auditor and appointed former Judge Wardwell of Peabody to hear the case. This appeared like a partial victory for the Knights of Labor, as it puts off legal proceedings.

Later in the day Judge Wardwell decided not to accept the appointment and some one else will have to be selected by the court.

Miners Interested In Lynn Strike

Indianapolis, Jan. 23.—The miners' convention yesterday adopted resolutions regretting to learn that certain parties at Lynn, Mass, were seeking to destroy the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and pledging the sympathy and support of the United Mine Workers to the Boot and Shoe Workers' union under those circumstances. The resolutions declared that at previous conventions the mine workers had indorsed the union stamp of the Boot and Shoe Workers' organization and assured that union that they would continue to purchase boots and shoes bearing the stamp of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and would recognize no other union label on shoes.

How Federation of Labor Stands

Washington, Jan. 23.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor last night took up the labor controversy in the shoe trade of Lynn and sent the following telegram to John F. Tobin, Boston: "Common sense as well as the best interests of labor demand that a trade union shall have jurisdiction in the various branches of that trade. This holds good with equal force in the case of cutters and other branches of the Boot and Shoe trade as in a branch of any other trade. The American Federation of Labor will support to the fullest extent the Boot and Shoe Workers' union in enforcing this position."

Armenians at Amesbury

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 23.—Eleven strike breakers arrived in town yesterday to take the places of the striking carriage workers, among the number being eight of the 33 Armenians who were brought here last week, but gave up their jobs and left town on Sunday. These men were induced to return by two of the manufacturers and will take their former places in the different factories. There were 200 or 300 strikers at the station when the train came in and they hissed and jeered the newcomers, but attempted no violence.

Strikers Willing to Arbitrate

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 23.—There is no change in the situation of the strike of the motormen and conductors of the Connecticut Railway and Lighting company. Last night three clergymen made a proposition to the strikers that the difficulty be settled by arbitration. They voted to accept the plan and said they would abide by the decision of the arbitration committee. The officials of the railway company have not yet been approached in regard to the matter.

Severe Weather In Newfoundland

St. Johns, Jan. 23.—Newfoundland is experiencing a very severe snowstorm. All traffic on the railroad is impeded. Steamers are also greatly delayed and gales are sweeping the coast. The northern seaboard is blocked by Arctic ice.

PURE BLOOD

Necessary to Life. Vinol Makes it.

POOR BLOOD CAUSES ERUPTIONS AND WEAKNESS.

Vinol Makes Pure, Rich, Red Blood.

BECAUSE WE KNOWN THIS WE GUARANTEE ITS ACTION.

Impoverished blood is a sure sign of internal disorders. We see every day too many people whose faces plainly show that there is something radically wrong.

We want all of our fellow-citizens to know of our splendid blood purifier and blood maker.

We refer to Vinol.

Vinol, as we have before stated, is a purely scientific preparation.

Vinol owes its virtue to the fact that it contains in a highly concentraced state the active curative principles, taken from the livers of live cods—the same elements that formerly were found in cod-liver oil, and which made it famous.

Vinol does not contain the grease or fat that characterized cod-liver oil and made it in many cases worthless.

Vinol acts upon every one of the great vital organs, and by invigorating and giving them strength, enables them to properly perform their functions.

Vinol's effect on the stomach is marvelous. It tones up this, the greatest of the organs of the body, and enables it to obtain from the food which is taken into it the necessary elements to create flesh and muscle tissue, bone structure and pure, rich, red blood.

We are in receipt of a letter from a Savation Army woman which reads as follows:

"I took Vinol after a bad attack of grippe, and so much good did it do me that I persuaded my sister to take it. She was all tired out. Had no appetite and her blood was very poor. It did her as much good as it did me."—BETSY HABERSHAW, 718 River St., Fall River, Mass.

Won't you please come in and see us? We are always glad to extol the merits of Vinol.

We will give you back your money if you don't find Vinol will do all we claim it will. Could any one do more for you?

PURE BLOOD

Necessary to Life. Vinol Makes it.

POOR BLOOD CAUSES ERUPTIONS AND WEAKNESS.

Vinol Makes Pure, Rich, Red Blood.

BECAUSE WE KNOWN THIS WE GUARANTEE ITS ACTION.

Impoverished blood is a sure sign of internal disorders. We see every day too many people whose faces plainly show that there is something radically wrong.

We want all of our fellow-citizens to know of our splendid blood purifier and blood maker.

We refer to Vinol.

Vinol, as we have before stated, is a purely scientific preparation.

Vinol owes its virtue to the fact that it contains in a highly concentraced state the active curative principles, taken from the livers of live cods—the same elements that formerly were found in cod-liver oil, and which made it famous.

Vinol does not contain the grease or fat that characterized cod-liver oil and made it in many cases worthless.

Vinol acts upon every one of the great vital organs, and by invigorating and giving them strength, enables them to properly perform their functions.

Vinol's effect on the stomach is marvelous. It tones up this, the greatest of the organs of the body, and enables it to obtain from the food which is taken into it the necessary elements to create flesh and muscle tissue, bone structure and pure, rich, red blood.

We are in receipt of a letter from a Savation Army woman which reads as follows:

"I took Vinol after a bad attack of grippe, and so much good did it do me that I persuaded my sister to take it. She was all tired out. Had no appetite and her blood was very poor. It did her as much good as it did me."—BETSY HABERSHAW, 718 River St., Fall River, Mass.

Won't you please come in and see us? We are always glad to extol the merits of Vinol.

We will give you back your money if you don't find Vinol will do all we claim it will. Could any one do more for you?

EDWARD J. MURPHY, DRUGGIST.

The Social Realm.

One small life in God's great p'an,
How futile it seems as the ages roll,
Do what it may, or strive how it can,
To alter the sweep of the infinite whole!
A single stitch in an endless web,
A drop in the ocean's flow and ebb!
But the pattern is rent where the stitch is lost,
Or marred where the tangled threads have crossed;
And each life that fails of its true intent
Mars the perfect plan that its Maker meant.

CITY FINANCES.

Cost of $2,000 per Day to Run the City.

About $250,000.00 of Uncollected Taxes.

Total Receipts and Expenditures of City Treasurer Over a Million.

The Dec. 31 statement of City Treasurer Gray and City Auditor Sidelinger completing the fiscal year of the city for 1902 has just been issued.

The Treasurer reports receipts of $1,095,457.34 for the year; and $11,008.-25 cash on hand at the end of the year.

The actual cash expenditures of the year are shown better by the City Auditor's statement. He reports $653,520.8 expended on account of 1902 and $217,-638.91 on account of 1901, a total of $871,159.74. This however includes the payment of a temporary loan of 1902 amounting to $150,000, leaving $721,-159.74 as nearer the expense of running the city last year, about $2,000 per day.

The balance to the credit of appropriations of 1902 is $100,170.39, including all of the $55,000 for the new Ward Two schoolhouse, $12,412.44 for sewer construction, $5,070.48 for new hose house at Houghs Neck, $2,833.24 for Faxon Park road, and smaller sums for other items. No claim is made, however, that all bills are paid. Practically the whole sum will be necessary to pay contracts and bills.

One would naturally suppose that taxes would be the greatest source of income of the city, but only $387,465.05 of the receipts of $1,095,457.34 were from taxes. Notes payable for new debt amounted to $195,690.35, and temporary loans amounted to $300,000.00. There were received for water $78,083-48; by sewer assessments, $29,397.72; from the State in various ways, $25,-961.10; for interest, $14,745.82; for sidewalk assessments, $3,949.77; for street sprinkling assessments, $3,034.76. The cash on hand was $12,861.63 larger at the beginning of the year than at the end.

Reference to the last annual report of the Tax Collector and the levy for 1902, shows uncollected taxes to be very large, being nearly $250,000 at the end of the year 1902.

The general tax levy of 1902 was $400,641.50, of which Tax Collector Cleaves gathered in $225,819.65. On a levy of $389,243.20 in 1901 (or $11,-398.30 less) Mr. Baker collected $229,015.40, or $3,195.75 more. The total collections of Mr. Cleaves for all years were $374,465.00, while Mr. Baker collected $386,853.08.

The total commitments to Mr. Cleaves for collection (1895—1902) were $655,890.32, while the total commitments to Mr. Baker (1894—1901) were $644,522.69.

The following summaries show by years the amounts to collect and amounts collected:

With about $250,000.00 uncollected on an annual levy of about $400,000.00, and large assessments due the city for sewers, sidewalks and street sprinkling, together with unpaid interest, it is evident that a proficient Tax Collector is necessary or the city will be a loser.

CHAPTER I.

THE DREAMER.

WINTER in the south, and the morning of a day.

Three years had elapsed since Boyd Peyton had been in Alabama in the month of December. The young breeze, carrying with it the fragrance of lingering fall as it swept across his face, filled him with surprise, for the season had been unusually pleasant and mild. The air was almost balmy despite its touch of early morning coolness, untempered by the new risen sun, yet there was a freshness in it which reminded him of springtime in New England.

The train on which he had been a passenger had been delayed yesterday, and he had reached home after nightfall—too late to see anything outside, at any rate. Then, in the excitement of seeing his family once more after a long period of separation, he had given no thought to climatic conditions or to anything external to them. Stop! The statement is hardly accurate, for in not one single moment in all the joyousness of greeting, in all the exuberant affection given and received in his welcome home, had he lost mental sight of Mary Annan. This morning, as he stared down at the garden of roses in winter, his heart was full of her. So conscious of her had he been, in fact, so possessed of a sense of her nearness to him at last, that he had scarcely slept during the night.

In his restless anxiety to see her he had risen before any of the family, who slept later this morning than usual, possibly because they had remained up longer the night before. As soon as he was dressed he came out on the gallery, where he stood gazing alternately upon the roses or staring down through the long avenue of live oaks toward the St. Francis road, which led into the town where she dwelt.

Presently he turned from the railing and began to pace the gallery.

The young man was a sailor, an officer in the United States navy, a passed midshipman awaiting his commission as ensign, just returned from a three years' cruise in European and north African waters, subsequent to his graduation after four years of study in the United States Naval academy at Annapolis, Md. He had been appointed to the academy from Alabama seven years before and was now just turned twenty-two. No one could look more unlike the typical bluff sailor than he. He was tall, slender and brown eyed, and the native darkness of his complexion, which his seafaring had deepened, with his thick brown hair, worn rather long, as was the fashion of the time, and slightly curling at the ends, would have betrayed him as a southern man anywhere. His appearance was gentle, his aspect dreamy. One would have pronounced him a poet, an artist, a musician—anything rather than a man of action. Without being gloomy there was a touch of gentle melancholy in his appearance.

There was a little timidity—which did not spring from fear—in his address, a deferential modesty, especially when in the presence of women or older men, that was charming, if somewhat lacking in decision. Yet he carried himself well. His movements were easy and graceful. He held his head high and had about him that air of inborn authority peculiar to the southern slave owner and gentleman, which his naval rank and position had served to emphasize.

What he might become in times of stress and danger was yet to be determined; what he was at that moment was quite evident—a dreamer! Like most of the dreams of youth, the object of his imagination was a woman. Just a year since, his ship, returning from the Mediterranean, had wintered at Boston. When he had arrived there he had rejoiced to learn in letters from home that Mary Annan was attending school in Cambridge. Miss Annan was a young Alabama girl whom he had known from childhood.

He had welcomed with an eagerness only possible to a southerner and a young man the opportunity of renewing his deepening acquaintance with his childhood friend and fair compatriot; and he had striven to make the most of it. Every moment he could take from his ship duties or which she could steal from her not too engrossing studies during the winter the two had spent together in the quaint old Massachusetts town.

The school was described in the catalogue as a "finishing school," a very popular sort of institution in those days and not unknown to history even now. So far as Mary Annan was concerned, its efforts were fruitless. She did indeed graduate from it in June with all the honors of the school, but she was very far from being finished, and he would be a very hardy prophet who could predict what the bright, beautiful and charming southern girl would be in the end. There was latent force in her—plenty of character, energy, self will and greater possibilities—but only the larger school of life could develop her.

A great besom of war and privation and anguish was then preparing for this country. A period of conflict was to ensue in which the finishing touches that only suffering could add should be put upon the characters of men and women all over the land. For the day on which Boyd Peyton returned to the home of his ancestors and the focal point of his heart's love was Dec. 19, 1860, six weeks after the election of Abraham Lincoln to the presidency of the United States.

As a sailor, an officer in the navy, on active service in foreign waters, Peyton had hardly realized the well nigh inevitable consequences to the country of that overwhelming declaration of popular opinion by the north.

In the early spring of the year, after the winter in Boston, his ship had gone on a cruise to the north African coast, whence it had just returned and been put out of commission the week before. Peyton had escaped the great debate and discussion of the spring and summer, the breaking up of the old Democratic party into two or three new ones, the forcing of sternly repressed and long avoided issues to the front, the strife and bitterness, the threat and the counter threat. What little Peyton knew of the situation had filtered to him through incomplete sources. Being removed from personal contact, he had not realized the situation at all. The matter had only been touched upon last night at his welcoming, and he was yet to learn the feeling of his father, his friends, his people, his love, upon the subject.

On this morning Peyton had given no thought to the election or its consequences. At that moment, if he reflected upon it at all, he cared neither what the north might do nor what the south might do. He thought nothing as to what might be demanded of him, or what his course of action should be in any possible contingency—unless it concerned Mary Annan and his love for her.

Well, the world about him might do what it would. It mattered nothing to him in that bright morning of hope. In an hour or two at most he would see her. He could look upon her in her proper person and see her as he had imagined her in his dreams through the long night watches of the cruise.

In his letters to his sister he had taken care that news of his homecoming on a two months' leave of absence should reach Mary. He had so contrived that the very day and hour of his arrival had been made known to her. Indeed, had it not been that the train had been so delayed last night he would have gone to see her in the evening, but it was too late, and he had been forced to content himself with anticipating this meeting in the morning.

No avowal of affection had yet passed between the young people. That certain timidity, that unwillingness to take the initiative, which was constitutional with him and which he had not yet overcome, but more especially a certain chivalry which made him loath to take advantage of their frank comradeship in that strange Yankee land where a premium might have been put upon him, he feared, merely because he happened to be a fellow southerner, an Alabamian, kept him from declaring in outspoken words his heart. Nevertheless, he was thoroughly sure that Mary Annan knew he loved her.

His assurance all ended there, however. With airy mockery, with youthful audacity, with deliberate yet delightful elusiveness, she had met his advances. The most presumptuous wish could not delude him into the belief that she loved him. How could she? he had often thought in dejection. There was a strange mingling, therefore, of foreboding and hope, anxiety and assurance, in his meditations on this morning.

There was no wavering in his desire and determination, however. He was resolved to win her. He would count no sacrifice too great for that end. As the resolution took shape in his fertile brain a keen observer—a woman who loved him, for instance—might have noticed a tightening of his lips, which now, under the influence of some compelling internal force, seemed to lose something of their sensitiveness. His gracefully rounded chin protruded slightly. There was an unnoticed bluntness in it, after all, perhaps. The softness in his eyes gave place to a harder expression. The brows straightened and drew together in lines. His face grew suddenly strong. His whole appearance was that of resolution.

CHAPTER II.

A HARD SITUATION FOR A MODEST MAN.

"I WILL, I will!" he murmured, staring down at the road through the live oaks.

As he spoke there was a step on the porch behind him, and a deep voice broke his reverie. The youth turned to meet his father.

"Dreaming again, Boyd!" said the elder reprovingly.

In appearance he was nearly the counterpart of his son, but with resolution added, decision acquired and dreams long lost in tempering experience. His bushy hair was snow white, although not from age, for he was just turned fifty. His thick drooping mustache and tufted imperial were also white. As he looked at his son he presented a stern, weather beaten, war worn face. Colonel Peyton had been a soldier. He had fought with distinction in the Mexican war fourteen years before. Old soldiers usually develop into the fat and red or the thin and lean kind of men. Colonel Peyton was one of the latter class, although his temper was as quick and fierce as that of the most choleric and gouty old veteran. His voice was full and rich, and in pronunciation and accent betrayed his southern characteristics beyond question. Boyd's voice was different. It was still southern, but not markedly so. He had lived so long in the north and on the sea, and he had tried so hard to mold it in sterotyped form, that it had lost most of its distinguishing characteristics, and except when he was excited it was cosmopolitan and therefore monotonous.

"Dreaming again, Boyd! It's not good for an officer. I had hoped that your Naval academy training, your experience as an officer, might get you out of that bad habit. But here you are at it again, I see."

The old man frowned and shook his head hopelessly toward his son.

"No, father," said the young man quickly, "not dreaming when you spoke, but"—

"But what, sir?" Only he pronounced it "suh."

"Resolving."

"Ha, that's better! And resolving upon what, pray?"

"Resolving to take a wife, sir. If I can get her, that is, sir."

"A wife! A wife!" in sudden suspicion.

"A wife, sir," answered his son firmly.

"How old are you now, sir?" asked his father, having partially digested the unexpected announcement.

"Just twenty-two, sir."

"You are young to speak of marriage, lad."

"Yes, sir, I am," answered Boyd promptly. "But it is a habit of our family, sir, as I have heard. Mother was sixteen, I think, when she married you, and you were no older than I am yourself then, sir."

"Well, er—yes, of course," said the colonel, rather taken aback by this strikingly direct, if smiling, charge. "I—er—who is the lady? I hope, Boyd, that you have not fallen in love with some foreigner in Europe or"—

"No, sir."

"Or with any Yankee girl. A man should marry among his own people, especially now. I"—

"Well, sir," said Boyd hesitatingly in a spirit of fun, "I met her in New England, at Boston, last winter, and I"—

"Boyd Peyton, don't tell me that you are going to marry outside of your own class," thundered his father; "that you are going to ally yourself with one of those northern tradespeople—with one of Lincoln's"—

No one could have exceeded the bitter contempt with which he spoke.

"Father," cried the young man hastily, seeing evidences of an explosion in the reddening face and excited manner of his father, "it is Mary Annan."

"Why, God bless me!" returned the old man, greatly relieved, grasping his son by the shoulders and giving him a little shake. "Why didn't you say so? Why, that girl is the pride of my life, the prettiest girl in Mobile, the belle of Alabama. You young dog! What do you mean by trying to fool your father in this way? My heart's been set upon it. It's the best thing that could have happened. I could not"—

He kissed the plump white fingers with charming old fashioned grace.

"Hold on, father! It hasn't happened yet."

"Ha—what's that?"

"Well, sir; you see, I haven't said anything to her as yet, and I don't know what she will do."

"Boyd Peyton, do you mean to tell me that you were a whole winter with that girl—and you a sailor, sir, an officer, damme!—and you have not proposed to her yet?"

"Yes, sir, I"—

"Well, by gad, sir," exploded the older man, "when I was a young man if I were with a charming girl like that for a week and didn't propose to her I would consider that I was reflecting on her character, by Jove! I always proposed to all the girls I"—

"What's that, Willis?" interrupted a sweet voiced young matron, joining the group on the porch, through the open door of the hall. "You always proposed to whom, sir?"

"Er—my dear—Lucy, I—er"— stammered the colonel in much confusion. "You see, I meant to say I proposed to you the first time I saw you and kept it up regularly every week until you accepted me. That's all, my dear," he went on, with pardonable mendacity.

"Oh, indeed, sir!" laughed the lady. "Well, what are you rating Boyd for?"

"Because he doesn't propose to Mary Annan."

"Mary Annan!" cried the young man's mother. "Does he love her?"

"Gad—begging your pardon, my dear—how could he help it? I almost love her myself," chuckled the colonel.

"Don't make any reservation on my account, colonel," retorted his wife complacently, coming nearer to him as she spoke and laying her hand affectionately on his shoulder. "We old women cannot compete with young girls like Mary Annan, I know."

"My dear," said the colonel, taking her hand and bowing low over it while he kissed the plump white fingers with charming old fashioned deference and grace—a very polished gentleman indeed was her gallant husband, she thought—"Mary Annan can't hold a candle to you, and no other girl can or could that I ever saw, young or old. By Jove, Boyd, you should have seen your mother when she was Mary's age! The belle of the Old Dominion, sir, and the toast of Richmond, Washington, Baltimore, the White Sulphur, everywhere! Gad, sir, I was out with three young bucks before I"—

"Fie, colonel, what an example for your son! But tell me, Boyd, dear, do you love her?"

"Love Mary Annan, mother!" said the young man, much abashed at the publicity given to his love affairs, yet forcing himself to speak boldly and answer her question, when he was interrupted a third time.

"Why, mother," said Miss Pinkie Peyton, his sister, a young woman just turned eighteen, as she joined the group on the porch, "if you could have read his letters to me you would think the sun rose and set and the earth began and ended in Mary Annan. Love her!"

"That's as it should be," said the colonel decisively. "I used to feel that way about your mother, children."

"Used to feel that way, Colonel Peyton?" queried the matron, with an emphasis, easily understood, on the first word.

"I do now, indeed, and more and more every year," said the colonel hastily, anxious to repair his blunder.

"Sir," said Boyd, smiling, "it only remains to take Willis into our confidence now and hold a family council upon the situation."

"I know all about it," nonchalantly remarked Willis, the last member of the family to appear on the scene.

Willis Peyton was small of stature, being twin brother to Pink, but an alert, bright appearing young fellow, with no whit of his brother's abstracted habit of mind, apparently. He had overheard the latter part of the conversation.

"Pink, here, can't keep anything from me, her beloved twin brother, you know," he rattled on, "and always asks my advice in affairs of the heart—her own or another's. I think I have been most judicious in getting your messages delivered to Miss Mary without her suspecting it, and if she ever marries you you'll owe me a debt of gratitude."

"Thanks, Willis," answered Boyd dryly. "And how about the lady?"

"Oh, she'll owe me nothing. Don't for the world tell her I had any hand in it. I don't wish to lose her regard on any account."

"Well, my son, have not you spoken to Mary?" interrupted his mother.

"No, mother; not yet."

"You have been most infernally—I beg your pardon, my love, but it's true—slow about it," said the colonel decisively, "but you must do it this very day."

"I know, of course, that she must know that I—that I—but I—you see, father," he went on lamely, "I did not like to take advantage of her being alone in Boston. I was the only one of her people there, you know, and I thought it was proper to ask Judge Annan"—

"Ask nobody, sir, but the lady herself, sir!" snorted the colonel. "Bless me! Young men of today haven't any spirit at all!"

"Do you wish that rule to be carried out when somebody comes here for Pink?" asked Willis quickly.

"I reckon nobody is coming around after me at present, or at any time," interrupted Pink pertly, with a toss of her head.

"Well, if they know a good thing when they see it, they will," responded Willis. "Don't you worry, Pinkie, dear, I'll look out for you and steer you through the troubled waters of your love affairs, if you will trust yourself to me. You'll be all right. Meanwhile"—

"Meanwhile," said Boyd, "I am going down to see Miss Mary as soon as breakfast is over."

"The idea of waiting until breakfast is over before you go to see your sweetheart!" exclaimed the provoking Willis, with exaggerated disgust. "Breakfast before love! That's modern chivalry!"

"It isn't that, youngster," said Boyd, catching him by his shoulders with a gesture strikingly like his father's; "you'll know when you're older that it isn't respectable to call on young ladies at such an hour."

"Oh, well, for that matter, being in love is not respectable anyway," answered Willis contentiously.

"Boys, boys!" said their mother, half laughingly, wholly in earnest, "a man is never so worthy of respect as when he is in love—and remains in love. That's why I have such a high esteem for your father here."

"Of course, of course," said the colonel, swelling visibly at the compliment, "but here's Dinah, and breakfast is ready. Come on, Lucy. Love and breakfast I always found to harmonize admirably in my case—both charming and both necessary. Come, children."

CHAPTER III.

MARY ANNAN WILL NOT BE MADE LOVE TO.

MISS TEMPE ANNAN was a singular mixture of the grave and the gay. This morning she was feeling deeply serious, not to say melancholy, for reasons various, but sufficient. In the first place, she was, as she would have phrased it, "dressed up." She was not yet old enough to enjoy at any and every time that process which she would find so delightful in later years. New clothes and best clothes made her miserable, especially when they were put on without rhyme or reason. The fact that she was at that moment seated in the great best room also oppressed her.

The child might have endured all these things, however, had it not been for an open book in the hand of a young lady who sat beside her. That open book meant to Miss Tempe an unlearned lesson. Most of Tempe's lessons were unlearned.

"Now, Tempe, dear," began her companion gently when the two had settled themselves, one comfortably and the other without any modification of her stubborn predetermined discomfort, before the wood fire crackling and burning cheerfully in the open grate—now, Tempe, you really must say your lessons. Yesterday I let you off, the day before you were ill, but you must do them today."

"Yes, Sister Mary," said Tempe meekly. Tempe spoke with a lisp, too slight to indicate, but just enough to be attractive. Her pronunciation was strikingly like her sister's.

At her sister's instigation Tempe arose and stood by her side, and both heads bent low over the volume, while with unspeakable agonies and violent contortions the child endeavored to extract from the printed page the information that "the cat had the rat."

"Now, honey," said her sister persuasively, "look at it; look at it hard! What is that first letter?"

"H," answered the child promptly, making a desperate guess.

"No," it's not 'h.' It looks a little like a part of an 'h,' but it isn't. What do we have for supper?"

"Cake," said Tempe triumphantly. "But it isn't cake, Sister Mary, is it?"

"No, it isn't cake, Tempe, and you know it isn't!" said Sister Mary severely. "It's 't'—tea; you know."

"I don't have tea for supper. You said I was too little to have tea for supper. I don't know how I could 'member that it was tea."

"Well, it is 't.' Now, remember that. Now, what is the next letter?"

But Tempe remained obstinately silent. The girl glanced up from the book to ascertain the cause of the sudden stillness, saw the petrified stare upon her little sister's face, turned her head in the direction of her gaze, dropped the book and sprang to her feet with an ejaculation of delighted surprise.

"Why, Boyd Peyton!" she exclaimed, utterly forgetful of her little sister. "How glad I am to see you! Welcome to Annandale! What a surprise!"

"Didn't you know I was coming, Miss Mary? I thought that Pink and Willis"—

"Oh, yes, I knew it, of course, but your coming upon us so suddenly, you know, startled me."

"Forgive me," he said contritely. "I would not let the man announce me. I wanted to surprise you."

"It's all right. But come in and sit down. When did you get into town? How long are you going to stay? Why haven't you been to see me before?"

She poured out her questions upon him in a perfect torrent.

"I got here only last night—quite too late to visit you then; so I rode down the first thing this morning. I wanted to come the minute I got into town. The fact is, I believe I thought of seeing you more than I did father or mother or anybody else."

"You believe you did!" with a toss of the head and a suspicious emphasis on the second word.

"I am sure of it," confidently.

"Please, ma'am, Sister Mary," interrupted Tempe, "may I go now?"

"Yes, dear, run and play."

"But my lessons aren't finished," persisted the child, who suddenly developed an unexpected and very unusual thirst for knowledge.

"Oh, that's all right. I'll hear them after awhile. Say good morning to Mr. Peyton and run along."

"How do you do, Miss Tempe?" said Peyton gravely as the child walked over to him and extended her small brown hand.

"I am very well, sir, an' I hope you are the same."

"Thank you, I am," laughed the young man. "My, how you have grown! You were such a little girl when I saw you last. Now you are quite a young lady, and so dressed up too!"

"Yes, Mr. Peyton, Sister Mary dressed me up this morning. These are my best clothes. I don't see why she did it. It ain't—it isn't, I mean—Sunday, an' I'm not going to a party. An' I had my lessons in the best parlor too. Did you dress me up, Sister Mary, because Mr. Peyton was coming?"

Sister Mary blushed violently, and, to cover her confusion, Peyton slipped a box of sweets he had brought with him into the hand of the child and bade her run and eat them. In fact, he accompanied her to the door and stood looking after her for a few moments with thoughtful consideration before he returned to his seat.

Mary Annan had recovered her composure, in some measure, at least, by a violent effort, but when Peyton sat down again an awful silence ensued.

"You are the same old Boyd Peyton as ever, I see," she said at last to him. "You have not seen me for six months and haven't said half a dozen words to me, and now you are actually dreaming in my presence."

"I have been dreaming about your presence ever since I saw you l... Miss Mary, and it is natural th... should dream on while I'm here. ... sides, I was wondering"—

"Oh, Miss Mary, I don't want you to regard me as any kind of a brother at all. I have come a long way to tell you"—

"Oh, Mr. Boyd, don't!" cried the girl springing to her feet again. "We had such a good time together in Boston that I counted on having the same good time while you were at home on this leave of absence, and now you are going to spoil it all, I know you are."

"Now please don't say that," he interrupted pleadingly; "I didn't think you would be so annoyed to learn that I"—

"But I don't care for you in that way," she continued impulsively, then suddenly stopped in great confusion, realizing that she had not been asked as yet to care for anybody.

"Well, Miss Mary," said Peyton, greatly abashed, "I will respect your wishes, of course. I shall always do so. Everything you may say is law to me." Oh, the false promises of youth and love! "Whatever you wish me to do I will do. That is, I won't say anything now, but I have only a short leave of absence, you know, and before I go back you must at least let me tell you that I—I—well, I will tell you it when I tell you, you see."

His words were entirely confused and lame, but the girl easily comprehended.

"I wish you wouldn't," she said truthfully; "I do not believe it will be any use, but if you must, you must, and we'll put aside the disagreeable subject," with cutting but unconscious frankness, "until we—we have to. Do you know how old I am?"

"You will be eighteen on the 3d of January," he answered promptly.

"Dear me!" she exclaimed. "How did you get it down so pat?"

"Why—I—you see—I—oh, dear, it is so hard not to say it! I like you so much, Miss Mary—I may say that, surely?" deprecatingly.

"Yes, you may go that far, I think," with injudicious concession.

"Well, then, I like you so much that I have tried to learn all about you," triumphantly pressing his advantage.

"From whom have you learned about me?"

"Why, from everybody who would talk to me about you or would write about you," he went on in embarrassment.

ton?"

"Cold, gloomy, frozen. You never saw anything like it."

"Did you see Miss Metcalfe before you left?"

"Yes; I called at the school, and the old lady sent you her best love."

"She was a sweet old soul," said the girl.

"Yes," he assented heartily. "You remember she let us go out together pretty much whenever we wanted to.
It was so nice of her!"

"Oh, well, she looked upon you as my brother almost, of course."

"But you didn't look upon me that way, did you?" he asked anxiously.

"Why, no; not exactly," she answered; "you see, I have only one brother, and Beverly is only thirteen.
He is away at school, by the way.
Now, you are too old for me to regard you as that kind of a brother."

"Oh, Miss Mary, I don't want you to regard me as any kind of a brother at all. I have come a long way to tell you"—

"Oh, Mr. Boyd, don't!" cried the girl springing to her feet again. "We had such a good time together in Boston that I counted on having the same good time while you were at home on this leave of absence, and now you are going to spoil it all, I know you are."

"Now please don't say that," he interrupted pleadingly; "I didn't think you would be so annoyed to learn that I"—

"But I don't care for you in that way," she continued impulsively, then suddenly stopped in great confusion, realizing that she had not been asked as yet to care for anybody.

"Well, Miss Mary," said Peyton, greatly abashed, "I will respect your wishes, of course. I shall always do so. Everything you may say is law to me." Oh, the false promises of youth and love! "Whatever you wish me to do I will do. That is, I won't say anything now, but I have only a short leave of absence, you know, and before I go back you must at least let me tell you that I—I—well, I will tell you it when I tell you, you see."

His words were entirely confused and lame, but the girl easily comprehended.

"I wish you wouldn't," she said truthfully; "I do not believe it will be any use, but if you must, you must,
and we'll put aside the disagreeable subject," with cutting but unconscious frankness, "until we—we have to. Do you know how old I am?"

"You will be eighteen on the 3d of January," he answered promptly.

"Dear me!" she exclaimed. "How did you get it down so pat?"

"Why—I—you see—I—oh, dear, it is so hard not to say it! I like you so much, Miss Mary—I may say that, surely?" deprecatingly.

"Yes, you may go that far, I think,"
with injudicious concession.

"Well, then, I like you so much that I have tried to learn all about you," triumphantly pressing his advantage.

"From whom have you learned about me?"

"Why, from everybody who would talk to me about you or would write about you," he went on in embarrassment.

Number 15

[Original.]

A row of Union soldiers stood in line within the walls inclosing a prison yard. A Confederate officer approached and, standing some twenty paces from them, thus addressed them:

"Three Confederates taken in what your Yankee general over there (pointing) calls illegitimate warfare are to be shot this evening at sunset. In retaliation I am ordered to shoot three of your number. You will begin to count from right to left, and every fifth man will step four paces to the front."

A shudder passed along the line. All understood that those men who were to step to the front must die.

"Begin, you man on the right there," said the officer.

A young girl emerged from a door leading from the commandant's quarters and came toward the soldiers. She wore an apron and a cap, denoting that she was a nurse. She had made both herself, for in those days there were no uniformed nurses. Lucia Clarke was a northern girl who had gone south to find her brother, Allen Clarke, who was an invalid prisoner of war. Having gained permission to nurse him, she had devoted herself to the sick in the hospital attached to the prison, including Confederates, for in this case the blue and the gray were mingled, till she had won the admiration of all and the love of the Confederate commandant. She came forward with a quick step. She had just heard of the order and knew what was going on.

"One," "Two," "Three," "Four." No. 5 said nothing, but tottered forward.

"Six," "Seven," "Eight," "Nine." No. 10 stepped forward with as steady a tread as if ordered to meet a human enemy.

"Eleven," "Twelve," "Thirteen," "Fourteen."

While the men had been counting Lucia Clarke had glanced ahead and seen that her brother Allen would be the fifteenth man. He had only been discharged from the hospital the day before and now, infirm and with one in five chances of death before him, could scarcely stand.

"Fifteen."

A feminine voice rang out firm and clear. Lucia, who had wedged herself in between No. 14 and her brother, stepped four paces to the front. Allen, seeing what his sister had done, moved forward to contest the place with her, but, overcome by his infirmities, fell on the ground behind her. Lucia stood rigid while two Confederate attendants carried him away.

As Major Clarence Fitz-Hugh, the commandant, looked at the girl standing there in the rank of death his eye was wet with sympathy.

"Miss Clarke," he said gently, but firmly, "all must appreciate the sacrifice you would make, but it cannot be permitted."

"Then I will die with my brother if I cannot die for him."

"What can you do?"

"I will stand before him when he is shot, and the same bullet will end this fearful struggle for us both."

"Sergeant," said the officer, "march the prisoners back. Separate those who are to be shot from the rest."

"You on the dead line," said the sergeant, "right face!"

The five men and the woman turned to the right.

"Miss Clarke," said the major, "you can't go to the men's prison."

"I will," she said firmly. "I take my brother's place. Where he would go I go."

A vexed look crossed Major Fitz-Hugh's face.

"Sergeant," he said, "send Miss Clarke to my office under the care of a corporal and two men." With this he turned and went into the building. A few minutes later Lucia Clarke was escorted into his presence. He directed the men who brought her there to withdraw. Then he said to her:

"If I promise you that when your brother is led out to die you shall be notified and permitted to go out with him, will you go to your room and remain there till you are called?"

"Yes."

"Very well; you have my word."

Lucia left the office and, going to her room, threw herself on her couch and buried her face in a pillow. Gradually her sufferings gave place to a sort of stupor. How long she was there she did not know. She was roused by a knock at the door, and Major Fitz-Hugh's orderly told her to come. She started up with a moan, but gradually mustered strength to go with a firm step to the prison yard with her guide. There, standing in line, were the three men who had been drawn by lot for execution, among them her brother. She was about to spring toward him when Major Fitz-Hugh called to her to wait. Then, drawing a paper from his pocket, he began to read:

"Special Order No. —:

"In recognition of the services of Miss Lucia Clarke in hospital and her kindness to many sick and wounded Confederates, the lives of those Union prisoners drawn for execution in retaliation are spared.

"Sergeant," added the officer, "march the prisoners back."

When the sergeant and the three men entered the prison and the door closed behind them, the major turned to the girl, who stood mute beside him.

"Lucia Clarke," he said, "it was the happiest moment of my life when I secured that order from the general commanding."

"How can I show you my gratitude?" asked the girl after several unsuccessful efforts to speak.

"By permitting me reverently to love you."

The girl stood as if swayed by the wind. Then, extending her hand, she said:

"Come to me with the return of peace."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 25—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—An evening with Chinese missions.—Acts xvii, 24-31.

One special feature of the Christian Endeavor topics for 1903 is the prominence given to missions. The last topic of each month is devoted to this subject, and in most cases definite mission fields are selected for study, such as China, Africa, South America, India and Japan. Such a course of missionary studies should arouse great interest and, properly conducted, cannot but greatly increase our missionary interest, information and zeal.

To what extent this will be done depends entirely upon the intelligent direction given to this work. Glittering generalities may be indulged in on the general subject of missions, but not so on Chinese missions. Information will be needed, which can be obtained only by consecrated effort. Every missionary committee should obtain or prepare a special programme for each of these evenings with missions and, cost what labor or sacrifice it may, should see that they are made a success.

In an evening with Chinese missions the following phases of the subject should be covered by papers or addresses or by one treating the entire subject:

1. The Chinese. Mission study among any people should begin with a study of the people. And what an interesting subject of study the Chinese are! The area inhabited by them embraces a million and a half square miles. The population of the empire is not less than 350,000,000. The Chinese occupy one-tenth of the habitable globe and form one-fourth of its population. Their history runs back for forty centuries, the most of which time they have been practically isolated from the rest of the world. Their recent history is well known and most interesting.

2. Chinese religions. China has three religions: (1) Confucianism, which is more a philosophy than a religion, dealing principally with the duties toward the state and in the home; (2) Taoism, and the author of Taoism was Lao Tse, who lived at the same time as Confucius, and it is an abstruse system full of superstitions and of idolatry; (3) Buddhism, which was imported and claims many of the Chinese among its devotees.

3. The effects of Chinese religions. In these we see their weakness. Morally, socially and politically the Chinese are an inferior people. The most revolting vices are practiced, immorality is widespread, woman is degraded, and the masses of the people are hopeless for time and for eternity.

4. Chinese missions. The Nestorians first introduced the gospel into China. The Protestant missionary movement covers three periods—first, 1807 to 1842; second, 1842 to 1860; third, 1860 to the present time. While there have been many discouraging features in Chinese missions in recent years, yet there is great hope for the future. The greatest obstacle is their intense hatred of foreigners, which caused the Boxer rebellion and the martyrdom of missionaries. But it is fervently expected that here again "the blood of martyrs will become the seed of the church" and that present adversity will aid to ultimate success.

5. Denominational Chinese missions. In addition to surveying the mission field in general, each society should pay special attention to the work of its own denomination in this great oriental empire.

With these millions in China calling to us by their need for the gospel, how can we be indifferent to foreign missions? If one soul is worth more than all the world, what about the 350,000,000 souls of China? Is there nothing we can give or do to make it possible for them to hear and to be saved?

Workers With Christ.

We are workers together with Christ. What an honor! The Christian's mission is to teach lost men the way of life, introduce them into the church of God by the rite of baptism and then build up the church on her most holy faith. The sweetest privilege God gives to man is that of uniting with the Lord Jesus in bringing a lost world back to God.—Rev. J. Foster Wilcox, Vice President New York State Union.

Preaching Tour Around the World.

Rev. E. S. Ufford, the author of the famous song "Throw Out the Life Line," is making a preaching tour around the world. When he left his home in Holyoke, Mass., on this long journey, the Christian Endeavor union of the city gave him a silk banner with a daintily wrought C. E. monogram on it. He displays this on the front of his organ in all the services which he conducts.

In the Home of the Tenth Legion.

Fifty-two out of fifty-five members of the Christian Endeavor society in the church of which Rev. Dr. Wilton Merle Smith is pastor are pledged givers of one-tenth of their income to benevolent work. This society is the home of "the Tenth Legion."

PANAMA CANAL TREATY

Agrees to Cash Payment of $10,000,000 In Gold

RENTAL OF $250,000 A YEAR

United States Secures Perpetual Control of Route Covering Tract of Land Six Miles Wide—Placed Before Senate, Which Will Ratify It

Washington, Jan. 24.—The treaty between the United States and the government of Colombia, which was signed on Thursday by Secretary Hay and Dr. Herran as the representatives of the two countries, was transmitted to the senate yesterday and by the senate referred to the committee on foreign relations.

The treaty was read in executive session, but the injunction of secrecy was not removed. By the terms of the treaty the United States agrees to make a cash payment of $10,000,000 in gold to the Colombian government and after the expiration of nine years to pay a rental of $250,000 a year. The lease of the strip of land to be used for the canal and for canal purposes is practically made perpetual, the provision on this point being that the first lease shall be for 100 years and renewal thereafter in terms of 100 years at the pleasure of the United States. The strip is to be 10 kilometers, or about six miles, in width, and over this territory the United States is given police and sanitary jurisdiction, although it is explicitly specified that Colombia does not surrender sovereignty over it.

The United States is to have the privilege of free importation of vessels and materials to be used in the construction of the canal. It also is given the right to improve, use and protect harbors at both the Atlantic and Pacific ends of the canal.

The grant is made exclusive to the United States and no taxes or rentals are to be charged in addition to the gross sums of $10,000,000 cash and $250,000,000 annually.

The committee on foreign relations will meet today to consider the treaty.

It was not Secretary Hay's intention to transmit the signed treaty to the senate yesterday, but after the president and the cabinet discussed it the conclusion was reached that it would be advisable to send it to the senate at the earliest possible moment. The formal letter of transmittal, therefore, was prepared at once and late in the afternoon the treaty was sent to the senate. The president and members of the cabinet are confident that the treaty will be ratified at a reasonably early date without encountering serious opposition.

Isthmian People Pleased

Colon, Jan. 24.—The news received here that the canal treaty between the United States and Colombia had been signed caused much jubilation throughout the isthmus and the hopes are expressed that the United States will soon begin the completion of the canal.

King's Reception a Campaign Issue

Dublin, Jan. 24.—Timothy Harrington, M. P., was yesterday re-elected lord mayor of Dublin for the third successive time. The municipal council six months ago elected Alderman Dowd for the lord mayoralty, but Harrington determined to contest the election. How King Edward should be received by the corporation of Dublin in the event of a royal visit to this city was one of the issues of the campaign. Harrington opposed a reception of the king and Dowd promised to be guided in this matter by the opinion of the municipal council.

Gotham Gamblers Vamoose

New York, Jan. 24.—District Attorney Jerome admits that the grand jury has found indictments against some of the alleged keepers or managers of reputed gambling houses in this city, whose cases have been undergoing investigation. The report that indictments had been found caused great uneasiness in sporting circles and several men whose names have been mentioned as proprietors of gambling resorts are said to have left the city, pending developments.

Why Cubans Hesitate

Havana, Jan. 24.—Public sentiment is retarding the completion of the agreement between Cuba and the United States with regard to coaling stations. The Cubans, while realizing their obligations toward the United States, dread having their ports placed between fires in the event of a conflict between the United States and a foreign power.

Woman Charged With Murder

New York, Jan. 24.—Detective Sergeant Welsh, who was shot last Friday night in the Black Cat restaurant in West Broadway, died last night in a hospital. Mrs. Cherriere, wife of the proprietor of the place, was arrested, charged with shooting the detective in the course of a dispute over a dinner bill.

Almost Ready For Business

New York, Jan. 24.—William Marconi, who has arrived here, says that his system will be ready for commercial use by the public within two or three months at the latest. Marconi expects to sail for Europe on Wednesday.

Possible Chance to Save the Leyden

Washington, Jan. 24.—Lieutenant Fletcher, U. S. N., informs the navy department that there is still a possibility of saving the U. S. tug Leyden, ashore on Block Island.

A GIRL SOCIALIST.

Philadelphia Woman Astonishes Society by Her Views.

The tendency of Miss Caroline Pemberton of Philadelphia to discuss sociological problems and sympathize with the movements having for their object the adjustment of conditions affecting the classes has attracted much attention among fashionable folk, says the New York Herald. She is the elder daughter of Henry Pemberton, who is prominent in the best society of Philadelphia.

A lecture on "The Coming Revolution" was to have been delivered a few days ago by Miss Pemberton. She was prevented from doing so by "severe illness." Miss Pemberton's father has expressed regret at the tendencies developed by his daughter.

Here are some quotations from Miss Pemberton's article on "How I Became a Socialist:"

"All the men of my family had been strong Republicans, and I had been brought up to believe in the Republican party as a Catholic believes in his church.

"Of course I became an ardent anti-Imperialist, continuing meanwhile to contribute occasional letters and newspaper articles on this subject and in defense of the negro.

"One of these published letters was answered by a socialist, who pointed out the overwhelming power of wealth, the plutocratic nature of our government, and suggested that a study of socialism would throw light on the political situation.

"By his advice I began to read the 'Fabian Essays.' Here were a light ahead and an opening somewhere, somehow, into the light and freedom of day, and I determined to follow it before I had quite finished reading the first essay.

"All this time I knew not a single socialist to speak to or even by sight. I began to feel that I was only a socialist 'on paper' and that I must find some real live socialists somewhere and see what they were like. So I started out one day to hunt up the Socialist party of Philadelphia. It was hard work finding it, but I found it at last and saw that it was made up of people, real people, working people, and since that day I have learned more of socialism from them than I ever could learn from books."

CHAIN OF ARTIFICIAL LAKES

Series of Improvements Planned by John D. Rockefeller.

It developed recently that John D. Rockefeller, in purchasing nearly all the land in Pocantico Hills, East View and Hawthorne for a series of parks, is planning a chain of artificial lakes to be formed by the historic Sleepy Hollow brook which runs through his vast domain in Westchester county, N. Y. Several waterfalls have been constructed along the brook, says the New York Press. He intends to spend more than $200,000 on this work.

Five miles of private boulevards through his parks are now being laid out, while Buttermilk hill, which he recently bought, will be lighted by hundreds of electric lights. On the summit of the hill the millionaire proposes to erect an observatory tower fifty feet high, so that he can have an unobstructed view of the Hudson river and Long Island sound for miles.

Another improvement planned by Mr. Rockefeller is the construction of a grand plaza on the brow of Kykuit hill, near where he will build his new $500,000 mansion during the coming spring and several large conservatories.

HARVARD'S FIRST SHELL.

Boat In Which President Eliot Rowed Given to the University.

T. S. Watson, Harvard, '99, has just presented to the university a famous relic of boat racing which is to be hung in Harvard Union, says a dispatch from Cambridge to the New York Tribune. It is the six oared shell in which President Eliot, Alexander E. B. Agassiz and the Crowninshields rowed for the Crimson. It was the first six oared shell made in the United States and its advent caused a revolution in rowing methods.

The boat was built in the autumn of 1857, being paid for by President Eliot, Professor Agassiz and the Crowninshields, who, with Fire Commissioner Russell and J. H. Wales of Boston, formed the crew, which from the moment of its arrival at Cambridge was invincible. The shell is 40 feet long, 26 inches wide and weighs 150 pounds. It has iron outriggers similar to modern shells.

Novel Thank Offering.

As a thank offering for the best Christmas trade he has ever had Charles S. Deforest, a novelty dealer of Shelton, near Derby, Conn., soon will turn over his entire store to the local churches for two weeks. There are six of these churches, and they will take entire charge of the store and divide the profits. A specially large stock of goods has been laid in for the purpose. Attractive young women from the churches will act as salesladies, and the pastors will be in charge of the cashier's desk, while little misses from the Sunday schools will open the doors for patrons and conduct them to the various departments.

A New Explosive.

The London Colliery Guardian describes a new explosive patented in Germany. It consists of a mixture of calcium carbide and a barium superoxide. The cartridges are divided into two compartments by a thin partition, on one side of which are the mixed salts and on the other a dilute acid. As soon as the acid eats through the tin and gains access to the mixture a violent explosion is said to result.

Good Afternoon.

According to the picture in the Globe Representative Freeman has an exalted position at the hearings on the coal situation.

All the coal dealers of Lynn have reduced the price of hard coal to $9 per ton. Why did they not do it before they were forced to do it by public condemation?

Boom the town you live in, was the thought at the annual banquet of the Business Men's Association of Hyde Park this week. A pretty good motto too. Hyde Park has a brilliant outlook.

In whatever light the collection of taxes of the city is viewed, the record of 1902 does not compare favorably with the year 1901, and the amount of uncollected taxes is altogether too large.

The third time never fails, and the third time Dr. George B. Pierce run for office he was successful. Last evening he was elected president of the Republican City Committee of Boston. We note also that he has improved as a speaker and that his speech of acceptance of the office was a strenuous one.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ When Secretary Moody made his first visit to the navy yard he was nearly scared off the gang plank by a salute in his honor, and now when there is another salute at Annapolis the horses run away. The secretary was never a great fellow for fuss and feathers, and he will be less of one now. He ought to order the omission of salutes in his honor in the future.—Newburyport News.

☞ The Saugus Representative wants the libel law amended, and has introduced a bill to that effect. He may or may not have had a somewhat noted libel case in mind when he prepared his bill, but that his amendment has a bearing on it is clearly evident. He wants to strike out the lines from five to nine of Section 93, chapter 173, of the Revised Laws, which read:—"In an action for libel or slander, he may introduce in evidence in mitigation of damages and in rebuttal of evidence of actual malice, acts of the plaintiff which create a reasonable suspicion that the matter charged against him by the defendant is true." Reasons were stated in the course of the trial mentioned why Mr. Bennett's papers had not been attached for alleged libel, but had they been so treated he would have been glad to find in the law the clause he now wishes to take out. Newspaper publishers generally were interested in having this section inserted, and only succeeded after a considerable struggle. They will not permit Mr. Bennett to destroy their work without a bitter fight.—Lynn Item.

—Congress has fulfilled its first duty in removing the duty on coal. It is taken off only for a year, but New England will never ask to have it put on again.—Somerville Journal.

AT SAN MINIATO.

An Interesting Letter from Braintree Lady Now in Italy.

A letter received from Mrs. Franklin Shaw of Braintree who is spending the winter in Italy, gives an interesting account of a trip to San Miniato, which we transcribe for the pleasure of our readers.

The hill of San Salvatore is usually called "Monte alle Croci" (Hill of the Crosses) because the steep ascent, resembling a staircase and beginning at a few yards from the Porta Gan Miniato, is lined with crosses and is one of the most ancient Via Crucis known in the Catholic world. At a little distance from San Salvadore is one of the most famous and ancient churches of Christendom. It is very old, having been rebuilt in 1013, as can still be seen. During the seige of 1529 its position was thought to be so well adapted for an important military post, that the Florentine Republic ordered Michelangelo to fortify it.

The fortifications were completed in 1552 and defended by him during an eleven months' seige of the city by the Imperial troops.

Visitors ring at the gate and on leaving give the gate keeper a few soldi. The church is one of the finest examples of the Tuscan Romanesque style. The facade is richly incrusted with marbles of different colors.

Among the decorations are the signs of the Zodiac, a Greek cross surrounded by six candelabra and above, the Eagle of the Guild of Calimala, a mosaic below, representing Christ, the Virgin and San Miniato. The interior contains 12 stone columns coated with stucco, in imitation of marble, white alternating with green, and three handsome pillars of greenish gray marble. On either side of the walls of the interior are frescoes much damaged. The choir is raised by a spacious crypt beneath. In the nave beneath the flight of 16 steps ascending to the choir, is a chapel and on the frieze appears the device of the Medicis, consisting of three feathers in a diamond ring, with the legend "Semper." Beneath the altar in the crypt is the tomb of San Miniato. The front wall of the crypt, the screen of the choir, the apse, the whole wall of nave and the pulpit present beautiful specimens of incrusted marble work.

The church and the whole hill of San Miniato are now used as a burial ground, from which are grand views of the city of Florence, the hills of Fiesole, Monte Morello, Monte Genavio and Vallomprosa.

A lovely day we had for our excursion and with the same party a trip was made to Fiesole on the hill, four miles to the north of Florence. It is an old Etruscan town, a portion of the old walls still partly preserved. It was once one of the richest, most powerful and strongest of the Etruscan cities, while now it is composed of a large square, a few narrow lanes and some groups of houses, with about 4000 inhabitants, the principal industries being the manufacture of straw, agriculture and the excavation of stone.

The cathedral was founded in 1028 but not completed till 1201. Of the 16 columns dividing the aisles, 3 were probably taken from a Roman temple. On the entrance over the door is St. Romalus, with a rich frame of the Della Robbia school and on a pillar to the right of the central altar, a fresco of St. Sebastian by Perugius.

Behind the cathedral is the entrance to an ancient theatre. It was formerly known as the Buche della Fate, (the Holes of the Fairies) for the many holes which, according to tradition, were filled with treasures, over which fairies kept guard. In 1809 excavations were begun, discovering a Roman theatre with sixteen tiers of stone seats in a semi circle. It is all so interesting and standing on the upper seats one has a grand view of the valley below, through which runs a new railway to Faenga.

Christ Church Annual.

The annual parish supper and meeting of Christ church will be held next Wednesday evening at six o'clock in the Parish house. After the supper the following parish officers will be elected: Two wardens, one for a term of one year and one for a term of two years, a treasurer and clerk for a term of one year each, and ten vestrymen, five for one year and five for two years, three delegates to the Diocesan Convention and three delegates to the Archdeaconry.

Bridge Is Narrow.

It is expected now that the big draw for the new bridge at Quincy Point will be floated down the river the middle of next week and that by next Saturday it will be in position. The permanant spans of the bridge are all in and the planking of them is nearly completed. Part of the railing on the sides is also in position. The only adverse comment on the bridge is that a mistake was made in not building it wider so as to last for all time. As it is now it is a little narrow.

LEAGUE STANDING.

Granite City Club Showing the Way in Norfolk County.

The result of this week's games in the Norfolk County League, places the Granite City club at the head of the list with a total of twenty-two points won, Braintree second with twenty points, and North Quincy third with seventeen points.

Next week Granite City and North Quincy meet at the Granite City rooms, and North Quincy will doubtless come up into the second position.

Granite City also leads on whist with Braintree second. North Quincy leads on billiards and bowling with Granite City second.

Pool seems to be Braintree's strong hold for it leads with nine points; Granite City comes next with four points, and North Quincy third with one point.

North Quincy is also weak on whist, having won but one game thus far in the tournament, although they have one tie game with Granite City.

The following table shows the standing to date:

	Billiards.	Pool.	Whist.	Bowling.	Total.
Granite City,	5	4	6	7	22
North Quincy,	6	1	1	10	18
Braintree,	3	9	4	4	20

Killed on Railroad.

William E. Goodwin of Sagamore avenue, Wollaston, was struck by a train at the South Boston station of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. about six o'clock last evening. He was taken to the terminal station but died in the ambulance on the way to the relief station.

In his pocket was found a pay envelope of the Boston sugar refinery marked William Goodwin and a ticket to South Quincy.

The Quincy police were notified and they located the man's home. Later in the evening Daniel A. Goodwin visited the morgue and identified the body as that of his son. The young man was evidently on his way to the station to take the train for home, as he had a dinner bag in his hand.

New Naval Academy.

A Washington special to the Boston Journal says Representative Gardner, at the request of a number of his constituents, introduced in the House yesterday a bill authorizing the erection of a navel academy at or near Marblehead, Mass., to be known as the Naval Academy of Marblehead. The bill does not designate the amount to be expended in the construction of such an academy.

Iron Gives Strength

No let-up of work, no freedom from household cares, close confinement in ill-ventilated rooms, offices and stores have made many women pale, tired and wornout, just as too much study and too little outdoor exercise have made many school children spindling and delicate. They have weakened the nerves, impaired digestion, upset nutrition, so that the blood has become watery and thin,—a result plainly seen in the colorless lips, cheeks and ears.

Too much responsibility, anxiety and worry have, in the same way, broken down the health of many busy men.

Now, what is needed by all these sufferers is iron, a natural constituent of healthy, strong and ruddy blood, as combined in the new iron tonic, Peptiron, which strengthens and colors the blood, nourishes and steadies the nerves, cures paleness, weakness, nervousness, dyspepsia and sleeplessness.

Peptiron combines iron in the best and most approved form with other great tonics and nutrients. Does not injure the teeth nor cause constipation.

Peptiron is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50c. or $1 per box. By C. I. HOOD CO., proprietors Hood's Sarsaparilla, Lowell, Mass.. U. S. A.

Gentlemen:—For five years I have been troubled with Nervous Dyspepsia. I have received the best medical aid in Boston, and have obtained very little relief—and that only temporary. I was advised to try Romoc. After ten days' trial I am able to eat hearty meals of wholesome food. I have continued taking it for three weeks and I am improving each day. My nerves are stronger, and circulation much improved. (Signed) A. S. RYAN, Housekeeper Quincy House.

Character In Rooms.

Give your apartments expression—character. Rooms which mean nothing are cheerless indeed. Study light and shade and the combination and arrangement of drapery, furniture and pictures. Allow nothing to look isolated, but let everything present an air of sociability. Place two or three chairs in a conversational attitude in some cheery corner—an ottoman within easy distance of a sofa, a chair near your stand of stereoscopic views or engravings and one where a good light will fall on the book which you reach from the table near. Make little studies of effect which shall repay the more than usual observer, and do not leave it possible for one to make the criticism which applies to so many homes even of wealth and elegance—"fine carpets, handsome furniture, a few pictures and elegant nothings, but how dreary!" The chilling atmosphere is felt at once.—San Francisco Post.

Women Doctors In Paris.

How many lady doctors practice in Paris? A statistician has gone into the question. He finds that while twenty years ago only seven ladies had taken their medical degree here, in the face, moreover, of violent opposition, the 3,600 physicians now established in Paris include fifty-seven women. The latter all have busy and remunerative practices. Two among them hold semi-official posts. These ladies are Mme. Bres and Mme. Perree. The former is medical attendant to the Chatelet theater, where she looks after the ladies of the company and the children who often appear on that stage, the home of French extravaganza. Mme. Perree has the same position at the state playhouse of the Odeon, the "Second Theatre Francais."—Paris Letter.

Care of the Eyes.

Eyes do not have sufficient care and attention from their owners, especially when one realizes how much is owed to them. An excellent plan is to bathe them and to keep the lids wide open while the ablution is taking place. To do this a bright silver coin should be tossed into a bowl of clear cold water. It will, of course, sink to the bottom, and when the face is plunged into the water the eyes should be firmly fixed upon the glittering silver bit. Then let the eyes be kept open and the head gently moved from side to side. The women who will persist in this daily bath will soon find that their eyes are brighter and stronger, and it will preserve the sight beyond what is supposed to be its allotted time.

Cold Cuts.

No greater mistake can be made by the housewife in marketing than the purchase of expensive cuts of beef to serve cold, since the portions that cost the most are usually the least juicy. A "plate" or brisket piece of beef boiled slowly until it is tender, turned with its liquor into a bowl and cooled there, will be imbedded in its own jelly, and the two sliced together make an attractive and delicious luncheon dish. To make a more solid jelly a knuckle of veal may be boiled with the meat. It should be seasoned after the meat begins to be tender.

To Keep Meat Fresh.

The Japanese way of keeping meat without ice in hot weather is to put the meat in a stone or porcelain vessel and pour boiling water over it. This coagulates the albumen on the surface. They then pour a little oil on the surface of the water, which prevents the air from entering. The meat is said to keep fresh for a couple of days.

THE SOUTHERNERS.

"So you have been writing about me have you?" severely.

"Miss Mary, I have been writing about you, thinking about you, dreaming about you"—

"Stop, Mr. Boyd!" she cried, lifting a warning hand. "Stop right there!"

"All right," he replied, recovering himself with difficulty.

"Now tell me about your leave of absence."

"I have two months."

"Isn't that fine?"

"I think it is a very short time to spend—with you. It doesn't seem fine to me at all."

"Have you passed your examinations?"

"Yes; went through them with flying colors; expect to be an ensign before my leave is up."

"Good! I congratulate you!"

"Yes, Miss Mary, and you know an ensign's pay is very much more than that of a passed midshipman. Most fellows marry when they get to be ensigns," he continued, with insinuating meekness, looking carefully away from her while he spoke.

"Very foolish indeed of them, I think," she replied coldly, resolutely oblivious to the indirect suggestion. "The idea! Mere boys as they are!"

"You know I am past twenty-two," meekly.

"No, I didn't know it. You don't look it, and just now you don't act it either. You see, I haven't made your life the subject of such exhaustive study as you have given mine."

"No, I suppose not," he answered dejectedly. "My career has been so unimportant heretofore that it would not be worth while to look it up."

"And has mine been of such importance, Mr. Peyton?"

"Of the greatest to me, and it will be as long as I live," he answered promptly, ready to take instant advantage of the opening.

"Boyd Peyton," said the girl sternly, determined to put an end to this if she could, "if you were ordered to do a thing by your superior officer would you obey him or would you not?"

"Obey him, of course," answered Peyton.

"Would you try to evade his commands or would you obey absolutely?"

"Absolutely, certainly."

"Well, then, I asked you, and you promised to obey me—you promised not to say anything about—about that subject, you know—for the present, that is—and you have done nothing but make love to me since you came to this room. I won't have it! It must stop!"

"Don't you like me to do it?" he questioned with such simplicity and directness that it almost took her breath away.

"Like you to do it?" she returned in confusion and perturbation. "Well—but you wish me—to—respond, and I"—

"Honestly, now, Miss Mary, you said you had not reached the age of duplicity. Honestly, now! Does it displease you very much to have me—I won't say it, of course, but you know what I mean."

"Well, no—I don't exactly dislike it—but, dear me, how tiresome this is! Let's talk of something else. You have just come from the north. How do they feel about Lincoln's election?"

"Why, jubilant, of course, naturally enough, I think. You see, I didn't remain in Boston a minute longer than necessary. I rushed down here to"—

"There it goes again," severely, with upraised finger of warning.

"To see father and mother," he continued hastily, "as quickly as I could. So I really know very little about it. I did hear some talk, though, on the train."

"What do they say? Are they going to fight?"

"Fight!" he ejaculated in astonishment. "Fight whom?"

"Fight us—fight the south."

"Of course not. Why should they fight?" with still greater surprise.

"Boyd Peyton, do you mean to tell me that you don't know that Lincoln is going to send his hirelings down here to take away our slaves and make citizens of them and voters and social equals and all that sort of thing?"

"No," said the young man promptly; "I do not believe he intends to do anything of the kind, and he could not do it if he would. I have read his platform and his letter of acceptance and some of his speeches, and they do not say one word about doing such things."

"Boyd Peyton," said the girl again, leaning forward and looking at him intently, "do you mean that you are a Republican?"

"Certainly not," answered Peyton promptly; "I am a Democrat."

"Yes, but what kind of a Democrat—the southern kind or the other?"

"Why," said the young man, "since I am a southerner I suppose I belong to the southern kind."

"You suppose so! If you had been here on election day," persisted the girl, "would you have voted for Douglas or Breckinridge?"

"Well," answered Peyton, greatly surprised at her vehemence, "not being here at that time, and being in the navy and cruising at sea 3,000 miles from the United States instead, I really did not give the subject much thought. I think on general principles I should have voted for Douglas, but"—he went on hastily as he saw a cloud sweep over her face—"but I am not set upon that conclusion in any way. I would cheerfully be convinced if anybody would show me any reason to the contrary. I am open to argument"—

"I am glad to hear it, Mr. Boyd," said the girl. "Father was a Whig, you know, and he voted for Douglas, but I am an out and out southern girl and for Breckinridge every time!"

"Well, at least, if your father voted for Douglas, there must be something to be said for him," Peyton urged defferentially.

"I think father was awfully mistaken," the girl went on with a positiveness that made her companion smile, "but you know how obstinate he is. If he makes up his mind to do a thing and thinks it is right, why, the world could not move him; leastways, I can't."

"It is the same thing," said Peyton audaciously.

"What is?"

"You and the world."

"Yes, but not to father," laughed the girl. "I am only a very small part of it to him."

"Yes, I have noticed," he answered, "that fathers as a rule are rather blind to the qualities of their children. But why do you think there is going to be any fighting?"

"I did not say I thought there was going to be any fighting, Mr. Boyd," answered the girl. "In fact, I don't think there will be, for the reason that I do not believe the Yankees will fight. At least, I think they will be afraid to get into a fight with the south. You know they say that one southerner can whip five Yankees anyway."

"Yes," said Boyd grimly, "I have heard that before, but I do not believe it."

"Boyd Peyton, are you turning traitor to the south?"

"No; certainly not. I am simply stating facts. I know it is not true that one southern man can whip five Yankees, at least not in every case, because I tried it."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, I didn't try five Yankees at once; I tried one at a time when I first went to the academy, and out of five tries I think I got four lickings, and they were good ones too."

"What!" exclaimed the girl scornfully, "do you mean to tell me that you fought with fists? I did not think that gentlemen"—

"Hold on, Miss Mary!" cried Boyd. "You wouldn't have a schoolful of boys go at each other with lethal weapons?"

"That's the southern way," proudly.

"Yes," he returned; "but it isn't the best way. We fought it out with our fists in good, honest style, and I have not four warmer friends in the world than those fellows. I respect them because they conquered me, and they respect me, I think, because I knew how to take a beating."

"Yes, you may have been beaten by them," cried the girl passionately, resentful of his indifference to a defeat of the south in his person and comprehending his slender frame in a cruel glance as she spoke, "but if some other man, Mr. Bob Darrow, for instance, had been in your place he might have whipped the whole five—if he had condescended to fight with fists."

Peyton's face flushed a deep, dull crimson. The curves of his mouth tightened again. There came once more that same squareness of jaw, that contraction of the brow. He looked positively forbidding for the moment as he turned toward her. She shrank back before his dark visage in sudden alarm, but he recovered himself by a violent effort.

"Wasn't that just a little unkind of you, Miss Mary?" he asked at last, unable to control a quaver of pain in his voice, for which he hated himself. "Darrow is afraid of nothing, I know, and he has the physical strength at his command to carry him through almost anything. You are right. I believe he would have whipped them all. I am not so strong as he, and frankly I do not like fighting simply for the sake of fighting. But I want you to believe I did the best I could, and I wasn't whipped until I had been so pounded up that I could not strike another blow, and I was just as quick to defend the south as he would have been."

"Forgive me, Boyd," said Mary in deep contrition, made the more severe to her by the manly, gentle, kindly way he had taken her thoughtless but wounding words. "It was most unkind of me. I am ashamed of myself. I did not mean it at all. I know you are as brave as a lion."

"I am not," answered Peyton truthfully. "I am not brave at all. I loathe to fight. War, battle, bloodshed, are horrible to me. I have a terrible shrinking in my soul at the thought of them."

"Yet you have done it, you would do it again?" asked the girl wonderingly.

"Oh, yes, of course! A man has to. No gentleman can be insulted, you know. One must do his duty. As you say, Darrow is a different sort of a man. He would fight because he likes it. I do not believe he knows what fear is. He is no dreamer, but a man of action."

CHAPTER IV.

MARY ANNAN WILL BE MADE LOVE TO, AFTER ALL.

PEYTON turned away from her and walked toward the window. She looked at him half in pity, half in admiration. She knew that she had grievously wounded him. However, as she had little time for deliberation, she did the best thing that could have been done under the circumstances. With womanly intuition she did nothing. With gracious tact, as if the subject were dismissed and forgotten, she stepped over to the window by his side.

"Open it," she said quietly, catching up a light shawl from a chair, "and let us go into the garden together, into the sunlight."

"It is always sunlight where you are, Miss Mary," he remarked with swift gratitude as he heeded her command, and together they went out on the porch.

"How sweet the old garden looks!" he continued as they descended the gallery and stepped on the grass, which was still as green and bright as in midsummer in the north. A tall hedge of box screened the young people from the observation of passersby on Government street. They were alone in the garden.

Right in the center stood a gigantic live oak, its trunk separated a few feet above the ground into huge, gnarled limbs, which, with many tortuous windings, extended far over the yard in every direction.

"That old tree is still the same," he said.

"Yes," said the girl, "a little older, but no different. It does not change. Come," extending her hand, "let us go to it."

"Do you remember when I was here three years ago I used to put you up in it?" he said as they walked under the branches toward its trunk.

"Yes, I remember."

"Allow me. 'Twas this way."

He seized her by the waist with both hands—she was a slender young thing as yet—and, before she could prevent him, by an effort, he lifted her up to the lowest limb and set her down upon it.

"Why, Mr. Boyd," exclaimed the girl, leaning her back against the trunk and settling herself comfortably on the limb, "Mr. Bob Darrow himself could not have done it better. I didn't think you were so strong."

"Has Darrow been lifting you up here?" he questioned jealously.

"Of course not!" indignantly. "Nobody ever dared to do such a thing before, and don't you dare do it again, Mr. Peyton!"

"Mary," whispered Peyton, "don't say that. I'd love to spend my strength and my life just lifting you up."

"You are incorrigible," she answered. "Yes, I am incorrigible in loving you!"

She put up her hand, but he would not be stayed. She had yet to learn that there is no power on earth that can keep a man who loves a woman from telling that woman he loves her when he feels that the woman wants to hear him, and almost every woman wants to hear.

As Peyton leaned against the tree upon which she sat, as close to her as he could possibly get without actually touching her, and as he looked adoringly up into her soft brown eyes she found it rather pleasant after all. Her eyes were not always soft either. Sometimes they sparkled with light, as the breaking wave does upon the storm tossed sea, and sometimes they swam steadily with the depth of a still pool that compasses upon its surface a picture of the deepest heaven—as they did at that moment. As the young lover marked the slow rise and fall of the dainty, undeveloped bosom, as his eyes fell upon the scarlet ribbon of her mocking lips, as he watched the slow flush of warm color in her dark cheek—rich hue that the rose might have envied—he longed to throw the restraints of custom to the four winds of heaven and clasp the girl in his arms. It was not the first nor would it be the last time a lover's heart rebelled against such restraints.

"It's out now," he murmured. "What's the use of trying to conceal it or evade it? Every look, every word, every movement of mine, must have betrayed me. I didn't say anything to you in Boston—not in words, that is. You see, I was afraid, for one thing, and for another I did not want to take advantage of you. I was the only friend you had—the only man—and I had known you from a child. I was a southerner, and I—and we," he went on softly, "we love the south. Had I been born in New England I should have loved the south, since it is your land. And you were so young. You might have said 'yes' then."

In spite of herself the girl, listening in dreamy abandon to his passionate pleading, nodded her head softly.

"Oh!" cried Peyton, conscious of her slightest motion. "Would you have said 'yes?'"

"I might," she whispered, "then"—

"And now?" he questioned eagerly.

"Oh, now—it is different now. Don't ask me, Boyd."

"I must! Is it because there is some one else?"

"No, there is no one. You see, the little southern bird that was so lonesome up north is out of the cage now and she loves—everybody." She spread her hands abroad with a delicious gesture. "There isn't any one in particular, but all—you, as well as the rest. I like you, oh, very much, and if you are awfully in love with me, as you say you are, I am very sorry for you. I am sorry for them all."

"All?" he queried jealously "What do you mean by that?"

"Why, I mean all the men who are in love with me and that I am not in love with. They all talk just as you do, Boyd."

"Don't!" he protested vehemently. "I cannot believe that the ephemeral affection of the men you meet can be likened to my feeling. I tell you," he continued, almost fiercely, "you do not dream how I love you. We sailors are lonely folk. Do you know, do you realize, that winter in Boston was the only one I ever spent in the society of a girl, a woman? Are you a woman, I wonder?"

"Am I a woman, indeed!" indignantly and with surprise.

"Yes, I know; in years, perhaps, but at heart only a child."

"A child, sir! Well, perhaps! And if you knew other women maybe you wouldn't care so much for me."

"It would not make any difference; I'd care for no one else. You are all. Ah, when I sailed away last spring and left you I took with me such a memory of you as completely possessed me. I did my duties, of course; I had been so trained. That's a part of life, to do one's duty. I lived on the ship. I mingled with the others. My body was on the African coast, but my soul was where you were. I was absentminded, distrait. My shipmates rallied me upon it. It was your fault. I was thinking of you, dreaming of you.

"The breeze of summer wove songs about your name through the rigging," he continued, in that low voice with its passionate cadence. "When the moonlight beat upon the low-lying sands of the tropic shore the mist wreathed itself into figures whose airy grace suggested you to me. Not a wave that caressed the keel of the ship that did not ripple with the music of your laughter. I could shut my eyes and hear it even now."

He suited the action to the word and leaned his head against the tree trunk and was silent for a little space.

"I welcomed the night watches," he said at last. "They were never lonely to me. I could pace the deck and think of you, you, only you, with nothing to disturb or distract me. Yes, yes, I am a dreamer, as you have said, but I did not create an ideal—I found it in you. Beloved, you know not what this has meant to me. You do not know what it means now. I said you were a child, and you are. But some day you will be a woman, and then you will understand. Perhaps it is not altogether you now that I love, that I worship, but what I see in you, what you shall be."

She listened, drinking in every word.

"I have made you the object of my ambition, the end and aim of my life. Every hope that I cherish centers in you. Every desire that I entertain has you for its realization. I long to do something for you, to have some task set me, some great achievement placed before me, that I may show you what love means. I ask nothing now. I am content to stand here below you and look up at you, to kiss the hem of your garment."

Again he suited the action to the word, with a reverence which touched her soul.

"To be near you is enough now, but some day I must have more. I must have all. Until that time comes and you come to me with it I shall wait—no, not patiently, not willingly, but because I must. Do you understand?"

"I understand," she murmured in answer. "Speak on. There is music to my heart in what you say. I am a child. I do not know yet what love means as you know it, as you have told it. But perhaps I shall learn. You may teach me, and with such a master may I be an apt pupil. Here is my hand on it."

He seized the slender, graceful brown hand she extended, and with old fashioned grace—alas, that the custom has gone!—pressed a long kiss upon it while she continued:

"There is no one else yet, and I hope"—her voice sank to a whisper; she turned her head away; a rift of sunlight drifted through the trembling foliage and fell upon her hair and burnished it with color—"I hope," she murmured, withdrawing her hand and laying it upon his head, "that some day it may be as you wish."

"Thank God! Thank God," he exclaimed, "for that blessed assurance, and may he bring all my dreams to pass!"

And above them a mocking bird burst into song.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

—Statesmen and others with a large bowing acquaintance will probably welcome the self-raising hat recently invented in Paris. All you have to do is to incline your head gently and the hat raises itself with due politness and then returns to your cranium with proper dignity. A little practice perfects the wearer in a number of different degrees of cordiality; the deep, encouraging bow with which one greets a creditor, for example, or the graceful but harried salute that wisdom extends to a loquacious friend who is just back from Europe.—Ploughman.

Doctor

Tried but Could Not Relieve Me

Of Headache, Dizziness, Twitching.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Did Relieve and Cure.

"The doctor tried but couldn't relieve me" is a phrase commonly met with in the letters we receive from grateful patients. The reason is plain. The doctor tries to cure the symptom and neglects the disease. In all cases of chronic headache, nervousness, weakness, general debility, dizzy spells, loss of appetite inability to sleep, lack of energy, loss of flesh, lack of interest, morbid tendencies, hysteria, the disease is a nervous disorder and some means must be taken to strengthen and restore the nervous system. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is performing wonders every day and will cure you as it has thousands of others. Read how quickly it acted in the following case:

"A few years ago I was greatly troubled with nervousness and indigestion. While at work a dizzy spell would come over me and I would be forced to stop and rest. I suffered terribly from headaches and my nervousness was so marked as to cause almost constant twitching of the muscles. My doctor tried but could not relieve me. I finally began the use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and continued until I have used four bottles, although I have not had a dizzy spell since taking the first dose. I am very thankful for what your medicine has done for me and shall take pleasure in recommending it whenever I can."—FRANK P. BENTLEY, Middlebury, Vt.

WOULD YOU INVEST

$100 TO MAKE A PROFIT OF $250,000 BESIDES MANY TIMES YOUR MONEY BACK IN DIVIDENDS? IF SO,

BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S

STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $100 per share, advanced to $415.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 22 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 50c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $2.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions. BERNARD S. Fort San Carlos Invited Fight, According to Germans

WARSHIP AT ONCE REPLIED

Later Bombardment, Which Destroyed the Fort, Was to Exact Immediate Punishment For First Attack—Critical Times at La Guira

Berlin, Jan. 24.—Commodore Sogeder, commander of the German fleet in Venezuelan waters, officially reports the bombardment of Fort San Carlos from Maracaibo, under date of Jan. 21, as follows:

"On the 17th instant, while the Panther was passing the Maracaibo bar, she was unexpectedly attacked by Fort San Carlos, which opened fire on her. To this the Panther replied and a cannonade was exchanged for half an hour. Owing to the difficulties of navigation the Panther then desisted.

"In order to exact an immediate punishment for this attack, the more so as the Venezuelan government had proclaimed it a victory, I bombarded the fort with the Vineta on the 21st instant and destroyed it."

Panther Disregarded Hint

London, Jan. 24.—The Willemstad, Curacao, correspondent of The Daily Mail says: "On Wednesday the German gunboat Panther, which was insecurely anchored off San Carlos, moved in close to the Castillo battery, which fired one shot as a warning. The Panther disregarded the hint. Another shot was fired from the Castillo battery, thereupon the Panther opened fire and continued the cannonade for half an hour, when she retired. The Vineta immediately began a heavy bombardment of Fort San Carlos, seriously damaging the fort and the houses in the vicinity."

Still Shelling San Carlos

Maracaibo, Jan. 24.—At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon Fort San Carlos was in the possession of the government forces and the bombardment by the German warships was still going on.

There has been no material change in the situation.

The gunboat Panther was the only vessel to come inside the bar.

Communication with the fort is very difficult. Great excitement prevails in Maracaibo.

Intense Strain at La Guira

La Guaira, Jan. 24.—The former Venezuelan gunboat Restaurador, now in the possession of the Germans, arrived here at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon from Puerto Cabello and anchored near the shore. Her presence caused great popular indignation. At 3 o'clock several rifle shots were heard in the distance. Shortly afterwards the Restaurador left her anchorage and moved to a position outside the harbor and under the protection of the guns of the British cruiser Tribune.

The Restaurador has been armed, equipped and manned by the Germans since her capture. Her anchoring close into the shore was taken by the populace, in view of the Maracaibo occurrences, as a direct provocation to retaliation. It is not known where the rifle shots of the afternoon were fired, but it is believed that the precaution of the Restaurador in moving away from the shore was timely, as the hungry unemployed populace of La Guaira, excited by recent events and driven to exasperation by their condition, had applied to the local authorities for arms, and purposed making a night attack on the gunboat. Excitement against Germans is running high here.

Won't Interfere With Bowen

Washington, Jan. 24.—Minister H. C. Bowen's position is one of patient waiting. As to his proposition to the allies that the blockade be immediately raised exchanges are still being made between the London, Berlin and Rome foreign offices in an effort to prepare a joint reply. Much as he deplores the action of Germany in bombarding the San Carlos fort, Mr. Bowen is disposed to treat it as "local," so far as he is concerned. He will not let it interfere with his efforts to secure peace.

Mr. Bowen is much pleased with the attitude of the allies' representatives here, all of whom have had conferences with him and assured him that so far as they may be able the negotiations shall proceed with dispatch. They of course decline to comment on the activities in Venezuelan waters.

Reports from London that Mr. Bowen came to Washington with documentary evidence of the collusion of the German government with the revolutionists in Venezuela for the overthrow of Castro lack confirmation here, Mr. Bowen being unwilling as yet to affirm or deny them. It is stated, however, that the revolutionists are finding no trouble in securing ammunition and arms from some source.

Disquieting Rumor Unfounded

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 24.—Careful inquiry fails to find the slightest foundation for the report that the United States transport Dix has foundered. The Dix sailed from Seattle Dec. 31, direct for Nagasaki, and is not due there for two days yet.

Three Dollars Off Anthracite

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 24.—One of the local dealers yesterday secured from the Philadelphia and Reading company 1000 tons of hard coal, which will be sold at $9 a ton. The present rate of coal in this city is $12.

LABOR ROW

Members of Board of Trade Fail In Efforts to Secure Harmony

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 24.—An apparently unsuccessful effort was made yesterday to settle the shoe strike in this city by the arbitration committee of the Board of Trade. The leaders of both the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and the striking Knights of Labor cutters appeared separately before the committee and submitted propositions as a basis of settlement, but there appeared no common ground on which to bring the two sides together and the committee adjourned, quite disheartened over the outlook.

The Boot and Shoe Workers' union offered to send the strike breakers back, and would not compel those earning less than $6 a week to join the union. But those between 16 and 60 must join the union and an "out of work" fund must be established.

The Knights of Labor cutters criticized some of the provisions as coercive and unconstitutional and on their part demanded that any differences which might arise should be arbitrated, provided such is asked for by the manufacturers, and in addition they would make contracts for three years.

These new propositions are now before the arbitration board and it is possible that the members may be able to obtain some modification of them.

There were no disturbances yesterday; in fact, a large number of the cutters went to and from their work without police protection.

Colonel Lynch Sentenced to Death

London, Jan. 24.—The jury in the trial of Colonel Arthur Lynch, member of parliament for Galway, on the charge of high treason, after being out half an hour returned a verdict of guilty. The sentence of death was passed on each of the four counts in the indictment.

COLONEL ARTHUR LYNCH.

The newspapers this morning take it for granted that the sentence passed upon Lynch will be commuted. They urge that a punishment should be inflicted exemplary enough to act as a deterrent upon others, but not sufficiently severe to make Lynch a martyr.

An Important Discovery

Philadelphia, Jan. 24.—Dr. Leonard Pearson, dean of the veterinary department of the University of Pennsylvania, announces that experiments covering a period of more than two years have proven conclusively that cattle may be rendered immune from tuberculosis by injecting into the vein of the animal a small quantity of a suspension of tubercle-bacilli, non-virulent for cattle. This procedure was repeated several times with graudally ascending quantities. The immediate effect was to produce a passing fever following each injection which did not seriously annoy the animal.

Uncomplimentary to Miners' Union

Philadelphia, Jan. 24.—The independent operators of the Wyoming and Lackawanna coal regions, in which Scranton and Wilkesbarre are situated, occupied the time of yesterday's session of the coal strike commission. Nothing of importance was elicited. There was unanimity of opinion, however, that the lack of discipline among the miners and the restriction of their earning capacity is more pronounced since the union came into the anthracite field than it was before the men were organized.

Sentence None Too Heavy

Belvidere, N. J., Jan. 24.—Susan Beers and her son, Elijah Beers, were convicted here yesterday of inhuman treatment of the woman's aged husband, John M. Beers, and sentenced to four months in jail. Mrs. Beers admitted that she had ordered her son and other men to chain the old man up in a barn so that he could not get away.

Detectives Found Stolen Furs

New York, Jan. 24.—Detectives yesterday made a raid on a fur establishment and arrested George Cohen and Hyman Filarsky and seized a large quantity of valuable fur garments, many of them identified as articles that had been reported stolen. The value of the furs was said to be $40,000. Cohen was subsequently released.

To Fight Tobacco Trust

Havana, Jan. 24.—Four of the largest cigar factories here yesterday inaugurated an independent movement by the signing of sworn agreements to refrain for 10 years from selling their brands or plants to the tobacco trust. Other factories are expected to do likewise.

The Weather Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, Jan. 25.
Sun rises—7:06; sets—4:48.
Moon rises—4:36 a. m.
High water—9 a. m.; 9:45 p. m.

There has been very little precipitation in any part of the country. A southwest storm will move northeastward and the area of snow or rain probably will extend into New England by tonight.

BOASTED TOO LOUDLY

Strike Breakers Said They Could Whip Union Men

CHALLENGE WAS ACCEPTED

As a Result Foreigners Working In Amesbury Carriage Factories and the Police Were Overwhelmed and Roughly Handled by Strikers

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 24.—The strike situation in the carriage industry in this town, which has been in a quiescent stage for nearly two weeks, suddenly became violent last night by an attack on the non-union men by the strikers. The police were overpowered, strike breakers were chased, dragged from places of refuge and assaulted.

The strike began over three weeks ago in several of the carriage factories of the town. Within a few days the manufacturers brought a number of foreigners here from Boston and since then have gradually been filling the places of the strikers by other men. At times the old men seemed inclined to make trouble, and it became necessary for the manufacturers to keep the foreigners inside the yard over night. But gradually the feeling against these men seemed to subside. The strikers learned that some of the men who had taken their places had boasted that they were not afraid of any mob, and that they were strong enough to whip any number of strikers.

This aroused the strikers, and they decided to accept the challenge, so when the factory gates were thrown open last night the workmen found a crowd of 400 ready to give them a most spirited reception.

The police had got wind of the intention of the strikers and the entire force, consisting of six policemen and the chief, arrived just as the non-union men made their appearance. At first the only demonstration was in the nature of yells and hoots, for the mob seemed a bit awed by the officers. But gradually the men became bold, and closing in began to give some of the strike breakers vicious digs and punches.

The officers fought bravely for a time, but they were powerless against the crowd, which was becoming more and more daring and confident every minute. At last some of the men started to run. Down through Main street went the non-union men, with a pack of 500 yelling men and boys at their heels. Those who were caught had a hard time of it, and at one time there were several fights in progress.

Foreman Prescott of the Walker carriage factory managed to gain refuge in a restaurant, but even there he was not safe. Half a dozen men rushed in after him and dragged him onto the sidewalk. Here Prescott showed fight and kept his assailants back for a time by means of a large carving knife which he had picked up in the kitchen. But it was only for a minute, for the crowd closed in and with a rush disarmed him, after which he was thrown down and severely kicked and pummelled. The police finally rescued him and arrested one of his assailants, Orille Vanier. Vanier was subsequently released on $300 bail.

For an hour or two after the riot bodies of strikers marched up and down Main street, hooting and yelling.

Last night the selectmen, the chief of police and the carriage manufacturers had a conference. The chief stated that it was very difficult to secure additional policemen and that he should be obliged to go out of town for help. This he was authorized to do, and today it is expected that there will be a large force on hand to maintain order.

Coal Hearing Must Go On

Chicago, Jan. 24.—The fight of the indicted coal men to clear themselves of guilt of "conspiracy to do an illegal act injurious to public trade" was begun before Judge Horton yesterday. Motion to quash in behalf of each of the 18 corporations composing the association were quickly overruled and pleas of "not guilty" entered. A date for the hearing of argument and the filing of briefs will be fixed next week.

Boers to Colonize In United States

New Orleans, Jan. 24.—Dr. Reitz, General Pearson and several other prominent Boers left here today on a special train which will take them through the rice and cattle country of Louisiana and Texas and the ranges of the west as far as California. It is reliably reported that a great Boer colony will be established in Louisiana or Texas.

King Oscar Incapacitated

Stockholm, Jan. 24.—Upon medical advice, King Oscar has decided to temporarily intrust the government of the country to Crown Prince Gustaf, who will take over the regency next week. The king has abandoned his projected visit to Norway.

Bucklin's Charge Dismissed

New York, Jan. 24.—The charge against Inspector Brooks, made by David W. Bucklin, that he exceeded his authority in entering Canfield's alleged gambling house, was dismissed yesterday by the justices of the court of special sessions.

Shakes Down South

Charleston, Jan. 24.—An earthquake shock was felt here at 8:11 o'clock last night. Reports from points near the city indicate that the shock was felt throughout lower South Carolina. No damage was done.

TRAGEDY IN A MILL

Son of Slain Man Attacks Assassin and Is Himself Shot.

Burrilville, R. I., Jan. 24.—A quarrel a few weeks ago between an Italian named Michael de Palma and Robert Lyon, Jr., and another yesterday between the Italian and Robert Lyon, Sr., all three employed in a dye room here, led to shooting yesterday in which the senior Lyon was killed and the young men seriously wounded.

Nearly all of the employes of the Anchor mill knew of the quarrel and when the shooting began about 4 o'clock in the afternoon there was a general exodus. But young Lyon remained and bravely attacked the Italian after his father had fallen with bullets in the temple and mouth. In the struggle young Lyon received a bad wound in the shoulder. As he fell the Italian rushed out of the dye room and thinking that the shouting crowd had followed him and intended to lynch him ran two miles and fairly into the arms of a police officer. He was trembling like a leaf when the crowd came up but no effort was made to take him from the officer.

Palma hailed from Montreal. His fellow-workmen say that he is afflicted with a violent temper and few were surprised at the shooting. Palma was taken to Harrisville and locked up on a charge of murder.

Lyon was 52 years old, and leaves a widow and seven children. Young Lyon is 17 years old.

Charge and Counter Charge

Clinton, Mass., Jan. 24.—Besides a denial of the charge against him an allegation of blackmail was made by Truman L. Abbott, the defendant, when a hearing was given him by Judge Stone yesterday on the charge of assault of a felonious nature upon Edith L. Whittaker, aged 12. Abbott was held in $1000 for the grand jury. The government claims that Abbott assaulted the girl in December. Abbott produced a letter in which the intimation was given that if he didn't settle the case for $500 he would be punished. Mr. Whittaker acknowledged writing the letter.

Hotel and Other Buildings Burned

Pigeon Cove, Mass., Jan. 24.—Fire broke out at 2:30 o'clock this morning in the Pigeon Cove Hotel, and in half an hour had not only destroyed the entire building, but had jumped to the house of Charles H. Andrews, adjoining. At 3 o'clock several other small buildings had caught, and at that time it looked as if three other hotels in the immediate vicinity, as well as a dozen summer residences, would be destroyed. All the hotels in this vicinity are for summer guests and the Pigeon Cove Hotel was the largest, having 200 rooms. The loss to the hotel is estimated at $50,000.

Annual Gypsy Moth Complaint

Boston, Jan. 24.—The state legislature heard again of the depredations of the gypsy moth in a report sent to the lower branch of the legislature yesterday and signed by a committee of the state board of agriculture. The report concludes with this utterance: "The present condition of the infested territory is indeed serious. From Waltham to the sea there are now a large number of well established colonies, which wait but a favorable season to greatly extend their area."

A Gallant Rescue

Nantucket, Mass., Jan. 24.—Walter S. Chase, first mate of the catboat Monarch, spent about 15 minutes in the icy waters of the harbor yesterday until the skipper of the boat, Captain Gapples, picked him up with the skiff. It was a hard row against a stiff northwester and Chase was pretty well exhausted when Captain Gapples reached him. It was some hours before Chase fully recovered.

To Investigate Train Service

Boston, Jan. 24.—The Massachusetts house yesterday adopted an order for an investigation of the passenger train service of the Boston and Albany railroad. Mr. Dean of the railroad committee said the people of this state were simply getting the result of the "greatest crime committed in Massachusetts in 25 years," the lease of the Boston and Albany railroad to a foreign corporation.

Shoe Strike at Haverhill

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 24.—The labor situation was further complicated in this city yesterday by the strike of 54 turned workmen employed in the factory of Thayer, Maguire & Field. The men went out in accordance with an order of the Shoe Workers' Protective union, the strike being another phase in the contest with the Boot and Shoe Workers' union.

Socialist Mayor In Office

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 24.—The decision of the supreme judicial court on the mayoralty election was carried out last night in the induction into the office of mayor of P. B. Flanders, Socialist. The oath was administered at a special meeting of the city council and the mayor at once assumed the position as chairman of the board.

Strike Continues at Waterbury

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 24.—The strike situation in this city remains practically the same. One more line has been opened up and many passengers are riding. No violence characterizes the running of the cars. The business men's committee have given up trying to effect arbitration.

Would Rather Remain a Village

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Jan. 24.—A special village meeting last night refused to accept a charter which would make a city out of the present village and some portions of the town and create a new town of St. Johnsbury of outlying districts. The vote was 296 against to 126 for the charter.

THE SOUTHERNERS.

"So you have been writing about me have you?" severely.

"Miss Mary, I have been writing about you, thinking about you, dreaming about you"—

"Stop, Mr. Boyd!" she cried, lifting a warning hand. "Stop right there!"

"All right," he replied, recovering himself with difficulty.

"Now tell me about your leave of absence."

"I have two months."

"Isn't that fine?"

"I think it is a very short time to spend—with you. It doesn't seem fine to me at all."

"Have you passed your examinations?"

"Yes; went through them with flying colors; expect to be an ensign before my leave is up."

"Good! I congratulate you!"

"Yes, Miss Mary, and you know an ensign's pay is very much more than that of a passed midshipman. Most fellows marry when they get to be ensigns," he continued, with insinuating meekness, looking carefully away from her while he spoke.

"Very foolish indeed of them, I think," she replied coldly, resolutely oblivious to the indirect suggestion. "The idea! Mere boys as they are!"

"You know I am past twenty-two," meekly.

"No, I didn't know it. You don't look it, and just now you don't act it either. You see, I haven't made your life the subject of such exhaustive study as you have given mine."

"No, I suppose not," he answered dejectedly. "My career has been so unimportant heretofore that it would not be worth while to look it up."

"And has mine been of such importance, Mr. Peyton?"

"Of the greatest to me, and it will be as long as I live," he answered promptly, ready to take instant advantage of the opening.

"Boyd Peyton," said the girl sternly, determined to put an end to this if she could, "if you were ordered to do a thing by your superior officer would you obey him or would you not?"

"Obey him, of course," answered Peyton.

"Would you try to evade his commands or would you obey absolutely?"

"Absolutely, certainly."

"Well, then, I asked you, and you promised to obey me—you promised not to say anything about—about that subject, you know—for the present, that is—and you have done nothing but make love to me since you came to this room. I won't have it! It must stop!"

"Don't you like me to do it?" he questioned with such simplicity and directness that it almost took her breath away.

"Like you to do it?" she returned in confusion and perturbation. "Well—but you wish me—to—respond, and I"—

"Honestly, now, Miss Mary, you said you had not reached the age of duplicity. Honestly, now! Does it displease you very much to have me—I won't say it, of course, but you know what I mean."

"Well, no—I don't exactly dislike it—but, dear me, how tiresome this is! Let's talk of something else. You have just come from the north. How do they feel about Lincoln's election?"

"Why, jubilant, of course, naturally enough, I think. You see, I didn't remain in Boston a minute longer than necessary. I rushed down here to"—

"There it goes again," severely, with upraised finger of warning.

"To see father and mother," he continued hastily, "as quickly as I could. So I really know very little about it. I did hear some talk, though, on the train."

"What do they say? Are they going to fight?"

"Fight!" he ejaculated in astonishment. "Fight whom?"

"Fight us—fight the south."

"Of course not. Why should they fight?" with still greater surprise.

"Boyd Peyton, do you mean to tell me that you don't know that Lincoln is going to send his hirelings down here to take away our slaves and make citizens of them and voters and social equals and all that sort of thing?"

"No," said the young man promptly; "I do not believe he intends to do anything of the kind, and he could not do it if he would. I have read his platform and his letter of acceptance and some of his speeches, and they do not say one word about doing such things."

"Boyd Peyton," said the girl again, leaning forward and looking at him intently, "do you mean that you are a Republican?"

"Certainly not," answered Peyton promptly; "I am a Democrat."

"Yes, but what kind of a Democrat—the southern kind or the other?"

"Why," said the young man, "since I am a southerner I suppose I belong to the southern kind."

"You suppose so! If you had been here on election day," persisted the girl, "would you have voted for Douglas or Breckinridge?"

"Well," answered Peyton, greatly surprised at her vehemence, "not being here at that time, and being in the navy and cruising at sea 3,000 miles from the United States instead, I really did not give the subject much thought. I think on general principles I should have voted for Douglas, but"—he went on hastily as he saw a cloud sweep over her face—"but I am not set upon that conclusion in any way. I would cheerfully be convinced if anybody would show me any reason to the contrary. I am open to argument"—

"I am glad to hear it, Mr. Boyd," said the girl. "Father was a Whig, you know, and he voted for Douglas, but I am an out and out southern girl and for Breckinridge every time!"

"Well, at least, if your father voted for Douglas, there must be something to be said for him," Peyton urged deferentially.

"I think father was awfully mistaken," the girl went on with a positiveness that made her companion smile, "but you know how obstinate he is. If he makes up his mind to do a thing and thinks it is right, why, the world could not move him; leastways, I can't."

"It is the same thing," said Peyton audaciously.

"What is?"

"You and the world."

"Yes, but not to father," laughed the girl. "I am only a very small part of it to him."

"Yes, I have noticed," he answered, "that fathers as a rule are rather blind to the qualities of their children. But why do you think there is going to be any fighting?"

"I did not say I thought there was going to be any fighting, Mr. Boyd," answered the girl. "In fact, I don't think there will be, for the reason that I do not believe the Yankees will fight. At least, I think they will be afraid to get into a fight with the south. You know they say that one southerner can whip five Yankees anyway."

"Yes," said Boyd grimly, "I have heard that before, but I do not believe it."

"Boyd Peyton, are you turning traitor to the south?"

"No; certainly not. I am simply stating facts. I know it is not true that one southern man can whip five Yankees, at least not in every case, because I tried it."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, I didn't try five Yankees at once; I tried one at a time when I first went to the academy, and out of five tries I think I got four lickings, and they were good ones too."

"What!" exclaimed the girl scornfully, "do you mean to tell me that you fought with fists? I did not think that gentlemen"—

"Hold on, Miss Mary!" cried Boyd. "You wouldn't have a schoolful of boys go at each other with lethal weapons?"

"That's the southern way," proudly.

"Yes," he returned; "but it isn't the best way. We fought it out with our fists in good, honest style, and I have not four warmer friends in the world than those fellows. I respect them because they conquered me, and they respect me, I think, because I knew how to take a beating."

"Yes, you may have been beaten by them," cried the girl passionately, resentful of his indifference to a defeat of the south in his person and comprehending his slender frame in a cruel glance as she spoke, "but if some other man, Mr. Bob Darrow, for instance, had been in your place he might have whipped the whole five—if he had condescended to fight with fists."

Peyton's face flushed a deep, dull crimson. The curves of his mouth tightened again. There came once more that same squareness of jaw, that contraction of the brow. He looked positively forbidding for the moment as he turned toward her. She shrank back before his dark visage in sudden alarm, but he recovered himself by a violent effort.

"Wasn't that just a little unkind of you, Miss Mary?" he asked at last, unable to control a quaver of pain in his voice, for which he hated himself. "Darrow is afraid of nothing, I know, and he has the physical strength at his command to carry him through almost anything. You are right. I believe he would have whipped them all. I am not so strong as he, and frankly I do not like fighting simply for the sake of fighting. But I want you to believe I did the best I could, and I wasn't whipped until I had been so pounded up that I could not strike another blow, and I was just as quick to defend the south as he would have been."

"Forgive me, Boyd," said Mary in deep contrition, made the more severe to her by the manly, gentle, kindly way he had taken her thoughtless but wounding words. "It was most unkind of me. I am ashamed of myself. I did not mean it at all. I know you are as brave as a lion."

"I am not," answered Peyton truthfully. "I am not brave at all. I loathe to fight. War, battle, bloodshed, are horrible to me. I have a terrible shrinking in my soul at the thought of them."

"Yet you have done it, you would do it again?" asked the girl wonderingly.

"Oh, yes, of course! A man has to. No gentleman can be insulted, you know. One must do his duty. As you say, Darrow is a different sort of a man. He would fight because he likes it. I do not believe he knows what fear is. He is no dreamer, but a man of action."

CHAPTER IV.

MARY ANNAN WILL BE MADE LOVE TO, AFTER ALL.

PEYTON turned away from her and walked toward the window. She looked at him half in pity, half in admiration. She knew that she had grievously wounded him. However, as she had little time for deliberation, she did the best thing that could have been done under the circumstances. With womanly intuition she did nothing. With gracious tact, as if the subject were dismissed and forgotten, she stepped over to the window by his side.

"Open it," she said quietly, catching up a light shawl from a chair, "and let us go into the garden together, into the sunlight."

"It is always sunlight where you are, Miss Mary," he remarked with swift gratitude as he heeded her command, and together they went out on the porch.

"How sweet the old garden looks!" he continued as they descended the gallery and stepped on the grass, which was still as green and bright as in midsummer in the north. A tall hedge of box screened the young people from the observation of passersby on Government street. They were alone in the garden.

Right in the center stood a gigantic live oak, its trunk separated a few feet above the ground into huge, gnarled limbs, which, with many tortuous windings, extended far over the yard in every direction.

"That old tree is still the same," he said.

"Yes," said the girl, "a little older, but no different. It does not change. Come," extending her hand, "let us go to it."

"Do you remember when I was here three years ago I used to put you up in it?" he said as they walked under the branches toward its trunk.

"Yes, I remember."

"Allow me. 'Twas this way."

He seized her by the waist with both hands—she was a slender young thing as yet—and, before she could prevent him, by an effort, he lifted her up to the lowest limb and set her down upon it.

"Why, Mr. Boyd," exclaimed the girl, leaning her back against the trunk and settling herself comfortably on the limb, "Mr. Bob Darrow himself could not have done it better. I didn't think you were so strong."

"Has Darrow been lifting you up here?" he questioned jealously.

"Of course not!" indignantly. "Nobody ever dared to do such a thing before, and don't you dare do it again, Mr. Peyton!"

"Mary," whispered Peyton, "don't say that. I'd love to spend my strength and my life just lifting you up."

"You are incorrigible," she answered.

"Yes, I am incorrigible in loving you!"

She put up her hand, but he would not be stayed. She had yet to learn that there is no power on earth that can keep a man who loves a woman from telling that woman he loves her when he feels that the woman wants to hear him, and almost every woman wants to hear.

As Peyton leaned against the tree upon which she sat, as close to her as he could possibly get without actually touching her, and as he looked adoringly up into her soft brown eyes she found it rather pleasant after all. Her eyes were not always soft either. Sometimes they sparkled with light, as the breaking wave does upon the storm tossed sea, and sometimes they swam steadily with the depth of a still pool that compasses upon its surface a picture of the deepest heaven—as they did at that moment. As the young lover marked the slow rise and fall of the dainty, undeveloped bosom, as his eyes fell upon the scarlet ribbon of her mocking lips, as he watched the slow flush of warm color in her dark cheek—rich hue that the rose might have envied—he longed to throw the restraints of custom to the four winds of heaven and clasp the girl in his arms. It was not the first nor would it be the last time a lover's heart rebelled against such restraints.

"It's out now," he murmured. "What's the use of trying to conceal it or evade it? Every look, every word, every movement of mine, must have betrayed me. I didn't say anything to you in Boston—not in words, that is. You see, I was afraid, for one thing, and for another I did not want to take advantage of you. I was the only friend you had—the only man—and I had known you from a child. I was a southerner, and I—and we," he went on softly, "we love the south. Had I been born in New England I should have loved the south, since it is your land. And you were so young. You might have said 'yes' then."

In spite of herself the girl, listening in dreamy abandon to his passionate pleading, nodded her head softly.

"Oh!" cried Peyton, conscious of her slightest motion. "Would you have said 'yes?'"

"I might," she whispered, "then"—

"And now?" he questioned eagerly.

"Oh, now—it is different now. Don't ask me, Boyd."

"I must! Is it because there is some one else?"

"No, there is no one. You see, the little southern bird that was so lonesome up north is out of the cage now and she loves—everybody." She spread her hands abroad with a delicious gesture. "There isn't any one in particular, but all—you, as well as the rest. I like you, oh, very much, and if you are awfully in love with me, as you say you are, I am very sorry for you. I am sorry for them all."

"All?" he queried jealously "What do you mean by that?"

"Why, I mean all the men who are in love with me and that I am not in love with. They all talk just as you do, Boyd."

"Don't!" he protested vehemently. "I cannot believe that the ephemeral affection of the men you meet can be likened to my feeling. I tell you," he continued, almost fiercely, "you do not dream how I love you. We sailors are lonely folk. Do you know, do you realize, that winter in Boston was the only one I ever spent in the society of a girl, a woman? Are you a woman, I wonder?"

"Am I a woman, indeed!" indignantly and with surprise.

"Yes, I know; in years, perhaps, but at heart only a child."

"A child, sir! Well, perhaps! And if you knew other women maybe you wouldn't care so much for me."

"It would not make any difference; I'd care for no one else. You are all. Ah, when I sailed away last spring and left you I took with me such a memory of you as completely possessed me. I did my duties, of course; I had been so trained. That's a part of life, to do one's duty. I lived on the ship. I mingled with the others. My body was on the African coast, but my soul was where you were. I was absent-minded, distrait. My shipmates rallied me upon it. It was your fault. I was thinking of you, dreaming of you.

"The breeze of summer wove songs about your name through the rigging," he continued, in that low voice with its passionate cadence. "When the moonlight beat upon the low lying sands of the tropic shore the mist wreathed itself into figures whose airy grace suggested you to me. Not a wave that caressed the keel of the ship that did not ripple with the music of your laughter. I could shut my eyes and hear it even now."

He suited the action to the word and leaned his head against the tree trunk and was silent for a little space.

"I welcomed the night watches," he said at last. "They were never lonely to me. I could pace the deck and think of you, you, only you, with nothing to disturb or distract me. Yes, yes, I am a dreamer, as you have said, but I did not create an ideal—I found it in you. Beloved, you know not what this has meant to me. You do not know what it means now. I said you were a child, and you are. But some day you will be a woman, and then you will understand. Perhaps it is not altogether you now that I love, that I worship, but what I see in you, what you shall be."

She listened, drinking in every word.

"I have made you the object of my ambition, the end and aim of my life. Every hope that I cherish centers in you. Every desire that I entertain has you for its realization. I long to do something for you, to have some task set me, some great achievement placed before me, that I may show you what love means. I ask nothing now. I am content to stand here below you and look up at you, to kiss the hem of your garment."

Again he suited the action to the word, with a reverence which touched her soul.

"To be near you is enough now, but some day I must have more. I must have all. Until that time comes and you come to me with it I shall wait—no, not patiently, not willingly, but because I must. Do you understand?"

"I understand," she murmured in answer. "Speak on. There is music to my heart in what you say. I am a child. I do not know yet what love means as you know it, as you have told it. But perhaps I shall learn. You may teach me, and with such a master may I be an apt pupil. Here is my hand on it."

He seized the slender, graceful brown hand she extended, and with old fashioned grace—alas, that the custom has gone!—pressed a long kiss upon it while she continued:

"There is no one else yet, and I hope"—her voice sank to a whisper; she turned her head away; a rift of sunlight drifted through the trembling foliage and fell upon her hair and burnished it with color—"I hope," she murmured, withdrawing her hand and laying it upon his head, "that some day it may be as you wish."

"Thank God! Thank God," he exclaimed, "for that blessed assurance, and may he bring all my dreams to pass!"

And above them a mocking bird burst into song.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

—Statesmen and others with a large bowing acquaintance will probably welcome the self-raising hat recently invented in Paris. All you have to do is to incline your head gently and the hat raises itself with due politness and then returns to your cranium with proper dignity. A little practice perfects the wearer in a number of different degrees of cordiality; the deep, encouraging bow with which one greets a creditor, for example, or the graceful but harried salute that wisdom extends to a loquacious friend who is just back from Europe.—Ploughman.

Doctor

Tried but Could Not Relieve Me

Of Headache, Dizziness, Twitching.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Did Relieve and Cure.

"The doctor tried but couldn't relieve me" is a phrase commonly met with in the letters we receive from grateful patients. The reason is plain. The doctor tries to cure the symptom and neglects the disease. In all cases of chronic headache, nervousness, weakness, general debility, dizzy spells, loss of appetite inability to sleep, lack of energy, loss of flesh, lack of interest, morbid tendencies, hysteria, the disease is a nervous disorder and some means must be taken to strengthen and restore the nervous system. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is performing wonders every day and will cure you as it has thousands of others. Read how quickly it acted in the following case:

"A few years ago I was greatly troubled with nervousness and indigestion. While at work a dizzy spell would come over me and I would be forced to stop and rest. I suffered terribly from headaches and my nervousness was so marked as to cause almost constant twitching of the muscles. My doctor tried but could not relieve me. I finally began the use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and continued until I have used four bottles, although I have not had a dizzy spell since taking the first dose. I am very thankful for what your medicine has done for me and shall take pleasure in recommending it whenever I can."—FRANK P. BENTLEY, Middlebury, Vt.

WOULD YOU INVEST

BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S

STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $5c. per share, advanced to $125.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 22 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property, that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 50c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $5.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions. HERBERT S. ELABORATE DRESS.

Quantities of Lace and Embroidery Are Necessities.

At one period lace coatees were only worn at teatime. Now we use them as additions to evening frocks and even day blouses.

One thing is certain—we cannot dress well without a good amount of lace and chiffon. Never was the latter more popular, and some of the most acceptable gifts for birthdays are those of real lace. The woman who has to content herself with imitation lace, however, need not despair, for the reproductions of the old patterns are delightful and in exactly the right shade

EVENING DRESS.

Lace of a coarse make will be a prominent feature on spring millinery Some lovely Paris picture hats are of white moire with a regular curtain of fine chantilly lace falling over a brim consisting of endless tuckings of cream chiffon and further adorned with one thick black ostrich plume.

The empire style, with its long, straight lines, gives height to the wearer, but should never be selected when there is any tendency to embonpoint or if the figure is overfull or round.

A particularly handsome evening dress of spotted net and silk applique is the subject of the sketch.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

A revival, after five years or more, of the naval drama "The Ensign," by William Haworth, will make the Castle Square theatre attraction the coming week. It will be remembered that the dramatic stock company originally formed for the Castle Square theatre made a distinguished success in this play, and the present members of this organization will undoubtedly maintain the standard set by their predecessors. There are many opportunities for elaborate scenic and mechanical effects in "The Ensign," which will be fully improved in this revival, and such people as are demanded by the cast will be added to the company. "The Ensign," appeals to an American audience, and, although the scenes of national strife which attended its earlier performances are passed, there is good reason to anticipate a hearty response to the patriotic lines of the play. The leading characters will be taken by James L. Seeley, Edward Wade, Lindsay Morison, John Sainpolis, John Craig, John T. Craven, Louis Thiel, Frank Minzey, Leonora Bradley, Jane Irving, Lillian Lawrence, Mary Sanders and Little Juliette Day.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

The demand to see Mrs. Leslie Carter in David Belasco's great play "Du Barry" at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, has been so great that, after considerable persuasion, Mrs. Carter has consented to give two extra matinees, on Wednesday, January 28, and Wednesday February 4. Thus far during Mrs. Carter' Boston engagement, she has only appeared at the Saturday matinees, but three have been hundreds of requests from persons living in near-by cities for extra matinees, and it is in compliance with these requests that the additional performances will be given. "Du Barry" as played by Mrs. Carter and a company of recognized artists numbering over one hundred and fifty is positively the greatest theatrical offering that the Boston stage has ever seen, and the crowded houses that nightly greet Mrs. Carter at the Hollis Street Theatre are ample evidence of the interest the people of New England take in the art of this exceptionally gifted artist. Mrs. Carter's engagement ends Feb. 7 The matinees begin at 1.45 o'clock, and the curtain rises in the evening at 7.45 o'clock.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL.

Two of the most successful plays of James A. Herne are "Hearts of Oak" and "Shore Acres," both of which are playing this season to crowded houses in every city in which they are presented. These two stirring domestic dramas have their scenes laid on the shores of the New England coast. James A. Herne lived for many years in the locality where the scene of the plays are situated and he made a most careful study of the characteristics of the men, women and children with whom he was thrown into daily contact. There is not a single human emotion that is not stirred when one witnesses "Hearts of Oak" or "Shore Acres." One laughs and then anon the tears well to the eye. One forgets at the time being that there is such a place as a theatre but seems to feel that he is indeed dwelling among the very people whose types are being presented behind the footlights. "Heart of Oaks," with a splendid cast will be seen at the Music Hall for one week commencing Jan. 26.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Among the entertainers scheduled for the week of Jan. 26 at Keith's popular Boston playhouse are the following: May Duryea and John L. Kearney, in a new comedy sketch, "The Imposter;" Mr. and Mrs. Mark Murphy, in a farcial skit called "Why Doogan Swore Off," written for them by Melville Baker, author of "Foxy Grandpa;" Rice and Walter, acrobatic grotesques, in a specialty full of ludicrous situations; Billy Link, blackface funmaker and parody singer; the Four Luken, in a marvelous aerial acrobatic act, including double casting from raised horizontal bars; Elvira Francelli and Tom Lewis, high class vocalists in operatic selections and ballads; Newell and Niblo, instrumental performers; Billy Clifford, the widely known and popular monologue comedian singer and dancer, in his clever specialty, "The Broadway Chappie;" the World's Trio in character songs and dances, with special costumes of beautiful design, and the Burto-Lowando Bijou circus, which will be especially pleasing for the children.

Raisins add to the appearance and taste of the old fashioned bread pudding.

A delicious omelet can be made of chicken livers. Also with the combination of kidney and chicken livers.

If you find a difficulty in making your apples boil in a pudding, instead of adding sugar (the usual way) put in a small piece of butter.

Cranberries are so acid that they should always be cooked in earthen or agate ware, and never let the sauce or jelly stand in anything but earthen.

Cook soup only in a porcelain lined kettle and never leave in the kettle overnight. Drain the stock into a porcelain bowl and be careful to remove every bit of vegetable.

Bananas can be served as a vegetable if they are used green. Cut the fruit in halves, stew twenty-five minutes in a very little water, drain, cover with a cream sauce such as is used with cauliflower and serve hot.

Small Waists Disappearing.

The woman with a small waist—that is, a waist out of proportion to her body—is now made painfully aware of the fact by contrasting her own abrupt lines with the gracefully undulating lines of her athletic sister. While it is not absolutely necessary that a waist must be large in order to be correct, yet it certainly must be in good proportion, and there should be a difference of not more than ten inches between the bust and the waist and between the waist and the hips. These are the best measurements generally accepted by the best authorities on physical development. The great fault with the American woman's form is the possession of an absurdly small waist and in proportion abnormally large hips. The comparison made years ago, when the fashionable woman was said to resemble nothing so much as an hourglass, is still in force, for nothing so aptly describes the appearance of a woman who seeks by artificial means to conceal an accumulation of flesh and who instead of succeeding simply accentuates her defects.

RIVAL LABOR UNIONS

Each Declare Their Own Organization to Be Perfect

LARGE SUNDAY MEETINGS

Knights Condemn Application For Injunction "Against Our Wives and Sisters"—Fine For Boot and Shoe Workers Who Buy Non-Union Goods

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 26.—The 10th day of the labor trouble between the Knights of Labor cutters and the Boot and Shoe Workers' union was marked by the holding of two mass meetings by the rival organizations in different halls on Summer street yesterday afternoon, at each of which the greatest enthusiasm was manifested.

There was no conflict between the two gatherings, although at the meeting of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union there was some interruption by Knights of Labor in the audience, which was quickly stopped by a threat from the chairman to have the disturbers ejected, and the latter left the hall.

The Knights of Labor Assembly's meeting was presided over by Edwin Snow, the agent of the Cutters' assembly, who, in his vigorous opening address, declared that the Knights of Labor would not be forced into a union with the Boot and Shoe Workers.

John J. Couhig condemned the union stamp manufacturers who have applied for an injunction against their Knights of Labor cutters and their women stitchers. "Their action in applying for an injunction against our wives and sisters," said he, "is an insult to the manhood of Lynn." It was the first time in the history of the United States, he said, that an injunction had been asked against women.

I. B. Armstrong, master workman of a Knights of Labor Cutters' assembly, charged the Boot and Shoe Workers' union with breaking its contract with the Knights of Labor.

John R. Oldham, a member of the Socialist Labor party in Lynn, the closing speaker, made the most fiery address of the afternoon, in which capitalists generally were denounced. He severely scored the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and wrought up the audience to a high pitch of excitement.

Mayor Eastham and members of the city government came into the hall when the meeting was about half over and were greeted with cheers. They took no part in the proceedings except as listeners.

The mass meeting of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union was held in Lynn theatre. Mayor Eastham and several city officials occupied seats in one of the boxes, where they remained some time.

Charles J. McMorrow presided, and scathingly referred to the Knights of Labor cutters, which, he said, is the only union in the shoe trade in the Knights of Labor today. "It is the last dying remnant of a once powerful organization," said he.

National President Tobin explained the Boot and Shoe Workers' organization and what it expected to accomplish. Its membership at present, he said, is four times as large as that of any other organization in the boot and shoe craft that ever existed in the country.

He charged the Knights of Labor with breaking their contract and explained how it was done. During the speaking some of the Knights of Labor cutters who were in the hall interrupted the speakers, and were greeted with hisses. The police at first tried to maintain order, but were unsuccessful, as it was only upon the chairman's threatening to send for additional officers that the interrupters desisted, and they finally left the hall.

Frank K. Foster of Boston made a speech, speaking of the work of the American Federation of Labor, with which the Boot and Shoe Workers' union is affiliated. Gad Martindale of Rochester, the last speaker, called attention to the powerful organization which the Boot and Shoe Workers' union had established.

At the close of the meeting Everett H. Dunbar, a Lynn shoe dealer, who had a seat in one of the boxes, arose and requested permission to ask President Tobin a question. The request was greeted with an uproar of hissing and cheering. Permission being granted, he asked President Tobin if it was not a fact that if members of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union bought shoes that did not bear the union stamp they were liable to a fine of $2. More disorder followed this question.

Mr. Tobin then said that in the Boot and Shoe Workers' constitution it is laid down that a member purchasing shoes or any other commodity without the union stamp, unless in a place where such goods cannot be obtained, is liable to a fine of $2.

The meeting was then adourned.

The police have been busy trying to locate the men who assaulted two of the imported cutters Saturday night, but although they have a description of the men, they have not been able to locate them.

The women stitchers in several of the factories where it is said the proprietors are to apply for the union stamp have announced that they will join the Knights of Labor union here.

Subscription lists are being circulated in factories where a strike does not exist in aid of the women stitchers now on strike and are meeting with a generous response.

Won't Accept Clergymen's Advice

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 26.—The members of the executive committee of the striking trolley men state that they will in all probability refuse to follow the advice of the committee of clergymen of this city. The clergymen's committee talked with General Manager Sewell and with William Barrett, president of the Trolleymen's union, on Saturday, and investigated as to the justice of the discharge of Barrett by the company. Their report is practically a vindication of Barrett so far as relates to any conduct which would warrant a discharge, but advised the union to leave his case out of the peace negotiations entirely and asked the men to go ahead with a settlement of the other differences.

Holdup Frustrated

Boston, Jan. 26.—The attempt to hold up Victor Schonfield in his store at 319 Hanover street Saturday night by a young man wearing a sombrero was frustrated by the alertness of the proprietor, and the stranger, who gave his name as James Franklin, 29 years old, of Indiana, was placed under arrest. At the station Franklin said he was a travelling salesman and that he had been without food so long he had become desperate.

Found Wounded and Frozen

Pawtucket, R. I., Jan. 26.—With his skull fractured, a wound under his left ear, and both ears, hands and feet frozen, William Hadfield was found lying on a sidewalk at Central Falls at 6 o'clock Sunday morning. He was taken to the general hospital, where he died. Hadfield was at his lodging house at 4 a. m., but his movements between 4 and 6 o'clock are unknown. The medical examiner will hold an autopsy.

Sleeping Her Life Away

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 26.—Gladys McLeas, 13 years old, who fell into a sleep several weeks ago from which she had been only occasionally aroused long enough to receive nourishment, exhibits wonderful vitality. During Christmas week she actually showed indications of physical improvement. While these encouraging symptoms have disappeared she is still holding onto life with a tenacity that astonishes physicians.

The Nile Fared Badly

Boston, Jan. 26.—The bark Nile, which made port yesterday from Samarang, Java, was between New York and Nantucket on Dec. 25. The crew had a trying voyage, as six or seven different times the vessel was within 100 miles of port and each time was blown off to sea. The officers and several members of the crew had their face, hands and feet frostbitten, and on reaching here all were more or less worn out.

FIRE IN SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

There Were Twenty-five Patients and They Had a Terrible Experience

Saco, Me., Jan. 26.—By the burning of the Biddeford smallpox hospital early yesterday 36 patients were forced to escape in their night clothes, with the mercury several degrees below zero, all suffering terribly from their exposure, while one of them, Prudent La Pointe, 40 years old, is expected to die.

The fire was discovered about 5:15 a. m. by a French woman, who did the cooking, who says that it had apparently been set from the outside, near the kitchen door. She hastily aroused the inmates and an attempt was made to extinguish the flames, but they gained so rapidly that it was realized that if any one was to escape quick action was necessary. Some grabbed mattresses and dragged them out on the snow far enough away from the building to be out of danger from the fire, and huddled together upon them, while others wrapped blankets and other bed clothing about themselves and rushed into the freezing atmosphere, and stood in shivering groups at a safe distance from the fire, which was rapidly devouring their former shelter.

Mrs. Mary Tyman, 70 years of age, caught her little daughter in her arms, and in her night dress ran from the building, but before she had gone 100 yards she fell exhausted upon the snow-covered ground, where she lay until the arrival of the police and firemen an hour later.

The fire was not known down town until 6:30, the first word being brought by one of the smallpox patients who ran to the police station, where he kicked on the door, then backed into the middle of the street and when the door was opened by an officer, announced the fire and shouted: "I've got smallpox. Don't come near me."

By the time the firemen arrived the building was nearly destroyed, and their attention, as well as that of the police, was at once turned to the relief of the distressed inmates. Eugene La-Bond, who lived half a mile away, offered the use of his dwelling as a temporary relief station, giving it up entirely for that purpose, and, impressing a neighbor and his sled into service, the half frozen refugees were removed to his home.

Many of the latter were clad only in the thinnest of garments and the firemen and police took off their own coats and wrapped them around the sufferers. Although all were more or less frostbitten, it is believed that no fatalities will result, unless it be in the case of La Pointe.

Yesterday afternoon 26 of the patients were removed from La Bond's house to the city's auxiliary smallpox building.

After the police and firemen had finished their work of rescue, their clothing, as well as that of the teamster, was all fumigated in the city building.

The burned building was situated a mile or more from the centre of the city, and was about 135 feet in length. The loss will be $4000, upon which there is no insurance.

From Martinique to Canada

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Jan. 26.—A peculiar phenomenon was observed at Iroquois, a small Canadian town below Ogdensburg after a heavy snowstorm early last week, when it was found that the snow was quite dark colored. A chemical analysis just made showed that the powder contained a large proportion of silica and some iron in solution. It is believed that the powder is of volcanic origin and was probably carried by the trade winds from Mt. Pelee.

Concerning Schwab's Health

Palermo, Sicily, Jan. 26.—Charles M. Schwab gave an interview to The Associated Press correspondent yesterday aboard the steam yacht Margarita. He appeared to be in good health. Asked whether he desired that it should be stated that his health was as perfect as it appeared from his looks, he replied: "Better cable nothing at all, as the more I say on the subject the less I succeed in convincing."

London, Jan. 26.—The signature of the Anglo-American treaty to settle the Alaskan dispute, at Washington on Saturday, has given great satisfaction to the English press, on the ground that it gives at a critical moment in the Venezuelan trouble an undoubted proof of the uninterrupted friendliness existing between Great Britain and the United States.

The city has been offered a Carnegie library under the usual conditions.

Effect of Freight Rates.

The Globe says: "The attitude of Representative Freeman of Quincy at the coal investigation was observed with a good deal of interest in view of discussion as to his fitness to serve on the investigating committee, because of his business. There was a general smile when one witness asked the effect of freight rates on the coal prices in Boston, answered: "Mr. Freeman, of your committee, can tell you more about that than I can."

SLIGHT FIRES.

Might Have Been Serious if Lively Blazes.

Fire Department on Wrong Scent.

Were Going to Atlantic for a Quincy Point Fire.

There was a slight mixup in the striking of Box 75 shortly before 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon and as a result the central station apparatus went in the wrong direction. The fault in the striking was probably due to the manner in which the box was pulled.

On the first round 165 was sounded. There is no box of that number, but supposing it to have come from the sixties the central station apparatus started toward Atlantic. The other three rounds of the box sounded 75 the correct number. The central station apparatus however went north beyond Beale street before they turned back.

Chief Williams went to Box 75 as did also the Quincy Point hose and the relief hose and ladder from the central stations, so that there was enough apparatus to handle the fire.

The snow which had been falling all day made travelling hard and the apparatus could not make as good time as usual.

The fire was in the house of Frank Gearing on South Walnut street. It was between the floors and some cutting was necessary to get at it. The loss will not exceed $30. The cause is assigned to rats and matches.

THE SECOND FIRE.

At 3.30 o'clock this morning an alarm was sounded from Box 74 and was followed in a few minutes by the recall. This proved to be for a fire in the store building on Washington street opposite Sumner street.

The building is owned by Fred H. Smith and the fire was in the part occupied by J. Peterson & Co. The fire was caused by the tenants trying to thaw out a frozen water pipe. In doing this they took a rag saturated with kerosene, wound it about the pipe and then set fire to it. The result was more fire than was expected and the calling out of the fire department. The loss will not exceed $10. The tenements were occupied by families named Edwardson and Burgess.

Water Street Church.

The pulpit of the Water street Presbyterian church was supplied Sunday by the Rev. H. L. McKinnon, D. D., of Boston. He is a brilliant young man and general satisfaction with his sermons was expressed by the congregation. Mr. McKinnon is a native of Cape Breton and was educated at Queens University, Canada. After graduating, he went west to engage in mission work, and returned east last year to take post graduate work in philosophy at Harvard college. He is engaged to supply the church during the month of March. Rev. Edward Norton, pastor-emeritus of the Bethany Congregational church will preach during the month of February.

Conductor Emery.

Briggs H. Emery died this morning at his residence 229 Washington street, after a brief illness, aged 57 years. Mr. Emery was for a number of years employed as a conducter on the Old Colony railroad, but severed his connection with the railroad shortly before it was leased to the N. Y., N. H. R. R. Of late years he has been employed as a travelling salesman for the Massachusetts Brewery Co. He leaves a widow and two daughters. His funeral will be held Wednesday and the interment will be on Thursday at Lynn.

Basket Ball.

The St. Mary's Basket Ball team opened the season in St. Mary's hall, Saturday evening with the Fore Rivers, the former winning by the score of 19-12. Both teams had their rooters and as a great many had not seen a game before, excitement ran high.

SHIP SUBSIDY.

Brotherhood of Iron Shipbuilders Adopt Resolutions.

Representatives of the Brotherhood of Boiler Makers and Iron Ship Builders met in Boston, Sunday, and after conference adopted the following resolutions which will be forwarded to Senators and Representatives:

Whereas, as the cost of building ships in the United States is much greater than the cost of building ships abroad, less than 10 per cent. of the vessels engaged in our foreign trade are built by American labor and,

Whereas, as foreign ships under our laws engage in the carrying of our exports and imports on terms of equality with American ships, American capital, to the extent of many million dollars, is invested in foreign shipping, to the detriment of American labor, and,

Whereas, the present lack of merchant ships and trained seamen deprives our government of an essential element of national defence; therefore, be it

Resolved, that the necessities of the government of the United States and the interests of American labor demand and a respectful and urgent appeal is hereby made for, the immediate enactment of the pending ship subsidy bill, the provisions of which, when put into operation, will strengthen the United States upon the sea, with merchant ships and trained men available in war, will maintain unimpaired the American standard of wages and permit American labor to enjoy the same profitable employment in the building and running of the ships engaged in our foreign trade that is now enjoyed by American capital.

English vs. Spanish.

Alexis P. Frye, formerly principal of a Quincy school and recently at the head of the educational system in Cuba spoke before the Twentieth Century club in Boston on Saturday. The spread of the English language in the Philippines was the subject, and several gentlemen participated. Mr. Frye said in part: "If English ever becomes the universal language of the Philippine islands the history of the whole world will be contradicted. It surely cannot be that my friend and classmate means that the Spanish language will be driven out and the Tagalog be superseded by the English language in 10 years. I am seeking for information in this matter, as I have sought before, and would like to know what is meant."

THE SLEEPING SICKNESS

Some Facts About a Strange African Disease.

OFTEN ACCOMPANIED BY INSANITY

According to a Portuguese Commission That Is Studying the Disease's Causes and Symptoms, It Is a Form of Cephalo Meningitis—Only Young Negroes Attacked.

Travelers in Africa have occasionally described a curious disease affecting the young negro population, the most characteristic symptom of which is absolutely uncontrollable fits of sleepiness. These fits are in no sense a true coma, as the sufferers can always be awakened, but upon stopping the stimulus—talking and shaking—they immediately "doze off" again.

The disease was naturally named the sleeping sickness. It is of infrequent occurrence and only attacks the natives, and so excited little curiosity among pathologists. But during the last few years it has increased much in frequency and severity and has caused such a terrible mortality in the Kongo basin that both the Royal society and the London School of Tropical Medicine have sent out a commission of experts to study it. Their reports have not yet been published, although several of the commissioners have already returned. But a commission sent by the Portuguese government to study the same disease, which was making serious havoc among the negroes on Prince's island, in the gulf of Guinea, has printed a full account of its findings, and from this the following curious facts are obtained, says a correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser:

The most marked and early symptoms of the disease are the fits of sleepiness, although these may be preceded or accompanied by a feeling of weakness, depression and disinclination to exertion of any sort. Dr. Patrick Manson of mosquito malaria fame, who has studied the disease in the Kongo, states that it is frequently accompanied by insanity, and fits of maniacal excitement may be one of its earliest manifestations. He also speaks of a curious lightening or reddening of the hair as a premonitory symptom.

At first the sleepy fits are short and infrequent, but even in the early stages are extremely sudden and quite irresistible, the patient falling asleep with his mouth full of food or even while drinking. In this stage the sufferer can be easily aroused, but immediately falls asleep again. As the disease progresses the fits are more frequent and the sleep is deeper, but even to the end it is possible to arouse the sleeper. One patient upon being awakened a few hours before his death smiled and accepted a proffered cigarette. It is almost uniformly fatal. The memory seems to be but slightly impaired, but the will and power of concentration are markedly weakened almost from the start. The senses of sight, hearing and taste remain active to the last.

In Prince's island the exciting causes of the disease appear to be excessive labor, poor food and bad sanitation. All negroes of either sex are liable to contract it, except those over forty years of age.

A germ was of course suspected and diligently searched for. In the vessels of the brain and in the brain tissue itself there was constantly found a small double germ belonging to the coccus family, about two ten-thousandths of an inch in diameter. It was found very difficult to artificially breed this microbe, although a slight growth was obtained by placing them in a mixture of meat broth and the fluid which occurs in cases of dropsy. Guinea pigs and pigeons were unaffected by inoculations of the coccus, but rabbits were somewhat sensitive, and it was fatal to mice.

The most marked and characteristic tissue changes found after death were in the brain. The cephalo rachidian fluid, a small amount of which is normally present in the ventricles and subarachnoid spaces, was considerably increased in quantity and slightly turbid, although not purulent. Inflammation of the membranes of the brain was a constant lesion, but varied much in extent and severity.

The conclusion reached by the Portuguese commission is that the disease is a form of inflammation of the brain and its membranes—a cephalo menigitis—and that treatment "will be difficult, but may be possible."

Dr. Castellani of the Liverpool commission, who was at last accounts still in the Kongo studying the disease, has isolated a coccus, which, he thinks, is the causative agent. The role of the Filaria perstaus in causing the disease has already been disproved by the English commission.

Dr. Low, leader of the commission of the Royal society, who has recently returned to England, found that the disease had already extended over a large area and computed that it had killed between 20,000 and 30,000 people during the last year or two. Its virulence is also increasing. The length of the attack varies from one to six months, and it is invariably fatal. He classes it with hydrophobia in hopelessness. It is distinctly contagious. The depopulation caused by its ravages is making itself seriously felt, and unless some way of checking the disease is found the outlook for many African provinces is a gloomy one.

A DOUBLE FINE.

Braintree Man Convicted of Violating Quarantine Law.

Benjamin Levengie of Braintree was in court this morning to answser two complaints. One for violation of the the quarantine law and the second for assault on Officer Larkin.

It appeared that Levengie was employed by Mr. Page of Braintree. That he went to Charlestown to transport a cow that had arrived on the train from New Hampshire.

Levangie was armed with a permit to transport the cow, issued by Dr. Peters of the Cattle Commission, this permit provided that the cow should be transported in a wagon or pung. Levengie loaded the cow into an express wagon. At Norfolk Downs the cow fell out and he proceeded to walk her through the streets.

They were overhauled in City Square by Dr. Henderson, Inspector of Animals, who asked for the permit. Unfortunately Levengie had left his permit at the freight office in Charlestown. He, however, refused to give Dr. Henderson any satisfactory answer and the police station was notified.

Officer Larkin overhauled the team on School street, and it was then that Levengie made the asssult on the officer. He was placed under arrest and the cow quarantined. In court Levengie was fined $2 for violation of the quarantine law, and $5 for assaulting the officer.

TODAY'S COURT.

Sidney Whalen was arraigned for drunkenness and disturbing the peace at Milton. The complaint for drunkenness was placed on file and on that for disturbing the peace he was fined $5.

James McKeown and John Lawrie were arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Cases continued until Feb. 2.

William J. Norrie was fine $3 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Benjamin Levaggie was arraigned for violation of the quarantine laws by driving a cow through the streets of Quincy without a permit from the Cattle Commission; also for assault on Officer Larkin. He was fined $2 for violation of the quarantine law, and $5 for assault.

The continued case of William Hatch of Houghs Neck for assault on Edith M. Ryder was called Saturday and he was discharged.

—Charles H. Foss, an officer at the house of correction, Dedham, has filed a bankruptcy petition. His debts amount to $391.32; assets $25.

—Forty-three took the examination for letter carriers at Weymouth last week. Nine carriers and three substitutes are wanted.

—William Heitz of Egg Harbor City, N. J. is the possessor of a curious freak of nature. It is a piece of flint corn which nature has moulded into a right hand. All five fingers are wonderfully well shaped and are in such a position that a baseball would just fit into their clutches. This ear of corn was the only one on the stock, which was in a large field.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

THE EMERSON CENTENARY.

Two Tributes Proposed In Memory of Greatest American Philosopher.

May 25, 1903, will be the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Ralph Waldo Emerson, poet, lecturer and philosopher. How his birthday shall be commemorated is just now a question agitating literary Boston and especially that part of it that moves and has its being out at Cambridge, in the precincts of Harvard university, for, since Emerson stands forth as perhaps the most distinguished literary man in the entire list of Harvard graduates, it has been thought fitting that he should in some way be especially honored by his alma mater.

Two tributes have thus far been proposed. An Emerson hall for housing the department of philosophy was suggested some time ago by Professor Hugo Munsterberg, the chairman of the Harvard philosophical department, and a good start has already been made toward getting together funds for its erection, so that it is now expected that the cornerstone will be laid on the date of the centenary.

The other tribute that has been proposed is a general celebration by the college itself, though there is a possible objection in that the university never yet has had an anniversary jubilee over any one individual and that distinguished alumni are so numerous on the college lists that once a precedent of celebrating a birthday is established it will be hard to refuse to do so again. But this difficulty will probably be surmounted and exercises held that will delight the spirit of the Concord philosopher, if he hovers over them, in spite of his own stanza:

Far or forgot to me are near,
Shadow and sunlight are the same.
The vanished gods to me appear,
And one to me are shame and fame.

FISHES IN HIS BATHTUB.

Heavy Amateur Fisherman Obliged to Seek Sport at Home.

John H. Burr, called the "Mayor of Burrville," and one of the heaviest men in the section around Winsted, Conn., is an enthusiastic fisherman, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. Before the recent thaw came he could be found on one of the numerous ponds about Winsted fishing through the ice for pickerel. Now he is most likely to be found at home fishing in a bathtub.

Mrs. Burr, fearing that her husband, who tips the scales at 300 pounds, might break through the ice and drown on one of his trips, had a large bathtub in their residence stocked with a hundred or more live fish. The fish have running water, and now whenever the "Mayor" has the fishing fever he takes his pole and hook and starts for the bathroom.

Marriage In the Army.

There's a rumor in the army that a certain general said
That none of the lieutenants should be allowed to wed.
He says the pay is far too small a family to support.
We will admit it is, sir, and this is our retort:

Look out, Mr. General! Our uncle needs us all,
And we love the old army, though the pay is beastly small,
But we'll send in our commissions if you won't let us recruit
The pretty girls we meet, sir, as part of warfare loot!

You think the pay is far too small for wife and children, too,
But supposing that we fall in love, what would you have us do?
Around the poker table in our desperation tarry
And lose our money recklessly instead of save and marry?

Look out, Mr. General! You don't want us to resign,
And as you old ones die of age leave holes along the line!
You'll want us in the future when the war drums roll again,
And then it is our time will come, for we will lead the men!

We love the old flag, general, and we gladly give our lives
For "duty, honor, country," but we can't give up our wives!
We love a home and children, and that sweet joy we crave,
E'en though a bullet cuts it short and sends us to the grave.

—Marion Ethel Hamilton in Army and Navy Journal.

LONGEST LOG CARRIER.

It Is In Maine and Is Three Thousand Feet In Length.

There has just been completed between Eagle and Chamberlain lakes in northern Maine the longest log carrier in the world, writes the Bangor correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean. This carrier will cause the bringing of many million feet of lumber down the Penobscot river to the sawmills of Maine which under the conditions that have prevailed since lumbering began in Maine would go down the St. John river to New Brunswick mills, although the logs were cut in Maine.

The log carrier runs over the rising ground that divides the watershed of the Allegash river and the eastern branch of the Penobscot, the Allegash being a tributary of the St. John. The carrier is 3,000 feet long, and its cable is 6,000 feet. It is built to last for years and when running at its regular speed will deliver seven thirty foot logs a minute, or about 4,000,000 feet a day. It will carry at a time 100 logs of that length.

The cable is of steel rope an inch and a quarter in diameter and weighs 100 tons. The motive power for operating the plant connected with the carrier consists of a Westinghouse automatic compound engine of 150 horsepower and two sixty horsepower boilers of the locomotive type. The carrier will be in use for the first time when the driving begins next season—that is, about the first of May.

GIRL CHANGES COLOR.

Her Skin Varies In Sympathy With Different Emotions.

Miss Marga Cerbus, a young Roumanian girl whose skin possesses the remarkable property of changing color in sympathy with her varying sensations, is the physiological wonder of the day for Parisian scientists, says the New York World.

Her skin does not reflect the colors in her vicinity, but a complete change is produced by the different emotions she feels. Anger makes it much darker than that of a negress. Joy turns it to a pretty pink shade. Anxiety causes her to assume a pale greenish tint. Fear turns half her body to a beautiful violet hue. The most extraordinary feature of the case is that the colors rarely commingle, and for the greater part of the time changes take place without apparent cause.

Her natural color is a warm dark shade. Sometimes the face turns suddenly to a deadly white, while the rest of the body remains unchanged. At other times an arm, the neck, a hand or a foot turns a different shade, according to the sensation experienced. The only time the skin remains without variation is when she is asleep. These curious variations in skin have only made their appearance since she met with a boating accident in which she nearly drowned.

INCUBATOR FOR CROWS.

Farmer Billings Hatches Them to Supply a Millinery House.

Farmer Billings of Brookdale has taken a contract to furnish a Chicago milliner with crow heads at 25 cents apiece, writes the Susquehanna (Pa.) correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean. It costs something to get a dead crow, because it is an elusive bird and ammunition costs something.

Billings, however, is an enterprising speculator. He has devised a scheme by which a maximum number of crows' heads can be obtained at small expense. He has set up a chicken incubator in which are placed as fast as laid the eggs of about a hundred hen crows that have been trapped, with perhaps a dozen cock crows.

Within fifteen days the little creatures are hatched, and a fortnight later they are ready to be beheaded. It is understood that the head of a crow chick is worth just as much as that of the oldest of the same species. At the uniform rate of four for a dollar dead they will pay the producer. Farmer Billings has the only crow hatchery in the world, and he is justly proud of it.

MRS. ROOSEVELT HALTED.

Had to Identify Herself to Get Into the White House.

Mrs. Roosevelt had to stop and identify herself the other afternoon before she was allowed to enter the White House grounds, says a Washington dispatch to the Philadelphia Press. She had been out walking and returned by way of the executive office entrance.

As she started up the steps Will Wheeler, a policeman on the White House detail only a few days, stepped toward her.

"That's all right; that's the missus," whispered one of the old guards, but Wheeler didn't hear him.

"You can't go through here, madam. The grounds are closed to the public," Wheeler said.

"I know, but I live here," replied the president's wife. "This is my home."

Then Wheeler, realizing her identity with an expressive "Oh!" backed away, while Mrs. Roosevelt walked on with a smile that could be seen through her veil.

A Senate Poet.

A small sheet of white paper passed around the senate the other day and as it reached each desk was greeted with quiet chuckles. Finally, on promising to conceal the identity of the perpetrator, the New York Tribune's Washington correspondent was permitted to read the choice bit of senatorial verse. It read:

The cold wind doth blow,
And we shall have snow,
And what will poor Robin do then, poor thing?
He'll contribute his dust
To the Standard Oil trust,
And Harper, still harping, will build a new wing.

ELEMENTS AGAINST HER

Steamer Dawson City Had Memorable Trip From Nome to Port Townsend

Port Townsend, Wash., Jan. 26.—The steamer Dawson City, 86 days from Nome, reached port yesterday under sail after a tempestuous voyage. The entire trip was marked by a succession of accidents and exasperating delays, while the fury of the elements seemed to combine to hinder her passage to her destination.

Soon after starting south the boilers commenced leaking, with the result that the fresh water supply was consumed. Then fuel began to run short and the vessel was forced to resort to such canvas as could be fashioned into sails. The vessel put into Port Moller for fuel and water, and after remaining two weeks started again only to run into fierce storms, which drove her from her course. Again fuel ran out, so the Dawson City headed for Dutch harbor to refill her bunkers and tanks. At this port her sailors deserted and refused to continue the voyage. The run from Dutch harbor to this port was made in 22 days. The Dawson City brought no passengers except her owner, Felix Brown of Seattle, and his wife.

On Oct. 20 last the Dawson City left Nome and since that time she has been reported only once. That was on Nov. 13. The vessel is a screw propeller, ocean freight steamer, with accommodations for some passengers. She plies between Alaskan ports and Seattle.

Vanderbilt In Scorching Case

Paris, Jan. 26.—The appeal of W. K. Vanderbilt against the sentence of two days' imprisonment for scorching on an automobile last year came up for hearing yesterday. Vanderbilt was summoned by the court last summer on this charge of scorching, but being in America at the time he did not appear and was sentenced in default. His counsel said yesterday that Vanderbilt never drove an automobile himself and in this instance was not even in the vehicle. This contention was supported by an affidavit by the Duke of Marlborough and the judge postponed further hearing of the case to Feb. 13 for further testimony.

Services For Dead Congressmen

Washington, Jan. 26.—The house of representatives yesterday inaugurated the experiment of holding memorial services for deceased members upon the Sabbath. It will be followed hereafter during this session and probably will become the general practice in the house in the future. At the session yesterday tribute was paid to the life and public services of the late Representatives Russell of Connecticut and Sheppard and De Graffenreid of Texas.

Is Pledged to Celibacy

Vienna, Jan. 26.—The newspapers here deny the rumor emanating from Budapest that Archduke Eugene, one of the second cousins of Emperor Francis Joseph, is about to renounce his rank in order to marry. Archduke Eugene enjoys a large income as the grand master of the Ancient and Noble Teutonic order, one of the chief obligations of which is celibacy.

Pretender Advancing on Fez

Tangier, Jan. 26.—News from Fez dated Jan. 21 stated that the pretender, Buhamara, was then advancing at the head of large forces and had arrived at a point 25 miles from Fez. A decisive battle was expected and, should the sultan's main army be defeated, it was thought that the city of Fez would inevitably fall into the hands of Buhamara.

Castellane a Winner

Paris, Jan. 26.—The election of a deputy in the Basses-Alpes district, rendered necessary by the invalidation of Count Boni de Castellane's election by the chamber of deputies, took place yesterday. Castellane was again a candidate, and was opposed by Andre Siegfried. The returns show that the re-election of Castellane is assured.

Armory and Public Hall Gone

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 26.—Strong hall, originally built for a skating rink, but recently used as an armory and for large gatherings, was completely destroyed by fire yesterday. The loss is $28,000. The fire originated among rubbish in the basement, probably due to spontaneous combustion.

WOULD YOU INVEST

BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S

STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $115.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 22 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property, that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 9c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $2.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions. HERBERT S. FOR THE YOUNGER SET.

Pretty Gowns Both Expensive and Inexpensive.

The favorite material for young girls' dancing frocks is ring spotted net or point d'esprit, which seems to be getting cheaper and cheaper and is quite admirable on account of its fresh appearance combined with its durability. To be effective it must be made very full, and all white or all black is the best, although there are some very chic evening toilets of white or ecru colored net with rings of black chenille.

FRENCH GOWN.

The skirts may be gored around the hips and fall in full folds around the feet or tucked at the waist with a series of flounces from the knees downward. In either case the bodice corresponds.

Artificial flowers are worn in the evening, but they must be of the very best quality to look well. Roses and violets are perhaps the most popular. The most economical materials for dinner dresses are silks, satins and panne, for any one of these will outwear several others composed of light fabrics. Black is always smart, particularly when relieved by a good bertha and trimmings of lace. Girls look charming in black, provided they are not too thin, for black accentuates thinness. Pure white is also trying and requires a fresh, rosy complexion.

A gown of chiffon shirred in panels is the subject of the sketch. This effect is both chic and novel.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

—Mr. Schwab is not ashamed of his humble start in life. In fact he is justly proud of it and his palace in New York is to be ornamented by allegorical statues of Labor and Metallurgy. If all of our millionaires should indulge in this commendable encouragement of art we might have some fine specimens of washtubs, hoes, ploughs and other useful farm and shop implements.—Rockland Standard.

The SOUTHERNERS

CHAPTER V.

WHAT HAPPENED ON THE SHELL ROAD.

HIGH noon and high tide on the Shell road. The gray road following the curves of the shore was untenanted at the moment save by three persons on horseback.

Although he was a sailor, Boyd Peyton rode with the ease of a southern cavalier long accustomed to the saddle. His companion was a good match for him. She wore a close fitting riding habit of navy blue, a little, stiff hat to match it, with a gray veil drooping behind it, and gray gauntlets. She had exchanged her ankle ties for dainty little boots, and as he had mounted her upon her horse he had not failed to notice her small high arched instep, the hall mark of the high bred southern woman, which she had to perfection. The force of the breeze, accentuated by their quick motion, had added a deeper color to the richness of her brown cheeks. The wind blew her hair hither and thither as they galloped along. She laughed aloud sometimes in very heedless joy in life. She was so young and happy. Jerry, the negro groom in the Annan livery, who rode some distance behind them, if he thought of them at all, would have called them a handsome pair.

Peyton had spent the entire morning at the Annans', renewing his acquaintance with the judge. After luncheon he had begged Mary to ride with him on the Shell road, then, as now, the driving and riding resort of fashionable Mobile. It was yet so early in the afternoon, however, that they had the road to themselves.

Peyton was as full of satisfaction as anything short of her complete acceptance of him could have made him. He loved her, he had told her so in spite of his promise, and she had listened at last in spite of her refusal, and had half responded. He was determined to win her, and she had given him hope. It was enough to make any man happy. The added exhilaration of the gallop completed his joy. All too soon they drew rein at Frederic's house, at the end of the made road.

Far to the front of them the unpaved road, abruptly degenerating into a mere bridle path, wound through the woods and lost itself in the distance among the trees.

"Let us alight from the horses and go out on the wharf yonder," said Peyton, pointing off to the left, where a long wharf on piles extended far out over the water.

"I think I should like it," replied the girl; "I am a little tired after our rapid gallop."

Leaving the horses to the care of the negro, he helped her down the steps, and they walked slowly out to the end of the wharf.

"I know not which is the more beautiful," said the girl, as they paused at the boat landing. "Look at the road. Is there another such on the continent? I love those great live oaks, green still although it is winter, and all the vivid rich color of those huge broad leaved magnolia trees."

She stretched out her arms to the picturesque shore, as if she would clasp it in loving embrace.

"Yes," answered Peyton, smiling approvingly at her enthusiasm, "and what makes the oaks more beautiful are the long festoons of that Spanish moss hanging from every limb and the mistletoe clustered around the tops. Even the white China berries and the red yupons and those little bayonet palms add to the charm. But beauty is upon this side, too," he added, sweeping his arm seaward, jealous for his chosen element. "I never expected to be a sailor."

"No," said the girl, "you should have been a poet."

"Yes, perhaps; but since I am a sailor I am glad. There is no touch of verdant nature on the sea, but it has a freshness and a life of its own, and the waves—see how they splash! In their light and airy play they remind me of you."

"Does everything remind you of me, I wonder?" turning to look at him.

"Everything that is beautiful," he answered promptly. For the life of her she could not but be pleased with such exquisite lovemaking, and, smiling, she showed her pleasure. "To me," he continued, "you stand for everything that is lovely, not only beauty, grace, charm, but the crown of womanhood besides. You are so pure and sweet—in your soul, I mean. In my sight you are purity itself, purer than the snow upon the mountain upon which not even the wing of the eagle has ever cast a shadow, and you are as far above me as that same crest."

His horse was quivering with excitement.

He was dreaming of her again and reading his dreams aloud, and, as before, she listened eagerly.

"Speak to me, dearest," he said at last, as if just awakened. "I love to hear you speak.

"Ah, with laughing water mingle
The love song of your choice;
'Twill be but shadowed echo
To the music of your voice.

It enchants me. I'd rather hear it than"—

"That's a perfectly lovely verse, Boyd," she interrupted. "Who wrote it?"

"I did. 'A poor thing, but my own,'" he quoted softly. "You said I was a poet. I've written reams of verses about you, but they do not satisfy me. Nothing I could say would measure up to my standard of devotion to you. I feel humble before you, unworthy of you, yet I aspire beyond merit or desert because I love you."

"No, no; you exalt me too much!" cried the girl. "I am nothing that you say. I am not at all what you think me. I am nothing but an ordinary southern girl who"—

"Who is the queen of my heart forever," he interrupted, taking her hand. "No; don't draw it away," he continued. "Let me have this hour for my own. Something tells me that I shall not have many."

It was useless, wrong, foolish, yet she let him retain it for a little space, soon to be broken.

"What's that?" she said slowly at last, drawing away her hand as her eyes turned from him and for a brief space searched the shore.

"Where?" disappointment speaking in his voice.

"There! Coming along the road toward Frederic's! A horseman! See! He is waving to us! Now I recognize him. I'd know that gray horse among a thousand. It's Mr. Bob Darrow. He's shouting something. He has a message for us evidently. What can it be? Some word from father, perhaps. Come; let us go and meet him."

Gathering her skirts in her hand, she ran along the wharf, tripped up the stairs and reached her own horse just as Darrow reined in his gray.

He had ridden as if pursued. His horse was quivering with excitement and flecked with foam. As he was jerked back on his haunches by his rider's powerful hand Darrow sprang to the ground, tore his hat from his head with his gauntleted hand and cried out his message. His eyes were shining; his fair face was crimson with color; his voice trembled with the heavy purport of his tidings.

"I went to your house, Miss Mary!" he cried. "They told me that you had come riding here. How are you, Peyton? Glad to see you back. You came in the nick of time, old fellow," he continued, clasping the other's outstretched hand. It was the first time the friends had met for years, but Darrow had time for no other greeting. "I knew you would be crazy to hear the news, Miss Mary," he added, turning once more to the girl, "so I saddled the gray here and rode like one possessed to find you and tell you."

"What is the news, Mr. Darrow?" asked the girl eagerly.

"South Carolina has gone out of the Union! The ordinance of secession was passed at Charleston today! This is the beginning of the southern republic!" he cried exultingly.

He waved his hat in the air and made the live oaks ring with a mighty cheer, in which the shriller voice of the girl triumphantly joined.

WOLCOTT WITHDRAWS

Says He Is a Victim of Treachery and Urges Election of Teller

Denver, Jan. 26.—At 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon the Democratic members of the senate and house of representatives cast their ballots, 51 in number, for Henry M. Teller, to succeed himself as United States senator. The result was reached after a week of untiring effort on the part of the Democratic leaders.

The climax in the senatorial fight came last night, when ex-Senator E. O. Wolcott, the candidate of the so-called "stalwart" wing of the Republican party, announced his practical withdrawal from any further contest, and urged the people of Colorado to accept the situation as it stands by the election of Senator Teller to succeed himself.

The announcement was made in a signed statement in which Wolcott charges certain Republican leaders associated with the anti-Wolcott forces in the Republican ranks with treachery, deliberate and continuous, although he disposes of others of the anti-Wolcott crowd by characterizing them as "dupes" of the main conspirators.

Speaking of Mr. Teller, the ex-senator said that in no sense was he party to the frauds, although he was the beneficiary. He pays high tribute to the senator-elect.

The Haverhill Situation

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 26.—A new move was made in the local strike situation yesterday when, at a meeting of the Central Labor union, resolutions condemning the Shoe Workers' Protective union and supporting the Boot and Shoe Workers' union were unanimously passed by the delegates. A mass meeting of the Shoe Workers' Protective union was also held and it was voted to place the turned department in the union stamp factories where strikes are at present being waged on the unfair list. This also includes the cutting room of one of the factories.

This Week In Congress

Washington, Jan. 26.—This week will probably witness the passage by the house of the Fowler currency bill. The house managers have arranged to bring in a special rule making that measure the continuing order until disposed of, beginning on Wednesday.

The feature of the week in the senate will be continuation of the contest over the statehood bill. The lines are now more closely drawn than they have ever been in this bill, and but few unprejudiced persons would undertake to say positively on which side the disaster must befall.

Schooner and Coal Lost

Sydney, N. S., Jan. 26.—Schooner Griqualaad, bound from Port Morien for Portsmouth, N. H., with a cargo of coal, foundered during Thursday's gale 35 miles southwest off Cape Sable. The tidings were brought to Louisburg by the steamer Mystic, having on board Captain Emenau, his wife and seven men, comprising the crew of the Griqualand.

Died With His Boots On

Middlesboro, Ky., Jan. 26.—Henry Cummings, notorious among the highwaymen of the mountains, met death from ambush at daybreak here yesterday on the principal street. The assassins are unknown. Cummings had killed at least three men, while the death of others is generally attributed to him.

Hustling on Naval Work

Washington, Jan. 26.—In naval circles it is stated that rush orders have been given to all navy yards and stations to push to completion the work in hand. It is said that this is in accordance with the rule of the department, when disturbing conditions exist, to increase its activity.

Earthquake Shattered Mountain

Mexico City, Jan. 26.—News has been received here of earthquakes and volcanic disturbances in Chihuahua. Nenta mountain has been shriven in twain and the atmosphere is filled with fine volcanic dust. An earthquake at midnight on the 23d was terrifying to the inhabitants.

Stromboli at Work Again

Rome, Jan. 26.—After a brief spell of inactivity the volcano Stromboli is again in eruption. Great quantities of lava and stones are being thrown up and to an immense distance from the crater. The eruption affords a magnificent spectacle at night.

CLOUDS ARE LIFTING

Speedy Settlement of Venezuelan Row Predicted

BOWEN'S LATEST PROPOSAL

Will Be In Hands of Allies Today and Immediate Acceptance Is Anticipated—Why American Efforts to Sever Blockade Agreements Failed

Washington, Jan. 26.—A long conference between Minister Bowen and British Ambassador Herbert, beginning at noon yesterday, followed by shorter conferences between Herbert, Mr. Des Planches, the Italian ambassador, and Count Quadt, the German charge d'affaires, indicated diplomatic activity in Washington over the Venezuelan situation. All the negotiators decline to discuss the results of yesterday's meetings, but the general statement by them that the situation warrants hope of early relief is significant of what has been accomplished in the last 24 hours.

Strict reticence is maintained by all the negotiators as to the nature of this guaranty and until the joint reply of the powers is received this will not be disclosed.

Count Quadt has been advised by the German foreign office of the reasons for the bombardment of the San Carlos forts. This explanation agrees with that cabled from Berlin.

Minister Bowen feels very optimistic of the future in the Venezuelan matter. He adheres to the belief expressed by him in the statement he gave out at midnight last night that the case would be settled soon and satisfactorily. His latest proposition, the important feature of which is a matter of guaranty as a preliminary to the raising of the blockade, will be in the hands of all the allies by this afternoon, and Mr. Bowen thinks an answer will be received in Washington within a very few days, possibly by tomorrow.

Mr. Bowen declines to discuss the announcement made by a Brussels newspaper to the effect that a commission appointed by the United States will be charged with the administration of the maritime customs offices in Venezuela. The inference drawn from his remarks is that, while the statement as a whole is incorrect, yet there is an element of probability to some feature of it.

The important fact is developed that the triple alliance against Venezuela was far more comprehensive than was at first supposed. The agreement between Great Britain, Germany and Italy involved not only a joint initiative action for the collection of their claims, but each of the three powers pledged itself to lift the blockade simultaneously.

This fact was learned last night from a European diplomat who is acquainted with the details of the alliance, and explains the fruitless efforts made by Ambassador Meyer at Rome and Mr. White, the American charge at London, as well as by Mr. Bowen, acting for Venezuela, to sever the agreement and secure the consent of at least one of the allies to lift the blockade.

The iron-clad nature of the alliance has been already communicated to the state department by Mr. White and it is this fact which was responsible for the grave apprehension heretofore felt regarding the outcome of the dispute. The reply of the powers therefore will necessarily be joint. A favorable answer to Minister Bowen's last proposition, and it is the belief of all the negotiators, as well as of the administration, that the answer will be favorable, will mean the immediate withdrawal of all the blockading ships.

Views of the German Press

Berlin, Jan. 26.—The German press calmly discusses the bombardment of San Carlos. The leading newspapers here and in the provincial cities publish telegrams from New York, reproducing the views held there, and giving the supposed attitude of the United States government in regretting the bombardment, the loss of life it caused, and its consequences. The newspapers take the position that if the United States put itself in the place of Germany, it would see that the commander of the Panther, unless the blockade were to become a mere operetta, was obliged to enter the lagoon of Maracaibo, and that the action of the fort and the subsequent co-operation of the Vineta with the Panther was an inevitable consequence.

The newspapers attach some importance to President Castro's throwing ridicule on the blockade and his remark that he could render the blockade useless through the Maracaibo lagoon.

The foregoing statement is a summary of the editorials published in The National Zeitung, The Post, The Boersen Zeitung and other representative organs.

Embezzlement Charged

New Haven, Jan. 26.—Henry F. Mullen, who was formerly the head of the stock brokerage firm of Mullen & Doody of this city, was arrested at Providence on seven allegations charging him with embezzlement of moneys paid to his firm by customers last summer. Mullen agreed to return to New Haven without requisition formalities.

WOMEN BACK TO WORK

As Requested by Boot and Shoe Workers' Union

INTEREST IN INJUNCTION

Spectators Had to Be Turned Away to Make Room for Large Number of Witnesses—Police Officers and a Manufacturer Testify

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 27.—Some of the women stitchers who struck the other day at the Watson Shoe company factory in sympathy with the Knights of Labor cutters, regretted their action, and returned to work yesterday. They said that they had been impressed by the argument of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union. Nearly all the departments in this factory are working, though not with full force.

The Boot and Shoe Workers' union put its cutters into eight factories, as usual, about the same number of men going to work. The anticipated exodus Saturday and Sunday did not take place, or if it did the Boot and Shoe Workers' union had enough more men arrive to fill up the places in the ranks. The Knights of Labor cutters remain firm.

There was no police escort for the Boot and Shoe Workers' union strike breakers, and that feature of the trade dispute is practically over.

F. R. Hall of Boston opened his hearing yesterday in the Lynn council chamber on the application for an injunction against the Knights of Labor Cutters' assembly, restraining that organization from interfering with the operatives in the union stamp shoe factories, or with the plans of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union. James H. Sisk appeared for the manufacturers who have applied for the injunction and William H. Niles and Peter A. Breen for the cutters and stitchers.

Mr. Hall sits as master in this case and will report the facts, as he finds them, to the superior court in Boston. Being the first case on record here in which an injunction has been sought against women it attracted much attention. So many witnesses have been summoned that it became necessary to call upon the police to clear the room of some spectators in order to find accommodation for all of them.

Chief of Police Burckes was the first witness and he described the tumultuous scenes on the streets Jan. 20, when the Boot and Shoe Workers' union cutters left the factories at night. He told of the disturbances at the several factories and of the arrest of five men for inciting to riot. His evidence was a description of the scene from day to day.

Counsel for the Knights of Labor cutters stated that to expedite matters he would admit the existence of a state of affairs as described by the police on the nights mentioned. Cross-examined, Sergeant Bessom said he saw none of the defendants present. Patrolman Murray described the arrest of a man in the crowd at Lasters' hall Jan. 20; he was not a cutter and did not notice any cutters in the crowd.

Thomas H. Logan of the firm of Walton & Logan told of negotiations with the Knights of Labor Cutters' assembly before the strike. He was asked to give a bond to employ none but Knights of Labor cutters and refused. The men struck, and some of the women stitchers went out with them. The following Monday new cutters were supplied to him by the Boot and Shoe Workers' union. There were 15 or 20 pickets at all times in front of his factory. He described the scenes when the men left work, the chase after a covered wagon containing cutters, and declared that he recognized some of his striking workmen in the crowds. He identified a copy of a circular distributed by the cutters to the stitchers, asking them to quit the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and to strike in the factory.

Will Protect American Interests

Washington, Jan. 27.—The Brazilian minister and the Bolivian charge here called separately on Secretary Hay yesterday to acquaint him with the disposition of their respective governments in the dispute over the possession of the territory of Acre. It appeared that the situation was really critical, but both diplomats assured Secretary Hay that under no conditions would American interests in Acre suffer beyond the happenings absolutely incident to warfare.

DR THOMPSON UPHELD

Both as to Methods of Killing Cattle and Compensation Therefor

Boston, Jan. 27.—Dr. Harry Q. Thompson of Brighton, inspector of cattle of the bureau of animal industry, who was fined $15 in the Concord district court for alleged cruelty in his method of killing animals in the extermination of the foot and mouth disease, was discharged yesterday by Judge Brown in the United States circuit court. The case involved technicalities in law as to whether the federal government or the state should handle the case of Dr. Thompson. The points around which all the evidence revolved was whether or not Dr. Thompson had purchased, or as good as purchased, the animals slaughtered, and whether or not he was responsible to the state or to the United States.

Orlando E. Patch, the complainant, admitted on the stand that he was not complaining particularly about the method of killing as that he had not received what he wanted for the animals.

On the constitutionality of the act of congress appropriating money for the killing of diseased cattle Judge Brown upheld the power of congress to pass the act under which Dr. Thompson acted. He also held that Dr. Thompson acted under the proper authority from the federal officials. In view of this, he said, Dr. Thompson was entitled to a discharge. This overrides the state courts and clears Dr. Thompson of the charge against him.

To Get $2500 a Year For Life

Boston, Jan. 27.—William E. Huntington, dean in the college of liberal arts at Boston university, was yesterday chosen acting president of the university by the trustees, to serve until President Warren's successor shall have been elected. President Warren's resignation was accepted, and resolutions expressing the esteem, honor and affection in which he is held were adopted. The additional recommendation was adopted that "the university legally guarantee to Mr. Warren, in recognition of the notable services which he has rendered the university for more than 30 years, a salary of at least $2500 a year during life."

Crew of the Luce Safe

Boston, Jan. 27.—Steamer Chattahoochee arrived from Savannah yesterday, having on board four members of the schooner Hattie C. Luce, which they took off the vessel off Chatham yesterday morning. Captain Heal fell overboard in trying to board the schooner John H. Buttrick after the collision on Friday night. The other members of the crew were saved by the Buttrick at the time of the collision. The Luce was on her way from Vinalhaven to New York with 500 tons of cut granite. After being abandoned, the Luce was picked up by the tug Storm King and towed to Vineyard Haven.

Wings Clipped Just In Time

Portland, Me., Jan. 27.—An unsuccessful attempt to escape was made at the county jail yesterday. The prisoners concerned are under state prison sentences and are to be transferred to Thomaston today. When the discovery was made several bars were nearly sawed off, and but a brief time longer would have been needed for the convicts to have gained their liberty.

Liquor Dealers Get a Jolt

Biddeford, Me., Jan. 27.—The liquor dealers who have had their places raided and who are out on bail received a decided shock yesterday in the sentencing of John Curtis to four months at hard labor in the county jail at Alfred. As the Curtis case was considered in the nature of a test case, it is thought that very few of the other dealers will appear for trial.

Granite State Solons Hustling

Concord, N. H., Jan. 27.—At last evening's session of the house of representatives 90 bills and joint resolutions were introduced and notices were given of 142 others, breaking all records for the quantity of new legislation proposed and presented at a single session. The time for giving notices expired last night and the total of 550 bills is the largest in the history of the state.

Smallpox Shuts Off Amusements

Biddeford, Me., Jan. 27.—At the meeting of the mayor and the members of the board of health last night it was decided to close all places of amusement on account of additional outbreaks of smallpox. Several public schools are closed and the authorities will decide today whether to include the parochial schools.

Strikers Running Busses

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 27.—For the first time since the beginning of the strike of the motormen and conductors of the Connecticut Railway and Lighting company a regular schedule was adopted for cars to be run after dark last night. A feature is the running of busses by the strikers.

Boxer Sympathizer Made Governor

Pekin, Jan. 27.—Hu Lien Sun, governor of Hunan, one of the officials blacklisted by the powers after the Boxer troubles on account of complicity in the massacre of missionaries, has been appointed governor of Shan Si. The ministers are sending a note to the government saying that considering the former and recent missionary murders in the territory under his jurisdiction, it is not wise to send him to a province where the missionary interests are exceedingly important.

DOBLIN STORIES FALSE

Now Denies That Quigg Offered Bribe to Him

CALLED TO WASHINGTON

Says All He Knew About Details of What Lessler Claimed Was Learned From Newspapers—The Retraction Places Congressman In Bad Light

Washington, Jan. 27.—Philip Doblin, who testified before the house committee on naval affairs Saturday that he had approached Representative Lessler of New York with an offer of money to influence his vote on the submarine boat bill, and who made the further statement that he had been told there might be $1000 in it for him, made the astounding statement before that committee yesterday that he had made statements Saturday which were not true and that he wanted to retract his statement that Mr. Quigg had tendered a bribe to him.

The statement came without any previous warning that Doblin intended making any such retraction. Members of the committee looked at one another in amazement as Doblin went on with his statement.

Gustavus Rogers, an attorney, arose in the committee room after the first witness had left the stand in the morning and said he appeared for Mr. Doblin, who had stated to him that he (Doblin) had made some statements Saturday which were true and some which were false, and held in his hand a statement to which Mr. Doblin had sworn. The committee was unanimous in agreeing that Doblin appear in person forthwith. He was called and made specific denial of all statements he had previously made wherein he alleged attempts at bribery.

Doblin was rigidly cross-examined by practically every member of the committee and pressed vigorously for explanation of his action, but persisted that he was telling the truth and adhered to his denials.

Mr. Tayler, for the committee, quoted witness' testimony that Quigg had made an offer of money and asked if Quigg had done so. Witness replied in the negative. Doblin also said his statement was false when he testified at the previous hearing that he had told Lessler that there was $5000 in it if he could see his way clear to be friendly disposed to the submarine boat bill.

"The fact is," said Doblin, "the statements made regarding Mr. Quigg are not true. I read the article as it was handed me and I was told by Lessler, 'You have got to stand for this.'"

"And I said, 'Oh, that cannot be.'

"'Well,' he said, 'Then I am politically dead.'

"'Well,' I said, 'you carry me with you.'

"He said: 'You would be all right if you will just appear before this committee. I will go and see the speaker, and I will fix it up.' He goes out of the room, comes back, and he said he had seen the speaker, and said: 'It will be all right. All you have got to do is to go before the committee and substantiate my story.'

"When I was called to Washington I got this telegram: 'Take midnight train and come to me. Want to see you. Keep this confidential. Monte.'"

Mr. Tayler—"Who is 'Monte' in your association?"

A. "'Monte' is Congressman Lessler. I have had correspondence signed 'Monte.'"

Continuing, he said: "While we were eating breakfast I was reading the article, familiarizing myself as to the statement made."

"Then all you knew about the details of what Lessler claimed you learned from a newspaper?"

"At that time, yes."

"When did you learn anything else?"

"When we went to breakfast I said, 'What did you say, Monte.' He said, 'Can't you read that.' I looked it over and we were talking about $5000. He says 'I blurted it out.' I won't be positive whether he said that at the table or in the room. He said, 'I blurted it out and you have got to help me out here.'"

"Is that all that occurred?"

"He said, 'I mentioned your name. You simply have got to go and make your statement.'"

In answer to pointed questions by Representative Tayler witness said he did not want to imply or to say that the sub-committee had indicated to him when he first appeared what to say or had suggested what he should state.

Answering further questions by Mr. Tayler, Doblin said he talked with Lessler on the train on the way home after giving his testimony and after getting home he talked with members of his family.

"After you saw Mr. Rogers he told you you had made yourself subject to criminal prosecution, didn't he?" asked Mr. Tayler.

"Yes sir."

"And it was upon his advice you came here to tell us this statement this morning."

"I made the statement to him which he wrote out and I signed."

Mr. Roxey—"I want to ask if, whether in conversation with Lessler regarding submarine boats you mentioned the subject of money?"

The witness explained that they spoke of the price of the boats and what 10 would cost.

Mr. Rogers questioned his client, Doblin, and brought out a statement from him that no one had sent Doblin to him (Rogers).

"Before you had seen me," he asked, "on the way home by whom were you accompanied?"

"By Lessler."

"Was anything said about looking up some law?"

"Yes, sir, Mr. Lessler said he would look up the law tomorow."

Replying to further questions by Mr. Robers, witness said that no one had explained to him that sworn testimony before a committee of congress was the same as before a court of justice.

When Doblin left the stand some of the members, in view of the remarkable developments, favored dropping the investigation, but others urged that it be continued.

It is understood that Mr. Lessler asked that he be permitted to make a statement and said that he had another witness he would call, whereupon the committee decided to meet again today. Representative Lessler was present in the committee room when Doblin gave his testimony.

HERRAN'S CREDENTIALS

Morgan Thinks Them Not Clear Enough For Treaty Purposes

Washington, Jan. 27.—The executive session of the senate yesterday afternoon, instituted by Senator Morgan's inquiry as to Secretary Hay's reasons for believing that he had negotiated the pending canal treaty with the real government of Colombia, opens an important contest. Senator Morgan's view is that Dr. Herran, the Colombian charge d'affaires, lacked authority to sign for that government. Morgan holds that the present president of Colombia is not a lawful ruler, according to Colombia's constitution, but merely a military dictator. That instrument requires a biennial session of congress, whereas four years have elapsed without one.

The point Morgan raises has not escaped the attention of the administration. Its obvious answer is that the government of Colombia for the months of these treaty negotiations is the government we recognize as such.

Opposition to the treaty seems to be weakening. The long desired canal is apparently within reach. It will take some bravado for avowed advocates of a canal to vote against this important step towards getting one.

Tammany Must Recognize Garvey

New York, Jan. 27.—Justice Leventritt, in the supreme court yesterday, granted a peremptory writ of mandamus to Peter J. Garvey, ex-Chief Devery's lieutenant in the Ninth assembly district, ordering the general committee of Tammany hall to recognize him as a member of that committee, and also to recognize as a member of the executive committee of Tammany hall the person duly chosen by Garvey and his fellow members.

San Juan's Mayor Suspended

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 27.—Governor Hunt, acting independently of any judicial proceedings, yesterday suspended Manuel Egozcue, mayor of this city, from office, and ordered an independent investigation into the city frauds. A prosecution of Mayor Egozcue is pending on the charge of destroying city records, presumably to cover up evidence of peculation.

Cuban People Favor Lottery

Havana, Jan. 27.—The majority of the house of representatives and the people generally are in favor of a government lottery scheme to guarantee the proposed loan for the payment of the soldiers. Such a measure, however, would be vetoed by President Palma. The passage of a bill providing for the payment of the loan through the internal revenue is probable.

Object to Being Called Jack Rabbits

Salt Lake, Jan. 27.—The lower house of the legislature yesterday adopted resolutions severely censuring a Salt Lake paper which published an article stating that the members from San Pete county "could change places with jack rabbits and the legislature would be strengthened by the presence of their substitutes."

Part of Stolen Securities Recovered

St. Louis, Jan. 27.—It is reported from Stanton that securities to the amount of $90,000 were recovered yesterday from the house of Frank Rudolph by a party of detectives. These securities were part of the loot of the Bank of Union, from which property amounting to nearly $120,000 was taken.

Contracts to Go to Americans

Washington, Jan. 27.—The senate committee on inter-oceanic canals yesterday authorized a favorable report on the bill prohibiting the granting of contracts in relation to the proposed Panama canal to any but American citizens.

Good Afternoon.

Some are surprised that more money is wanted for Hospital after the recent canvass, but the canvass was for the running expenses of the Hospital for 1902 and ended the year free from debt for current expenses.

Back in 1892-4 times were hard for the Hospital. There was no systematic way of raising money, and enough was not received from patients, contributions and the endowment fund to pay expenses, hence the debt which has hung over the Hospital with but slight reduction. Of late years the house-to-house canvass has with other receipts paid the expenses each year, but not enough so that some could be used to reduce the debt.

It was the sentiment at the annual meeting of the Hospital corporation that if the well-to-do people of our city had given as generously of their means, when called upon by the house-to-house canvassers, as the poorer people, the Hospital would now be free from debt. It was surprising how generous the people of restricted means had been.

It is hoped if there are any who feel that they did not give as liberally as they could afford to, that they will now come forward and aid the committee in their endeavor to cancel the debt. In this way the Hospital will be doubly benefited for it will not only be free from debt, but Mr. Rice states that the Hospital will be enlarged to twice its capacity and there will be better accommodations for the nurses, who are now crowded into little bedrooms under the eaves.

An enlarged Hospital is much needed, as patients have to be turned away every week, many of whom would pay liberally. It will not be many years before the Hospital will become self-supporting, with patients, fees, interest on endowment fund and money from the city, but until that time comes let us contribute generously each year toward the running expenses and if we make a will in anticipation of the day that comes to us all, let us after remembering our own not forget the Hospital.

The committee on the debt, at present are: Mrs. George S. Keyes, Mr. Richard D. Chase, Mr. Edward H. Angier and Mr. Henry M. Faxon, who will receive contributions.

ON THEIR DIGNITY.

A Chairman Who Would Keep Committee Under His Thumb.

Representative Fallon is up against it in the Legislature or at least in the Committee on Water Supply of which he is a member, but he is not alone as will be seen. The chairman, however, seems to be carrying things a little too far.

The State House correspondent of the Brockton Enterprise writes: If any one would see a legislative committee hearing conducted with due decorum let him step into one where Senator Pratt of the Second Plymouth district is in the chair. It was my good fortune to attend such a hearing the other day. It was before the committee on water supply and there was a disposition on the part of some of the committee to push forward socialist views, while others were not perfectly observant of legislative propriety. The senator insisted upon strict order and system. Representative Carey of Haverhill, eager to bring out some point favorable to his socialist views, started to question the witness.

"Mr. Carey," interrupted the chairman, "please put your questions through the chairman." "I beg your pardon," replied the delinquent member, and he began his question in due form, saying, "Mr. Chairman" at the beginning.

A disturbance by loud conversation arose near the door, whither one of the counsel had withdrawn to speak to one of the interested parties. Rap went the pencil of Chairman Pratt. He directed the witness to suspend until quiet was restored, and the offender subsided speedily.

Representative Fallon of Quincy, not profiting by Mr. Carey's experience, followed in the same forbidden path and put his question to the witness without addressing the chairman. He was promptly called to order and requested to put his questions through the recognized head of the committee.

Ex-Representative Davenport of Greenfield, counsel for the remonstrants, plumped a question to the witness. Again came the reminder that the chair expected business to be done according to the proprieties and Mr. Davenport had to put his question through the chairman. When he proceeded to ask one witness a question before another had been excused he was requested by Senator Pratt to finish with one witness before beginning with another.

So the hearing was held up to a strict sense of propriety, and excellent order was observed in the room throughout the hearing.

Anniversary Calendar.

What are commonly called calendars,—those more or less ornamental tables giving the days of the week corresponding to the days of the year,—are, strictly speaking, almanacs. A calendar, according to the Standard Dictionary, is a collection of dates, and the Derby Anniversary Calendar, neatly bound in book form, belongs to the latter category and not the former.

Its compiler has collected 6,000 noteworthy dates and birthdays in American history and biography, and has assorted them according to the days of the year, each day occupying a page of the book. By this original and instructive arrangement, every day in the year is the anniversary of fifteen or more days of note, and the collection is not only brimful of interesting information of value, but grouped in a way to greatly assist the memory. For instance, how few will remember when Great Britan adopted the Gregorian Calendar; yet who will ever forget it when told that it was the same month and day that President McKinley died in 1901,—a day to be always known hereafter as Carnation Day. It is also the anniversary of the founding of Salem, Mass. (1628,) of the capture of the Mexico City (1847,) of the battle of South Mountain (1862,) and of the Alabama Award (1872.)

We learn further that President McKinley was shot on the twentieth anniversary of the day President Garfield was taken to Elberon, N. J., in the hope of saving his life (Sept. 6, 1881,)—a day observed by fasting and prayer. It was also the anniversary of the sailing of the Mayflower to America (1620,) and the birthday of Lafayette (1757,) Gen. Rosecrans (1819,) Bishop Armitage (1830,) and Ex-Attorney-General William H. H. Miller (1840,) etc., etc.

Corporal Punishment.

Superintendent of Schools, Gordon A. Southworth of Somerville, is authority for the statement that last year corporal punishment was administered to 336 pupils in the public schools of that city. There were 272 cases of truancy, resulting in the loss of 734 half days of school time. Of the total number of cases only about sixty per cent. were investigated by the truant officer. There were in the public schools last year, 3335 cases of tardiness and 1978 dismissals.

LAID AT REST.

Funeral of Barnabas Clarke formerly of Quincy.

The funeral of Barnabas Clarke was held Monday from his late residence on Pleasant street, Dorchester, where services were conducted by Rev. George Lyman Paine of St. Mary's Episcopal church. Many friends from different parts of the state were present to pay their last tribute of respect. Several beautiful floral pieces surrounded the casket, among them being a wreath from his wife and daughter, a cross from his employes, and a cross of iris and roses from his club friends.

The bearers were James Lyons, George Paterson, Clarence Burgin, Frank Brown, Charles Hersey, Dr. T. J. Dillon, Thomas Anderson, Michael J. Jordan, John Holan, James Hill, Fred O. Vegelahn and Maj. Hawkins. The burial was in the family lot at Mt. Wollaston cemetery, Quincy.

The Alliance Meeting.

Those present at the meeting at the First church parlors yesterday afternoon had the privilege of listening to Rev. G. D. Latimer of Salem, who read his lecture upon Robert Browning,—man and poet.

This paper was given in a most musical and refined voice, with no oratorical display and in a most earnest manner, as that of one in love with the subject. The speaker has been a careful student of this rather complex subject and he received careful attention from his listeners. Browning, he said, was "born to the purple" a fortunate and a most happy man who passed the three score and ten mark.

A happy marriage leading to fifteen delightful years with his gifted wife poetess, passed in his beloved Italy, mingling there with the society of artists and of poets, and later, twenty-five equally fortunate years in London, were his.

His mission was poetry, a message to humanity that was slow to reach the ears for whom it was written, but which is receiving ever, more and more recognition.

He was a glad optimist, he did not "learn in sorrow what he told in song," but his strong soul saw through this maze of things into the light beyond and to his wonderful works we can turn for the strength we need in troubled times.

A Brilliant Party.

On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Hilay Berger invited a number of their friends to call at their home on Nightingale avenue and share their hospitality. No one refused the invitation and no one regretted having accepted it. The atmosphere on that occasion seemed to have a tendency to make everyone jolly. Some sang, some danced, some cracked jokes and made speeches, and in fact all did something to make the evening a memorable one. Supper was served in an elaborate style and the guests did justice to the inner man. During the evening dancing was engaged in to the soul-stirring strains of Mr. Hyne's vocal orchestra. The Fore River quartette rendered some beautiful selections under the able leadership of Mr. McAllister. When the time came for parting all were sorry, but voted Mr. and Mrs. Berger a jolly good couple.

Knows the Ins and Outs.

Representative Freeman of Quincy is already figuring in the coal committee hearings and he will occupy a still larger share of the public attention before they are through, says Practical Politics. Freeman is agent for some vessels which are engaged in the coal carrying trade, and he knows the ins and outs of the coal business. For that reason, ever since he was named on the committee hints have been thrown out that he has no right on it and that he should resign. But Freeman is not to be moved that way. He is a medium-sized man with a sharp, decisive way of talking, and is the last man in the world to retire under fire. He will stay on the committee till the last gun is fired. Legally he has just as much right on the committee as any member. He is not in the coal business, except as he carries occasional cargoes of coal in vessels, for which he acts as agent. He was, however, one of the shipowners who held a meeting in Emery's shipping office and sent a protest to congress on the McCall free-shipping bill, which aimed to make all ships free for a period of 60 days.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

The new company starts out with sixty men and includes some from Weymouth and Cohassett who were members of the old company.

The company was mustered into service by Col. William A. Oakes, who was accompanied by Capt. Henry L. Kincaide, adjutant; Lieutenant Henry D. Warren, battalion adjutant; Surgeon Henry L. Dearing and Assistant Surgeon Francis L. Magurn.

These officers went to Hingham in the afternoon and examined the men. After the examination they were mustered into service. The impressive ceremony being witnessed by several hundred citizens.

ENGINEERS' UNION.

Want Recognition and a Uniform Scale of Wages.

The Engineers' Union of Quincy have submitted a bill of prices to their employers which they desire to go into effect April 1. In brief the demand is for the recognizing of the union and for uniform wages for the workmen. Up to the present time the union has not been recognized as such and there has been no uniform scale of wages each firm making its own bargain with its workmen.

An Equitable Law.

Dr. J. Cushing Gallison of Franklin is one of the ex-legislators who keeps in touch with current affairs says Practical Politics. Anent "The Law of Libel," Dr. Gallison writes:

"I note with interest the attack of 'Saugus Bennett' upon the newspaper libel bill, as shown in your last issue. It was my delight to be in that memorable battle in which the bill was fought to success. It then took two years to secure its passage. As an old printer who learned his trade by hand service 'at the case,' allow me to hope that all such attacks may end as they should, in smoke."

Printers and publishers in Massachusetts are not likely to forget the circumstances attending the movement to secure a more equitable libel law, and it is due to ex-Rep. Gallison that his services should be recalled at this time. It was in 1896-7, when he was a member of the lower branch, that the agitation took place, and the battle, as he says, was "fought to success." He received the thanks of the Suburban Press association, and there are few newspaper publishers and writers who would not go a long distance out of their way to show their appreciation of the doctor.

Mr. Faxon Represented.

Johnson and Johnson, Waltham, lawyers, have registered at the State House as Legislative agents till end of session, for Massachusetts Women's Christian Temperance Union, for Massachusetts Total Abstinence society, and for Henry H. Faxon, Quincy, on all matters relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors and the license law concerning the same.

—R. E. Foy, 257-263 Water street. This finely equipped and spacious store was opened in August, 1899, and sprang immediately into popular favor, so that now it has a large patronage among a particular and discriminating class of people. A full line of groceries, meats and vegetables is carried and the goods are displayed in a very neat and attractive manner. The furnishings of the store are of the latest and were supplied by Churchill. Mr. Foy was in the employ of L. M. Pratt, one of the largest and popular grocers in Quincy, for 12 years. He employs five clerks and a bookkeeper and keeps two teams in attendance.

OFFER OF VENEZUELA

Revenues For Payment of Claims of Allies

VALUE OF THE GUARANTEE

Now Being Examined, and If Found Satisfactory the Blockade Will Be Immediately Raised—Fleets to Remain In the Caribbean

Berlin, Jan. 27.—The guarantee offered to the powers through Mr. Bowen is a portion of the customs receipts of La Guaira and, perhaps, of several other ports. The proposal was first made to Great Britain, which provisionally accepted it, and then to Germany, which accepted it in principle on Saturday. The allies are now engaged in examining the value of the guarantee offered and are negotiating details, like the form of payment. In their declarations the representatives of the European powers promised to consent to the immediate raising of the blockade so soon as an agreement is concluded between them and Mr. Bowen embodying the conditions laid down by the powers.

A question which is being considered is whether the allies shall establish an international commission for receiving the customs or whether some neutral agent shall be appointed receiver. If the latter course is decided upon it is believed that some American authority will be chosen, perhaps Mr. Bowen. The proposal contemplates dividing the allies' claims into three grades and that each be treated separately and in proportion to their validity.

It is still believed here that all the matters in dispute will be satisfactorily arranged at Washington, without resorting to The Hague arbitration court.

Only a portion of the Venezuelan revenues will be available for the payment of the claims, because of the large part already hypothecated as security for foreign loans.

The German foreign office is very hopeful of an early settlement and of the raising of the blockade without much further delay.

A lively exchange of telegrams occurred between Germany and Great Britain on Saturday before the acceptances of Mr. Bowen's propositions as cabled from Washington. It is expected that Great Britain's acceptance was forwarded to Washington first because Mr. Bowen submitted his proposal to Ambassador Herbert before seeing Count Quadt, the German charge d'affaires.

Italy's attitude is to accept any arrangement agreeable to Great Britain and Germany.

So soon as the guarantee for the payment of the first grade claims is disposed of the negotiations for the settlement of the remainder will proceed with each power independently.

The alliance between Great Britain and Germany may be considered to have been definitely ended so soon as the guarantee is signed and the consequent raising of the blockade occurs.

The German cruisers Vineta and Falke left Curacao on Saturday and, therefore, the navy department here is not in communication with Commodore Scheder.

Washington Views

Washington, Jan. 27.—Up to the close of yesterday formal notice of the acceptance of the proposition had not come to Mr. Bowen from the representatives of the allies here. However, such unofficial information as reached Mr. Bowen confirmed him in the belief that the pending controversy would be settled "soon and satisfactorily." It is learned that the Italian government all along has favored an honorable compromise and has let its allies know the favor with which it regarded the Bowen proposition, while professing a willingness to defer to their views in the matter.

It has developed that the proportion of the customs dues collected at La Guaira and Porto Cabello to be paid to the allies is 30 percent. These two ports collect a large part of the total customs receipts of the country. Under this arrangement probably a cash payment can be dispensed with, as the customs receipts would quickly defray the pressing individual claims of the allies.

The lifting of the blockade would not mean the complete withdrawal from American waters of the allied fleet, and it is understood that not only will the British-American fleet remain in its accustomed winter quarters in the Caribbean, but that the German government will depart from its ancient policy, which has been to get along without station fleets, and will continue the present squadron in American waters as a permanent fleet.

American Fleet on the Watch

Washington, Jan. 27.—The navy department has ordered the Marcellus from Culebra to Havana to remove the remainder of the American coal there. There are about 900 tons left. It has developed that the fleet in the West Indies is being kept constantly informed as to the details of the Venezuelan situation. Denial is made, however, that any recent orders to ships have been influenced by a threatened clash with a foreign power.

One Government Is Hoggish

Rome, Jan. 27.—It is learned that the powers are still negotiating regarding the percentage of the customs receipts that Venezuela is to give as a guarantee, one government insisting upon 50 percent, instead of 30 percent.

Weak

Heart From Attack of LaGrippe.

Palpitation, Smothering, Short Breath.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure Cured Me.

The terrible after effects of LaGrippe are most dangerous when they attack the heart, the engine of life. Weak hearts are as common as weak stomachs and when an attack is made upon the weak heart, that organ soon becomes a diseased heart and the patient will unless promptly treated, suffer long and eventually die of heart disease, the dread of millions. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure strengthens and regulates the heart's action, enriches the blood and improves the circulation.

"Some years ago I had an attack of the grip, and it left me with a very weak heart. Palpitation, shortness of breath and smothering spells that made me sit up in bed to breathe, robbing me of sleep, made me most miserable. I would become fatigued and exhausted from the least exertion and was in such a critical condition that I could not attend to my business. My physician seemed unable to control my case, and instead of getting better I was gradually growing weaker every day. Then I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and after I had used two bottles I was greatly improved. I continued with the remedy until I had taken in all six bottles, when I was able to attend to business without inconvenience. I was completely and permanently cured of heart trouble by Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers from that terrible affliction."—H. H. EHLE, Gloversville, N. Y.

WOULD YOU INVEST

BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S

STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 15c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $125.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 22 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property, that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 25c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and I will shortly advance to $2.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions. HERBERT S. COSTLY FURS.

Complete Suits Are Made From Lightweight Skins.

Furs were never more beautiful than they are this year, and women are not content with fur wraps only, but must have suits of fur.

Moleskin has more or less taken the place of sealskin, and it lends itself admirably to almost any shape. As a matter of fact moleskin is not heavy, and is therefore one of the best skins to use for blouse and skirts. The prettiest way of treating these skirts is to let in on the hips some stitched cloth of the same shade, fitting the skirt tightly to the knees, where some strappings of cloth may be arranged at the top of a shaped flounce. There must be a certain amount of fullness in these plain skirts, and the flounce should just clear the ground. The bolero or short blouse to correspond can be finished with a cloth or stitched silk band, thereby avoiding necessary bulk at the waist.

Fur as well as cloth coats are usually lined with cream satin with inner frills of lace when an extra elaborate effect is desired at the neck and sleeves.

Enamel or paste buttons are also added, and these sometimes figure as ornaments on the large fur toques which go with these suits. A large moleskin toque relieved with white chiffon and white ostrich feathers is very smart.

CHAPTER VI.

THE WOMAN BETWEEN.

PEYTON stood looking at the pair in dazed surprise. The news, so startling, which his companions received with such demonstrations of joy, was appalling to him. He did not know what to make of it. Mary Annan had noticed his silence, but she made no comment on it, and, indeed, Darrow gave them no time for reflection, for as he recovered himself a little he continued his story excitedly.

"The whole town is in a ferment."

"Are they going to do anything?" asked the girl.

"I think so. Telegrams were coming from Montgomery in a perfect stream when I left. I suppose there will be a parade or salute or something of that sort."

"Well, let us ride back at once," said the girl. "I am so excited I can hardly breathe. I would not miss it for anything. Isn't it splendid? Jerry," she continued, turning to the groom, "my horse."

As the negro, who had watched the scene with unmoved gravity, little comprehending its ultimate meaning to him and his race, led forward the horse, both young men sprang to assist her to mount. She looked from one outstretched hand to the other and, turning to Peyton, put her little foot in his palm. He flashed a look of gratitude toward her as he lifted her into the saddle, but his joy was not allowed free course, for, with an instinct of kindness which is sometimes mistaken for coquetry, she turned to Darrow, whose face was flushed with disappointment, and said, "I came with Mr. Peyton, you know," which simple remark did a great deal to dim the brightness of Peyton's satisfaction and diminish the poignancy of Darrow's regret.

Both men sprang to their saddles then and both instinctively made for the right side of the girl, and for a moment it looked as if there might be a collision; but Darrow recovered himself quickly and reined in his horse.

"The place of honor is yours, Boyd. You are Miss Mary's escort this morning, so go ahead. Besides, you are a stranger too. I surrender the privilege."

"That's handsome of you, old fellow," returned his friend, smiling, as Darrow wheeled to the left side of Mary Annan.

"If you have finished your discussion, gentlemen," she said, smiling in spite of herself with pleasure at the jealous little rivalry, "let us ride on. I cannot wait to be there."

She shook the reins over the horse's neck, touched him lightly with the whip she carried, and he broke into a long, swinging gallop, an example, of course, followed by the other two. They fairly raced along the road at a pace which made connected conversation impossible. They covered the distance very rapidly without break or stop until they reached the outskirts of the town. As they turned into Emmanuel street Mary Annan reined in her panting horse and cantered slowly down the street.

"My," she said, with cheerful gladness, "that was a splendid dash! I do not believe we were more than half an hour doing the distance. Your gray looks tired, Mr. Darrow."

"Yes," said Darrow, patting his horse. "You see, he has had a double run."

"Shall we be in time?"

"Oh, I think so," answered Darrow. "Hark! What's that? It's the band."

"Come," said the girl impatiently, urging her horse into a gallop again. "Let's hurry on."

"I think we can intercept them on Government street if we keep straight on," said Darrow as he and Peyton followed her example.

"What will it be, do you think?" she cried.

"Oh, a parade or a salute; perhaps both."

In a short time they reached the junction of Emmanuel and Government streets. The broad, splendid road, lined with magnificent old houses embowered in trees, was filled with people. Some squares away to the left came the band of music, followed by marching bodies of gayly uniformed men. The sunlight sparkling on steel bayonets told the trio that they were soldiers. They were accompanied, as usual, by throngs of people, the street was rapidly filling up, and boys and girls, black and white, capered along in time to the music.

"What's that they are playing?" asked Peyton curiously.

"It's a new song," answered Mary. "'Listen to the Mocking Bird' it's called. I will sing it for you the next time you are at the house."

"Yes, we have all enjoyed hearing you sing it, Miss Mary," put in Darrow deftly, quite nullifying the pleasure Peyton had taken in the promise.

Darrow was a magnificent horseman. He seemed a part of his steed. No centaur could have ridden more superbly. Six feet high, splendidly proportioned, he made a grand picture sitting his great gray horse. No one could be in greater contrast to Peyton than he. His eyes were blue, his hair sunny, his complexion florid, an unusual but not impossible type for a southerner. Physically he was the incarnation of force and strength, both tempered by southern courtesy and refinement. He was the personification of headlong recklessness and valor. Fear was absolutely left out of his personality. No one had ever seen him blench or quail or tremble. Gay, joyous, debonair, he was a man to win the heart of almost any woman and to awaken the admiration of men as well.

Yet there was something lacking about him. In the hidden depths of his nature, in which a man shows what he is fundamentally, he was not quite so admirable. A touch of soul was wanting in him. The spiritual side of his nature had suffered at the expense of the material. In that particular he was also of a type antipodal to Peyton, for Peyton's physical nature had suffered at the expense of the spiritual. The one needed sorrow and trouble and love—are they synonyms?—to refine him; the other required work and danger and disappointment and love—are they synonyms, too?—to blunt him, as it were, and make him practical and practicable in this workaday world. A crisis would make or unmake each man.

Singularly enough, the girl who sat between the two men, glancing from one to the other, as she marked them both during the dash on the Shell road, was to furnish the element which should perfect and supply the lack in the character of the two who loved her so. It must not be concluded that either man entirely lacked the qualities with which the other was so abundantly dowered; not at all, and perhaps the difference between them seemed greater when attention was called to it than it really was, but the two tendencies existed.

There is something of the poet in every lover. In Mary's presence the spiritual was bourgeoning in Darrow's heart. And there is something else, which, for lack of a better term, may be described as the material, in every lover's purpose. There is something virile and active in every great passion—else it is not great—and this was moving in Peyton's mind.

The girl comprehended the case of her two lovers but dimly. As she sat between them she inclined now to the right, now to the left, and knew not whither she would finally tend.

The two men had been friends from boyhood. The frank, impulsive nature of the larger man, who was also the older, had fitted in with the quieter, more restrained habit of the younger. They had been to each other as body and soul. They made an ideal combination therefore. One planned, the other executed. Not altogether is the statement true again; but, broadly speaking, it was Peyton's subtle mind and Darrow's powerful personality that worked together. Oftentimes Peyton's ideas were utterly unpractical, equally often Darrow's insight was entirely lacking, yet together they supplemented each other. In a great emergency, if any had ever arisen, the combination would have been ideal and success certain. There never had been a cloud upon their friendship. The only thing that breaks friendships like that between man and man is woman. They had been too young and too much separated in their later life for that factor to have thrust itself upon their affections, but now it was quite apparent that the inevitable had at last arrived.

With rapid advance the little parade on the street drew nearer to the party on horseback at the corner of Emmanuel street. There had been no time to assemble the general military force of the several companies, so that only the Mobile cadets, the crack organization of the community, were in line as escort to the Light battery. Very handsome the young fellows looked in their gray uniforms faced with black, with their pomponed caps—just the uniform of the famous Seventh New York, by the way. They came tramping gayly down the street, following the band playing the stirring southern march. The shrill fifes trilled the refrain almost with the mellifluous madness of the gay bird itself. The people cheered frantically as the cadets swept by, followed by the guns of the battery.

As Captain Sands, who commanded the battalion, caught sight of Mary Annan and her two companions he shouted a sudden command, and instantly the guns of the soldiers dropped from their shoulders into a marching salute, which the girl acknowledged with a graceful bend of the head and a wave of the hand, her face mantling with pleasure at the honor. The company marched under their own flag, and for the first time they paraded through the streets of Mobile without carrying the ensign of the United States. All three spectators noticed the omission.

"See!" cried the girl. "They have discarded the United States flag."

"Yes, by heaven!" said Darrow. "They have given it up at last!" There was a little touch of awe in his voice. "At last," he continued. "Well, I am glad of it, for one," he burst out impulsively. "We will have a new flag of our own now."

Peyton said nothing. He only held himself very straight in the saddle and looked sternly ahead. Again there came upon his face that peculiar tightening which gave a touch of grimness to his usual appearance. The woman alone noticed it.

The artillery had followed the example of the cadets and had discarded the United States flag also, but on the flank of the battery rode two markers with guidons. There had been no time to substitute any others, and as the markers were necessary for the evolutions of the battery they were perforce carried in the parade. They were little, swallowtailed bannerets, each one, however, bearing the old familiar stars and stripes. As they passed down the street Peyton's right hand instinctively went to his hat. He took it off and, holding his right arm across his breast, laid his hat upon his left shoulder.

CHRONIC COUGHS

OFTEN ARE THE BEGINNING OF CONSUMPTION.

Stop Your Cough and Avoid Future Trouble.

We Will Guarantee That We Can Do It For You.

Our Vinol is the Remedy for all Pulmonary Affections.

Vinol is a preparation that is delicious to take.

It consists of a delicate table wine in which has been dissolved the active curative principles that are found in the liver of the live cod, and to which cod-liver oil owes its reputation as a remedy for coughs, colds and all wasting diseases.

If there is any one who has a cough, a tendency to take cold easily, or a dread of consumption, we would like to have them call and permit us to explain what we know about Vinol and why we believe it will cure all such troubles more surely and quickly than any other remedy ever given to the public.

Following is a letter which has just come to hand and which shows how beneficially Vinol acted in one instance:

"I had a severe cough of long standing. I was advised by friends to give your Vinol a trial, which I did. Before taking it I had tried many other remedies for coughs without obtaining any relief. With Vinol it was different. I have now used four bottles of it, and am pleased to say my cough has almost entirely left me. I have been decidedly benefited by its use in every way. Very truly yours."—H. E. SMALL, Boston, Mass.

Vino acts beneficially upon the digestive organs, enabling them to obtain for themselves the elements from which are made firm healthy flesh tissue, sound muscle, strong bone structure and pure blood.

We recommend Vinol unreservedly.

If you will call on us at our store, we will tell you why we have such faith in this new wine of cod-liver oil.

We guarantee that if you suffer from any symptoms that indicate troubles for which we know Vinol is intended, we will refund to you your money if you don't find Vinol helps you.

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY

Unite In Sounding Praises of Great Figures In the Civil War

New York, Jan. 27.—The 13th annual banquet of the Confederate Veteran Camp of New York, held last night, was made memorable by eloquent eulogies of the great figures of the south and the north during the Civil war delivered by men who themselves had fought in the armies opposing them.

Charles F. Adams of Massachusetts, a soldier of the union, responded to the toast of Robert E. Lee; "nature made him and then broke the mold," and Colonel Henry Watterson, a soldier of the Confederacy, paid tribute to the character of Abraham Lincoln; "he was not for an age but for all time." The third toast in the trilogy of heroes of the civil struggle, to Jefferson Davis, was responded to by William H. Russell, formerly of Missouri, and now commissioner of accounts of New York city.

Upwards of 500 comrades of the camp and their guests were present and the presence of many women lent brilliancy to the banquet. The opening toast to "The President and the army and navy of the United States;" "a prince among the rulers of the world and but the servant of a free people," was drunk standing amid great applause, the orchestra rendering "Hail Columbia."

The final toast of the evening was to "The Silent Brigade," all rising and a bugler sounding "taps."

Lost Cherished Locks

Berlin, Jan. 27.—Professor Mommsen, whose flowing, white hair is conspicuous at all the scientific gatherings in Berlin, climbed on a ladder to the topmost book shelf of his library to get a volume and held a candle too near his head, with the result that his hair caught fire. He threw the skirts of his study gown over his head and smothered the flames. His face was scorched and his locks were partly consumed.

Good Work In East Africa

New York, Jan. 27.—The missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church has shipped from New York 27 cases of hospital and medical goods for the equipment of a hospital soon to be started in connection with the Old Umtali mission, stationed in East Africa. Already schools of carpentry, blacksmithing and agriculture have been started, with native blacks for pupils.

Heavy Seizure of Lottery Tickets

Honolulu, Jan. 27.—Customs officials have made a seizure of lottery tickets that were shipped to Honolulu on the steamship Alameda. The officials suspected Joseph Rothenberg, the ship's barber, and a search of his effects revealed 6000 Louisiana lottery tickets. The tickets were confiscated and Rothenberg was arrested.

Fifty-Two Hours In Small Boat

Southport, N. C., Jan. 27.—Captain Gilbert and crew of the barkentine Nineveh, from New York to Mayport, arrived at the Cape Fear life saving station yesterday and reported that their vessel sank Thursday last off the North Carolina coast. The crew were 52 hours in a small boat, but all landed safely.

Negroes Want Crum Confirmed

Washington, Jan. 27.—The executive committee of the National Afro-American council yesterday passed a resolution urging confirmation by the senate of the nomination of W. D. Crum to be collector of customs at Charleston, and adopted an address to the country on the race question in general.

An Extension of Time

Washington, Jan. 27.—The president yesterday sent to the senate an agreement with Cuba extending the time for the ratification of the Cuban reciprocity treaty. Under the terms of the Cuban treaty ratification was required by Jan. 31 and it had become apparent that the time limit was too short.

Rumor Without Foundation

Washington, Jan. 27.—The agent of the quartermaster's department at Nagasaki, in obedience to instructions, has investigated the rumor started at Seattle that the army transport Dix was lost in the vicinity of Yokohama, and has ascertained from reliable sources that the report lacks foundation.

Plague Spreading In Africa

Durban, Jan. 27.—Bubonic plague is spreading so seriously here that the natives are panic stricken. Servants and laborers are leaving the town in large numbers. It is anticipated that the Zululand drifts will be closed so as to prevent the spread of the plague to that territory.

Another Defeat For Maher

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—Peter Maher was knocked out by Joe Choynski in the second round of what was scheduled to be a six round bout here last night. Maher was apparently afraid of his opponent and went to the floor from a left hand swing on the jaw and was counted out.

Plenty of Coal In New York

New York, Jan. 27.—The price of coal in New York city is $8.50 a ton, and there is a plentiful supply. Dealers have the situation well in hand, and say that there will be constant improvement unless some unforeseen conditions intervene.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The Cuban house of representatives has voted an appropriation of $25,000 to deal with cattle disease; there are no exports of Cuban cattle to the United States.

A HORRIFYING SCENE

Accompanies Railroad Smash-up In New Jersey

MANY DEAD AND INJURED

Four Cars of a Local Ploughed Into and Wrecked by an Express—Survivors Powerless to Aid People Roasted to Death In Fire

New York, Jan. 28.—One of the most appalling railroad wrecks that has occurred in the vicinity of New York for many years, the estimated loss of life ranging from 12 to 30 persons, took place last night at Graceland, N. J., on the Central Railway of New Jersey, when the Royal Blue line express ploughed at top speed into the rear of a local train.

Immediately after the crash three of the shattered cars of the local train took fire, rendering impossible the rescue of many of the wounded who were pinned fast in the wreck. Many bodies are believed to have been consumed.

On board the flyer all the passengers, although badly shaken up, escaped uninjured save for trifling bruises.

The train which was run into left New York at 5:45 and runs express to Bound Brook, making stops at Elizabeth, Westfield and Plainfield. Beyond Bound Brook it runs as a local. The Royal Blue train left 15 minutes later, but travels at a higher speed and makes no stop except at Elizabeth, and is scheduled to overtake the slower train just beyond Graceland, where the latter switches from track 3 onto track 4 to permit the Royal Blue to pass.

Last evening a freight train was blocked upon track 4, and the local received orders to proceed on the express track to Dunellen and there take the outside or No. 4 track. Shortly after receiving orders the train had to stop for a hot box, which delayed it so that when it got under way again it was due at Dunellen. It had just started and was moving slowly when the Royal Blue, travelling apparently at full speed, which at that point usually approximates 65 miles an hour, crashed into the rear end.

The heavy engine of the Royal Blue tore its way into the rear car and at the same time drove the forward end of that car into the rear end of the car ahead, which in turn was driven into the third car, and this in turn was driven into the fourth car from the rear. The fourth car was only partly wrecked, but the last three were torn to pieces.

The engine of the Royal Blue left the rails and turned over on its side, the engineer and fireman sticking to their posts and going down in the wreck. They are now in a hospital and the engineer is not believed to have a chance of living more than a few hours.

Passengers on the flyer say the engineer applied the brakes hard just a minute or so before the wreck. The train ahead had sent a flagman back, but it seems he was recalled when the train got under way and, although he left torpedoes, the Royal Blue did not heed them or else was going to fast to stop in the short distance remaining. The man who went back to flag the train had just swung onto the rear end of his train and is among the dead.

The engine and the three worst wrecked cars were piled into an awful heap, containing at least 100 dead and injured. From the mass came fearful screams for aid. A minute later the wreck caught fire from the firebox of the locomotive. The screams of the injured were intensified as they found themselves hemmed in by the flames.

The sight while the wreck was burning was horrifying. Men could be seen in the wreckage pinned fast amid the timbers of the cars and struggling to be free while the flames roared around them. The rescuers were helpless to aid them, as they had already been burned and scorched in the fire before desisting from the work of rescue. One of those who tried to take out a man pinned in found that he was held down by one leg near the ankle and seeing that it would be useless to do anything else, is said to have severed the man's leg and then carried him to one of the parlor cars. Both rescued and rescuer were burned.

Those in the car ahead, which was lifted onto the rear car, were those who suffered the most. Fourteen minutes before the flames reached them from the car below and behind them they were enveloped in smoke and steam and it was here that the worst sights were witnessed. The imprisoned ones begged for death to end their agonies and implored those who were laboring to get them free to crush their heads with the axes they were using to chop away the wreckage. Some begged for water, some raved, more prayed, some cursed and prayed alternately.

A GREAT EMBARRASSMENT

Hope at Washington That Venezuelan Blockade Will Soon Be Off

Washington, Jan. 28.—The earnest hope is expressed by officials having to do with Venezuelan matters that the European allies will come to an agreement promptly and call off the blockade that is still in force. Its continuance is a serious embarrassment to the people of Venezuela. The differences between the offers of Mr. Bowen and the demands of the allies, it is felt here, are not such as should require continuance of the present condition of affairs on the Venezuelan coast. Mr. Bowen confidently hopes the powers may agree to his propositions and that a joint answer to this effect may come to Washington today.

In Congress

New York, Jan. 28.—Philip Baer, city librarian, and Walter F. Sawyer, Nathan Springer and Moses Springer were arrested yesterday in connection with an alleged swindling scheme through which enormous sums are believed to have been lost by the department of taxes. District Attorney Jerome says that he has information that the prisoners approached many persons with inducements to have their tax assessments cut down. In one instance an assessment of $250,000 had been almost entirely obliterated.

Woman Suffrage In Kansas

Topeka, Jan. 28.—The Woman Suffrage supporters have been assured that a bill granting the privilege of the ballot will be passed at this session of the legislature. The bill has been favorably reported in both houses, and Governor Bailey has expressed his intention of signing it when it finally passes.

A Result of Disobedience

Scranton, Pa., Jan. 28.—While 13 men were being taken to their work in the recesses of the Bellevue mine on an electric engine yesterday a spark from the naked lamp of one of the men set off a keg of powder they had with them and the terrific explosion that followed blew the men in all directions. One will die. It is against the mine rules to take powder in as was done in this case.

Teller Wins Nomination

Denver, Jan. 28.—Attorney General Miller has given an opinion that the election of Henry M. Teller as United States senator is legal and Governor Peabody will sign the certificate of his election as soon as it shall reach him.

Crown Princess Loses Titles

Vienna, Jan. 28.—According to The Wiener Zeitung the Emperor Francis Joseph has decided, as head of the archducal house, to deprive the Crown Princess of Saxony of all her archducal titles and prerogatives.

King Oscar Steps Down

Stockholm, Jan. 28.—At a joint meeting of the Swedish-Norwegian council yesterday, Crown Prince Gustaf assumed the duties of the regency of the two kingdoms. He will go to Christiana on Jan. 30.

The Weather Forecast

Almanac, Thursday, Jan. 29.
Sun rises—7:02; sets—4:53.
Moon sets—6:11 p. m.
High water—11:15 a. m.; 11:45 p. m.

The northeast high is giving way slowly, but its crest still remains along the middle Atlantic and south New England coasts. Rain is indicated for New England, with higher temperature.

IN CONTROL OF INDEPENDENTS.

Said to be Responsible for Exorbitant Coal Rates Charged This Winter.

Boston, Jan. 28.—The congressional inquiry into the coal situation in New England in general and in Boston in particular, will, in all probability, be closed today. That the committee are already satisfied in their own minds was indicated yesterday afternoon when one of the members who has done considerable of the questioning remarked: "Many a man has been hanged for murder on less conclusive evidence."

When questioned as to what could be done about it, in case a combination to keep up prices should be proven to exist, he admitted that practically nothing could be done, and the beneficial effects of the investigation, if there was any, must develop in subsequent legislation by congress.

The evidence which has been submitted to the committee during the two days' hearing has shown that there are abundant shipping facilities for carrying coal to New England, that the rates have advanced but little, but that individual operators broke away from the coal roads, from whom they had been receiving 65 percent of the tide water price at $5, and marketed their own coal at the best price obtainable.

The committee continued their efforts to get from witnesses a satisfactory explanation of how it was possible for these same independent operators, who heretofore have cut an insignificant figure in the local market, to this winter apparently control this market and dictate the prices.

A $250,000 Fire at Boston

Boston, Jan. 28.—One of the largest fires that has occurred in this city for several years raged all through last night in the large hardware store of the Bigelow Dowse company, and although the two lower stories were not burned, they were so thoroughly wet down that the company's loss will amount, in round figures, to $250,000. The firm had a considerable quantity of powder stored in the basement, and in the early stages of the fire firemen poured the greater portion of the water into that portion of the building. Twenty-five engines and accompanying apparatus took part in subduing the flames.

Strikers In Row With Foreman

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 28.—The first personal clash since the shoe strike in this city began occurred yesterday at the factory of Thayer, Maguire & Field, where 39 striking turned workmen became involved in a quarrel with one of the firm and a foreman in the shop over the question of obtaining their kits. After the affair Foreman Nagle claimed that one of the men had threatened him with a piece of iron. On the other hand, the men denounced Foreman Nagle, and said that he instigated the trouble.

Special Police Well Paid

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 28.—A. G. Cardwell of Lawrence, one of the special police officers who was hired for duty during the strike and who was fined in the police court for assault on John Waters, was dismissed from further duty yesterday. There is some feeling among the citizens on the method adopted in hiring the out-of-town police. It is said that the special officers are to receive $4 a day and meals while on duty.

Strike Breaker Assaulted

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 28.—While one of the new cutters employed at Harney Bros. was returning from work last night, having left the factory a little before the usual time, he was set upon by a crowd and severely beaten. Officers later went to the factory and escorted the rest of the cutters to headquarters, and on their way they were snowballed by a small crowd. There are no new developments in the strike.

The O'Connell Inquest

North Scituate, R. I., Jan. 28.—An inquest to determine the matter of responsibility for the death of Eugene T. O'Connell, which resulted from injuries received in a ring contest last Wednesday night, was held yesterday. The bulk of the testimony went to show that O'Connell's death was due to the fall when his head struck the floor and not to the knock-out blow. No decision has been announced.

Captain Sorenson Again Honored

Boston, Jan. 28.—A life saving "second service" gold bar was presented yesterday to Captain Alfred Sorensen of the tugboat Clara Clarita for heroism displayed in rescuing D. J. Lawler from drowning near Boston lightship on July 29, 1900. The presentation was made in the Chamber of Commerce before an audience of business men. Captain Sorensen has a record of saving 35 persons from drowning.

Long Threatened With Pneumonia

Boston, Jan. 28.—A bulletin on the condition of former Governor John D. Long, who is at St. Margaret's infirmary, states that his pulse is 99, respiration 23, and there is a slight indication of pneumonia. The doctor, however, says that he hopes to break up the pneumonia.

Consumptives' Sanitarium Wanted

Providence, Jan. 28.—A petition signed by 250 physicians was presented in the general assembly yesterday asking that a state sanitarium for consumptives be established. The matter is now before the finance committee waiting for a recommendation for a $100,000 appropriation.

No Abatement of Smallpox

Biddeford, Me., Jan. 28.—Eight new cases of smallpox have been discovered in Biddeford and in all 56 people are under quarantine at present. The opinion that the recent fire at the smallpox hospital was of incendiary origin grows stronger and a fire inquest will be held

Gotham Frauds Unearthed

Washington, Jan. 28.—Senator Quay made an effort yesterday to hold the senate in continuous session to consider the statehood bill, but failed to hold a quorum and was compelled on that account to allow the senate to adjourn.

The house devoted the day to bills reported from the judiciary committee, passing about 20. One was to meet the original package decision of the supreme court by making intoxicating liquors imported into states subject to the jurisdiction of such states.

Herran Files Credentials

Washington, Jan. 28.—Mr. Herran, the Colombian charge, called at the state department yesterday and filed his credentials empowering him to take up the business of the Colombian legation here. These credentials came by mail from Bogota. As about six weeks was consumed in the journey, it is evident that the credentials were drawn some time before the canal treaty was signed by Secretary Hay and Mr. Herran.

Millionaire Gets a Divorce

Sioux Falls, S. D., Jan. 28.—William B. Baldwin, a New England millionaire, who previously to coming to South Dakota eight or 10 months ago was a resident of Pittsfield, Mass., was yesterday granted a divorce from his wife, residing in New York. The decree was granted on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment and there was no defense.

Four Hundred Thousand Starving

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Appeals in behalf of the starving Finns are being made by Dr. C. J. Sorenson, president of the Finnish central relief committee, with headquarters at Calumet, Mich. According to Dr. Sorenson no less than 400,000 Finns are actually starving today, and not since the famine of 1867 have the conditions been so desperate.

Chinese Uprising Nipped

Hong Kong, Jan. 28.—The viceroy yesterday caused the arrest in this city of seven Kwang-Si rebels, which led to the discovery of plans for a simultaneous rising here and at Canton. The men taken into custody were found to be in possession of banners and secret codes for cummunicating with their fellow-conspirators.

Chamberlain at Mafeking

Mafeking, Jan. 28.—Colonial Secretary Chamberlain and his party arrived here yesterday, having concluded the wagon trek from Potchestroom. The town was elaborately decorated with flags and arches, a guard of honor was drawn up, native bands played appropriate airs and the greatest enthusiasm was displayed.

Good Afternoon.

Boston is extravagant when it puts $200,000 or more into a grammar school building, but there is something crooked when one firm bids $187,000 and another $261,000 on the same contract.

Taunton will place in its city square a statue to Robert Treat Paine, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Quincy had a more famous signer in John Hancock but has erected no suitable monument to his memory.

The aldermen of the city of Newton, at the request of their mayor, have voted to petition the legislature for leave to withdraw from the Metropolitan water system, claiming no benefits. Newton probably receives the same benefits as other cities and towns in the district, unless it be the city of Boston. It was imperative that Boston should have a larger supply, and that city secured legislation whereby the suburban cities and towns pay more than their share. However, Newton is better able to pay assessments than any of the other cities in the district and should not be allowed to shirk. It is too late to kick now.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Which is the better and more inspiring specimen of post-prandial oratory, Charles Francis Adams' tribute to Gen. Lee or Henry Watterson's to Abraham Lincoln? Both coming from gallant soldiers on opposing sides, it would be invidious to award the palm to either in preference to the other.—Herald.

☞ But the Stamford Cat club now says that the mouse-killing contest is only to involve chocolate mice, and that the inference that real mice were to be offered at the cat show for slaughter was permitted to advertise the show. It has certainly served to advertise this woman's club throughout the country in no very commendable light.—New Bedford Standard.

☞ Believers in local option, whether they believe in license or no-license for their individual cities, will protest against the proposition of a Boston legislator for a law making five years continuous approval of the license policy equivalent to the permanent adoption of that policy in any city. The license question must be a local problem and the control of the traffic by the community should not be interfered with, as would be the result of the passage of any such law as this.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ There are a few pessimistic individuals who tell us that the country is being abandoned to the canines and that it will soon be a nation of and for the very rich. But don't you believe anything of the sort. The United States was never so prosperous as it is today, and the people as a whole were never so well off. There are a few unpleasant things in the present situation, it is true, but unpleasant things are always with us and they always will be. We must not expect to find Paradise on this mundane sphere and if we do we are just as certain to be disappointed as we are to see the sun rise and set. There never was a time when it wasn't more comfortable to be rich than to be poor, but the poor man gets more of the good things of life today than at any other time since history began. A man has a right to kick if things don't suit him, but a well directed kick is more effective than one delivered at random. A little philosophy, too, makes the world look a great deal brighter.—Portsmouth Herald.

☞ "I seem to be nothing but just a plain American," said Secretary Hay in his address before the Ohio society of New York at its annual dinner. He told the audience that he could not claim to be an Ohio man, though he had married an Ohio woman, and he explained the remark above thus: He was born in Indiana, reared in Illinois and educated in Rhode Island; he got his law in Springfield, his politics under Lincoln in Washington, his diplomacy in Europe, Asia and Africa; he has a residence in New Hampshire, and a desk in the District of Columbia; his father was born in the North and his mother in the South, while his grandfathers were of Scotch, English, German and French blood. The typical American of today is like Mr. Hay, a descendant of different races or nationalities, preserving all that is best in the different strains. Since the Civil War the question of birth North or South cuts far less figure than it did before, and much to the advantage of the nation. Even a State from which a man hails is of less importance as the years go on. We are getting to be just plain Americans, whose loyalty is due to the nation as a whole, instead of a State or a section.—Toledo Blade.

☞ This country is in no more danger today from James J. Hill and J. Pierpont Morgan than it was from Kelly and Coxey. Kelley and Coxey were the raw head and bloody bones and the riot of poverty which suggested socialism less than 10 years ago. Hill and Morgan are the phantoms of an imagined slavery that are driving people to socialism at the present time. The dangers of poverty are past; the dangers of riches are at hand. The country has survived the one; it will survive the other. Give the demagogue a wide berth; he is taking advantage of the hour; he has been waiting some time; he has been loaded with speeches. The demagogue is like the geyser of the Yellowstone. At stated times he must have an eruption. It is simply, get out of the way and let him erupt. Prosperity prevails everywhere. The rich are growing richer. The poor are growing richer. Every man has employment. He should take care of his money and buy a home and live under his own vine and fig-tree. He should do his own thinking. He should not be deceived when he is told that what he needs in his business is red-hot European competition. He has had that before. This is a great land and must necessarily have these ups and downs. But the republic will live, and every man ought to thank God and take courage.—Des Moines (Ia.) Capital.

ANOTHER HEARING.

Fore River Freight Railroad Now Before County Commissioners.

The Norfolk County Commissioners at their regular meeting at Dedham on Tuesday received a petition from the Fore River Ship and Engine Co., for approval of locations granted in Quincy and Braintree for its freight railroad.

The commissioners will give a hearing after due notice; probably in March.

Coal Freight Rates.

Representative R. R. Freeman testified before the Congressional coal committee this week, that coal freight rates from all shipping ports from May to October last, covering a long period of the strike, were from 75 to 90 cents. He said the sharp rise in rates to Maine ports likely to freeze had a strong influence in bringing up the Boston rates. The highest rate he knew of was $3 on a 388-ton vessel going to Dorchester, which was a light water place.

Back Poll Taxes.

Salem's city treasury is making a special effort to collect the unpaid poll taxes of 1902. Summonses have been sent to all delinquents with a polite notice stating that prompt payment will save both trouble and expense. If those who receive the demands do not make payment or satisfy the collector of their inability to do so, the bills will be given to a deputy sheriff for collection.

TODAY'S COURT.

Mascenro Feraklia and Macco Marassazzo were fined $5 each for violation of the Metropolitan Park rules.

Harrison Bunker was arraigned for assault on John Hayden at Holbrook. The complainant acknowledged satisfaction and Bunker was discharged.

Harry McDonald was fined $3 for drunkenness at Quincy.

—Many of the Quincy ladies are attending the cooking lectures in Colonial Hall and availing themselves of the recipes as used by Miss Robinson. The following will be prepared Thursday at 2.30 P. M. Layer Cake with Orange Icing, Banana Shortcake, Raised Muffins, Jellied Fruit Sandwich, Cocoa. All are invited. No charge.

NEW REGULATIONS

Adopted by School Committee of 1903.

The 1903 Expenditures $11,075.00.

The Resignation of a Teacher is Accepted.

A regular meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening. Those present were Messrs. Porter, Churchill, Foley, Hunting and Smith and Miss Adams.

NEW ELECTION.

Chairman Porter ruled that there had been no election of chairman at the annual meeting, as but five ballots had been cast, but four of which were for Mr. Porter. The City Charter requires that the election shall be by a majority vote of the entire board.

An election of chairman was then held, and Charles H. Porter was unanimously reelected.

RESIGNATION.

The resignation of Miss Ethel Rinn of the Adams school was accepted. Miss Rinn goes to Dedham at an increase of salary.

NEW RULES.

New rules and regulations were then adopted to take effect on passage. As the new rules require some changes in the sub-committees, the committees were not announced at this meeting.

FINANCES.

The financial report for 1903 to date showed the following expenditures:

Salaries,	$8,278 32
Janitors,	583 24
Books and supplies,	225 29
Fuel,	1,434 55
Transportation,	68 00

State House Business.

Among other petitions filed in the Legislature yesterday were the following:

Of Osborne Howes and others, that the mayors of the cities in the metropolitan district be constituted a board of public works, to have supervision over the expenditures of metropolitan boards.

Of Abram E. Brown, for the erection near the State House of a statue of John Hancock.

Of Richard L. Gay, for pa ty enrolment for caucuses.

Of J. Frank O'Hare, that cities may establish a death benefit and retirement fund for employes and to extend the powers of boards of health in abating nuisances.

Of Louis H. Warner, that the testimony of a witness at a trial may be used at a subsequent trial in the absence of such witness.

Of Aaron C. Dowse and others, that unincorporated firms must file with city officials the names of persons responsible for their debts.

Of Edward Glines, mayor of Somerville, that cities may remove snow and ice from sidewalks and charge expenses for the same.

Of Frank P. Bennett, that no person holding any state, county, national or municipal office shall be eligible to a position on a ward, city or town committee.

Of Michael Sullivan and others, that the town of Revere be included in the Metropolitan sewerage system.

Of Parkman B. Flanders, Mayor, for the abolition of the board of water commissions of the city of Haverhill, and to provide for the appointment or election of a superintendent of water works, the act being subject to acceptance by the voters of the city.

Of William A. Kelley, to exclude from the public service persons who have not declared their intention to become citizens of the United States.

Of Simon B. Ryan, that ballot boxes may be opened for counting before the polls close.

Of William A. Pew, Jr., and another, for a better system of instruction and a system of regimental camps in the volunteer militia.

Of Aaron C. Dowse, for a constitutional amendment providing that a constitutional amendments may be initiated upon petition of 75,000 voters.

Of Thomas L. Davis, that the commonwealth may retire and pension employes who have served for 20 years and reached the age of 60 years; changing to 30 days the time for recording mortgages on personal property when removed to another city or town.

A. C. Dowse has presented two bills relative to the Board of agriculture, one to reduce the membership, and one to substitute a commission.

MERRYMOUNT WINS.

Find the Team from Granite City Club an Easy Mark.

The Granite City club bowling team did not have very good success in their match game Tuesday evening at the Merrymount club with a team from that club. The Granite City club team expected to be beaten, but not quite as badly.

Ross and Walsh were the only two members of the team that bowled anything like their usual game, the other three members being way off. Both Johnson and Hill made records for themselves by only getting two pins in a single box. Hill, however, had the honor of making the only strike during the game.

The Merrymount club won the first string by 52, the second by 42, and the third by 44, or a total of 138 pins on the three strings, the total scores being: Merrymount, 1,246; Granite City, 1,108.

For the Granite City club Ross and Hill were high men on single strings with 84, and Ross on three string total with 239. Hill was low man on singles with 64 and Nightingale low man on three string totals with 210. Their average was 221.

For the Merrymount club Taylor was high man on single strings with 97, and on three string totals with 267.

Baker and Parker were good seconds on three string totals with 258. Bowker was low man on single strings with 64, and on three string totals with 229. Their average was 249.

Mayor Bryant says the team that bowled Tuesday night was not his team. He also added that his team was more than a match for anything in the city and he could prove it.

Talk on Mexico.

The address of Congressman McNary Monday evening before Clan McGregor on "Mexico" was highly instructive as well as interesting. The speaker described the country as having an area as large as all of the United States east of the Mississippi, and a population of twelve millions, whose civilization although different from that of the Anglo Saxon was by no means of a low order. The churches and other monuments of Spanish architecture were described, as well as the habits and customs of the people.

The bull fight, which is the favorite pastime of the Mexicans, was given a most graphic description from which it would seem that there is a great deal of brutality in the makeup of the Mexican. Mr. McNary predicted great changes in Mexico in the near future through the influx of the English and Americans. The existence of Mexico as as independent government was not threatened, but it would become greatly Americanized. The address lasted an hour and a half. At its close, a rising vote of thanks was given the speaker by the clanmen.

TWO PETITIONS

For Building Parts of Metropolitan Parkways.

Presented to the Legislature.

A Beginning on Either Would Please Quincy People.

Mayor Bryant, following out the vote of the Council of 1902, has forwarded two petitions to the Legislature relative to the building of the Metropolitan parkway in Quincy for which land has already been taken.

One petition asks that the Metropolitan Park Commission construct the Furnace Brook parkway, from the Blue Hills reservation through West Quincy to Hancock street, at a cost not to exceed $150,000.

The second petition also asks that the Metropolitan Park Commission construct the Quincy Shore parkway, from Hancock street, at Atlantic, along the shore of Quincy bay to Hancock street, near the High school building.

City Solicitor Blackmur informs the Ledger that bills accompanied both petitions. He explains the two petitions, instead of one, by the fact that land for the parkway was taken under two acts of the Legislature.

The taking on the east of Hancock street in 1900 were under the reservation act, while the takings on the west of Hancock street in 1901 were under the Furnace Brook parkway act.

The petition set forth that the land taken is now out of the market and a damage to the city. That Quincy has lost considerable in taxes, and thus far has received no benefits from either the Metropoliton reservations or Metropolitan parkways.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

NO DIVIDEND.

But a Property Not Surpassed in the United States.

Commenting on the fact that the directors of the Fore River Ship & Engine Company have passed their regular semi-annual dividend, the financial editor of the Journal says: They explain their failure to make a distribution in a circular sent to the shareholders in which they say that a large amount of capital has been invested during the past eighteen months in constructing and equipping the plant at Quincy, with the result that the shareholders now own a property that is not surpassed in the United States. The money required for this purpose has largely exceeded the amount obtained from the sale of stock and by reason of this fact the company contracted a floating debt exceeding $900,000.

Bonds to the amount of $1,250,000 to complete the construction work, provide needed working capital and pay off the floating debt have been floated. Seven new directors have been elected to represent the new capital and the bondholders, and these with the other members have, after going over the whole matter carefully, decided that any distribution at present under the existing conditions is unwarranted.

People who bought the new stocks on the strength of the widely announced statement that it was a dividend paying security, and that the prospects were most flattering, are naturally disposed to criticise this latest action. The present management, however, does not hold itself responsible for the promises and acts of its predecessors, by whom the new stock was floated.

Prof. Kaplan Won.

The combined reception of the dancing classes of Prof. Kaplan and Prof. Baker was held Tuesday evening at Hancock hall, and was attended by two hundred couples. The matrons were Mrs. Elmer W. Baker and Mrs. George Weston. Dancing was to have been from 8 to 12 o'clock, but owing to the large number present, it was continued until 1 o'clock. There was a good-natured contest between the two classes in selling tickets for the reception. Prof. Kaplan's class won, having disposed of 232 tickets, while Prof. Baker's class sold 187. The prizes for selling the greatest number of tickets were awarded Mrs. W. O. Young and John Hines.

—Now that the New York automobile show has become a thing of the past and the Boston dealers have returned from exhibiting their wares they are preparing for the big Boston show which is to be held in Symphony hall the week commencing March 16. The show committee was present at New York throughout the week and as a result they have secured the entry for the Boston exhibit of the leading firms and machines shown in New York. It is possible that Henri Fournier, the great Frenchman, who imported some of the greatest cars in this country will be here, and it is a certainty that M. Clements, the famous French builder, will display his goods here.

WANTED TO WITHDRAW

Lessler Thought He Had Enough of Investigation

REFUSED TO SIGN A LETTER

Drawn Up by Roberts Because It Was Directed to the Holland Company—Declares That Doblin's Testimony Was Absolutely False

Washington, Jan. 28.—The house committee on naval affairs yesterday concluded the taking of testimony in the investigation of the charges made by Representative Lessler that a corrupt attempt had been made to influence his vote in that committee on the proposition to purchase submarine torpedo boats.

When the committee resumed the investigation of bribery charges yesterday Representative Lessler was called to the stand and denied statements made by Philip Doblin.

"I desire to deny," he said, at the outset of his detailed statement, "absolutely and unequivocally as false the statement made by the witness Doblin here yesterday as to any collusive scheme or any of the substantial details sworn to by him here, and desire to reiterate that the facts as originally told by me are true."

As Representative Roberts of Massachusetts introduced the bill for the purchase of these boats and was one of their leading champions in committee, it is natural that those who are attacking the company and its alleged methods should endeavor to use his name. Lessler met Roberts in Statuary hall one day, and, talking the investigation over with him, said that he would be willing to retract his statement which he originally made if the investigation could be stopped, and that he would sign a statement withdrawing his charges. Lessler said, it is reported, that the investigation was killing him, and that he wanted to get out of the whole affair. Roberts accordingly had a statement prepared, in the form of a letter addressed to the Holland company, for Lessler's signature, to whom it was presented the next morning. Lessler refused point blank to sign it, without even reading it, basing his refusal on the fact that it was directed to the Holland company.

Mr. Wheeler interrogated Roberts, saying:

"When Lessler first approached you in Statuary hall, did you report what be said to any of the officers or agents of the torpedo boat company?"

"Yes, I did," replied Roberts.

"Who did you tell it to?"

"To Mr. Frost."

Mr. Wheeler—Mr. Roberts, did you ever tell any member of this committee of the conversation you had with Lessler?

A—Oh, yes, but I don't think I can specify.

Q—Can't you indicate any member you communicated it to?

A—I communicated it to Mr. Rixey.

Q—Is it not a fact that you communicated with Frost at once when Lessler made this statement to you?

A—I think so. I called upon Frost and told him there was a new turn in affairs.

Q—And Lessler said to you that he would be willing to sign any statement that was honorable and fair if he could stop this matter?

A—Yes.

Q—Now, is it not a fact that itomediately upon the exposure by Lesler of this effort a perfect howl went up through the press of this country, and what Lessler was referred to in his conversation with you was that he wanted to escape the public approbrium, comment and criticism hurled at him because of that exposure? Isn't that the impression made upon your mind?

A—Not at all. I had a distinctly different impression of Lessler's anxiety to stop the investigation.

Q—You thought he was lying?

A—You can put any words in the record you want.

Continuing, Mr. Wheeler asked Mr. Roberts: "Have you not been a very ardent, avowed and aggressive advocate of the Holland submarine torpedo boat proposition?

A—Yes, I have, and do not hesitate to avow it.

Mr. Lessler was then recalled and corroborated what Roberts had stated. "It is substantially true," he said. "I do not remember all the details. I did not read the letter, as I stated. I did not refer to the matter here except by way of answer to the question of Mr. Nicoll, who seemed to know all about it. I did meet Mr. Roberts in Statuary hall. Whether I said 'Oh, my God' and the rest of it, I do not remember. I did say to Mr. Roberts that I would like to have the thing stopped and that, just as he stated, voluntarily made him the proposition that if, in his judgment, as the advocate here of the Holland torpedo boat, I should sign the statement showing I had made no accusations of anything between them, I would do so."

Mr. Loudenslager said that as Lessler and Roberts agreed perfectly regarding the conversation, further questioning would be useless. The committee then went into executive session.

An executive session was held by the committee at the conclusion of the afternoon session and consideration was given to the findings the committee would report to the house.

Who Owns the Lawson?

A good deal has been published in the press about the seven-masted schooner Thomas W. Lawson, but little has been told of her ownership. Possibly a majority of the public believes that Mr. Lawson is the principal owner and that he has enough shares to give him control of the vessel. As a matter of fact, Thomas W. Lawson owns seven sixty-fourths of the craft, and with his children controls sixteen sixty-fourth. Arthur L. Crowley, who gives his name to the "Crowley" fleet, has a one sixty-fourth share in the big scheme. Besides Thomas W. Lawson these other Lawsons are listed as owners: Jennie A. Lawson, three sixty-fourths; Arnold Lawson, one sixty-fourth, and Gladys Lawson, Marion Lawson, Doris Lawson, Douglas and Gene C. Lawson, one sixty-fourth each.—Herald.

WOULD YOU INVEST
BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S
STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $115.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 20 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property, that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 50c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $2.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions. HERBERT S. AN ELOQUENT EULOGY

From President Roosevelt to Predecessor's Memory

THE LESSONS OF HIS LIFE

Won Greatness by Meeting and Solving Issues as They Arose, Not by Shirking Them—Undertook and Finished Mighty Tasks, but There Yet Remain Others Facing Us

Canton, O., Jan. 28.—President Roosevelt last night participated in a notable tribute to the memory of the late President McKinley. He was the principal orator at a banquet given under the auspices of the Canton Republican league in commemoration of the birthday of McKinley. Surrounded by friends, neighbors and business and political associates of the dead president, he pronounced a brilliant and eloquent eulogy upon the life and works of McKinley. The president spoke as follows:

Mr. Toastmaster, and Gentlemen:

Throughout our history, and indeed throughout history generally, it has been given to only a very few thrice-favored men to take so marked a lead in the crisis faced by their several generations that thereafter each stands as the embodiment of the triumphant effort of his generation. President McKinley was one of these men.

If during the lifetime of a generation no crisis occurs sufficient to call out in marked manner the energies of the strongest leader, then of course the world does not and can not know of the existence of such a leader; and in consequence there are long periods in the history of every nation during which no man appears who leaves an indelible mark in history. If, on the other hand, the crisis is one so many-sided as to call for the development and exercise of many distinct attributes, it may be that more than one man will appear in order that the requirements shall be fully met. In the Revolution and in the period of constructive statesmanship immediately following it, for our good fortune it befell us that the highest military and the highest civic attributes were embodied in Washington, and so in him we have one of the undying men of history—a great soldier, if possible an even greater statesman, and above all a public servant whose lofty and disinterested patriotism rendered his power and ability—alike on fought fields and in council chambers—of the most far-reaching service to the Republic. In the Civil War the two functions were divided, and Lincoln and Grant will stand forevermore with their names inscribed on the honor roll of those who have deserved well of mankind by saving to humanity a precious heritage. In similar fashion Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson each stands as the foremost representative of the great movement of his generation, and their names symbolize to us their times and the hopes and aspirations of their times.

Mighty Problems Solved Aright

It was given to President McKinley to take the foremost place in our political life at a time when our country was brought face to face with problems more momentous than any whose solution we have ever attempted, save only in the Revolution and in the Civil War; and it was under his leadership that the nation solved these mighty problems aright. Therefore he shall stand in the eyes of history not merely as the first man of his generation, but as among the greatest figures in our national life, coming second only to the men of the two great crises in which the Union was founded and preserved.

No man could carry through successfully such a task as President McKinley undertook, unless trained by long years of effort for its performance. Knowledge of his fellow-citizens, ability to understand them, keen sympathy with even their innermost feelings, and yet power to lead them, together with far-sighted sagacity and resolute belief forth in the people and in their future—all these were needed in the man who headed the march of our people during the eventful years from 1896 to 1901. These were the qualities possessed by McKinley and developed by him throughout his whole history previous to assuming the Presidency. As a lad he had the inestimable privilege of serving, first in the ranks, and then as a commissioned officer, in the great war for National Union, righteousness, and grandeur; he was one of those whom a kindly Providence permitted to take part in a struggle which ennobled every man who fought therein. He who when little more than a boy had seen the grim steadfastness which after four years of giant struggle restored the Union and freed the slave was not thereafter to be daunted by danger or frightened out of his belief in the great destiny of our people.

Some years after the war closed McKinley came to Congress, and rose, during a succession of terms, to leadership in his party in the lower House. He also became governor of his native State, Ohio. During this varied service he received practical training of the kind most valuable to him when he became chief executive of the Nation. To the high faith of his early years was added the capacity to realize his ideals, to work with his fellowmen at the same time that he led them.

Greatness Well Earned

President McKinley's rise to greatness had in it nothing of the sudden, nothing of the unexpected or seemingly accidental. Throughout his long term of service in Congress there was a steady increase alike in his power of leadership and in the recognition of that power both by his associates in public life and by the public itself. Session after session his influence in the House grew greater; his party antagonists grew to look upon him with constantly increasing respect; his party friends with constantly increasing faith and admiration. Eight years before he was nominated for President he was already considered a Presidential possibility. Four years before he was nominated only his own high sense of honor prevented his being made a formidable competitor of the chief upon whom the choice of the convention then actually fell. In 1896 he was chosen because the great mass of his party knew him and believed in him and regarded him as symbolizing their ideals, as representing their aspirations. In estimating the forces which brought about his nomination and election I do not undervalue what devoted personal friendship which he had the faculty to inspire in so marked a degree among the ablest and most influential leaders; this leadership was of immense consequence in bringing about the result; but, after all, the prime factor was the trust in and devotion to him felt by the great mass of men who had come to accept him as their recognized spokesman. In his nomination the national convention of a great party carried into effect in good faith the deliberate judgment of that party as to who its candidate should be.

But even as a candidate President McKinley was far more than the candidate of a party, and as President he was in the broadest and fullest sense the President of all the people of all sections of the country.

Made Good His Promises

His first nomination came to him because of the qualities he had shown in healthy and open political leadership, the leadership which by word and deed impresses itself as a virile force for good upon the people at large and which has nothing in common with mere intrigue or manipulation. But in 1896 the issue was fairly joined, chiefly upon a question which as a party question was entirely new, so that the old lines of political cleavage were in large part abandoned. All other issues sank in importance when compared with the vital need of keeping our financial system on the high and honorable plane imperatively demanded by our position as a great civilized power. As the champion of such a principle President McKinley received the support not only of his own party but of hundreds of thousands of those to whom he had been politically opposed. He triumphed, and he made good with scrupulous fidelity the promises upon which the campaign was won. We were at the time in a period of great industrial depression and it was promised for and on behalf of McKinley that if he were elected our financial system should not only be preserved unharmed but improved and our economic system shaped in accordance with those theories which have always marked our periods of greatest prosperity. The promises were kept and following their keeping came the prosperity which we now enjoy. All that was foretold concerning the well-being which would follow the election of McKinley has been justified by the event.

Tasks Resulting From War

But as so often happens in our history, the President was forced to face questions other than those at issue at the time of his election. Within a year the situation in Cuba had become literally intolerable. President McKinley had fought too well in his youth, he knew too well at first hand what war really was, lightly to enter into a struggle. He sought by every honorable means to preserve peace, to avert war. He made every effort consistent with the national honor to bring about an amicable settlement of the Cuban difficult. Then, when it became evident that these efforts were useless, that peace could not be honorably entertained, he devoted his strength to making the war as short and as decisive as possible. It is needless to tell the result in detail. Suffice it to say that rarely indeed in history has a contest so far-reaching in the importance of its outcome been achieved with such ease. There followed a harder task. As a result of the war we came into possession of Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines. In each island the conditions were such that we had to face problems entirely new to our national experience, and, moreover, in each island or group of islands the problems differed radically from those presented in the others. In Porto Rico the task was simple. The island could not be independent. It became in all essentials a part of the Union. It has been given all the benefits of our economic and financial system. Its inhabitants have been given the highest individual liberty, while yet their government has been kept under the supervision of officials so well chosen that the island can be appealed to as affording a model for all such experiments in the future; and this result was mainly owing to the admirable choice of instruments by President McKinley when he selected the governing officials.

In Cuba, where we were pledged to give the island independence, the pledge was kept not merely in letter but in spirit. It would have been a betrayal of our duty to have given Cuba independence out of hand. President McKinley, with his usual singular sagacity in the choice of agents, selected in General Leonard Wood the man of all others best fit to bring the island through its uncertain period of preparation for independence, and the result of his wisdom was shown when last May the island became in name and in fact a free Republic, for it started with a better equipment and under more favorable conditions than had ever previously been the case with any Spanish-American commonwealth.

The Philippine Problem

Finally, in the Philippines, the problem was one of great complexity. There was an insurrectionary party claiming to represent the people of the islands and putting forth their claim with a certain speciousness which deceived no small number of excellent men here at home, and which afforded to yet others a chance to arouse a factious party spirit against the President. Of course, looking back, it is now easy to see that it would have been both absurd and wicked to abandon the Philippine Archipelago and let the scores of different tribes—Christian, Mohammedan, and pagan, in every stage of semi-Asiatic barbarism—turn the island into a welter of bloody savagery, with the absolute certainty that some strong power would have to step in and take possession. But though now it is easy enough to see that our duty was to stay in the islands, to put down the insurrection by force of arms, and then to establish freedom-giving civil government, it needed genuine statesmanship to see this and to act accordingly at the time of the first revolt. A weaker and less far-sighted man than President McKinley would have shrunk from a task very difficult in itself, and certain to furnish occasion for attack and misrepresentation no less than for honest misunderstanding. But President McKinley never flinched. He refused to consider the thought of abandoning our duty in our new possessions. While sedulously endeavoring to act with the utmost humanity toward the insurrectionists, he never faltered in the determination to put them down by force of arms, alike for the sake of our own interest and honor, and for the sake of the interest of the islanders, and particularly of the great numbers of friendly natives, including those most highly civilized, for whom abandonment by us would have meant ruin and death. Again his policy was most amply vindicated. Peace has come to the islands, together with a greater measure of individual liberty and self-government than they have ever before known. All the tasks set us as a result of the war with Spain have so far been well and honorably accomplished, and as a result this nation stands higher than ever before among the nations of mankind.

President McKinley's second campaign was fought mainly on the issue of approving what he had done in his first administration, and specifically what he had done as regards these problems springing out of the war with Spain. The result was that the popular verdict in his favor was more overwhelming than it had been before.

Nation Stunned by Tragedy

No other President in our history has seen high and honorable effort crowned with more conspicuous personal success. No other President entered upon his second term feeling such right to a profound and peaceful satisfaction. Then by a stroke of horror, so strange in its fantastic iniquity as to stand unique in the black annals of crime, he was struck down. The brave, strong, gentle heart was stilled forever, and word was brought to the woman who wept that she was to walk thenceforth alone in the shadow. The hideous infamy of the deed shocked the Nation to its depths, for the man thus struck at was in a peculiar sense the champion of the plain people, in a peculiar sense the representative and the exponent of those ideals which, if we live up to them, will make, as they have largely made, our country a blessed refuge for all who strive to do right and to live their lives simply and well as light is given them. The Nation was stunned, and the people mourned with a sense of bitter bereavement because they had lost a man whose heart beat for them as the heart of Lincoln once had beaten. We did right to mourn; for the loss was ours, not his. He died in the golden fullness of his triumph. He died victorious in that highest of all kinds of strife—the strife for an ampler, juster, and more generous national life. For him the laurel; but woe for those whom he left behind; woe to the Nation that lost him, and woe to mankind that there should exist creatures so foul that one among them should strike at so noble a life.

Noble Example to Follow

We are gathered together tonight to recall his memory, to pay our tribute of respect to the great chief and leader who fell in the harness, who was stricken down while his eyes were bright with "the light that tells of triumph tasted." We can honor him best by the way we show in actual deed that we have taken to heart the lessons of his life. We must strive to achieve, each in the measure that he can, something of the qualities which made President McKinley a leader of men, a mighty power for good—his strength, his courage, his courtesy and dignity, his sense of justice, his ever-present kindliness and regard for the rights of others. He won greatness by meeting and solving the issues as they arose—not by shirking them—meeting them with wisdom, with the exercise of the most skillful and cautious judgment, but with fearless resolution when the time of crisis came. He met each crisis on its own merits: he never sought excuse for shirking a task in the fact that it was different from the one he had expected to face. The long public career, which opened when as a boy he carried a musket in the ranks and closed when as a man in the prime of his intellectual strength he stood among the world's chief statesmen, came to what it was because he treated each triumph as opening the road to fresh effort, not as an excuse for ceasing from effort. He undertook mighty tasks. Some of them he finished completely; others we must finish; and there remain yet others which he did not have to face, but which if we are worthy to be the inheritors of his principles we will in our turn face with the same resolution, the same sanity, the same unfaltering belief in the greatness of this country, and unfaltering championship of the rights of each and all of our people, which marked his high and splendid career.

CHAPTER VII.

PEYTON SALUTES THE FLAG.

"WHAT are you doing, Boyd?" cried Mary Annan, attracted by the movement, turning to him in great surprise.

"Saluting the flag of the United States," answered the young man sternly.

"What! You don't mean"— interrupted Darrow.

"I mean that I am still an officer of the United States government, and it is my duty to respect the flag," said Peyton decisively.

"He is right," said Darrow impulsively, taking off his own hat in turn. "Maybe it's the last time, but the old flag is still ours. Alabama is not yet out of the Union."

"Not yet," cried Mary Annan, "but it will be, and I but anticipate. I shall not salute it, and I beg you both not to do it either."

"As you will," said Darrow, with careless compliance, covering his head again.

But Peyton, disregarding her words and the angry flush on her face, although it cost him much to do so, stared motionless straight ahead of him and remained uncovered until the guidons had passed well by him. In spite of herself the girl's heart warmed toward him. That touch of sternness well became him. The unusual resolution which sparkled in his eye, in spite of the tremble on his lips, thrilled her, yet, womanlike, she turned to Darrow.

"Thank you!" she said. "You have done what a true son of Alabama should do."

"At your command, Miss Mary," laughed Darrow cheerfully, saluting her in turn. "But, you see, I am not an officer of the United States." He generously strove to say a good word for poor Peyton.

"No; I am thankful you are not."

"But if I had been I should have"—

"Do not say any more, Mr. Darrow. You are not, and that's enough," interrupted the girl proudly.

She allowed her displeasure at Peyton's obstinacy—so she characterized it in her mind—to appear in her voice and manner. It cut him to the heart as, with the keenness of appreciation peculiar to him, he realized it. But for the life of him he could not have failed to salute that passing flag then; no, not even for her. He did not feel happy about his action, however, but he could think of nothing adequate to say. He could not explain further than he had done, and it was with something like despair that he turned to his companions at last. Mary Annan was tapping her boot with her whip, an angry flush upon her beautiful face. Darrow was staring in great embarrassment from her to Peyton in alternation.

"Who is that?" cried Darrow, glad to break the annoying pause at last.

He pointed down toward the rear of the procession, which was brought up by a great concourse of men, women and children, blacks as well as whites.

"Why, I declare, it's Tempe!" exclaimed Mary Annan, in vexation and dismay, pointing to where her little sister, yelling like a young Indian, capered down the street after the procession arm in arm with a very small and very black darky girl. No one would have recognized the demure little girl of the morning. "The idea of it!" continued her sister. "Will you get her at once?"

Both young men moved forward.

"No, Darrow," said Peyton impulsively; "you may stay with Miss Mary; I will get her. She is displeased with me, not with you," he added, as he sprang from his horse and ran after the crowd.

"Don't be too hard on him, Miss Mary," said Darrow; "this is no fault of his. He has not yet caught our point of view. I think he will be as true as steel when the hour comes."

"He does not need any support in my presence, Mr. Darrow," said Mary, with unkind coldness. "I know he will be as true as steel, too, but I wish he hadn't saluted that flag."

"I did it, too, you remember," he persisted, wistful to help his friend in spite of her rebuff at his first effort.

"Yes, but you stopped when I said not."

"Ah, Miss Mary, you know there is almost nothing I would not stop for you."

She wondered with dismay if he were about to continue the story she had heard all day from the other man.

Meantime Peyton forced his way through the crowd with some difficulty and finally caught Tempe in his arms.

"Lemme go!" she cried shrilly. "I want to go with Peggy!"

"Where do you want to go?" asked Peyton, lifting her up.

"I want to go to see the soldiers shoot the Nunited States."

"Even the little children," thought Peyton swiftly as he firmly carried Tempe to the rear in spite of her protestations, "are filled with the idea. Good God, what's going to happen? You won't see the soldiers shoot the 'Nunited States,' Tempe," he said aloud as he carried her across the street. "Miss Mary wants you. She told me to fetch you to her."

"Do you have to mind Sister Mary, too, Mr. Peyton?" queried the child, looking up at him with interested curiosity shining in her black eyes.

"Everybody has to mind Miss Mary," gravely.

"Yes, I s'pose so," said Tempe, resigning herself to his will. "Well, you can take me over to her."

Tempe was mounted on the crupper of Peyton's horse, leaving the disconsolate Peggy twisting on alternate legs in the dusty road and howling vociferously over the separation. The three friends rode down toward the wharf where the battery had unlimbered and listened to a salute of 100 guns, which, by the direction of Governor Moore, welcomed the birth of the first state of the new Confederacy.

One wiser than the other two saw in it nothing of joy. He seemed to feel that each joyous shot was another note in the deathknell of the old beloved south, which in the pride of its manhood and the beauty of its womanhood, as well as in the person of its slaves, watched the scene.

It was late in the afternoon when the jubilation was over and the military marched away.

"Won't you come to dinner with us tonight, Mr. Peyton?" said Mary Annan. "You have just come from the north, and father will be so glad to talk with you. You know you were always a favorite of his."

"Thank you very much, Miss Mary, but I have not seen my own people since morning, and this is my first day home. They will be wondering what has become of me. I will be in to see your father very soon, however."

"You, then, Mr. Darrow?"

"You know how I would like it, Miss Mary, but I think I will ride along with Boyd a little. I have not seen him for three years, and we have lots of things to talk about. You know our friendship was a warm one."

"Yes," said Peyton, "it was indeed, and I hope nothing will ever come between us."

"Nothing ever shall," said the other, looking at his friend over Mary Annan's horse and never realizing, what Peyton's quicker mind had taken in, that something had already come between them, something that had come to stay.

FOOD NOT ALL.

Food is not all the thin man needs. Maybe he's sick. You can't make him eat by bringing him food. But Scott's Emulsion can make him eat That Emulsion gives a man appetite and feeds him both. It brings back lost flesh.

No trouble about digestion. The weakest stomach can digest Scott's Emulsion. It tastes good, too. Scott's Emulsion paves the way for other food. When wasted and weakened by long illness it gives strength and appetite that ordinary food cannot give. Not only food—medicine, too—Scott's Emulsion of pure cod-liver oil.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

Others May Die as Result of Railroad Disaster

FLYER'S ENGINEER BLAMED

According to Statement He Is Said to Have Made to a Policeman—Station Agent Tried to Hold Express, but It Thundered by Him

New York, Jan. 29.—The total loss of life in Tuesday night's fearful collision on the Central Railroad of New Jersey at Graceland, N. J., is 20 thus far. In addition to these Engineer Davis and Fireman McCarthy of the Philadelphia and Reading express, who are in the hospital at Plainfield, may die at any moment, and it is believed that several of the injured passengers cannot recover. The number of those known to be injured is upwards of 50, of whom 13 remain in the hospital.

The blame for the disaster is placed by the railroad officials on Engineer Davis, who, according to a policeman who took him from the shattered cab of his engine, admitted that he had seen the red and green danger lights displayed but, expecting to see them suddenly change to white, rushed on until it was too late to check speed before he plunged into the rear of the train ahead.

No statement has been obtained from Davis in the hospital, but in intervals of semi-consciousness and delirium he moans: "I saw nothing."

John Eicke, the station agent at Cranford, says that a minute before the accident he received orders to hold the express at his station. He could hear the train coming and without waiting to answer that he understood instructions he grabbed his lantern and rushed out onto the platform. As he emerged the train flashed by. Davis was leaning far out of the cab window looking straight ahead and apparently attending to his duty.

It was too late when Eicke reached the platform and he rushed back to his key to warn Westfield, but before he could do so the train had covered the two miles and was past Westfield and plunging into the other train three quarters of a mile beyond.

Eicke says that he saw the time when he took the order to hold the express and the time when he raised Westfield and that it was only a few seconds over two minutes, showing that the express was really travelling at a much higher speed than 60 miles an hour.

A jury was called at Plainfield yesterday to hold an inquest, and adjourned until today, when an exhaustive investigation will be begun in order to fix the responsibility for the disaster. The grand jury, which was to have been dismissed today, will be held in recess in order that the evidence taken at the inquest may be submitted without delay.

Sixteen Killed In Arizona

Tucson, Ari., Jan. 29.—A collision occurred on the Southern Pacific railroad yesterday between two passenger trains near Vailsburg, and sixteen persons were killed. Details as to the cause are difficult to obtain. It appears that both trains were running at full speed and came together with a terrific crash. The engines and cars were piled up in a mass and immediately caught fire and 11 cars were consumed. J. M. Hilton of Cambridge, Mass., is among the dead.

Reorganization Blocked

Newark, N. J., Jan. 29.—Vice Chancellor Stevens has granted a rule to show cause why the National Building Loan and Provident company should not be restrained from reorganizing as the American Trust company and why a receiver should not be appointed. It had been decided to make the change on Tuesday next, but the granting of the rule will prevent such action.

A Prince's Short Honeymoon

London, Jan. 29.—The Daily Express announces the disappearance since Dec. 20 of Prince Athrobald S. de Modena, who on Dec. 17 was married to Mabel Scott, formerly the Countess Russell. The latter obtained a divorce from Earl Russel in March, 1901. The bride is now staying in London with her mother, Lady Scott, while the prince is supposed to be in New York.

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it, and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended, but give this medicine as directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. THE BOUNDARY DISPUTE

Tupper Sees No Way In Which to Overcome American Diplomacy

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 29.—Sir Charles H. Tupper, who won his title by his work as a jurist in the interests of Canada at the sessions of the Behring sea commission in Paris, in speaking of the proposed commission to settle the boundary question said that it means that the United States will euchre Canada out of her rights. He said further that England will never fight the United States for one inch of Canadian territory. The United States knows this and is sure of her ground when she arbitrates with Great Britain over Canadian rights.

The three similar arbitrations known to the world prove that the United States knew what she was doing when she agreed to a commission of three on each side. For the side of Great Britain there will be one and perhaps two Englishmen and where Canada is concerned in an arbitration Englishmen are disposed to lean toward the United States. On the other hand American jurists on an arbitration commission never swerve a hair's breath on any grounds. If the English jurists favor the Americans Canada loses. If each side holds its own Canada loses, for, according to legal procedure, the case falls to the ground, which leaves the Americans in possession of the disputed territory. The United States will say: "Canada could not prove its case and we have the territory," so the United States will doubtless win in any event.

Addicks Bars Regulars

Dover, Del., Jan. 29.—J. E. Addicks, who has within six votes of the necessary majority in the deadlock in the legislature for United States senator, last night issued a statement in which he says that as the "bolter," or regular Republicans, have broken faith with his faction, the Union Republicans, and violated agreements, it is impossible to consider any co-operation with the "bolters." This is taken to mean that in state, county and city elections in Delaware there will hereafter be two Republican tickets.

Drinking May Explain Suicide

Knoxville, Jan. 29.—Lieutenant Ludwig Barth, aged 35, a former officer of the German navy, who was attached to the gunboat Irene at the time of the Manila bay incident, when Admiral Dewey was in command, committed suicide here last night by shooting. Barth has been employed as a lumber inspector here for about a year. He came to the United States seeking to regain his dealth. He was well supplied with money and spent it lavishly. It is said that he had been drinking heavily.

Roosevelt Believes In Large Families

Toledo, Jan. 29.—A letter and autograph photograph was received here yesterday from President Roosevelt for the members of the Stanislaus Spyschalski family, in which quadruplets were born Jan. 5. There were two girls and two boys and one of the boys was named Theodore Roosevelt. In his letter the president says: "I am very much interested in the case, as one of the boys is named after me, and I thoroughly believe in large families."

Rebels Seek Foreign Sympathy

Hong Kong, Jan. 29.—The revolutionary movement, which led to the arrest here of seven Kwang-Si rebels, is said to be a very serious attempt to overthrow the central power and establish a separate government in the south of China. The real leaders are said to be in the interior collecting forces. The revolutionary organization embraces four provinces. The insurrectionists are posing as reformers and are anxious to secure foreign sympathy.

Bucklin Pleads Not Guilty

New York, Jan. 29.—David W. Bucklin, the reputed manager of Canfield's alleged gambling house, pleaded not guilty yesterday to the indictment found against him of abetting in the maintenance of a gambling house. Arguments on the application by Bucklin's attorney to inspect the minutes of the grand jury will be heard on Monday.

Princess Loses All Her Titles

Vienna, Jan. 29.—The effect of the action by Emperor Francis Joseph in depriving the Crown Princess of Saxony of all her archducal titles and prerogatives will be to deprive her of any title whatsoever. So drastic a decree is without parallel in the history of the Austrian house.

Rome, Jan. 29.—Vesuvius is again in eruption. Detonations are heard and a stream of incandescent lava is issuing from the volcano, which is surrounded with thick smoke.

FOG AND SOFT COAL.

Responsible For Temporary Tying Up of Traffic at Boston.

Boston, Jan. 29.—The warm south wind blowing over rapidly melting snow drove over the north part of the city last night a bank of fog, which, with dense clouds of soft coal smoke, blotted out everything outside a radius of 100 feet. Traffic, not only in the upper harbor, but on the Boston and Maine railroad and on some of the street car lines leading into the city from the north, was well nigh paralyzed for three hours. At times it was impossible to see across the streets, and electric lights seemed only to add to the gloom.

Deep as was the fog in the city, the harbor was almost impenetrable. Ferry boats were run at most infrequent intervals and with the greatest difficulty. The Chelsea ferry was suspended. One of the East Boston boats, after steaming about for over two hours, landed over at the navy yard. Its trip from slip to slip ordinarily takes five minutes.

Vessels in the inner harbor, though they carried lights, were covered with a veil so thick that pilots on the ferry boats could not see them ahead. All the vessels anchored in the stream that carried fog bells kept them clanging for their own safety and as an aid to the ferry pilots.

On the Boston and Maine railroad all trains came in as far as the first block at East Somerville at slow speed. From that point they were sent in to the next tower station, one at a time, but as the engineers could not see the semaphores special men had to be sent out along the tracks to stop them at the end of the blocks. In some cases the flagmen had to walk along beside the engine, while the train just moved. The company discontinued a number of unimportant trains to nearby towns.

The street car lines suffered almost as badly. Cars from the suburbs which come into the city 40 an hour almost disappeared, and between 7 and 9 o'clock but five cars reached the north terminal of the Elevated road at Sullivan square in Charlestown.

British Plans In Africa

London, Jan. 29.—It is announced that from Feb. 1 the whole of the British forces in South Africa will be under the single and supreme command of General Lyttleton, with headquarters at Pretoria. This step is regarded as significant of the intention of the imperial government to treat South Africa as a whole and as giving a strong probability of a similar political arrangement at some future date. It is also held to point to the future transfer of the centre of power from Cape Colony to the new colonies.

Serious Error on Steamer

Halifax, Jan. 29.—The Atlantic transport America, which sailed Tuesday night for Baltimore, returned to port yesterday. Her return was due to an inflow of water which was caused by the condenser valves being left open. They were closed as soon as the discovery was made and the pumps were started. The steamer will be detained in port and a survey has been ordered.

Lynchers Must Stand Trial

Kosciousko, Miss., Jan. 29.—Judge Stephens yesterday denied bail to Robert Milner, indicted with 11 others for the alleged lynching of two negroes. The 12 men asked for bail under habeas corpus proceedings and the petitions were to stand or fall according to the court's decision in the case of Milner. The trials now will proceed.

Special Dispensation For Finns

Woman Suffrage Knocked Out

Topeka, Jan. 29.—The state senate yesterday defeated the woman suffrage bill. It was proposed to grant women the privilege of voting for presidential electors, which would not require an amendment to the constitution. The house and Governor Bailey favored the measure.

PERHAPS A MURDER

Body of Man With Head Cut and Eye Gouged Out Found In Woods

Shapleigh, Me., Jan. 29.—The discovery of the body of Luther Hodgdon, lying in a pung, with a cut over the head and one eye gouged out, has caused the authorities of York county to commence an investigation, on the supposition that the man was a victim of foul play. It was ascertained that Hodgdon, after spending the night with three men, two of them brothers by the name of Sprague, and another man named Beal, during which considerable liquor was drunk, went into the woods yesterday morning to cut wood. Beal and one of the Spragues returned about 9 o'clock, but the other has not appeared.

When Hodgdon's body was found in the pung the horse which was attached to it was standing uncovered, the bridle was hanging down in front of his legs, and being pulled partially off seemed to indicate that he had been led. The horse and pung were off the main road and was headed away from Hodgdon's home.

The local officer was at once notified, and some time after Beal and one of the Spragues were found and closely questioned. Both admitted that they had been with Hodgdon the night before, when considerable liquor was drunk, but that they left him in the woods early yesterday morning when he appeared all right.

There was no trouble at any of the factories last night, although the police were on hand to suppress any outbreak.

Under present prices for stock and labor building for investment is prohibitive. The new demands of the carpenters will make the situation worse.

By all means make the Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts the president of the Senate. It was a happy thought of Editor Dowse, and the resolve should pass for several reasons.

The new department officials of the city will assume their duties next Monday under the City Charter but thus far no intelligence of the appointees has been received by the public. But little interest is taken in the appointments, and probably there will be only one or two changes.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Bishop Potter told a lot of truth in his preachment against bargain sales and his declaration that cheapness at the bargain counter meant cheapness in the place of production, and that somebody was sacrificed for what somebody gained, but he might as well have tried to sweep back the ocean as to stop the rush for the bargian counter. Ice Houses Full.

The Meadow Brook Ice Co. completed the cutting and housing of their winters crop of ice Wednesday night. Although there has been some mild weather this month, there has also been some very cold weather, and the company were fortunate in filling their houses with some handsome ice. It is nearly twelve inches in thickness and is clear as crystal, being entirely free from foreign substances of any kind.

Eaton Bros. have also been successful in filling their houses with ice that averages thirteen inches, which they say is the best they ever cut.

The Crystal Spring Ice Co. did not begin to house their crop until Monday and have only been at work two days, today's storm having stopped work for a time. What they have cut is twelve inches thick.

☞This insures citizens that there will be no scarcity of ice next summer.

The Braintree Bill.

The bill which Braintree asks of the Legislature to establish a municipal fuel yard gives the town authority to set up in the fuel business, but says that the fuel business shall not be begun until a sufficient appropriation shall have been made at a town meeting. The gross expenses of the business must be paid out of the town treasury, for which an annual appropriation must be made, and all receipts must be paid into the town treasury. The office of manager of the municipal fuel yard is created by the bill, and the incumbent is to have charge of all the details of the business, his compensation being fixed annually by the town, and his election to be annually by ballot. The act is not to take effect unless accepted by a two-thirds vote at any time within three years.

THE OPPORTUNITY

To Work Together for the Public Good.

Objects of the People's Union.

Public Eduation, Outdoor Work, Sanitation and Hygiene.

The People's Union is slowly working along lines of common community-interests. The people of Ward Two have the honor of leading the group of ward organizations. Ward Five is not far behind and it is to be hoped that each ward will soon have a working center. Such centers, that bring the people of all and every creed as well as no creed, together, that create common interests, that work for a needed common good, are helpful in raising the civilization of the whole community, in affording additional educational opportunities, in supplanting what is provided by taxation and in making the city a more desirable place of residence.

Some of these ends were definitely in the minds of the promoters of the Quincy People's Union. By the committee on organization, consisting of Dr. J. A. Gordon, Rev. E. N. Hardy, Rev. E. C. Butler, Mr. J. O. Hall, Jr. and Miss Elizabeth Johnson, certain possible lines of work are suggested for the Quincy People's Union, viz:

PUBLIC EDUCATION.

Relating to Schools. (Vacation Classes, Manual Training, Parents and Teachers Meetings, Stamp-saving system, etc.)

Relating to reading or club rooms in various parts of city (possibly in in school houses?)

Relating to Lectures—Popular subjects and prices. (Special co-operation of Literary organizations. Teachers Association and Home Science Association in this work.)

PARK AND OUTDOOR WORK

Relating to Improvement of Public Grounds:—parks, railroad stations, cemeteries, rubbish heaps, play grounds:

Relating to encouragement of private interest in:—yard and window gardening, children's gardens, local flower and vegetable exhibits with prizes for excellence—distribution of cheap seeds with directions for planting, also informal conferences and talks on trees, shrubs and flowers, and a city forester.

PUBLIC SANITATION AND HYGIENE

Relating to possible appointment of a medical inspector for the schools; illustrated lectures on municipal sanitation, sewerage systems, water supply, etc.; street cleaning brigades of school children; prizes for excellence in sewing, cooking, etc., with especial reference to work in these lines of school children; possible establishment of depot in Quincy for New England kitchen food.

Relating to Co-operation of physicians, hospital authorities, and Home Science Association in this work.

From them each ward may select, or supplement, according to its needs and ability. The object of the society, as a whole and in its branches, stated in the constitution, shall be study and promotion of the community interests of Quincy, all parts of which shall be considered and represented in its work. All persons in sympathy with this object shall be eligible to membership, the fee being fifty cents. The money raised in each ward may all be expended in that ward if needed, not more than two-fifths of it can be controlled by the central organization.

Some lectures of interests to the whole city might be thought advisable by the central committee and the expenses must be met by a fund from the ward organizations. Mr. Emery L. Crane is president of the central organization. Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Wilson Marsh, recording secretary and Mr. Eugene H. Sprague, treasurer.

In order that the different wards might organize the vice presidents, who are also chairmen of the ward organizations were elected by the body adopting the constitutions. They are hereafter to be elected annually by the ward organizations. The vice presidents are.

Ward I,—Mr. John McKnight.
Ward II,—Mr. T. B. Pollard.
Ward III,—Dr. J. M. Sheahan.
Ward IV,—Mr. Thos. F. Burke.
Ward V,—Rev. C. P. Mills.
Ward VI,—Rev. J. H. Whitaker.

There is especial need of unity of interest in this city, spreading over so much territory with its numerous smaller centers, especial need that all should work together for a common good, to create better physical, mental and moral conditions in our city. The Quincy People's Union gives this opportunity.

QUINCY IN A FOG.

Considerable Danger Attended Travel by Electrics.

The thick damp fog which appeared late Wednesday afternoon made things rather disagreeable for those who were out either for business or pleasure. As night approached the fog thickened and during the early evening it was impossible to see anything ten feet from you.

The fog also added an element of danger to drivers of teams and electric cars. The street lights helped matters a little but ten feet away they resembled little round balls of light. The motormen on the electric cars had to keep their wits about them. A sharp lookout was kept and cars were run very cautiously. It was a severe strain on the eyes and nerves to run an electric car on such a night and the motormen doubtless uttered a sigh of relief when they housed their cars for the night. No accidents have been reported, but it would not have been surprising if there had been some.

It was hoped that this morning the sun would burn off the fog. It was, however, too thick, and up to noon the sun had not made its appearance. The fog, prevailed all through the morning, and although it had lifted a little at noon the air was full of a dampness that penetrated the heaviest garments and was suggestive of colds and malaria.

The weather predictions for today were fair, except rain in the western portions of the State. The indications at noon, however, were that the fog would remain in possession the rest of the day and that tonight would be a repetition of Wednesday night.

To Provide Smoking Room.

Smokers' needs are soon to be recognized in a new and novel manner at the Charlestown Navy Yard says the Transcript. Within the last two or three years the regulations against smoking inside the reservation limits have been growing more and more strict, owing to the fact the great plant has been constantly expanding and the danger from fire more to be feared. Now the rules are so strict that officers are not permitted to smoke in their own offices. However, they do not feel the effects of the rule as severely as the mechanics and laborers who are deprived of their noonday pipe or cigar, unless they choose to stand outside on the streets and smoke, which, of course, no considerable number of them care to do. Soon all this is to be changed and the news will bring gladness to hundreds of the Government's employes, not only at the Charlestown Navy Yard, but at all other navy yards and stations, for if the experiment to be tried here is a success, it is more than likely that it will be adopted elsewhere. Naval Constructor William J. Baxter, who is at the head of the department of construction and repair, and who is always seeking for a chance to help the workmen under him, has succeeded in getting the consent of the Navy Department to authorize him to remodel the two brick buildings now used by the plumbers and galvanizers into luncheon and smoking rooms for the workmen.

A. O. H. Installation.

The officers of Division 18, A. O. H., were installed Wednesday evening. A number of grand officers were present to witness the ceremony among whom were: State President, John A. Ryan; and Past County President, James E. Foley. There were also present, President John F. Reardon, Division 14 of South Weymouth.

The installation ceremony was by County President Daniel Reidy of Weymouth. The new officers:

President, P. J. Ferguson.
Vice president, P. J. Taugney.
Recording secretary, Thomas F. Carey.

Finance Committee, Joseph Griffin, George O'Brien, and Timothy J. Carey.
Standing Committee, James P. Flannigan, Stephen N. Swain, Henry Clare, R. J. Gray, William Callahan, and Michael Collins.
Sergent-at-arms, Joseph Harris.

After the ceremony there were addresses by the visiting officers. A collation was served.

—An indignant chorus girl who had been married—by rumor—to a Harvard student denied the rumor with a proper degree of anger. "It's all I can do to support myself," she said. "If ever I get married to a student he will be a student of a manual training school." And still they say chorus girls are foolish and flighty!—Stoughton Sentinel.

SPOTLESS TOWN

And Tableaux Presented at Quincy Point Church.

Many Local Hits in the Play.

The Courtship of Myles Standish Illustrated.

The Quincy Point church is taking an enviable place as entertainers, and attractions are given nearly every week The vestry was crowded Wednesday evening with an audience of 200 to 300 to witness the tableaux of "The Courtship of Myles Standish" and "Ye playe of Spotless Town." Marnock's orchestra of three pieces was also prominent on the program, playing popular airs and receiving encores.

The following scenes in "The Courtship of Myles Standish" were presented with good effect under the direction of Miss Margaret Thomas, assisted by Mrs. Rollin H. Newcomb and Mrs. George F. Sidelinger:

Standish and Alden.
The Message.
At Priscilla's Door.
Priscilla.
"Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"
The skein of her spinning.
"You, too, Brutus."
The Council.
The Marriage.
The return of Standish.

The poem was read by Mrs. L. O. Crane of Brookline in an admirable manner.

The part of Priscilla was taken by Miss Mary Gay, that of Myles Standish by Frank Newcomb, and that of John Alden by George Garey. Other characters were represented by Miss Minnie Wight, Miss Grace Lapham, Arthur Foster, George Hayden, Harold Newcomb and Harry Sherburne.

Other tableaux presented were: "The Holly Girl," by Miss Grace Lapham; "Madame Chrysantheme" by Miss Victoria Carter; "The Harvest Procession" by Misses Ethel Kittredge, Beatrice Adams, Lillian Mae Glidden, Emma Hayden, Annie Carter, Elizabeth Scholar, and Estelle Tirrell; Statue of Music, Miss Theo Crane, Miss Gertrude Foster and Walter Mead; The Girl in the Moon, Miss Clara Bushnell.

"Spotless Town" was a simple home drama in three scenes, and a good advertisement for Sapolio, but at the same time entertaining.

In the cast were:

The Mayor,	C. W. Newcomb
The Cook,	Miss Bessie Brown
The Policeman,	H. D. Adams
The Butcher,	Mr. Seller
The Maid,	Mrs. Drake
The Doctor,	Carl Sherburne
The Bootblack,	Frank Melville
The Boree,	Harold Newcomb
The Newsboy,	John Melville

In scene two several of the characters read from newspapers "The Ladies Aid News," "Fore River Journal," etc., which were unusually brilliant in local hits upon Quincy Point people, especially prominent people of the church.

Samples of Sapolio were given to each person in attendance.

The ushers of the evening were Mr. Marcus S. Wight and Charles N. Bosworth, both of whom were spotless.

Societies Attend.

The funeral of Briggs H. Emery was held Wednesday afternoon from his late resinence, 229 Washington street. The services were attended by many of his business and personal friends, as well as delegations from Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., and Webster lodge of Odd Fellows of Whitman. Services were conducted by Rev. Edwin N. Hardy of the Bethany church. The burial services of the Grand Army and Odd Fellows were read. The body was taken to Lynn where the Lynn Post, G. A. R., of which he was a member, will take charge.

TODAY'S COURT.

WOULD YOU INVEST
$100 TO MAKE A PROFIT OF $10,000 BESIDES MANY TIMES YOUR MONEY BACK IN DIVIDENDS IF SO,
BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S
STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $415.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 20 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property, that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 50c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $2.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions, HERBERT S. WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Extended to Fair Worshippers of Christ Church.

Annual Meeting and Supper.

The Year 1902 One of Most Prosperous of the Church.

The annual parish meeting and supper of Christ church was held Wednesday evening at the parish house. The supper which was served at 6 o'clock was in charge of the ladies of the Woman's Guild and was partaken of by nearly two hundred. The menu consisted of salads, cold meats, fruit, coffee, etc.

There was unusual interest from the fact that it was the first at which the new rector Rev. William E. Gardner and Mrs. Gardner were present and also the first annual meeting where women were allowed to participate.

Following the supper a business meeting was held when these officers were elected:

Wardens,—George H. Brown and C. Theodore Hardwick.
Treasurer,—John E. Sprague.
Clerk,—J. Smith, Jr.
Delegates to the diocesan convention,—George H. Brown F. F. Crane, Solomon Fuller.
Delegates to the archdeaconary of New Bedford,—Solomon Fuller and Elisha Packard.

Reports were presented by the secretary, treasurer, superintendent of the Sunday school, Woman's Guild, Reapers' Circle of King's Daughters and St. Margaret's Guild. These reports were very gratifying. Although the church had been without a rector for about six months, the year 1902 was one of the most successful in the history of the church.

CONFERENCE OF ALLIES

For Discussion of Points Not Clearly Understood

CASTRO'S DIPLOMATIC DEBT

Amounts to Over $14,000,000 and Nothing Has Been Paid on It Since Dec 31, 1901—Bowen Outlines Plan For Its Adjustment

Washington, Jan. 29.—The British and Italian ambassadors and Count Quadt, the German charge d'affaires, called on Mr. Bowen, Venezuela's representative in the negotiations looking to a raising of the blockade and a settlement of the claims against Venezuela, about 10:30 o'clock last night by appointment and at the request of the representatives of the allies.

The conference broke up early this morning. It was made known that no agreement had yet been reached for the raising of the blockade and that further word must be awaited from Europe before this stage of the negotiations is passed. Details respecting payments still remain to be adjusted to the common satisfaction of all concerned and, as under the instructions of their governments each diplomatic representative of the allies must report to his own country, these reports in turn being the subject of cablegrams between the allies in order that the concert between them may be preserved, it will be at least 24 hours longer before the blockade can be removed. By common consent the duty of giving the press a statement of the conference, as far as it was deemed politic to make any announcement, was devolved on Mr. Bowen. That gentleman's statement was as follows:

"We have been discussing tonight certain points which needed to be clearly understood. They have been referred to us for consideration and our views are now to be communicated at once to Rome, London and Berlin."

Partial confirmation has been obtained here of cable dispatches that Belgium is to take a prominent part in the administration of the customs receipts. Mr. Bowen declines to discuss the details of his plan, however, until the blockade has been raised. Late yesterday afternoon he gave out a brief statement of the diplomatic debt of Venezuela and the methods for its future adjustment. In round numbers this debt amounted on Dec. 31, 1901, to something over $14,000,000, and consisted of claims which had previously been adjusted. Since that date, owing to the almost constant state of revolution which has prevailed in Venezuela, no payments have been made on the debt.

Mr. Bowen's plan provides that 13 percent of the customs receipts of all the Venezuelan ports shall go toward the payment of this debt. This arrangement, it is stated, will interfere in nowise with the plans of Mr. Bowen submitted to the powers for the settlement of the unadjudicated claims. For the payment of the latter 30 percent of the customs duties of the two ports of Porto Cabello and La Guaira have been offered in pledge by Mr. Bowen. These ports were selected because they would be the last to fall into the hands of the revolutionists.

Assurances have been given the French government that it shall receive fair treatment in the settlement of the claims and that no previous arrangements which it has made with Venezuela shall be interfered with. The French charge yesterday received instructions from the foreign office at Paris authorizing him to conduct negotiations with Mr. Bowen whenever the latter desires to take up the French claims.

An Italian consul has been ordered to Washington from Venezuela with all the papers bearing on the claims of his government. These will be placed at the disposal of the Italian ambassador. The latter is being congratulated on his diplomatic triumph in securing a pro rata payment of the claims for the powers, as this means much for the Italian government.

From the highest authority it is learned that the publication by the London foreign office of the fact that Great Britain and not Germany sought the alliance against Venezuela was brought about by representations from the German foreign office. It is said that Germany had threatened to publish the diplomatic exchanges between the German and British foreign offices unless Great Britain immediately shouldered the responsibility for the alliance. This threat was induced by the anti-German feeling aroused in the United States by events in Venezuelan waters.

Fort Fired on Panther First

Caracas, Jan. 29.—It is learned from an officer of the United States gunboat Marietta that Commodore Scheder, on arriving at Curacao, said: "The Panther did not fire first on Fort San Carlos, but on Jan. 17 was obliged by a storm to take refuge inside the bar, and on coming near the fortress she tried to land a boat flying a red flag. This signal was misinterpreted by the fort, which subsequently fired on the boat."

Miners Buried Alive

Salt Lake City, Jan. 29.—Near Park City yesterday an avalanche tore the big shaft house of the Quincy mine to pieces. Eight men working in the shaft house were buried in the ruins. A large force of men is working in the hope of rescuing some of them.

PRETTY WEDDING.

Miss Catherine E. Bogler Becomes Mrs. Adam Owens.

The most brilliant wedding which has ever been solemnized in the new St. Mary's church, West Quincy, was that of Tuesday evening when Miss Catherine E. Bogler became the wife of Mr. Adam Owens, son of ex-Councilman and Mrs. Michael Owens. The church and altar were decorated with evergreen and holly and brilliantly illuminated by electric lights.

Long before half-past seven, the hour of the ceremony, the church was crowded with the friends of the young people.

Miss Mildred Cavanagh was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Helen M. Farrell and Miss Annie Walsh of West Quincy. The groom was attended by his best man, Mr. Vincent Bogler.

Lewis A. Pendis, Walter Pendis, Simon O. Farrell, Joseph Haley, Aloysius Barry, Ambrose Ballou and Arthur Ballou acted as ushers.

The bride looked charming in a beautiful gown of liberty silk, accordion plaited, trimmed with old lace, and an effective satin girdle. Her tulle veil which reached to the floor, was caught up by a diamond sunburst, a gift of the groom and she carried a large bouquet of bride roses.

Rev. A. F. Roche solemnized the marriage and at the close of the ceremony Miss Alice Foley sang very sweetly the Ave Maria.

Following the church ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's uncle Mr. J. C. Pendis, 8 Rogers street. Bride roses and carnations beautified the house. A wedding supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Owens left that evening on a bridal trip to Washington and on their return are to reside in Roslindale.

Several petitions were also presented to the Senate, including that of Timothy Bigelow chapter, D. A. R., for an act authorizing cities and towns to appropriate money for monuments to revolutionary soldiers.

Senator Celrke of Suffolk presented a bill to provide that civil war veterans in the employ of cities and towns shall, when removed from office, unless for crime, be provided with other employment at the same compensation.

Severe

Nervous Trouble and Dyspepsia.

No Sleep for Weeks Because of Pain.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Gave Back My Health.

Dyspepsia nearly always arises from a derangement of the nerves. When the stomach is not well the entire system suffers. Constipation, bad breath, sour stomach, frequent headaches, biliousness, etc., will lead to terrible consequences if not treated in time. Dr. Miles' Nervine is a specific for nervous dyspepsia and all nervous diseases.

"My health was miserable for years, due to severe nervous trouble and dyspepsia. I had not been able to sleep for weeks at a time without being awakened with pains in my chest and stomach. My limbs felt tired, I was unable to do my house work without feeling completely worn out. The doctors failed to relieve me, and after taking an endless amount of their medicines I began taking Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills. I obtained relief from the first bottle of Nervine, was able to sleep better than I had in years. My stomach began to gain strength and I felt better in many ways. I have taken twelve bottles of Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills in the past three years but have not taken any of late as I have not felt the need of it. I go about my work an entirely different woman and have recommended them to ever so many people. I am a great believer in Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills, I have them on hand all the time. I feel very grateful for the Dr. Miles Remedies."—MRS. J. W. WHITMAN, Mechanic Falls, Me.

CHAPTER VIII.

RIVALS, YET FRIENDS.

As Peyton and Darrow cantered up the road a little silence fell between them, which the older man was the first to break. With characteristic frankness he asked his friend a direct question.

"Boyd," he said, "are you in love with Mary Annan?"

"I am," was the prompt reply.

"Is she in love with you? Forgive me this question, old fellow, but we have never had a secret between us since we have been boys together, and I don't want to begin now. And I am as ready to answer as to ask questions."

"No, I think not—not yet, that is."

In any other man Peyton would have resented such interrogations, but he simply could not be angry with his friend, especially in the face of such open frankness.

"Boyd," said the other impulsively, "I want you to know that if I can help it she never shall be."

"Why do you say that, Darrow?" asked Peyton, in great surprise, yet at once divining the reason.

"I love her myself," resolutely.

"And does she love you?"

"Not yet."

"I repeat your words, Bob," cried Peyton, stopping his horse suddenly. "If I can help it, she never shall."

"Good!" said Darrow, smiling infectiously at the stern face of the other man. "That is as it should be. A fair field and no favor, and may the best man win! Come, Boyd, don't look so glum about it. We have an equal chance. She is promised to neither of us. If anything, you have the advantage. But that's all right. I mean to win her for my wife if I can, and you for yours. What I wanted to say to you is this—you won't let it make any difference in our friendship, will you?"

As he spoke he extended his hand to his friend frankly and generously, almost pleadingly. After a momentary hesitation Peyton accepted the proffered clasp, and the two men shook hands warmly over this strange compact, a compact utterly impossible of fulfillment.

"I won't take any advantage of you," said Darrow magnanimously, "and you won't take any of me, I know."

"No, certainly not, and I am quite prepared to concede that you are the better of the two, Bob."

"I am not willing to admit that at all, but whether you are the better or not I am going to do my level best in an honorable way to win, Boyd."

"I shall do the same."

"All right. Now we have settled that. Whew! It's a load off my mind, I am sure. You see I want Miss Mary and I want you, too, Peyton. I want her love and I want your affection as well. I want everybody's, and I suppose you feel much the same way."

"Well, I'm not so particular about everybody's," answered the more reserved Peyton, "but I want hers and yours, and we will agree that whoever may win the lady the other man may at least retain the friend."

"That's a bargain. Now, tell me, Peyton; I saw you salute the flag, and 'twas a natural thing for you to do. If I had been alone, I probably would not have done it, but I sort of followed your example. You know I have been accustomed to follow your lead in most things, even to falling in love with Miss Mary, for, as a matter of fact, I suppose you did it first."

"I have loved her ever since she was born," said Peyton quietly.

"Jove!" said the other. "So have I. But what I meant to ask you was how do you stand with reference to this secession question?"

"I am not aware that I am bound to make or give a decision yet."

"No, not immediately perhaps, but you will be very soon. The talk is all secession. Governor Moore is in favor of it. The election of delegates to the convention takes place on the 24th. I was up in Montgomery last week, and the state desires and accepts it overwhelmingly unless in the northern tier of counties. Here it's all one way. It's a foregone conclusion that Alabama will follow South Carolina's lead and go out of the Union. It won't be three weeks before the thing will be done."

"I can't believe it."

"It's true nevertheless. And every son of the old state will have to make a decision one way or the other. Now, what are you going to do?"

"I can't tell yet. I can't believe the contingency will arise."

"But if it does?"

"When it does, I shall have to decide in accordance with my conscience. Could I not still remain an officer of the United States navy even if Alabama does secede? I love my profession. I am thoroughly satisfied with it. I do not wish to abandon it. Why could I not still keep on as I am?"

"Because the United States government will endeavor to prevent secession by force."

"Is it possible?"

"It is certain. We in the south have known it ever since Lincoln was elected. They will deny the right of secession and attempt to enforce their refusal, and as sure as there is a God above us you and every southern man will have to say whether he will fight for or against the south, God bless her!"

"This is all new to me, Darrow!" cried Peyton. "It comes upon me as a great surprise. I never imagined such a thing until today. You see, we sailors do not get in touch with popular opinion very closely, and I have but recently returned from a long cruise in foreign waters. Now that you say so, I begin to believe that you may be right. There is a spirit of resistance in the north; of compulsion, too, I think, or there will be."

"I am glad of it," said the other. "I did not think they had spirit to do anything. A nation of shopkeepers!" he went on with lofty scorn. "They will cut a pretty figure down here, won't they? I met a man from Arkansas the other day, and he said that if Abe Lincoln's soldiers set foot upon the sacred soil of Arkansas they would fatten the catfish from the Red river to the gulf of Mexico with their carcasses."

Darrow laughed harshly as he told the tale.

"Ugh!" said Peyton, shrinking from the brutality of the remark. "How beastly that is!"

"Yes, isn't it? I wouldn't have said it, of course. I don't indorse it at all; no gentleman could. But it shows the spirit of the people."

"Arkansas isn't Alabama, though."

"It's much the same thing. We'll make it interesting for the north if they'll fight."

"Darrow," said Peyton earnestly, "don't be deceived. There is as good fighting blood north of the Potomac as south of it. At the academy we had cadets from every section of the country. I have been well thrashed by northern men, and I have made it interesting for some others, and I want to tell you, in victory or in defeat, you will find in the north foemen worthy of anybody's steel."

"I hope so," answered Darrow composedly. "Most of our people expect an easy conquest. I would like to win out after a struggle that would be worth while."

"I do not believe there is going to be any struggle, but if there is you will know right away you are in for a hard fight."

"Well, the harder the better," cried the other, throwing his arm out in a bold, free gesture, full of menace, "the harder the better. But, Peyton, surely you wouldn't hesitate as to what side you would be on? Why, man, see how I love you when I tell you this. Mary Annan would not look at you a moment if you raised your arm against the south. We need you. You have a fine headpiece on you, old fellow, and you have been trained in the profession of arms. You are a scientific sailor. We want you. Think of the opportunities that are going to open in the new Confederacy for a man of talent and fortune and family and birth and with the prestige of your naval rank! I wish I had it."

Peyton sat still in his saddle before the gate.

"Darrow," said Peyton, turning sharply upon him, "whatever my course will be, I will take it for no other reason than that I think it is right."

"That's right, Boyd, and that will bring you with us, I am sure."

"We shall see," said Peyton grimly. "But here we are at our gate. Won't you come in and take a bite with us? They will be glad to see you."

"No, thank you, old fellow; some other day. I want to get back to town. I want to be in the thick of things. The town's just filled with excitement. I suppose they will have another jollification tonight. Jove, I love it! I'd rather be in the middle of a fight, I believe, than anywhere else on earth."

"Unless it were with Miss Mary Annan," said Peyton quickly.

"Oh, of course. Yet—this is treason, I know, but sometimes I half think I'd rather—well, I'll not say it. Goodby. I'll ride out in the morning if you will wait for me, and we will have a long talk about old times and new times together."

"All right; I shall expect you. Goodby."

As Darrow wheeled his horse and cantered down the road Peyton sat still in his saddle before the gate and followed him with longing, wistful eyes.

"Poor old Bob," he thought; "it will break his heart if I don't go with the state. What's that he said about Mary Annan? She wouldn't look at me if I fought against the south? Pshaw! He's the dreamer, not I. I can't believe that it will be as serious as all that."

Nevertheless, in spite of his attempt at reassurance, it was with a heavy heart he rode up the avenue toward the house.

Break In Waterbury Strike

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 29.—At a meeting of the striking motormen and conductors of the Connecticut Railway and Lighting company last night Frank Miller asked if there was any objection to his returning to work for the company as an inspector. In no mild terms he was informed that there was objection, to which he replied that he would go to work. Miller was immediately fined $50, expelled from the union and invited to leave the room.

Resolution "Not Consistent"

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 29.—W. S. Webb, president of the Rutland railroad, has notified Mayor Hawley that he cannot accept the resolution passed at a recent meeting of citizens when authority was given for the issuance of $50,000 in bonds for the purpose of securing the removal from Rutland to this city of the offices of the railroad. He gives no reason except that the resolution as passed by the voters was not consistent with his proposition.

Shot Through Own Carelessness

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 29.—Margaret White, the young woman who accidentally shot Albert Fox last Sunday night, was discharged by Judge Almy yesterday. The judge said that Fox was wholly to blame, as he was inexcusably careless. The young man was shot while showing Miss White and her sister a scene from a melodrama in which revolvers were prominent.

A Prosperous Organization

Boston, Jan. 29.—The 10th annual dinner of the state executive committee of the Y. M. C. A. of Massachusetts and Rhode Island was held here last night. Chairman Brew presided. He said that the association has now nearly 30,000 young men on its rolls and nearly $3,000,000 invested in buildings and physical apparatus, and that the prospects are brilliant for the future.

An Ungrateful Tramp

Rutland, Vt., Jan. 29.—A tramp whom Louis A. Morse, a contractor, was carrying home to supper last night, caught sight of a gold watch, and on Morse refusing to give it up, fired two shots at him, wounding him in the shoulder. Morse chased the man half a mile, but was compelled to stop from loss of blood. Morse's wounds are not serious.

Strike Excitement Dying Out

Amesbury, Mass., Jan. 29.—The excitement attending the strike at the carriage manufactories is gradually subsiding, although a settlement seems almost as distant as ever. The local authorities think that there will be no more demonstrations and all but one of the special officers from out of town have been discharged.

All Must Be Vaccinated

Biddeford, Me., Jan. 29.—At a meeting of the mayor and the board of health last night an order was issued for compulsory vaccination in the schools. The inquest on the fire at the pest house was begun yesterday, but very little evidence tending to show the origin of the fire was brought out.

Bank to Wind Up For Good

Lebanon, N. H., Jan. 29.—The depositors of the Lebanon Savings bank, which has been in liquidation since 1897, have received 90 percent of their deposits, and yesterday the court appointed Charles E. Cooper, the former treasurer, as assignee to close up the bank's affairs.

Preferred Death to Capture

Altoona, Pa., Jan. 29.—Linbro Francesco was discovered by the police while in the act of robbing the post-office at Gallitzin yesterday. Seeing escape was impossible Francesco shot himself. He cannot live.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

Carmack Makes Harsh Remarks About Root

LODGE IS ALSO CENSURED

Declares That Minority Was Headed Off In Recent Philippines Investigation—Rawlins and Beveridge Have a Tilt Over "Cold-Blooded Murders"

Washington, Jan. 29.—Senator Carmack (Dem.) of Tennessee, in an excited colloquy with Mr. Beveridge over Philippine matters yesterday afternoon, made rather serious reflections upon Secretary Root and Senator Lodge. Of Root Mr. Carmack said: "With his loose and lavish unveracity he has said that we had an investigation of five months, when in reality the amount of time devoted to Philippine outrages would not amount to seven hours a day for four days."

Mr. Carmack declared that the Philippine investigation had been suppressed just as the most important witnesses were about to testify. He then asserted that the chairman of the committee (Mr. Lodge) had promised to go on with the investigation if the minority would permit the Philippine bill to come to a vote. The minority acceded, and the bill was passed. But when an attempt to resume the investigations was made "the senator from Massachusetts had fled from Washington and never again could we get another investigation."

The resolution offered by Mr. Rawlins calling upon the secretary of war for information regarding certain trials by court martial in the Philippines was called up. Mr. Lodge protested that the resolution called for the printing of proceedings of a voluminous nature. Mr. Rawlins urged that the resolution be adopted, because neighbors and relatives of the persons concerned had demanded the facts. He referred to the death of Father Augustin, who, he said, was murdered in cold blood. "We have reason to infer," said he, "that a foul crime has been committed, and that the criminal is within our borders, and under the present condition of the law cannot be reached." Mr. Beveridge said that he had hoped an end of the policy of insinuation and badgering about American soldiers had been reached.

Mr. Rawlins replied that he had not specifically charged any person with having committed cold-blooded murder, but his statement was based on affidavits on file in the war department. "It is the old charge," said he, "that we have called attention to tortures and thereby have been arraigning the American army. It is a false and infamous charge, and I will cram it down the teeth of the men who have falsely given it utterance. I brand the statement as infamous if not cowardly. It is simply an attempt to put me in a false position which I will not occupy."

"If that is the best explanation the senator can give," remarked Mr. Beveridge, "for his remarkable language here, I think the best friend he has would advise him to accept the alternative of silence." He then entered upon a defense of the army and said that Mr. Rawlins had given the best argument why the resolution should not be adopted. Mr. Hoar interrupted and asked if it was fair to impute to anybody a desire to attack the American army when the government of the United States itself through its military authority has made such charges.

Mr. Beveridge reverted to the use of the words "cold-blooded murder," and said that Mr. Rawlins would not undertake the responsibility of saying it. Mr. Carmack characterized the charge that the Democrats were assailing the army as the "meanest and dirtiest" of all that had been made. Whoever made the charge, he said, consciously took a falsehood upon his lips when he spoke it. Mr. Beveridge replied that Mr. Carmack made his charge because the investigation did not result as he (Carmack) had hoped it would. "It did not result in putting on the American army the brand which the senator had thought would be put there, but which resulted in a complete and brilliant vindication."

Mitchell Declines to Be Arbitrator

Indianapolis, Jan. 29.—John Mitchell yesterday declined the invitation of Governor Yates of Illinois to accept a place on the Illinois state board of arbitration on the ground that the United Mine Workers' organization demanded all his time. Mr. Mitchell said he was heartily in favor of boards of arbitration and that he appreciated the offer made by Governor Yates.

Colombia Will Approve Treaty

Panama, Jan. 29.—The text of the treaty between the United States and Colombia providing for the completion of the isthmian canal was published in full by the newspapers here yesterday. The general impression is that the Colombian congress will approve the bill.

Eight Vessels Frozen In

St. Johns, Jan. 29.—Five American fishing vessels laden with cargoes of herring are frozen in the ice in Bay of Islands and three others are ice-bound in Bonne bay. It is feared that they will be obliged to stay there during the rest of the winter.

THE RED CROSS BYLAWS

Changed In a Manner to Arouse Criticism

MISS BARTON IN CONTROL

By Means of "Slight Changes" Voted For at Meeting Attended by Large Number of Proxies Secured by Her--Complaint Regarding Finances

Washington, Jan. 30.—General John M. Wilson, vice president of the National Red Cross, presented to congress yesterday a memorial regarding that organization, especially with reference to certain differences which have arisen in regard to the management of its affairs. Included in the papers submitted with the memorial is a letter from Secretary Cortelyou, addressed to Miss Clara Barton, president of the Red Cross, in which he says that, in accordance with a copy of the bylaws submitted by the association, the president and his cabinet are constituted a board of consultation of the American Red Cross. Mr. Cortelyou says it is impossible for the president and cabinet to serve in such capacity and asks that public announcement be made of that fact.

Complaint is made in a memorial sent to President Roosevelt of the manner in which the organization is placed in the hands of one person and of the management of the finances of the association. These matters are referred to in the letter of Mr. Cortelyou.

A letter in the memorial gives an account of the manner in which the new bylaws were adopted. It says that, through Francis Atwater, Miss Clara Barton, president of the organization, secured a large number of proxies for the meeting on the representation that she desired to secure "some slight changes." In the bylaws of the Red Cross and then at the meeting presented an entirely new set of bylaws which, among other things, permitted the president of the organization to be elected for life; gave the president power to appoint a president pro tem in case of sickness or absence, with full power; created an executive committee consisting of the president and four members, the latter to be appointed by the president-elect. Mr. Foster at the meeting protested against the adoption of the bylaws, but they were adopted, 135 to 89, 72 of the votes being cast by proxies.

The letter of Secretary Cortelyou to Miss Barton follows:

"Dear Madame: Certain members of the Red Cross, including ex-Secretary of State John W. Foster, ex-Secretary of the Navy Hilary A. Herbert, Brigadier General John M. Wilson, retired, Thomas F. Walsh, Mr. Simon Wolf, Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, Miss Boardman and various other ladies and gentlemen of high standing, have sent the president a letter of which a copy is herewith sent to you, and accompanying it is a copy of what purports to be the bylaws recently adopted by the American Red Cross. In a further letter the president has been informed that the treasurer of the Red Cross, W. J. Flather, has resigned on account of dissatisfaction with what is alleged to be the loose and improper arrangement for securing the needed accountability for and supervision of the disbursements of the money furnished in time of exigency to the Red Cross by the charitable public. It appears from these bylaws that the President of the United States and his cabinet are constituted a board of consultation of the American Red Cross. It is not possible for the president or any member of his cabinet to serve on such a committee, and the president directs me to request you have it publicly announced that the president and cabinet cannot serve."

The memorial to the president continues as follows:

"The above cited provisions of the bylaws we claim prove that the policy of this organization and the administration of its finances are placed within the arbitrary power of a single person."

Legislation is asked to relieve the condition.

MUNICIPAL FUEL YARDS.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court Decides They Would be Unconstitutional.

Boston, Jan. 30.—The opinion of the supreme court recently asked for by the Massachusetts legislature on the constitutionality of the municipal fuel yards in view of the existing emergency was received in the house yesterday afternoon. It declares that the yards would be unconstitutional. In effect the opinion was that municipal fuel yards and all such industrial operations are unconstitutional because they cannot be undertaken without raising public money; and to raise money by taxation for such a purpose was never contemplated by the constitution. Such a course would be virtually raising public money for private purposes, and this would be contrary to the provisions of the constitution.

The justices decided in the negative the first three questions as to the establishment of fuel yards under ordinary circumstances.

In regard to the establishment of fuel yards in cases of emergency, the majority opinion of the justices was that such action would be constitutional. Justice Caleb Loring files a seperate opinion, in which he holds that it would also be unconstitutional to grant the right to municipalities in cases of emergency.

This point has been the scene of several wrecks.

The strangers were quickly vanquished and sought refuge in Lasters' Union hall. Their friends, in attempting to stand off their assailants, were roughly handled. Coal Weighing Impracticable.

Philadelphia, Jan. 30.—At yesterday afternoon's session of the coal strike commission announcement was made that the mine workers and the Reading company's officials had agreed that the weighing of coal in the southern coal fields is impracticable. Drift of Opinion.

☞ Coal at $10 a ton costs at least $3 a ton too much, even if every present condition is taken into account.—New York Tribune.

☞ A jury has given damages to United States Statistican Hyde because of criticism by a New Orleans firm of cotton brokers, but we are still at liberty to howl when the weather bureau says "fair" and it rains.—New York Commercial.

☞ More than any people in the world the New Englanders live "on their nerve." Habitually they do not take things easy, nor seek to moderate their pace, or mix their high-strung labor with adequate rest. They drive the engine at full speed all the time. Not even iron and steel will stand this. Among engineers it is known that machines get tired and need to be stopped at times; and even the tough, wiry New Englander cannot go at top tension all the time without impairment of the vital powers. A boat makes better time and saves injury from strain by a certain concession to the stormy seas. It is a rule of good helmsmen not to hold the ship hard up against the waves but to "ease her when she pitches." So in the stress of life and weather we may live longer and work better by proper and reasonable yielding in times of severe strain and by having a suitable care for comfort and health in the violent alterations of the New England climate which will enable people to live longer and to better purpose.—The Watchman.

Granite by Electrics.

A Fitchburg dispatch to the Herald says Senators Fletcher and Fitzgerald and Representatives Hunt, Quinlan, Chace, Warner, Hill, Entwistle, Callender, Castle, Dempsey and Bock of the committee on street railway spent four hours here Thursday afternoon looking over the ground involved in the petition of the Fitchburg & Leominster Street Railway Company for leave to carry granite in this city, and for express and package privileges here and in Lunenburg. Quarry interests are anxious to develop their business. and seek cheaper and better carriage to the steam railroads. The committee went hence to Greenfield.

Thunder Storm.

The fog which enveloped everything all day Thursday and Thursday night was still with us this morning, and at 9 o'clock it looked as though today would be a repetition of Thursday.

About 10 o'clock, however, there were several loud peals of thunder and flashes of lightning. Immediately following these the fog lifted and at one time along toward 11 o'clock the sun almost appeared.

In place of the fog came rain. At times it would be a light rain and then it would come down good and strong. At 2 the sun was out. Fair and cooler weather is promised for Saturday.

North Quincys Do Up Granite City Teams.

They Take Everything at Bowling.

Games at Billiards, Pool and Whist Were Close.

As a result of the games Thursday evening in the Norfolk County league between the Granite city and North Quincy clubs, the latter secured five points, and the former four points. Granite City won one game of billiards, two at pool and one at whist, while North Quincy won three at bowling and one each at whist and bowling.

The game at whist was the second that North Quincy has won thus far in the tournament.

The first game of billiards was between Sears of the Granite City and Emerson of North Quincy. Emerson is doubtless the best amateur player in this section, and it was expected he would win. Sears, however put up an unusually strong game and it was probably the best game of billiards ever played in the rooms.

Emerson started in by making runs of five, six and seven, and soon led Sears by ten points. Percy then braced up and made a few good runs and tied his opponent. He managed to keep along with Emerson, and turned the fifty point mark and had fifty seven points in his favor before Emerson turned the fifty point.

The game had now reached an interesting point and it was being closely watched. Emerson made some good runs and it looked as though he would run the game out. He missed a shot however. The score then was Emerson, 73; Sears, 70. It was Sears turn and he made 1. The balls were left in a good position and there was no reason why he should not have run the game out. He missed however and then it was all over, as Emerson won by four points.

The second game was between McGrath of Granite City and Brown of North Quincy and McGrath won by a score of 75 to 53.

The first game of pool was between Graham of Granite City and Fairclough of North Quincy. Graham played a strong game and was an easy winner by a score of 50 to 20.

The second game was between McDonnell of Granite City and Clare of North Quincy. McDonnell also played a good game and won by a score of 50 to 28.

At whist Beale and Johnson of North Quincy won from Rideout and Curtis by a score of 10 to 6. The second game was won by Langley and Cudworth of Granite City who defeated their opponents to 8 to 4.

North Quincy won all three strings at bowling by a total of 1261 to 1197. The first string by seven pins, the second by sixteen pins and the third by forty-five pins.

Thorpe of North Quincy was high man on single strings with 108, and on three-string totals with 276. Kendall also of North Quincy was low man on single with 66, and on three-string totals with 221

For the Granite City team, Walsh was high man on single strings with 94, and Johnson a good second with 90. Walsh was also high man on three string totals with 251 and Ross a good second with 246. Bradford was low man on three-string totals with 225. The summary will show who was low man on single strings.

The average of North Quincy was 252 and for Granite City 238. It i evident that Granite City must brace up if they wish to win from North Quincy next Thursday.

PANSIES VS. PONIES.

Mayor Bryant's Team Were Certainly Up Against It.

Mayor Bryant's bowling team, known as the Ponies, were defeated Thursday evening at the Merrymount alleys by a team known as the Pansies, which is made up of members of the Park Commissioners with the addition of the City Solicitor.

For some reason Mayor Bryant's bowlers could not seem to find the candle pins. On the other hand they came easy to the Park Commission and they rolled up a total of 1232. The best the other team could do was 993.

The Pansies won the first string by 54, the second by 76, and the third by 109.

The Pansies averaged 246 and the Ponies 198. Schenkelberger was high man on single strings with 95, and on three string totals with 260. Blackmur was a good second with 94 on single and 258 on three string totals.

The Mayor was high man for the Ponies with 81, and on three string totals with 240. The low man on singles was Parker of the Ponies with 46, and also on three-string totals with 160, withStarrett a good second low man on three string totals with 172.

Y. P. S. C. E. Social.

The inclement weather did not prevent a large attendance at the Y. P. S. C. E. social Thursday evening at the Wollaston Congregational vestry. After a business meeting, the entertainment was enjoyed. The first number was "The Idolizers," played by Jack Simmons, Tyler Brigham, Bert and Ernest Armstrong. Then came illustrated songs: "Under the Bamboo Tree," little Anna Witham and Master Sewall Sayward; "Stay in your own back yard, Miss Mary Patterson and little Robbie Merrill;" "Doan ye cry, ma Honey," with the same performers as above, and "Mr. Volunteer," Master Norton Nickerson. In the chorus were Misses Mary Patterson, Grace Patterson, Marion Bates and Horace F. Bates, assisted by Miss Mary Chase at the piano.

The instrumental quartette played "The Lobster's Parade," responding to encores.

The final part of the program was three charades acted by Winifred Backus, Gorham Nickerson, Howard Penniman and Horace Bates.

Refreshments were served by a committe under the direction of Miss Mary A. Sayward, chairman of the Social committee, who had the evening in charge.

Ask the Commissioner.

Why is it, Mr. Editor, that on all rainy and wet days that a puddle of water must stand on the stone crossing between the Bethany church and the Post Office. Is it impossible to remedy the nuisance or is it too expensive? Will you please ask the Street Commissioner?

Hayden—Loud.

As the old English clocks were striking quarter past six o'clock Tuesday evening, Mr. Edgar F. Hayden, Jr., and Miss Ethel B. Loud were united in marriage by the Rev. Leon H. Austin. The best man was Mr. Harry Glidden and the maid of honor was Miss Nellie Farallel.

The bride was charmingly dressed in a steel-colored travelling suit and a becoming picture hat.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Loud. Her uncle has the contract for the foundation of the new Quincy Point school house. The groom, a popular young man of Quincy Point, is the son of ex-Councilman E. F. and Mrs. Nellie Hayden.

Following the marriage ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Hayden were the recipients of many beautiful and costly presents.

They will reside at Washington court, Quincy Point.

All in Earnest.

The Boston Advertiser says: While the house is inclined to discount the work of the coal committee no one questions the earnestness of the men who are on it. Sen. Apsey has not, in the past, been styled as a man with any socialistic strain but he is most determined that if it is in any way possible to reach the people who are responsible for the coal conditions in New England, and in this state particularly, he will do so.

Gore of Dorchester also is convinced of the need of some step, and Skerrett of Worcester has been devoting himself to it with considerable study. Freeman of Quincy, who is a ship agent, has been looked at askance by some because he manages some vessels which transport coal, but the men do him an injustice if they think that that interferes in the full and true exercise of his judgment. If there is any solution to the problem, he is as ready as the next man to bring it out and make it public.

—Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington are red brick cities, red brick being the predominating building material. In Washington the sameness is relieved by the granite public building and marble business structures.

Delegates to the Educational Convention.

Schools of 1834 and Today.

The Gathering in July Will be a National Event.

The National Educational association is to meet in Boston in July and considerable interest in the convention is already shown by educators in Boston and its suburbs. It is hoped to make it one of the most hospitable and best yet held; a credit to its president Charles W. Eliot, president of Harvard University, and to Boston. It is the first time in years that the convention has been held in the east.

Mrs. F. C. Babcock of President's hill had a timely article in the editorial columns of the Boston Transcript of Jan. 30, under the heading "The Coming Educational Convention" which we give below:

In a book recently published entitled "Recollections of a New England Town," the author devotes two chapters to the schooldays of 1820 and 1840, when she, as a little child, was a pupil first in the district schools and later in the only private school. The first schoolhouse in the town, about 1780, says the writer, "was a little, low, red hut with four small windows. It had a fireplace with the chimney built outside."

By 1834 (the earliest date of the recollections) the schoolhouse was a more ambitious structure. Twenty-five feet on the ground, with two entrances, north and south, and four windows. A sloping counter ran around the walls of the room, serving as desks for the pupils, who sat on benches made of slabs. "These benches were an elongated and exaggerated counterpart of the washbench in common use before the era of faucets and sets tubs."

A box stove occupied the centre of the room, standing on a platform of brick. This was fed from a pile of logs in the schoolyard, cut for fuel as wanted, "which was by no means as often as was needed." The natural result was an alternate freezing and roasting process through the cold weather.

Of course the teacher of the winter school was a man. His fitness for the position was gauged by his ability to "govern" the big boys, which was often a matter of brute force, or perhaps one should say "muscular activity." He must be mentally qualified to teach the three "Rs," the third being Daboll's Arithmetic through the rule of three, and to make a quill pen. He was also expected to build the fire, but as he "boarded round," distance sometimes relieved him of this part of the bargain. In return for these services $3 a week was large pay.

The summer school was always in the hands of a woman. She was required to teach plain sewing, consisting usually of patchwork for bed-quilts: also the knitting of yarn stockings, to start the little ones in A. B. C. and to teach reading, writing and primary arithmetic. "The rule of three was considered too abstruse for the feminine intellect and was therefore omitted." The sidelong jerk of the heads of the boys, and the girls' quick, prependicular dip of the person, known in winter as "manners" was in the summer school called "obeisance," and the woman teacher was expected to have particular oversight of these contortions. For her services she received $1.50, and this for six days' teaching was thought "pretty easy."

It is a far cry from those days to this present year of 1903 and the present educational standard. That was a time when food and wages—literally "a living," was—must be every man's first thought. Bone and muscle first, and the development of the mental faculties later. It has been a slow but sure process, as from infancy to maturity. We smile indulgently when we hear about those primitive methods of education. Those first steps towards ascending the ladder of learning, from whose almost topmost round we of today look back as we smile. Yet those early district schools were the beginning of great things.

The present extensive preparations and plans, now already begun and forming in Boston for a festival of learning, which, owing to the natural and acquired advantages of this well-matured city and its surroundings ought to be, probably will be, the most interesting and profitable educational conference ever held in this country.

It is from no false ambition to outstrip and outshine that the committee in charge of the five days convention next July is putting forth every effort for success, but from a conscientious desire to give of Boston's very best to the thousands bidden to this mingled festival of study and recreation,—not merely fulfilling obligations of pleasure and duty, but celebrating great facts of national importance.

That first humble seat of learning of the early days of New England is eulogized when President Eliot of Harvard University acts as host to the grandchildren of those who bore the discomforts of the old district school and made the most of its opportunities. The National Educational Association is the vigorous plant of which the first schools of New England were the cotyledons, or food-leaves.

The gathering of this organization is a national event. With this in mind the committee in charge, of which President Eliot is chairman, has so arranged the week's schedule, that while the mornings and evenings are given entirely to the platform, the afternoons shall be free for the outdoor conference in the form of excursions to Concord and Lexington and Plymouth and Quincy and other places near Boston full of history and tradition. For the guests from far inland special plans are being made for their better knowledge of the great pathway between the nations—that they may see and hear and smell the shining, murmuring, salt, salt sea.

Undoubtedly this coming July week will try Boston's hospitality to the utmost,—test it and see if it ring true. For this convention is not merely the gathering of a fraternity of people, known in old times as "school marms" and school masters, and today as professors and "professeresses." It is an opportunity to show our patriotism and our loyalty to the foremost institution of this country, the public school.

For the time being the people of Boston and vicinity, under direction of the committee in charge, will each and all be and hosts and hostesses. And if any one of us has an abundance or only a small portion, a rare treasure, or any good and lovely thing and does not share it with the stranger amoug us, then such a person, man or woman, is not a citizen and a patriot, but an alien and a foreigner, and less than the barbarian in the desert. It may be well for the mutual honor and dignity of both residents and visitors during next July to remember that there is highest authority for the fact that the greatest everywhere are those who "do and teach" the good and true, and among the greatest always from early days and forever is he who serveth.

Jolly Twelve Eat Turkey.

The home of Mrs. A. Marnock, 15 Penn street, was on Wednesday afternoon and evening the rendezvous of "The Jolly Twelve." The meeting was for the double purpose of enjoying a game of whist and partaking of Mrs. Marnock's hospitality.

The game was most enthusiastically engaged in, and when scores were counted it was found that Mrs. White of Dorchester, had the highest number, and she was awarded first prize for ladies. For gentlemen, Mr. Ed Dunn, of Wollaston, had the winning score and he was given the token for that honor.

A feature of the evening was a turkey supper prepared by Mrs. Marnock for the benefit of the party. The table was tastefully decorated and the spread was generous and of best quality. "The Jolly Twelve" did justice to the hospitality of their hostess and also demonstrated in a conclusive manner that their cognomen was wisely chosen.

Before leaving for their homes each of the visitors was presented with a souvenir.

South Shore Druggists.

A year ago the retail druggists of Quincy formed an association among themselves, not to put up prices but to secure uniformity in prices, and for mutual benefit. So successful was their organization that it was decided this year to enlarge their scope so as to admit retail druggists from the towns surrounding Quincy. Invitations were sent out, and Wednesday afternoon a meeting was held at which represen tatives were present from Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Hingham and Cohasset.

An association was formed and these officers elected: President, E. J. Murphy; Vice President, George M. Hoyt; Secretary, H. H. Hill; Treasurer, Stephen A. Pierce.

Mr. Hoyt, the vice president, is a member of the state board of registration in pharmacy.

Hon. John D. Long was Governor of Massachusetts in 1880, 1881 and 1882.

Impaired Digestion
May not be all that is meant by dyspepsia now, but it will be if neglected.
The uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, sourness of the stomach, and disagreeable belching may not be very bad now, but they will be if the stomach is suffered to grow weaker.
Dyspepsia is such a miserable disease that the tendency to it should be given early attention. This is completely overcome by Hood's Sarsaparilla which strengthens the whole digestive system

LONG CRITICALLY SICK

Family of Former Naval Secretary Near His Bedside

DELIROUS FOR SOME DAYS

Grip and Bronchitis Developed While He Was Under Treatment For Catarrh of Bladder—News of Unfavorable Turn Surprises His Friends

Boston, Jan. 30.—Former Governor John D. Long, secretary of the navy under President McKinley, as well as for some months under President Roosevelt, lies critically ill at the St. Margaret's hospital in this city. Three physicians are at his bedside, his wife and daughter are close at hand, and his young son, Peirce, has been summoned from Hingham.

Governor Long was brought from Hingham, nearly three weeks ago, with catarrh of the bladder, a trouble of long standing. He was taken to the St Margaret's hospital, a private institution. Dr. Spooner of Hingham, one of the consulting physicians, who has been Mr. Long's family physician for nearly 30 years, was sent for last night, and on the way to the hospital said: "After Governor Long went to the hospital a disease analagous to the grip set in and this had effect upon the kidneys. There was for a time danger from uraemic poisoning. Mr. Long has been mildly delirious for some days, recognizing members of his family only at times." On being pressed for an opinion on the patient's condition, Dr. Spooner replied: "It is serious."

When first brought to the hospital Governor Long was attended by Dr. Spooner and Dr. Cutler of this city. After his condition became serious Dr. Cabot was called into the case and the three physicians now have assumed personal charge of the patient.

Dr. Cabot gave the following interview last night regarding Governor Long's condition:

"Two days ago," he said, "Mr. Long developed symptoms suggesting la grippe, and at that time Mrs. Long had their family physician, Dr. Spooner, come to see him. Dr. Spooner, after his examination, suggested that Dr. Cutler, a former physician of Mr. Long's, also be taken into the case, and together they have had charge of it for the past two days. I have been simply assisting.

"Grip is infectious, but it is a difficult thing to diagnose it. With that Mr. Long developed bronchitis, and we noticed that his kidneys were not doing as well as they should. All of these things combined have resulted in a condition which is serious. Mr. Long is a man much older than his years and the strain upon him in public life has undoubtedly been such that he has not the vitality that his friends expected of him. The trouble has been with the bladder, a complaint common among old men who have worked as hard as Mr. Long, and it has been treated locally."

The fact that Governor Long was a patient at a hospital was not known until Sunday last, and at that time it was given out that the trouble from which he was suffering appeared to be yielding to treatment and that his restoration to health was looked for at an early day. At the same time, a member of the family said that the governor's illness was not looked upon as especially serious. Since then the reports from the sick room have been meagre, although of a favorable tendency, no anxiety being awakened until Wednesday, when it was stated that a trace of pneumonia had been noticed, but this had been overcome.

The news of an unfavorable turn in the patient's condition took the city by surprise and inquiries as to his condition have almost overwhelmed the hospital and anxious messages from all parts of the country have been received.

It was stated at the hospital this morning that no particularly serious complications are anticipated inside of the next 24 and perhaps 48 hours.

COFFEE COATS.

Popular Garments For House Wear. Dainty Effects.

The coffee coat and the petticoat to match have to a large extent taken the place of the negligee. These fascinating little coats are generally made barely reaching the waist line in the back, but having long tabs in front, reaching almost to the knees. They are trimmed with fine lace, embroidery and every dainty touch known to the dressmaker's art.

One of these recently seen was of pale blue taffeta. The lower edge of the jacket was cut in toothed effect, and lines of white insertion covered the body, imitating the pointed outline. The collar was of all over lace run through with tiny baby ribbons. The skirt was of the same taffeta, with the pointed insertings and a wide flounce headed by a beading run through with velvet ribbon.

Equally pretty effects are to be gained with spotted net trimmed with bands of heavy lace and sometimes tiny edgings of fur and lace.

Negligees and coffee coats offer a fine opportunity for combining artistically several short remnants.

In the illustration is shown a dainty evening blouse of chiffon, ribbon and lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

TODAY'S COURT.

Michael J. Moran was arraigned for drunkenness at Weymouth. Case continued until Feb. 14.

John Blombore and Peter Neska were arraigned for larceny at Quincy. Continued to Monday for judgment.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

PALE WOMEN

A Bloodless Face Indicates Trouble.

Watery Blood a Menace to Health.

WE KNOW HOW PALE PEOPLE CAN GET RICH RED BLOOD.

COME AND LET US TELL YOU ABOUT VINOL.

When blood is watery and thin, or, as doctors would say, lacks red blood corpuscles, it is a sign that much is radically wrong.

We would advise everyone who has such symptoms to start at once to take a proper remedy to overcome this trouble.

That remedy is Vinol, the greatest and most modern tonic and rebuilder.

Vinol owes its virtue to the fact that it contains in a highly concentrated state the active curative principles extracted from cods' livers, the same elements that have made cod-liver oil famous for wasting diseases.

These medicinal elements are dissolved in a delicious table wine so that Vinol is most palatable.

None of the vile-smelling obnoxious grease that characterizes cod-liver oil and frequently makes it an impossible remedy for those who should take it, is found in Vinol.

We could relate many instances where Vinol has done good and restored the roses of health to the pale cheeks of the sufferer.

The following is a fair sample of the way people write in regard to Vinol:

"For several months I suffered lassitude and tired all the time. Also a sinking feeling in my stomach, which nothing would relieve, and I was pale and weak. As an experiment I tried Vinol and if I wrote pages I could not tell all it has done for me."—MRS. A. K. LA PRUSCH, Amesbury, Mass.

Because we know Vinol so well, and because we know so surely what it will do, and how it will accomplish the good it does in a scientific way, we unreservedly endorse and recommend it, and in every instance guarantee to refund to any one what they pay us for Vinol if they do not find it entirely satisfactory.

WOULD YOU INVEST

BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S

STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 75c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $115.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 22 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 50c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $5.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions. HERBERT S. CHAPTER IX.

PEYTON BEGS FOR TIME TO THINK IT OVER.

THE family were just sitting down to dinner, which had been delayed somewhat on account of the exciting events of the afternoon, when Peyton entered the house. There were just two vacant places at the table, and he noticed that Willis was absent.

"Sit down just as you are, Boyd," said his mother as he paused on the threshold of the dining room; "never mind about your riding clothes. Dinner is just served. We did not wait for you."

"We never wait for anybody," said his father promptly.

"I remember well, sir, that you don't," answered his son, slipping into the chair next his mother.

"Old habit of the army. Punctuality the first duty of a soldier, you know. I expect we will soon have to acquire our military habits again if we have forgotten them."

"Which I am sure you have not, father," said Pink.

"Isn't Willis back yet?" asked Peyton.

"No, not yet, but I reckon he will be along presently," answered the colonel.

"I saw him riding on the calsson of one of the guns in the parade downtown awhile ago," continued his son. "I did not know that he belonged to the battery. When did he join?"

"Last month," answered his mother, "just after he was eighteen."

"He looks well, mother, in his soldier clothes."

"Yes, doesn't he?" cried Pink.

"You ought to think so," answered her brother. "He is the living image of you, Pink."

"You have never seen me in a soldier's dress, Boyd."

"No, and I don't want to," said Boyd.

"But if you did," broke in Willis, at that moment entering the room in his natty artillery uniform, "you would see a winner surely! You know Pink and I are just of a size. She's tall, and I'm small—that is, measured by the average—and what fits me would fit her. My uniform is at your service, Miss Peyton, any time you wish it," said Willis, dropping into a vacant chair. "Whew!" he cried, wiping his brow. "It was fine! The roaring of the guns almost made me think it was a real battle. That was the first time I ever heard a hundred guns fired. The noise felt good, the powder smelled good, and the cheering was splendid. I enjoyed the whole thing immensely. I suppose it's an old story to you, Boyd."

"Well, no," answered his brother deliberately. "Of course I have seen a great deal of powder burned in the service and have shot a good many guns, but you know we have not had any touch of real war, and I for one hope we never shall."

"That's right, my boy," said the colonel. "It is a horrible thing. The Mexican war didn't amount to much, they say, but it was enough to make me wish never to see, much less participate in, another."

"Oh, that's all right, father," interrupted Willis, who had been indulged by everybody until he took liberties with his father which no one else ventured upon. "I have no doubt you are correct, sir, as you always are, but whether we wish it or not there is going to be one, I am sure."

"I fear so," said his father gravely.

"Father, I cannot believe that there will be any trouble," burst out Boyd. "Not that exactly, for I suppose there will be trouble, but I do not believe it will come to open war. Why should it? I don't see that the election of Lincoln makes any material difference to you—to us—in the south."

"You don't!" roared his father, shaking his leonine head at his son. "Didn't he say that a republic could not exist half slave and half free? What does that mean?"

"Still, father, that is only a declaration, as he sees it, of a principle."

"You don't indorse it?" cried the colonel.

"I am not discussing my indorsements now, sir," returned his son, striving to speak temperately and remain cool. "I only mean that a statement of a principle doesn't necessarily carry with it a threat of enforcement, or even a demand that it should be put into effect. We are confronting a theory, you know."

"My lad," said the father, more quietly, "South Carolina's action has turned it into a condition. I hope there will be no fighting, but I fear there will be. I don't hold, as many southern men do, that the Yankees won't fight. I have seen some of them fight in the Mexican campaign. I know there is good stuff in them. Not that I compare them for a moment with our southern chivalry, but if they get waked up to it they will fight."

"Indeed they will, father, and they will fight hard too."

"The harder the better," said Willis recklessly, "and the sooner the better too. Hurrah for the south, say I! We'll make a new republic with the cornerstone that the black man is to be forever and forever a slave. That's logical," he added, under his breath. Fortunately no one heard the last phrase.

"Well, the decision is not upon us, father," urged Boyd.

"No, but it will be. If I know the temper of our people they will be quick to follow South Carolina's lead."

"Do you think so, sir?"

"I do indeed. From Virginia"—

"You don't think that Virginia will secede, father?"

"What!" cried Mrs. Peyton, joining in the discussion with great animation "Do you think my old state would refrain from joining her sister states? Never! I, for one, would renounce her if she did."

The gentle southern matron's eyes flashed fire as she spoke, and the sudden manifestation of intense feeling coming from his gentle mother astonished the young officer more than anything that had been said.

"You will find, Boyd," said his sister, noting his surprised look, "that the women are as determined as the men."

"More so, I really believe," said her twin brother promptly.

"I believe you," Boyd assented. "Why, when I picked up little Tempe Annan out of the crowd at the parade she screamed and fought me like a little wildcat, saying she wanted to shoot the 'Nunited States.'"

"Good for the child! She has the right spirit," laughed Willis.

"Willis," said his father reprovingly, "I wish you would look on the matter in a different light. It is a very serious thing for us who have fought under the United States flag to turn against it."

"Yes, sir," said Willis, abashed for once in his life at his father's stern admonition.

"I suppose you will find it so, Boyd," continued the colonel. "You are fresher in the service than I."

"Yes," answered the other gravely, "I think I should find it very hard indeed."

"Boyd, you don't mean"— cried his sister fearfully.

"I don't mean anything now, Pink," interrupted the young man hastily. "It is a subject a man would have to think over."

"My son, my son," cried his mother, "you don't mean to tell me that you would hesitate as to where your duty lay?"

"Mother, is a man's duty always so plain to him that he can discern it without a moment's reflection?"

"Good God, sir," cried his father, springing to his feet and putting his fist heavily down upon the table and in his excitement forgetful of the presence of any one but his son, a high index to the depths of his feeling indeed, "do you mean to tell me that a son of mine can hesitate between Abe Lincoln's cause and that of his own state? Why, sir"—

"Father," cried Boyd desperately, turning very pale as he saw the issue being forced upon him, "don't, I beg of you, speak so to me now! I have not decided anything. I swear to you my mind has never been made up. This has all come upon me so suddenly. I never dreamed of such a thing. It's a shock. Give me time to accustom myself to it. I want to think it over."

"I am sure no child of my family would be found wanting at the call of duty."

"Think it over, sir?" cried the colonel wrathfully.

"Stop, Colonel Peyton!" said his wife quickly. "The boy is right. Give him time. He has not been in the thick of this for months, as we have for years even."

"You said yourself, sir," said Willis, "that it was a hard thing to turn your back against the flag under which you had fought."

"I am sure Boyd will come around all right," said Pink nervously. "Mary Annan will persuade him."

"Thank you, mother, Willis, Pink, all. I shall try to do right, but I would not be your son, father, if I did not think this over. My adherence would not be worth anything if I gave it lightly. I must have time. Give me a little time, father. No, don't look at me in that stern and forbidding way, sir. I only ask for a breathing space."

"By Jove, my son, you shall have it! Perhaps I was harsh at the moment. I really forgot the circumstances a bit. We will talk it over at our leisure. The whole subject shall be examined, and then I know what you will do. What, Alabama call upon her sons and the Peytons not in the front rank! Never!"

"Yes, Boyd, dear; and if the Peyton part of you doesn't respond I am sure no child of my family would ever be found wanting at the call of duty; you are a Boyd, too, remember," urged his mother.

"I shan't forget it, I am sure, mother," cried Boyd, turning to her gratefully. "Thank you, father. I think I will go to my room now. I have some letters to write, and I want a little quiet thought to myself."

"Did you see Mary Annan, my son?" asked his mother.

"Yes, mother."

"Was she—is she"—

"She is very kind, mother," answered Boyd, his face flushing painfully. He shrank from these discussions of his love affair, but there seemed to be no help for it. "She doesn't love me. She doesn't love anybody yet."

"She will, I am sure, when she knows you better," said his mother, patting his hand tenderly.

"I hope so."

"She won't, though," interrupted Pink, "unless you are on the side of the south."

"Well, that is where he will be, of course," said his father.

As Peyton walked out of the room with his heart heavy at the contingencies before him and closed the door he heard Willis remark:

"What he says is all right, father, and if I know him he'll never be false to his ideas of duty; but the trouble is, what is his idea of duty? That's the point of the argument."

Willis was unusually shrewd for a boy of his years.

Opening of Yazoo Canal

Vicksburg, Miss., Jan. 30.—Prominent visitors from three states united with citizens of Vicksburg in celebrating the opening of Yazoo canal, whereby Vicksburg's water front is restored. To remedy the conditions resulting from the cut-off in 1876 the federal government undertook to dredge a canal through six miles of forest, tapping the Yazoo river several miles above its mouth and diverting the river through the bed of the Mississippi down past the front of this city. This engineering feat has been completed at a cost of nearly $2,000,000.

Providing Against Famine

Washington, Jan. 30.—The war department has received copies of an act of the Philippine commission designed to provide against the danger of famine in the Philippines. It is made the duty of all municipal presidents to notify the people of the impending danger of famine and urge them to take steps at once to secure the necessary seed and to plant quick growing crops sufficient in quantity to produce the requisite food for the coming year.

At Least Twenty-Four Killed

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 30.—A coroner's jury yesterday viewed the remains of 14 victims of Tuesday's disaster near Vail's station. The list of dead is now placed at 24. Identification was difficult and the body of J. G. Hilton of Catubridge, Mass., was the only one identified with certainty. Other bodies are being taken from the ruins. The total injured as far as heard from number 47, and the death list ultimately may reach 35.

CHILD'S MEDICINE—WHY?

Because Scott's Emulsion relieves such an extraordinary variety of children's diseases all the way from slight colds to the serious hip disease.

Because Scott's Emulsion is as harmless as milk. Well borne even by the delicate stomachs of babies.

Because children respond so quickly to its action. A medicine peculiarly suited to their sensitive nature. It is wonderful how rapidly delicate children improve in every way while taking Scott's Emulsion.

Because children like the taste. Most of them like Scott's Emulsion at once. The rest soon learn to like it. Little daily doses bring the results.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

ALLIES CLAIMS FIRST

Must Have Preference In Venezuelan Settlement

RAISING OF THE BLOCKADE

Will Immediately Follow Acceptance of Their Demand—Protest From Other Powers Will Indefinitely Prolong Negotiations

London, Jan. 30.—Venezuela's answer to the power's latest communication (the joint note refusing to place all claims on an equality with those of the co-operating powers) is expected to arrive here today. If Mr. Bowen can agree to give preference to the claims of Great Britain, Germany and Italy, the blockade is likely to be raised immediately. So far as known this is the only outstanding vital point. Should Venezuela demur or complications arise, such as a protest from some of the other powers, the negotiations may be indefinitely prolonged. Authoritative opinion here differs regarding the outcome.

The German officials adhere to the belief that when President Castro sees that all the three powers are so completely unanimous and insistent upon preference he will agree to it. The British foreign office adopts a non committal attitude, not altogether without a pessimistic trend. All, however, unite in declaring that after all the expense and trouble of the blockade their claims would not be equitably treated if they were put on the same basis as those of nations who have not taken steps to recover their debts or re-establish their prestige in Venezuela.

Venezuela In a Tight Place

Washington, Jan. 30.—Venezuela's plight at this moment lies in the fact that she is between two fires. The allies demand preferential treatment while France and other creditors look to Venezuela for fair treatment, pointing out that to discriminate against their claims, when their attitude had been correct and even magnanimous would not be fair treatment.

Senor Ojeda, the Spanish minister, called on Minister Bowen yesterday and presented the formal thanks of the Madrid government for the courtesy and kindness shown the Spanish subjects in Venezuela during the present troubles and for his safeguarding of their interests.

Count Quadt, the German charge, was the only representative of the allies to see Mr. Bowen. He afterwards was in conference with Sir Michael Herbert, the British ambassador, and was later at the state department, where he introduced the new military attache to Secretary Hay. The Venezuelan matter was alluded to and the department was informed of the last report from Berlin regarding the Panther episode.

Pierre de Margerie, the French charge d'affaires, talked over the Venezuelan crisis with Secretary Hay, though he came to the department primarily to announce the willingness of his government to negotiate a post and parcels treaty.

Two courses are open now to Mr Bowen and it will probably be for President Castro to elect which he shall follow. He may in his response to the other claimant nations than the allies take the opportunity to inform the world that Venezuela yields to overpowering force and that if she cannot meet their claims they must reckon with the allies themselves. The other course is for Mr. Bowen to declare that his mission has failed, that he cannot come to a reasonable understanding with the allies because of their uncompromising attitude and therefore the case must go to The Hague tribunal for adjustment.

Will Meet German "Bluff"

Washington, Jan. 30.—The Venezuelan situation and especially the attitude of Germany were discussed by the senate committee on military affairs yesterday and the situation influenced the committee on some matters pertaining to the army appropriation bill, among which was the decision to accept the house provision relating to transports so that they would be retained in the service. The committee also provided for an increase of electricians, skilled gunners, machinists and sergeants and others who take care of and handle guns in the seacoast defences. Some other additions were made in the bill with a view to improving the service. The discussion was general and earnest, and the conclusion reached, as stated by a member of the committee, was that the United States should make it plain that the honor and dignity of the country would be maintained and that Germany should not be allowed to "bluff" the government by any attitude she might assume.

Probably Put to Death

Constantinople, Jan. 30.—Agap Hatchikian, who was arrested on Jan. 19 for attempting to assassinate the Armenian patriarch, Ormanian, died in prison yesterday. It is supposed that he was put to death in order to hush up the matter.

Hewitt Made No Public Bequests

New York, Jan. 30.—The will of Abram S. Hewitt was filed in the surrogate's office at Paterson, N. J., yesterday. There are no public bequests and the value of the estate is not given.

Moroccan Pretender Repulsed

Madrid, Jan. 30.—A dispatch to The Imparcial from Tangier announces that Bu Hamara, the pretender to the throne of Morocco, has been repulsed and is retreating rapidly.

SIXTY MEN OUT

Official of Manchester Shoe Shop Would Not Consider New Schedule

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 30.—Sixty employes of the treeing, edge-setting lasting and slugging departments of the McElwain shoe factory left their work yesterday by order of District Organizer McDougal. The strike is endorsed by the Boot and Shoe Workers' International union.

Trouble has been brewing for some days in this factory, and the crisis came when McDougal visited Superintendent Trull, announcing that he represented the union and wished to present a wage schedule. Trull refused to look at it and McDougal immediately left the shop, quickly followed by the 60 strikers.

It is apparent that a stubborn labor struggle is on, as Superintendent Trull when queried as to what would be done said: "We will continue to run the shop as hitherto, even if we do no manufacture any more than 16 pairs of shoes a day. We intend to run our business without the interference of others. It makes no difference to us whether we employ union or non-union help, so long as the men we hire perform their work to our satisfaction We ask no man of what creed he is, or what society he belongs to. If he performs his work, he is satisfactory to us. I have already engaged about 25 men to fill the vacancies caused by those who left and will hire any one that come along. I received Mr. McDougal courteously."

ALLEGED BOGUS SON

Figures In a Case Which Has Led to the Arrest of a Countess

Berlin, Jan. 30.—Countess Isabella W. Kwilecki, belonging to a rich and aristocratic Polish family, has been arrested by the criminal police here on the charge of pretending to have borne a son six years ago and presenting him as the heir to an estate at Wroblewo (province of Posen) consisting of 10,000 acres and having a yearly rental roll totalling $15,000.

Count Misjislaw Kwilecki, a member of the Prussian house of lords and his son, Count Hector Kwilecki, a member of the reichstag, as next of kin, contested the legitimacy of the countess son two years ago, and after a sensational trial at Posen she was acquitted The countess and her husband continued living quietly on the Polish estate after the trial, spending the winters in fashionable Berlin society.

The suspicions regarding the legitimacy of the countess' son continued however, and the prosecuting attorney continuing his investigation, obtained fresh testimony through a police examination of a woman who bore a child at the time the son of the countess is said to have been born, and the rearrest of the countess followed.

Daring Burglar Captured

New York, Jan. 30.—After a vicious fight, Charles Beckett, an ex-convict was captured in the home of F. P Prentice yesterday afternoon. A second burglar escaped from the house. Mrs Prentice is the daughter of John D Rockefeller and she was present when her butler and two carpet layers who had been working in the house made the capture. It was a sensational attempt at daylight robbery. The men are believed to have entered the house through a basement door left open by a servant Making their way to the dining room, they forced open a chest filled with silver plate and were engaged in putting the silver ware in bags when their presence was discovered.

Trouble Brewing In Balkans

London, Jan. 30.—The publication of a French yellow book yesterday points to the fact that an acute phase of the Balkan question has arisen. The rumors that Austria is preparing a squadron at her naval port of Pola, the passage of the Russian torpedo boats through the Dardanelles into the Black sea and other incidents are being recalled, while the official denials of the mobilization rumors issued by the Austrian government are received with some scepticism. There have been lately several reports of hasty purchases of war material by Roumania, the Balkan states and Turkey.

The Social Realm.

The crest and crowning of all good,
Life's final star, is Brotherhood;
For it will bring again to Earth
Her long-lost Poesy and Mirth;
Will send new light on every face,
A kingly power upon the race,
And till it comes, we men are slaves,
And travel downward to the dust of graves.
Come, clear the way, then, clear the way;
Blind creeds and kings have had their day,
Our hope is in the aftermath—
Our hope is in heroic men,
Star led to build the world again.
To this Event the ages ran;
Make way for Brotherhood—make way for Man
—Edwin Markham.

ADAMS STATUES.

A Petition to Place Them at State House, Boston.

Among the petitions introduced in the Legislature yesterday was one in memory of the illustrious dead of Quincy, that of Sherwin L. Cook, for erecting at the State House of statues to John Adams and John Quincy Adams, Massachusetts only presidents.

A few of the other petitions introduced:

From Mr. Curran of Boston, to prohibit the sale of cigarettes to minors under a $50 penalty.

From John W. Blaney, that in civil suits a bond may be filed by the plaintiff and if his case falls upon some substantial point, or if a verdict is ordered for the defendant, the reasonable fees of the defendant's counsel shall be paid by the plaintiff.

From James H. Bowditch for a state forester, appointed by the Governor, for three years, at $100 a month and expenses.

Mrs. Widdrington.

Mrs. Percy Widdrington of the London Fabian Society will speak at the winter meeting of the Wollaston Equal Suffrage League next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the vestry of the Unitarian church: subject, "The influence of English women in political life." The public cordially welcome.

Those who remember their ballad of Chevy Chase at all, even if they have forgotten everything else, will recall the doughty warrior, Widdrington, whose pitiful fate filled the balladist with doleful dumps

"For when his legs were hewn in two
He fought upon his stumps."

This is the sort of stuff the Englishman was made of five hundred years ago. Mrs. Percy Widdrington, the wife of a lineal descendant of this same border knight is now in this country lecturing on the industrial and political problems of England of today. That she is more than five centuries in advance of her storied namesake in what she is fighting for one has but to hear her and see. She performs the remarkable feat of leaving an audience rested after an hour's address. This power comes not more from the exceptional interest of what she has to say than from a certain bright optimism that infects her voice and manner and finally her hearers themselves. Her tour through the United States has been a great success and just before sailing for home she will be heard in at the Wollaston Unitarian church.

—Notice the advertisement of the Men's Banquet at the Universalist vestry, Feb. 5, at 6.45 P. M. An excellent dinner and entertainment at light expense. A welcome for all. Social hour at 6 o'clock.

A BIG SURPRISE.

City Engineer Flood May Not be Reappointed.

No one has picked out Hamilton Flood, the City Engineer, as one of the department officials whose head would be decapitated by Mayor Bryant, but it is said that this is the reason why the Mayor has withheld his appointments which should go into effect next Monday. Rumor has it that Mr. Flood will not be reappointed. Mr. Flood has held the office since it was established and last year received an increase of pay.

Norfolk County League.

The result of this week's games in the Norfolk County League puts the North Quincy club second on the list in total points won Granite City still heads the list with a total of 26 points, while North Quincy has 23. It will be two weeks before Braintree plays again and they will hold undisputed sway of that position until that time.

Granite City leads on whist only, while North Quincy leads on billiards and bowling and Braintree on pool.

North Quincy has 13 points on bowling and Granite City is next with 7 points, and unless the bowling teams of Granite City and Braintree develop more than they have, North Quincy will have no difficulty in holding her position.

Emerson of North Quincy is without doubt the best billiard player in this section. He has not been beaten thus far in the league games, and the chances are that he will not.

The following table shows the standing to date:

	Billiards.	Pool.	Whist.	Bowling.	Total.
Granite City,	6	6	7	7	26
North Quincy,	7	1	2	13	23
Braintree,	3	9	4	4	20

Ties—Granite City and Braintree two games at whist. Granite City and North Quincy at whist.

STILL CRITICALLY SICK

Condition of Mr Long Shows No Material Change

URAEMIC POISON FEARED

Difficult For Even Professionals to Diagnosis the Case Because Doctors In Attendance Keep Facts Secret—Solicitous Messages From Afar

Boston, Jan. 31.—While ex-Governor Long held his own yesterday, still there was no material improvement in his condition, and he continues to be very sick. On the other hand, no serious complications are anticipated, at least for some hours, and Miss Margaret Long, his daughter, who arrived yesterday afternoon after a hasty journey from Baltimore went to the family homestead at Hingham last night. The physicians in attendance were loath to give encouragement.

Frequent bulletins were issued during the day and evening by the physician in charge, but as a rule they were all of the same nature. There was some improvement during the forenoon, which was counteracted to some degree later in the day by a rise in temperature, pulse and respiration, so that at 10 o'clock last night Dr. Spooner could only say that there was no marked improvement, but that the patient was holding his own.

Technical details regarding the disease have not been given out, except to the effect that Governor Long is threatened with uraemic poisoning. The physicians have deemed it wise to keep to themselves the matter of nourishment, the relative strength and the analysis of the secretions, so that it is difficult for even a professional to diagnose the case, while the layman has to be content with the plain statement contained in the bulletins.

That Governor Long is seriously ill is, however, admitted, and this fact being now well known there has been intense interest as to his condition and the chances of recovery.

Being a man of national reputation, this interest has extended beyond the borders of the state where his political career began, and messages from all parts of the country have fairly poured in at his law offices, all solicitous as to his welfare.

Dr. Cutler relieved the family physician, Dr. Spooner, at 7 o'clock yesterday morning and later in the morning Dr. Cabot arrived. Both remained at the hospital until noon, when they left to visit other patients, which seemed to indicate that the condition was satisfactory. Later in the day Dr. Cabot returned and remained at the hospital and, with Dr. Cutler, made the customary evening examination.

The result of this was announced in the bulletin issued at 9:30 p. m, as follows: "Secretary Long holds his own. He is less feverish tonight than last night. No immediate change is to be expected."

Dr. Spooner returned from Hingham at 10 o'clock and relieved the other two physicians. He did not attempt to disturb the patient, so that it was some time before he saw him. He substantiated, however, the bulletin issued at 9:30, saying that there was no marked improvement since the last report, and that he was holding his own. At 11 o'clock everything was quiet at the hospital, and it was stated that Dr. Spooner had gone to bed.

The bulletin this morning was as follows on Governor Long's condition: "Mr. Long slept quietly for an hour and a quarter. He recognizes his friends, but lapses into incoherent talk. Pulse 86, respiration 24, temperature 99.8."

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Brighter Fuel Situation and Domestic Trade Continues to Prosper

New York, Jan. 31.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Wall street continues to be the only dull point in the country and even speculative inactivity is not accompanied by any evidence of weakness. Financial conditions are exceptionally satisfactory, rates for money ruling low in response to increased reserves in the associated banks, while funds return from the interior on a large scale. Strong returns from leading banks abroad indicate that there will be no immediate pressure for gold exports, and the collapse of wheat speculation liberated funds, besides improving the outlook for large exports. Domestic trade and industry continues to prosper, while the fuel situation has grown less disturbing through the special efforts of transporters, aided in no small degree by mild weather.

Distribution of other products has been restricted by the discrimination in favor of coal and shippers are importunate. Clearance sales are about ended, leaving only small stocks of winter goods. Advance business in spring deliveries is very heavy, and fall contracts are also placed liberally. In most cases where there is no delay on fuel account manufacturing plants are busy, though cost of materials and labor is very high. Firm prices for finished products are consequently to be expected. Favorable returns of railway earnings are constantly issued.

Unique Police Experiment

New York, Jan. 31.—Owing to numerous recent robberies in a millionaire residential district, for which Police Captain Lantry has been severely criticised by residents, the captain yesterday sent seven detectives to 56 houses of wealthy people to see if they were guarded. The detectives entered every one of them and in many instances got to the second floor before they were discovered. On meeting some one in the house the detectives announced their errand and in every instance they say they were abused by the servants or mistress of the house.

Delay of Great Magnitude

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Jan. 31.—At 6:30 o'clock last night the temporary repairs at the Niagara Falls Power and Conduit company's plant were completed and the electrical famine of 19 hours along the Niagara frontier due to the early morning fire, which was started by a flash of lightning, was practically at an end. The delay was felt directly by thousands of people in Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Lockport and the Tonawandas and intermediate points. Hundreds of factories were shut down for the day and street traffic was demoralized.

Not Yet a Citizen

Washington, Jan. 31.—Justice Clabaugh of the district supreme court yesterday decided that Antonio M. Opissoy de Yoaza, the young Filipino who some months ago instituted mandamus proceedings to compel the clerk of the supreme court to receive his citizenship declaration, is still an alien and is entitled to become a citizen of the United States. An appeal was taken to the district court of appeals.

Boss of Philippine Constabulary

The law which went into effect yesterday authorizes the detail of four assistant chiefs of the constabulary, each with the rank of colonel, but these details have not been made as yet.

Ice Packed Fifty Feet High

Decision was reserved.

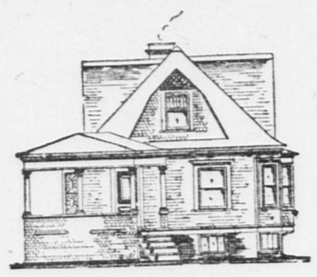
A NEAT COUNTRY HOME.

A Modern One Story and Attic Dwelling Costing $1,200.

[Copyright, 1902, by Dennis & Gastmeyer, Architects, 280 Broadway, New York.]

The accompanying front elevation and floor plans illustrate a nice roomy one story country home that can be built in many places for as low as $1,200.

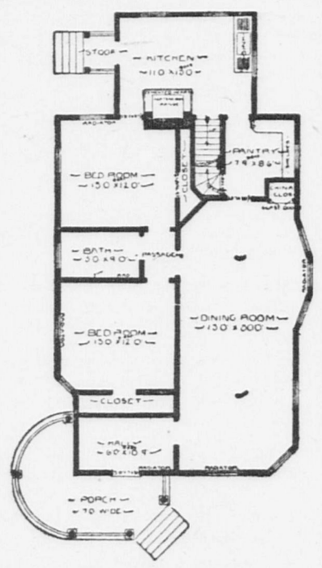
There is a cellar under the main portion of house, with a cement floor and a hot water boiler which heats the entire house. The walls of the cellar are brick laid in lime and cement mortar.



FRONT ELEVATION.

The frame is built of hemlock lumber put together with a balloon frame. The walls are covered with rough sheathing boards, two ply building paper, beveled siding and shingles, as shown in elevation. The main roof is covered with random width cedar shingles.

The exterior woodwork is painted two good coats of white lead and linseed oil paints, including the blinds on all windows except the cellar. The interior is plastered with common brown mortar put on heavy, one coat being well troweled out and smoothed straight and hard for papering with a good quality of paper of any preferred pattern.

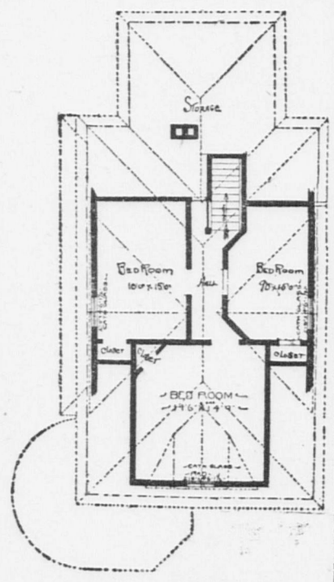


FIRST FLOOR PLAN.

The floors are laid with narrow hard pine tongued and grooved flooring boards, all being stained and varnished as required by the owner.

The hardware is of fancy steel, black japanned, with apple wood doorknobs and plated escutcheons and keyholes. The kitchen contains range, boiler, sink and washtubs, with hot and cold water. The pantry has ample shelving.

The dining room has a large built in china closet to match the other woodwork. The bathroom is laid out, but is not furnished with plumbing, which is intended to be placed in later on.



SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

This makes a very nice home for any country place, and with slight alterations and modifications it can be made to suit the personal requirements of any one desiring a home of modest pretensions.

Revival of a Lost Art.

One could not have a plainer indication of the growing taste for beautifying the interiors of our houses than the increasing prominence which is given annually at the Paris salons to decorative art, says Frederic Lees in Architectural Record. Judging by the large number of exquisite objects which are on view—art, furniture, decorative panels and screens, objets d'art in various precious materials and repousse leather work—there has rarely been a time when the predilection for choice decoration was greater. Statuettes especially have now come to be recognized as a most essential part of the interior adornment of every refined home. Sculpture was formerly confined almost wholly to the hall and the art gallery, but we have now brought it into more intimate touch with our lives by placing it in our drawing rooms and studies.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 1—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Decide today.—Heb. iii, 7-13. (Christian Endeavor day.)

The book of Hebrews sets forth the superiority of Christ (1) over angels, (2) Moses, (3) the Aaronic priesthood. The purpose of this comparison is to inspire the faithfulness of the Jewish Christians, who were strongly tempted to give up their faith. In this third chapter Christ's superiority to Moses is set forth. It is also shown that those who disbelieved God under the direction of Moses were punished. How much more certain this would be the case when God was revealed in Christ, a greater than Moses! Therefore the force of the exhortation, "Today, if ye will hear His voice, harden not your hearts."

The topic speaks of a call to decision and we may inquire: What are we to decide? Who calls us to decision? When should we decide?

1. What are we to decide? Practically our relation to God. This is the position urged upon the Jews who had become Christians. In the midst of trial and tribulation they were in danger of unbelief and of departing from the living God. This they are called upon not to do and are urged to decide in the favor of faith and of God by the sad fate of their ancestors, who decided the other way. God called to the ancient Jews, but they hardened their hearts in unbelief and decided against God. Therefore they never entered Canaan. Their fate should be a warning to us. If not Christians, we should decide for Christ, and if Christians under temptation to give up our faith or our faithfulness we should decide for God. The unbelieving and unfaithful can never enter into God's heavenly Canaan.

2. Who calls upon us to decide? The Holy Ghost. "Wherefore, as the Holy Ghost saith, Today, if ye will hear My voice." The office work of the Holy Ghost is to call sinners to repentance and to build them up in faith and comfort. To this end He calls us by His personal influence through His word, the church and the people of God. The call that comes to us is no human call, but a divine call. God, through His Spirit, calls us to repentance, to faith and to faithfulness. The personality of Him who calls should dispose us to speedy acceptance. An invitation from the president of the United States is equivalent to a command. Much more should a call from God be looked upon in the same light. We should feel that we dare not disobey. "God calls; I must obey," should be our attitude.

3. When should we decide? Today. "Today, if ye hear His voice, harden not your heart." Today is the only day we have. No living being is sure of tomorrow. This spirit strives today, but "My Spirit shall not always strive with men," saith the Lord. Procrastination is most dangerous, for we have no guarantee for the future and no promise that God will still call us even if we live into the future. Today is our only opportunity. Now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation! Tomorrow may be too late; therefore decide today.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. xxxii, 26; Num. xiv, 21-24; Josh. xxiv, 15-18; I Kings xviii, 22; Ruth i, 16, 17; Prov. iv, 25-27; Mark ii, 14; Acts xxi, 8-14; Rev. ii, 10.

An Appeal From Africa.

Between our heaven of blessedness and this hell of Africa's woe and want and wretchedness there is a great gulf fixed—a gulf of selfishness, a gulf of indifference, a gulf of ignorance. And I see no hope of bridging the chasm until we get beyond missionaries and missions and human appeals and get one clear vision of Jesus Christ. Fellow Endeavorer, I do not ask you to pity the heathen, but I do beg of you that you simply treat Jesus Christ right. Is it right to accept the gift of life at the price He paid for it and then give Him only the spare change you happen to have left after your luxurious tastes are satisfied? Is it right to give Him only the odds and ends, the spare moments, the convenient service, the thing that costs you nothing? Is it right to grudge Him even so small a portion as the tenth of your income for the advancement of His cause? Shall we forever crucify the Son of God on the cross of convenience?—Rev. Willis R. Hotchkiss, East Coast of Africa.

For the Temperance Committee.

In these days there is much intemperate temperance talk indulged in, and from adding to it I want to be delivered. I will admit, however, that I am a "temperance crank"—that is, I will make that admission, immodest though it may seem to you, if you will accept the following definition of a crank: "A crank is something of an expert on a subject in which you are not interested."—John Willis Baer.

An Evangelizing Force.

The Rev. B. Q. Denham, one of the vice presidents of the New York state union, in a recent convention address said: "Let us go home and transform our Christian Endeavor society into an evangelizing force. * * * Let us study the word of God, so that the Holy Spirit shall wield that word in our lives."

Quiz Box.

32. S. M. V., Delaware.—If your membership is too large to be worked profitably in one, there is certainly no harm in having two societies in your church.

WOULD YOU INVEST

BUY COLUMBUS CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY'S

STOCK of LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA at 25c. per share. The Homestake Company's stock started at about $1.00 per share, advanced to $125.00 per share, and has been paying dividends steadily for the past 22 years. The Columbus Company's property adjoins the Homestake, and has the extension of its ore bodies. Sixty men are now employed and a small mill is in operation. Proceeds from the sale of stock are being used in the further development of the property and the building of additional mills. No reason why this stock should not show profits similar to those of the Homestake. I believe this is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the public in the way of a mining share, and advise the immediate purchase of the stock, as the price will shortly be advanced. The Black Hills region, with proper development, will undoubtedly equal or exceed the famous Rand district of South Africa, which is the greatest gold-producing section in the world at the present time. People who are familiar with the Black Hills and the Rand declare in favor of the former. This is the coming gold camp of the world. Tremendous ore bodies have been developed in the Columbus property, that prove beyond all doubt the value of the ground. All that is needed to put the company on a dividend paying basis is the erection of large mills for the treatment of the ore. I advised the purchase of Hidden Fortune Stock at 50c. per share; same is now selling at $1.25 per share, and will shortly advance to $2.00. I still advise the purchase of this latter stock, as it is going much higher. Write for full particulars concerning the above propositions. HERBERT S. In itself LaGrippe is very dangerous, but in its after effects it is one of the most deadly scourges that afflicts mankind. It shatters the nervous system, weakens the heart's action, and lays the foundation for heart disease. The accompanying fever consumes the vitality and renders the patient susceptible to pneumonia, bronchitis and catarrh. The best treatment consists of Restorative Nervine which quiets the nerves, soothes the brain, restores strength and vitality to the entire system; Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills, a nerve tonic acting directly on the nerves of the digestive organs causing them to act in a natural and healthy manner, and Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills which speedily relieve the torture of headache, backache and soreness, the most common symptoms of Grip.

FIRM STAND BY BOWEN

Does Not Believe In Preferential Treatment of Allies

GIVES THEM FAIR WARNING

That He Will Ask Other Nations Having Claims Against Venezuela to Make Formal Protest—Will Receive Strong Backing From France

Washington, Jan. 31.—The European allies have not yet answered Minister Bowen's proposition, made several days ago, that there shall be no preference of claims of Great Britain, Germany and Italy against Venezuela over those of other nations against the South American country.

Minister Bowen thinks the delay should be construed in a hopeful light, on the ground that the delay in the answer of the powers indicates that they realize the importance of his position in the matter and are giving the subject careful consideration. He still expects a favorable reply to his contention, and believes that the questions at issue will be settled at Washington between himself, acting for the government of Venezuela, and the representatives of the powers.

It has become known that Bowen has addressed a note to the representatives of the allies which in a measure may be regarded as an ultimatum defining his position. Mr. Bowen declines absolutely to discuss the question, but it is known that he said to the allies that if they persisted in their determination to receive preferential treatment in the matter of the settlement of the claims he would call together the other creditor nations having claims against Venezuela with a view to their making a formal protest against the demands of those who participated in the blockade.

The effect of this would be that the other seven creditor nations would be lined up against the three allied powers, with the result that the settlement of the whole matter in all probability might go to The Hague if it is to be settled at all. This note is believed to be having its effect in staying the final determination of the question by the allied governments.

France is an important factor in backing up Bowen's fight against the extension of preferential treatment to England, Germany and Italy. She is the heaviest creditor of Venezuela whose claims will be paid out of the 30 percent customs fund if Bowen's plan is adopted. Her position is similar to that of the United States, which will not, however, take any part in the negotiations unless Bowen's mission fails utterly. France and the United States in their endeavors to secure the adoption of the 30 percent offer will have the support of Belgium, Spain, Holland and Sweden and Norway, all of whom are owed money by Venezuela.

Already considerable feeling has developed in official circles over the delays introduced by the allies after one of them had given its assent to Bowen's proposal and the others had considered it at length without making any suggestion as to preferential treatment. Mr. de Margerie, the French charge d'affaires, and Baron Moncheur, the Belgian minister, have been particularly active in seeking to secure the success of the non-preferential treatment proposal.

German Sentiment at Caracas

Caracas, Jan. 31.—The captain of the German cruiser Gazelle, which is anchored at Puerto Cabello, on the occasion of the German emperor's birthday sent an invitation to the members of the German colony to celebrate the day on board the cruiser. All refused, one, the head of one of the chief German firms at Puerto Cabello, answering: "Tell the captain that his invitation surprises me under the present circumstances, when Venezuela is suffering from an unjustifiable aggression on the part of Germany. I will not attend nor allow any of the young German clerks employed by my firm to attend the celebration."

Scarcity of Food Supplies

Paris, Jan. 31.—The correspondent of The Matin at Caracas telegraphs that food supplies in that city are rapidly diminishing. Twelve bakeries have had to close, owing to the scarcity of flour. The news concerning the difficulties encountered by Minister Bowen in his negotiations with the allied powers has caused a great sensation throughout the country, where the public is anxiously and impatiently awaiting the raising of the blockade.

Von Sternburg In Washington

Washington, Jan. 31.—Baron Speck Von Sternburg, the German minister to the United States, arrived in Washington late last night. He will not be able to take up the Venezuelan negotiations with Minister Bowen until he has presented his letters of credence to President Roosevelt. It is expected he will do this today.

Actresses In Hard Luck

San Francisco, Jan. 31.—The Pacific mail steamer City of Panama brought from the isthmus three members of the theatrical profession who were stranded in Panama. The trio formed part of the Gillette company, which left here several months ago and stranded in Guayaquil. Six women of the company "stowed away" on the steamer Colombia and reached Panama. Only three were fortunate enough to get passage to this city. The remainder are penniless in Panama.

A CABMAN'S STORY

Of Incidents Relative to the Bogus Son of a Polish Countess

Berlin, Jan. 31.—The Countess Isabella Wesierska, who has again been arrested and charged with pretending to have borne a son six years ago and presenting him as the heir to an estate at Wroblewo, province of Posen, is 57 years of age and white haired, though still an animated, brilliant woman. She was 51 when the child was born, and had three daughters.

It is alleged that the countess seemingly has two ladies of high rank as accomplices. These are said to have procured the illegitimate son of the daughter of a railroad watchman in Austria and at the proper moment to have brought the baby to the countess' apartments here. They went, it is asserted, from the railroad station in a cab, gave the driver a gold piece as a gratuity and entered the house. The gold piece so impressed the cabman that he stopped work for the day and went home. Thus it was that he remembered the circumstances. His testimony now contributes to completing the chain of evidence against the countess.

One of the accomplices carried the baby from the cab done up in shawl straps with a breathing space cut in the bottom of the bundle, it is alleged. The child, it is further alleged, was probably drugged and was apparently kept two days in the house before its birth was announced. The servants of the countess, it seems, did not even know of the presence of the child.

Those nearest to the countess took the birth in good faith. The old Count Wesierska, who was in fragile health and who was in Italy at the time, telegraphed to the family doctor at Posen to go to Berlin and assist in taking care of the mother and child. The doctor came to this city, but the countess would not see him and sent the doctor word that she had every necessary attention.

When the legitimacy of the child was first contested the countess averred that she had the services of a midwife, who has since died.

Decree In Mrs Baldwin's Favor

Sioux Falls, S. D., Jan. 31.—In a dispatch sent out from this place on Jan. 27 an erroneous statement was made regarding the decision of the circuit court in the divorce suit between Mr and Mrs. William B. Baldwin. In this case the husband sued for divorce on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment. Mrs. Baldwin defended the suit through her counsel, J. Miller Kenyon of Washington, the attorney of record, and Messrs. Jones and Matthews. The court granted a decree in favor of Mrs Baldwin and awarded her the custody of the child of the parties.

Montreal, Jan. 31.—The authorities of McGill university have sent a vigorous protest to Mayor Cochran against permission being granted for the erection of a Marconi station on Mount Royal. New York, Jan. 31.—Nineteen hundred employes of the American Sugar Refining company plant in Jersey City have been laid off and the refinery was shut down today. Solons Must Not Accept Passes

THE TASK OF FLAX

[Copyright, 1901, by Seumas MacManus.]

There was once a mother who had a very ugly and bad daughter of her own that she was very fond of and a very beautiful and good stepdaughter that she hated and wanted to get rid of, but she didn't know how in the world she could get rid of her, so she went and asked the hen wife's advice.

The hen wife says: "I'll tell you how you can get rid of her. There's an old church below, and no one ever yet spent the night in it and came out of it alive. You order your stepdaughter to go and sit up in it all night, working flax, and she'll surely be dead in the morning."

Home the mother went, and she ordered her stepdaughter to get ready and go off that night to work a task of flax in the old church, and for fear that she might escape whatever should happen to her in the church during the night she put a very great task of flax before her that fifty women couldn't do in one night and threatened to have her life in the morning if she did not have it done.

The poor girl took her wheel and all with her that night and went off to the church and sat down and began her work.

But she wasn't long sitting at her work when she heard a great noise, and in there came a great, wild looking ghost, and he sat down on the seat beside her and said that he wanted his feet washed and his hair combed, for they hadn't been washed or it hadn't been combed for 700 years.

"Oh, then, poor fellow," she says, "I'm sorry for you, and I'll surely help you all I can."

So she laid her flax aside, and she washed his feet and combed his hair very, very nicely indeed.

And when she had finished the ghost said: "In 700 years I've never met as good a girl as you. Can I do anything for you?"

"Well," said she, "I've a stepmother who isn't good to me and has put before me this night a task that fifty women couldn't do, but I don't know whether or not you can help me. I've all that flax you see there to work and have woven into cloth before morning."

"Sit down at your ease there," says the ghost, says he, "and I'll soon do this task for you."

So he took a breaker that was seven miles long and broke the flax; he then took a scrutching handle seven miles long and a block seven miles wide and scutched it; he then took a clove that was seven miles long and cloved it, and he took a hackler that was seven miles long and hackled it, and a wheel that was seven miles high and spun it, and a reel that was seven miles round and reeled it, and a loom that was seven miles wide and wove it into cloth.

And when he had all this done he gave her a comb that every time she should put it into her hair would comb a bag of gold dust out of it.

In the morning early, when the mother came to the church to see if she was dead, she was astonished to find her there alive and well, with all of her task done and all the flax made into cloth, and to see her with this comb, combing a bag of gold dust out of her hair.

She asked her how she had worked all the flax and how she had come by the comb, and she told the stepmother that a ghost came and worked the flax for her and presented her with the comb.

When the stepmother heard and saw this, she said she would give her own daughter a chance in the church that night, so that she might get such a valuable comb too. So on the next night she sent her own daughter to the church with a task of flax.

The daughter hadn't been long sitting at her work when the wild big ghost came in and sat down beside her and asked her to wash his feet and comb his hair, for it hadn't been done for 700 years before.

But she told him that she was no scullion to wash his feet or comb his hair and that she would be very sorry to do it, and the ghost struck her down with his hand, and she was dead.

When the mother came before day had dawned in the morning to find if she had done her work and got the golden comb, the ghost was there waiting for her and struck her down with his hand and left her dead beside her daughter.

But the good girl who had been kind to him thrived and prospered from that day, and it wasn't long till she married a handsome and beautiful young prince and lived happy ever after.

Ironing Without Fire.

Every house had its tinder box, but starting a flame with flint and steel was a tedious process at the best, and "borrowing fire" was usual among neighbors when one had the mischance to lose his over night. I am unable to say how long this custom continued, but I must have been seven or eight years old when a vagabondish neighbor came to our house one morning with his wife's footstove to get some coals. He was a reckless liar, of whom it was proverbially said that he would "lie for the fun of it" when the truth would have been more to his advantage. As we had had our breakfast my mother said to him, "Your folks must have slept late this morning, Mr. Davis." "Bless you, no!" he replied. "We were up at daylight, and my wife has done a large ironing." I remember with what good natured effrontery he joined in the laugh against him when my mother said she would like their recipe for doing an ironing without fire.—J. T. Trowbridge in Atlantic.

Monday will be Candlemas day when you are supposed to have half your coal and winter supplies.

Friday, Jan. 30, will long be remembered as a warm, foggy, dark, rainy, windy, muddy day, with passing thunder and lightning, followed by fair weather, sunshine, and freezing temperature.

Quincy should be interested in the movement to place statues of the Adamses—John and John Quincy—on the State House grounds. They were the only Presidents from Massachusetts, and worthy of every honor.

The People's Union might well extend its field of work to the entertainment of the delegates to the National Educational Convention who will visit Boston in July, and will make pilgrimages to our city.

As a part of a Metropolitan county Quincy will be but a little toad in the puddle, whereas now she is the only city and the largest municipality in Norfolk county. What has Quincy to gain from a Metropolitan county?

According to the estimates of the State Auditor for State expenses for 1903, the item for interest is much larger than any two department expenses, and over one-third the total. Isn't this a poor showing for good old Massachusetts?

Drift of Opinion.

☞It looks like a personal matter for Representative Bennett to seek an amendment of the libel law. Bennett has a grievance against the portion he would like to have expunged; but the law is all right as it stands.—Brockton Times.

☞Representative Bennett of Saugus is to make an attack upon the newspaper libel law. We advise him and those who are with him to drop it. The libel law is all right as it is, and it needs no further amendment to give a lot of cheap politicians the opportunity to blackmail the newspapers for alleged or fancied grievances.—Hyde Park Gazette.

—The seven course dinner of the Franklin company which proved so highly satisfactory at the Bethany church last week, is to be repeated at the banquet at the Universalist vestry, Feb. 5, at 6.45 P. The past prandial exercises promise to equal, and perhaps surpass those at the famous Men's banquet of the Universalist church in former years. Everybody welcome.

—The board of commissioners last week, approved the petition of the Milton Street Railway Company for a location in Milton. This was done as the result of a written agreement having been received by the board by which both the Milton and the Blue Hill street railway companies pledge themselves to carry out the consolidation on terms satisfactory to the board. It is probable that some day our citizens will be able to ride in the street cars to the foot of Blue Hills.

A BOSTON COUNTY

To Include Quincy and 29 Cities and Towns.

A Majority Vote to Decide.

A Special Election in May is Proposed in Bill.

The Metropolitan fever continues in the minds of a few, but the people at large must be on the qui vive that they be not taken by surprise. In the Legislature yesterday, Daniel H. Woodbury presented a petition for a new metropolitan county to include Boston, Chelsea, Revere, Winthrop, Arlington, Belmont, Cambridge, Everett, Lexington, Malden, Medford, Melrose, Newton, Somerville, Stoneham, Wakefield, Waltham, Watertown, Winchester, Woburn, Lynn, Nahant, Saugus, Swampscott, Brookline, Dedham, Hyde Park, Milton, Quincy and Westwood.

The bill provides for an election on May 19 of this year, when these cities and towns shall pass on the question, "Shall a new county be formed of the cities and towns which make up a metropolitan district?" If the vote is in the affirmative throughout the district the Governor shall appoint a commission to be known as the metropolitan county commission, to consist of five citizens, to advise a form of government to be submitted to the next General Gourt, and to arrange for transfer of county property. Pending the official action the county commissioners of Norfolk and Middlesex are prohibited from making more than necessary repairs upon county buildings within the metropolitan district.

Work of Richard Brooks.

A Quincy boy's work will be highly honored in Washington today. The two statues which Richard Brooks of this city has just done for the state of Maryland will today be presented to the U. S. government and dedicated in the statuary hall of the capitol. These statues are of bronze and will stand on pedestals of pink Tennessee marble decorated with the Maryland coat-of-arms in gilded metal. They represent Charles Carroll of Carrollton and John Hanson, both of whom were Marylanders and signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Mr. Brooks will not attend the exercises at Washington, because he is busy making arrangements to sail back to Paris on Thursday next. He is now staying with his sister in Quincy. His own abiding place is and has been for several years at 19 boulevard Berthier, Paris.

The career of this sculptor is full of interest. A native of Braintree, he studied first in Boston under Truman H. Bartlett. In 1893 he went to Paris, expecting to study, but finding the atmosphere thoroughly congenial, he has staid on there, working under Aube and Injalbert, coming over to execute such commissions as have fallen to him, notable these from Maryland (for which St. Gaudens recommended him,) and the Robert Treat Paine statue designed for the city of Taunton. This statue will be presented by the Paine family, and may be in place by the early part of next winter.

The other public works for which Mr. Brooks is chiefly known are the portrait statue of Col. Cass in the Boston Public Garden, the portrait bust of Gen. F. A. Walker in the courtyard of the Boston public library, a series of portrait medalions of the mayors of Boston, and an imaginative piece of sculpture entitled "The Song of the Wave," which received an honorable mention in the Paris salon of 1895. The Cass statue got a gold medal in the Paris salon of 1899, a first-class gold medal in the Paris exhibition and a first-class gold medal at Buffalo.

Warren Reed.

About a year ago Mr. Warren Reed, formerly of this city was severely burned and for about a year he has been a sufferer at the Massachusetts hospital at Palmer. On Thursday he passed away at the age of 70 years.

Many years ago he was connected with the famous hostelry at Squantum, and has since lived on Quincy avenue and at Norfolk Downs, removing from the city a few years ago.

He leaves one son, Mr. William A. Reed, formerly principal of the Lincoln school and now a teacher at Melrose.

The funeral will be held on Sunday at 2 P. M. from No. 124 Dorchester street, South Boston.

AN EPISODE OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

[Original.]

Many were the daring plans during the reign of terror in Paris to save some patrician who was about to be led to the guillotine. Among them that which was conceived for the young Marquise de la Favette was probably the most pathetic in its results.

Jean Truville was an idealist. Though of good but not noble family, he joined the revolutionary forces simply through a desire to better the condition of the lower classes. When, however, he saw Paris deluged with blood, he learned how dangerous it is to put power into the hands of people who do not know how to use it. Jean had studied the law and before the revolution had been summoned to the Chateau Favette to draw the old duke's will. There he had met the Marquise Louise, his daughter, and she had won his heart not only by the charm of her presence, but by treating him as her equal. When during the reign of terror one day the duke was led out to execution and Jean learned that Louise was to suffer the same fate in order that the family of aristocrats might become extinct, he resolved to save her even if he lost his own life in doing so.

In drawing the duke's will Jean had noticed that provision was made for the return of a son and heir to the estate who had gone to America with Lafayette to take part in the American Revolution and had been reported missing after one of the battles in which the French troops were engaged. Jean went to the Chateau Favette, procured a likeness of this young man and hired a costumer to make him up to resemble the subject of the picture. Then, seeking an old woman who had been his laundress for years, he gave her all the money he possessed to sign a statement that she had carried a child to the Chateau Favette twenty years before who had been adopted by the duchess in place of her own child, still born, and without the duke's knowledge of the substitution.

It was the day appointed for the execution of Louise de la Favette. Jean as soon as the tribunal whose sole business it was to bring aristocrats to the guillotine came together walked up to the desk before the president and said:

"Citizen, I am Antoine de la Favette, just returned from America, where I have been fighting the great battle which you are fighting here—the battle of human liberty. I find that you have executed my father, and my sister is to die today. If you desire to cut off our family completely, you must execute me and not the young girl who is supposed to me my sister, for she is not a La Favette, having been adopted by my mother without her knowledge."

"What proof have you of the truth of what you say?" asked the citizen judge.

"I may easily be identified from portraits of me in the Chateau Favette. Besides, my father must have left a will. In that will he surely made provision for my return, for he had no proof of my death. As to proof of my statement respecting my supposed sister, I have provided myself with the sworn statement of Rachel Duprey, who carried the babe to the chateau."

The citizen judge looked at the young man who proposed to give his life for another with astonishment, then read Rachel Duprey's statement.

"Arrest this man and stay the execution of Citizeness Favette."

Jean was imprisoned in the conciergerie while the court investigated the truth of his statement. The will of the late duke on file verified Jean's statement as to the missing heir, and Rachel Duprey stood by her written affidavit that she had carried Louise to the chateau. The court was too busily engaged in its bloody work to probe the matter and decided to consider Jean the rightful heir to the Favette estate. The next question was, should he, having voluntarily given himself up, be executed. He had fought in the cause of liberty in America and had acted nobly in presenting himself to save Louise. But he was the Duke de la Favette, and the revolutionists wished to exterminate his family and to get possession of his estate. Therefore after a spirited debate it was voted to execute him.

One morning a soldier entered the conciergerie and read the names of a number of persons there who were to be taken out for execution. One of them was Citizen Favette.

Louise, who supposed that the man had made an error in reading citizen instead of citizeness, was trying to get up from her chair to go to her death when she saw a young man rise and take his place among the condemned. The next moment the soldier read:

"She who was known as Citizeness Favette is free to go."

When the batch was completed and the prisoners were filing out, Jean, passing Louise, whispered in her ear:

"I die for you because I love you."

After the restoration of the Bourbons the Duke de la Favette returned to France. He had been left for dead on a battlefield, taken by a trapper westward and captured by a tribe of Indians in the then wilderness of Ohio. In Paris he found his sister, who had learned something of the plan by which she had been saved from death. Nothing that had been done by the revolutionists stood under the new regime, and the duke found little difficulty in regaining his estates.

Louise de la Favette never married, considering herself the wife of the man who had died for her. So long as she lived she made pilgrimages to the cemetery of Pere la Chaise to place flowers on the grave of Jean Truville, and when she died she was laid beside him.

PARKWAY BILLS.

Call for Expenditure of $400,000 in Quincy.

Deeds for the Land Have Passed.

Claims of the South Shore for Parkways are Good.

Representative Freeman has forwarded the Ledger copies of two bills accompanying the petition of Mayor Bryant for the construction of Metropolitan parkways in Quincy, which have been referred to the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs.

The bill to enable the Metropolitan Park Commission to complete the Construction of the Quincy Shore Reservation in the City of Quincy, reads:

Section 1. The Metropolitan Park Commission, created by chapter four hundred and seven of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and ninety-three, is hereby authorized and directed to complete the constuction of the Quincy shore reservation in Quincy from its junction with Hancock street, near Atlantic, to its connection with Furnace brook parkway at Merry Mount park, and, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, are hereby authorized to expend an additional sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Section 2. To meet expenditures made under authority of this act the treasurer and receiver-general, with the approval of the governor and council, shall issue scrip or certificates of indebtedness, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding four per cent per annum to the said amount of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, as an addition to the Metropolitan Park loan, at such times and in such sums as the Metropolitan Park Commission shall certify to him to be necessary to meet the liabilities incurred by said commission under the acts aforesaid, and shall add to the existing sinking fund to provide for the payment of the same. Such scrip or certificates of indebtedness shall be issued and additions to said sinking fund shall be assessed and collected in accordance with the provisions of sections nine, ten, eleven and twelve of said chapter four hundred and seven, and in accordance with the provisions of chapter two hundred and eighty-three of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and ninety-five and of chapter four hundred and nineteen of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and ninety-nine.

Section 3. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

The bill to enable the Metropolitan Park Commission to construct the Furnace Brook Parkway in the City of Quincy, reads:

Section 1. The Metropolitan Park Commission, created by chapter four-hundred and seven of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and ninety-three, is hereby authorized and directed to construct the Furnace Brook parkway in the city of Quincy from the Blue Hills reservation to its junction with the Quincy shore reservation at Merry Mount park, and, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, are hereby authorized to expend an additional sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Sections 2 and 3 read similar to Section 2 and 3 of the first bill.

Inasmuch as there have been large expenditures in the Metropolitan district on the north and west of Boston for improvements, and Quincy is getting no benefits although assessed, the claims of the South Shore that these parkways be built this year should have precedence over other petitions for parkway takings and improvements. The land for the parkway through Quincy has already been taken, some of it being sold for a nominal sum with the understanding that the parkway was to have been built before this.

One Hundred Dollar Fire.

The alarm from Box 35 at 7.05 last night called the department to a fire in small building on the Webb estate on Hancock Court in the rear of the stores. The fire was caused by the igniting of gasolene which had leaked out onto the floor. A clerk in Murphy's drug store entered the building on an errand and lighted a match. An explosion followed and the clerk made a hasty exit, fortunately escaping without injury. The gasolene had run all about and it was fifteen minutes before the firemen were able to extinguish it. The loss is placed at $100.

The next meeting in the interest of the Day Nursery will be held Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 3d, at 3 o'clock in the Common Council Room, City Hall. At the meeting last Tuesday Mrs. Hayes of Cambridge spoke interestingly and convincingly of the Day Nursery as a charity and an educator, saying it ranked in importance with the kindergarten, and is in some ways of greater importance. A synopsis of her remarks will be given at Tuesday's meeting. Everyone interested in the subject is most cordially invited.

There will be a meeting of the pastors and superintendents and assistant superintendents of Sabbath Schools of the entire city of Quincy at the Congregational church next Monday evening at 7.30 o'clock to discuss the advisability of a house to house visitation of the entire city. The State secretary, Mr. Hamilton Conant and assistant will be present to discuss the matter. We hope all who have the least interest in the matter will be present and if you don't believe in it come any way and say so.

Paleness Anemia How pale you look and how weak and tired you feel! There isn't enough iron in your blood.

You should take Pept-iron—it irons the blood, cures anemia, and gives the lips, cheeks and ears a good, healthy color.

At the same time, it cures nervousness, tones the stomach, perfects digestion, gives strength and animation.

Pept-iron is a thoroughly scientific combination of iron, in the form in which it is most widely prescribed, with the best nerve and stomach tonics; it is agreeable to the taste and leaves no inky or metallic flavor in the mouth.

Cry For Iron

A Lowell lady, who had been an anemic sufferer for years before taking Peptiron, writes: "I have just finished the second bottle of Peptiron and it has done me much good. It has relieved that shortness of breath, which troubled me so much in walking and going upstairs. It has had no bad effect on the teeth, neither has it caused constipation."

Peptiron

Peptiron is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50c. or $1 per box. By C. I. HOOD CO., proprietors Hood's Sarsaparilla, Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.

Two alarms from box 27 last night about eleven o'clock brought the fire department to the Loring estate on Commercial street, near Adams street. Just as Mr. Whitney, who occupies the house, was retiring for the night he discovered fire in the bath room. The good old house built about 200 years ago was completely destroyed.

Mrs. C. O. Miller was awarded the prize for the largest number of pinfalls in the Ladies' Bottle Pin Tournament at the Cochato club which closed Tuesday afternoon. The prize was a lovely picture in weathered oak frame and was the gift of Mr. George E. Williams. Mr. and Mrs. Williams deserve much credit for their untiring efforts, for the benefit of the club.

Last evening the King's Daughters held a most successful supper and entertainment at the South chapel. The entertainment consisted of pleasing solos by Miss Nina Belle Gage and an amusing farce by the following: Miss Estella Pierce, Mrs. W. A. Torrey, Mrs. O. B. Oakman, Mrs. Joseph Schraut, Mrs. Parker Hobart and Miss Alice Holbrook.

At regular meeting held by Puritan Lodge, No. 179, I.O.O.F., January 27, 1903, Past Grand W. F. Woodsum, in the presence of seventy members, performed the work of the initiatory degree on six candidates. After the completion of the work the lodge adjourned to the banquet hall, where a light collation was served. With the opening of the new year 1903 Puritan lodge finds itself in a prosperous condition and indications point to an increased membership which is very pleasing to those who are members. The shape and increased space of the new hall greatly assists the degree staff in the performance of their work and visiting members as well as home members, judging by their frequent presence, enjoy the high class work by the degree masters.

The up to date tailor is a man of great artistic perception; otherwise he could not cope with the changing modes of the day.

The possibilities of lace, instead of dwindling, increase and get more fascinating every day. Lace berthas are particularly useful in renovating an old frock. These berthas are of various shapes, and every woman can find one to suit her style.

NEW DEVICES ON TRAINS

Safety Appliances Tested on German Railways.

THIRD RAIL NEEDED IN THE TRACK

By Means of an Electrical Apparatus the Engineer Has Constantly Before His Eye an Automatic Signal Which Instantly Warns Him of Any Danger From Collision.

A full description of the new safety appliances for German railway trains has been sent to the state department at Washington by Frank H. Mason, consul general at Berlin. Although intended for use on steam railroads, the devices are operated by electricity and require a third rail in the track. Mr. Mason's description of recent experiments is in part as follows:

Midway between the rails is laid a light third rail of the ordinary T pattern, the joints of which are so connected as to form a continuous conductor. Midway under the forward part of the engine is hung the working instrument, an electrical apparatus inclosed in a square case or jacket occupying a cubic foot of space. The instrument is connected with a contact shoe, which slides along the third rail and by wires with a telephone and electric alarm bell in the cab of the engine driver and a red incandescent lamp which is lighted by the same impulse that rouses the alarm bell into action. A further improvement of the device sets the electric brakes on the engine or entire train simultaneously with the alarm signal which sounds the bell and lights the lamp. The apparatus is so adjusted and arranged that the engineer can at any moment by touching a lever satisfy himself that it is in full working condition.

The tests on Nov. 12 were conducted on the main line from Frankfurt to Hanau, between the stations Sachsenhausen and Goldstein, and a translation of the official report will illustrate concisely the working of the apparatus. Two locomotives, numbered respectively 290 and 1,420, had been equipped with the new device, and the experiments proceeded as follows: Engine 290, drawing a special train and approaching Sachsenhausen at full speed, received the danger signal and came to a full stop. The driver of 290 then asked by telephone the cause of the signal and received from the keeper of a grade crossing half a mile in front word that a wagon had broken down in crossing the track and obstructed the line. After ten minutes' wait the engineer of 290 received word by telephone that the obstruction had been cleared away and thereupon resumed his trip.

A mile farther on the signal on 290 again sounded, and the driver was informed by telephone, as before, that the semaphore round a curve and more than half a mile distant was set at "halt." Thereupon engine 290 slowed down and proceeded cautiously, sounding its whistle at short intervals, the telephone bell in the driver's cab ringing continuously until the curve was rounded, when the ringing ceased, notifying the engineer that the semaphore had changed to "track clear." Thereupon 290 resumed full speed.

In the tests to prevent collision engine 1,420 came up rapidly from behind and on the same track as 290, which had slowed down and was proceeding cautiously in consequence of reported danger in front. The moment that 1,420 came within 1,000 meters (1,093 yards) of 290 the signal on both engines began to ring and their red lights to glow. Thereupon 1,420 halted, the driver inquired of 290 in front the cause of the alarm, and a complete understanding between the two trains was immediately established. An important point in this connection is that in practice the same warning signal is sounded upon every engine equipped with the apparatus which is on the same track and within the prescribed radius—a kilometer or a mile, as the case may be—from the engine and train which cause the obstruction. If a semaphore be falsely set at safety, the train may run past it into a block in which another engine is halted or moving with perfect security that warning will be given in ample time to prevent a collision under any and all conditions of darkness, fog, storm or mistaken instructions. The invention has other minor points of usefulness, but the foregoing will be sufficient to indicate the general method of its operation and the measure of its efficiency. In effect it puts the engine driver of every train into instantaneous touch with other trains, switchmen and station and crossing keepers in his neighborhood and keeps ever before his eye and ear an automatic and infallible signal which springs into activity the moment that his locomotive, whether running forward or backward, comes within the radius of danger from collision.

Rare Birds For Guests.

At a recent dinner given by Mrs. A. Lanfear Norrie in New York there was one dish rare in the United States. Ortolans were served. The ortolan was the vogue a century ago, and the epicures of that period were so gluttonous that they nearly exterminated the species. The birds cannot be bought in New York, and must be imported from England, where a few purveyors raise them. They are rather small and resemble the reed bird. The flavor is not unlike that of the partridge. The ortolan usually is roasted in a rich brown sauce. It is said the Norries paid $3 for each of their ortolans. They were brought from England, each in a cube of ice.

The SOUTHERNERS

By Cyrus Townsend Brady

CHAPTER X.

THE INDECISION OF PEYTON.

THE passage of that act of secession in Charleston, S. C., marked the beginning of trouble for all the persons concerned in this story. Alas, it marked the beginning of trouble for a great many persons concerned in a great many stories which shall never be told.

Peyton had been entirely honest in his conversation with his father. He had not made up his mind, and in the intervening days he tried hard to do so. Making up his mind finally and definitely upon any subject except Mary Annan had been rather a difficult task to him heretofore.

There were long discussions between father and son concerning the rights and wrongs of the situation. Colonel Peyton was the extremest type of southern man. He believed that slavery was a divine institution warranted by Biblical teaching and sanctioned alike by morality and expediency. Looking upon the negroes as an inferior race, he would hear of no condemnation of the system by which they were held. In his own case his slaves were happy and contented. His ownership and rule were mild and benevolent, and his slaves adored him. This was the case with most people he knew, and he willfully or perhaps unconsciously blinded himself to any other feature of it.

Aside from any consideration of the slave question, his state was easily paramount to the United States or any other of them in his affections, and he was unable to understand how there could be any hesitation on the part of his son as to his duty. He plied him with every argument at his command, while by the most violent efforts he barely succeeded in preserving some measure of his self control in the daily discussions.

At first Boyd thought to break away from these recurring periods of heated debate and solace himself in the society of the woman he loved. But here again exactly the same state of affairs supervened. If possible, Mary Annan was more fierce and determined in her sentiments than his father. She was completely swept away by the situation. He found that whereas she had been willing before to allow him to pour his tale of affection in her listening ears and had even played at love-making herself now she had but one topic of conversation, and he was perforce compelled to confine himself to the discussion of that or remain silent.

When he was with neither father nor sweetheart and resorted to the society of Darrow and the young men of his old time acquaintance, he found that no other subject for conversation could be started and maintained with them either. In truth, there was reason for all this concentration of mind upon one idea, this social obsession upon secession. As he entered more and more into the spirit of his environment he saw more and more clearly the irreconcilable nature of the opinions held by north and south upon the question of slavery.

The right of a state to secede from the general government had never been tested. Threats had been freely indulged in from time to time in periods of stress, in moments of exigency, by both northern and southern states, John Hancock and Massachusetts leading off, but they had not been seriously regarded hitherto in our national history—except in one instance, possibly—and the action of South Carolina, which was, after all, inevitable, came with the force of a sudden surprise.

Such was the contagion of the idea, however, that every slave owning state immediately fell in line. Although they perhaps did not realize it, they were all ripe for secession. South Carolina was no more determined than the rest. She had merely anticipated them, that was all.

There were many, like Judge Annan, for instance, who thought secession unnecessary on account of Lincoln's election; who deplored it, fought against it, argued against it with all their powers, but who, it was certain, would eventually accept it with all its consequences in case or when it should be brought about.

The warlike spirit of the south evidenced itself in the upspringing in every city or village of new military companies, and the young men who had seen nothing of its horrors, who knew nothing of its miseries by experience, were clamorous for war. The southerners affected to hold the men of the north in great contempt, but deep down in their secret hearts they expected that they would not be permitted to establish their Southern Confederacy on the cornerstone of slavery without strenuous efforts being made by the north to prevent it. It was known to the leaders, without doubt, that the right of secession would be denied and the attempted act would be resisted.

Entertainments of every sort were more or less given up. The papers were filled with announcements of the new military organizations, in which the privilege of enlistment was eagerly sought. Uniforms were seen everywhere upon the streets, and the music of fife and drum stirred the martial ardor of the citizens. In the midst of all the excitement came the election of deputies to the conventions which were held in Alabama and adjoining states with the avowed object of following South Carolina's action in carrying the several states out of the Union. Although vigorous protests were made by some eminent men, like Alexander H. Stephens of Georgia, the result in every case was a foregone conclusion.

The question of slavery—which, while it was obscured by the question of secession, was really the basic consideration, since it was slavery which brought about the desire for secession—was almost as fiercely debated, but with not nearly so much unanimity. The southerners were by no means agreed on that subject. And it was a pity that this diversity of opinion was not realized in the north. Here again Judge Annan differed from many of his neighbors. He, in common with such men as Henry A. Wise, the governor of Virginia, deplored the existence of slavery, and with others had been quietly working for some time looking toward its abolition. They had come to regard slavery as a curse and blot upon the fair name of the south, as well as a menace to any industrial supremacy, rather than a divinely ordained institution, a blessing. Left to themselves, these men would have brought about a gradual abolition of slavery upon equitable grounds which would have been acceptable to the whole nation.

The moral consciousness of the south, generally speaking, was entirely at rest on the question, however. The slaveholding statesmen were as sincere and as thoroughly convinced that they were right as the most violent abolitionist was to the contrary, and to convince them otherwise would require time, tact and patience, forces which have often before moved a world. Such an industrial system as slavery could not be uprooted suddenly without so seriously disturbing existing economic conditions as to produce revolution. The efforts of the southern abolitionists—who would naturally resent the term—were in the present excitement fruitless. They found themselves hopelessly outclassed, and were compelled to sink the question of slavery in a choice between their state and the United States. Their choice in most instances was inevitable.

Attacked, therefore, by family, friends and sweetheart, Peyton actually gradually persuaded himself that it was not his duty to remain in the United States service. He had been born in Alabama. All his family, his friends, the woman he hoped to make his wife, lived there. All his affections, his dreams, his hopes, were centered there. If war came—and he was at last convinced against his will that it would come, and the conviction came in the end because he was one of the few southern men who knew the quality of the north, which most of his countrymen, publicly, at least, derided—he would be compelled to fight against those he loved and who loved him. Living in a seaboard town, it was quite possible that he might some day be compelled to turn the guns of a warship upon this very city, upon his own people, upon his own home. An awful thought that, a terrible argument.

But there was another powerful incentive. The very moment that he announced his determination to continue in the United States service and his refusal to resign he would be a man marked for hatred and contempt.

Should he follow in the footsteps of his fathers, honor and preferment awaited him. His military and naval training would be of great value to the south. To the north he would be only one of a number of enterprising young officers.

In short, nearly everything urged him to a decision in conformity with the wishes of his people, and the arguments that were brought to bear upon him were so powerful that they nearly decided him—nearly, but not quite. Again and again it was on his lips to announce that decision, yet something held him back.

He grew haggard and pale under the stress and strain of the outward and inward debate with men, conscience and the woman. He had time for no day dreams now. Under the iron pressure in the terrible struggle which tore the very depths of his being he began to lose some of the indifference, the hesitation, the timidity which had characterized him in the presence of the world. He began to stiffen and to strengthen.

Watching him painfully were those who loved him, his father, his mother, his brother and sister, aye, his sweetheart, Mary Annan, for she too began to come within the category. Although she neither knew it nor admitted it, it needed but a touch apparently to reveal to her and to him the depths of affection which she was beginning to entertain for him. That mighty struggle going on within his breast, which she dimly realized from the outward manifestations of it in the change of his character, brought them nearer together. She watched him with perhaps the same feeling of awe with which women of old, otherwise dainty and refined and not devoid of the gentle sympathy we love because we lack it, watched the gladiators in the Roman arena.

To do or not to do, and which was the duty to be done, which to be left undone—for he began to see that, as in every great crisis or question, there were duty calls on both sides of it—that was his problem. Sometimes in her presence he sat in perfect silence for long moments. These periods were not filled with the dreams of old, and when she timidly broke them by asking the subject of his thoughts he would reveal the mighty turmoil by some brief, incisive comment which taught her as nothing else could the fierceness of the struggle. She prayed, as thousands of others in both north and south did in those trying days, that the decision might be for her and hers, and awaited it with a hope which grew stronger every day.

Bob Darrow, too, grew more unhappy. He made little progress in his love affairs, although as far as he could see neither did Peyton. Mary Annan was kind to him, too kind. She distributed her favors between the two men impartially. By a tacit agreement they had avoided clashing and dispute about her. Each contrived as he could to see her alone, but when chance brought them together there was no unseemly rivalry. Darrow's position was unequivocal. He was heart and soul for the south; but, strange to say, he was almost the quietest man of the social circle in which the young men moved. The leaven of love and the effect of the great crisis were developing his nature also. Where he had before given his judgment with a laugh and without thought he became reserved and contemplative. Deliberation appeared in his manner, a little hesitancy or reluctance, which, as it appeared to be accompanied by no less of confidence in any emergency, the girl found very attractive. Indeed, had Peyton been out of the way she certainly would have fallen in love with Darrow. And it might be, before she realized the situation, that something would turn the scales in his favor. So they were all in a state of feverish excitement, and the days passed in alternations of anxiety and elation.

Even little Tempe had a hard time of it, for never in her small life had she found her sister so distrait, so anxious, so quick to reprove a fault, so heedless of her childish ailments and complaints. Christmas came and went without the usual jollity and merry-making. It was useless to cry "Peace, peace," when there was no peace, but war; futile to urge "good will toward men" when that between the two sections was already a thing of the past. Matters moved rapidly in Alabama, and the crisis came on the night of Jan. 3, 1861. This happened to be the birthday of Mary Annan. Her father, the old judge, as a celebration of it gave a dinner party at his home at Annandale late in the afternoon, to which were bidden several of his oldest and most intimate friends as well as a few of the younger people, including Darrow and Peyton and his sister, Miss Pinkie. Willis, much to his disgust, was forced to content himself with an invitation to the dancing party which was to follow the dinner.

SLEIGH RIDE FOR A HORSE.

Problem of Getting Down Icy Hill Solved by a Maine Man.

The people along the St. Croix river are telling how John Brown of St. Stephen recently gave his horse a lightning ride down an icy hill, says a Bangor (Me.) dispatch to the Johnstown (Pa.) Democrat.

Brown lives on one of the ridges back of the town, and the other morning when he had urgent business in St Stephen he found to his surprise that the snow had vanished during the night. The business would not wait, and so Brown started with his smooth shod nag and was dragged along in a low bodied sled over alternate patches of bare ground and ice.

All went well until he reached the top of Weston's hill, a very steep incline three-quarters of a mile long. Glancing down the icy toboggan chute, Brown decided that it would be dangerous to attempt the descent with his smooth shod horse, and he stood irresolute until suddenly a bright thought struck him.

By dint of a little coaxing and prodding he managed to get the horse on board the sled, and then before the amazed nag could back out he gave the sled a push, jumped on behind, and away they went like a comet down the hill. The horse stood perfectly still, with his feet braced, as if he understood what was going on.

People along the road rushed out to see the sight, and they expected every minute to see the outfit go to smash. But Brown knew a thing or two about steering, the horse never once moved from his rigid position on the sled, and finally they reached the foot of the hill and went shooting along a quarter of a mile farther on the level road, stopping at the door of a blacksmith's shop.

There the horse was sharp shod, and the journey to St. Stephen was resumed with the horse in the shafts and Brown in the seat. Today Brown is regarded as a man of nerve, while his nag has the distinction of being the only horse thereabouts that ever got a sleigh ride down hill.

Dislocated Her Shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep, which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

—A prominent Philadelphia clergyman strongly urges all young men intending to enter the ministry to learn some trade either before or after their ordination. He has examined the statistics of the various Protestant denominations and has been appalled by the number of ministers who are without a charge. He thinks a trade would be a good thing to fall back on in such cases, besides standing the preacher in good stead in many ways while still in the pulpit.

THE STATEHOOD HITCH

Not Likely to Reach the Point of an Extra Session

BREAK IN THE QUAY LINES

Is Looked For by His Opponents, and Contest Has Narrowed Down to a Trial of "Nerve"—Situation Complicated by Morgan's Filibuster

Washington, Jan. 31.—On account of the McMillan eulogies in the senate yesterday afternoon and the dedication of Maryland's contributions to Statuary hall today, there will be few opportunities before Monday for any legislative development in the statehood fight, about which all other business centres.

Mr. Quay is keeping his own counsel. Only Mr. Gallinger, who is his whip, and Mr. Foraker, his legal adviser, are informed in advance of his moves, and these senators maintain the strictest secrecy. The contest seems to have been resolved into a trial of the "nerve" of the two sides. Neither wants an extra session. Each will push its case to the nearest point possible without actually compelling one. At least, it is generally assumed that the Quay lines will break before this point is reached, and the other side, it need not be doubted, will allow the session to end with important business unattended to, rather than accept statehood.

The Republican leaders are exhibiting no signs of discouragement, and they have been steadily surprised by zeal and tenacity of the Quay contingent. They have been for some time predicting a break, and are doing so now, alleging that Quay's latest tactical move in attacking statehood to two appropriation bills as an amendment is merely preparatory to letting his cause down.

The situation is further complicated by the filibuster which Senator Morgan yesterday instituted in the committee against the Panama canal treaty. He took the unusual procedure of beginning an extended speech in committee, in the guise of arguments against the Panama treaty. He started in with the discovery of the isthmus, with a massive pile of manuscript before him, and the announcement that he had a good many amendments, estimated at 50, which he will argue for in committee and speak for in the senate. He appears to have no Democratic support in this movement, and but for the Quay hold-up it might be disregarded. Combined, however, with the larger obstruction, it will need watching.

The fear of delay for the trust legislation, through the desire of Senator Nelson, one of the conferees, to add a "snapper" to the bureau of corporations paragraph of the department of commerce bill, is subsiding. Any radical addition to the bill would merely result in its defeat. Senator Nelson has been brought to realize this, and will not, it is believed, insist on his original desires. Senator Hanna, another of the conferees, says that the anti-trust legislation now under way will be satisfactory to the president, and will meet the reasonable anticipation of all who are interested in remedial legislation.

Ancient Claims Favorably Considered

Washington, Jan. 31.—Yesterday was the last private claims day of this congress in the house and members with bills on the calendar carried everything before them in committee of the whole. Forty-five bills in all were acted on favorably. Many of the claims were old, dating back to the Civil war, and a few originated prior to that time. The latter were for balances due for carrying mails in the south when the war broke out.

Big Display of Automobiles

London, Jan. 31.—The automobile show opened at the Crystal palace yesterday is by far the largest held in this country. Over 500 cars are exhibited, besides 120 circulating on the grounds for the use of prospective purchasers. Altogether it is a record display, demonstrating the rapid advance made by the automobile industry in Great Britain.

Held Up on a Rock

San Francisco, Jan. 31.—Steam schooner Crescent City ran on a rock off the Mendocino coast during a gale yesterday. Her passengers and crew, numbering in all 26, took refuge on the rock. Steamer Scotia finally transferred 11 persons to the Scotia. Fifteen persons are still on the rock and are in no danger, except from exposure.

Won't Let Up on Ames

Minneapolis, Jan. 31.—Judge Harrison, speaking for the Empire district bench, yesterday directed the county attorney to commence suit to collect the forfeited bonds of former Mayor Ames and to make every effort to secure the return of that indicted official. The bondsmen are liable for $10,000.

Planned to Kill King of Belgians

Barcelona, Jan. 31.—A Belgian anarchist named Martin has been arrested in this city. He has confessed that he was selected to kill the King of the Belgians, but was prevented from carrying out the deed by being arrested during the strike in Barcelona a year ago.

Servia's Big Order For Ammunition

Budapest, Jan. 31.—A contract for 10,000,000 rounds of small arms ammunition for the Servian army has been signed here with the sanction of the Hungarian government.

LYNN POLICE WATCHFUL

But Throwers of Ancient Eggs Ruined a Labor Leader's Clothing

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 31.—There was no repetition of previous disorderly scenes when the Boot and Shoe Workers' union cutters left the various factories last night, but the authorities were prepared to meet any emergency that might arise. In most cases the men left in small parties, as usual, and were escorted to their headquarters by Lynn members of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, who waited for them outside the factories, their passage through the streets being unobstructed.

When the 12 cutters at the Watson Shoe company's factory came out at 5 o'clock, there was quite a good sized crowd waiting for them, but a police detail under Lieutenant Pike kept the rabble from coming in contact with the men, who were escorted by a number of officers in plain clothes, and the march to the hall was without special incident.

Little notice was taken by the crowd when the 15 cutters from the Harney Bros. factory, under the wing of Sergeant Andrew Bessom and a dozen officers, marched to Lasters' hall. Here a crowd of 200 gathered, including a number of women. As the cutters marched by one of the crowd, Edmund Beals, shouted at them and was immediately shouted at them and was arrested.

Later in the evening a leader in the Boot and Shoe Workers' union who has been active in setting imported cutters at work was caught on the street by two men and baptized with eggs of long age. The labor leader was not physically hurt, but his clothes were ruined. The egg throwers dodged into a house and out by another door and eluded the police.

Rioting Fever at Waterbury

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 31.—Riotous scenes about the streets last night made it the most exciting since the strike of the motormen and conductors of the Connecticut Railway and lighting company began three weeks ago. Crowds of people surrounded the cars run by non-union men in the centre of the city, while in the outskirts and along the line toward Naugatuck the progress of the cars was marked by volleys of stones and in one instance a torpedo was placed on the rail.

Bay State Auditor's Figures

Three Years For Manslaughter

Boston, Jan. 31.—Louis Lyman, convicted of killing Charles Bruckner, was yesterday sentenced to not less than three years nor more than six in state prison for manslaughter. Lyman was jealous of Bruckner's visits to his home and accused him of being attentive to Mrs. Lyman. Lyman at the outset was armed with a billy and Bruckner with a knife, but in the struggle the weapons changed hands.

Alleged Murderer of Son

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 31.—The coroner who has been investigating the Monroe murder case has decided that John Gorman came to his heath from a gunshot wound at the hands of his father, Patrick Gorman. The accused man, who has been in jail during the inquiry, is in a highly nervous state and has been able to take but little nourishment.

Gaston Will Try Again

Boston, Jan. 31.—Josiah Quincy was yesterday named as chairman of the executive committee of the Democratic state committee, succeeding A. C. Drinkwater. The move is regarded by Democratic politicians as an indication that William A. Gaston will again be the party nominee for governor next fall.

Mrs. Dolby's Talks

The Deacon Is Interested, but Neither Affirms Nor Denies

[Copyright, 1902, by O. B. Warner.]

DEACON DOLBY had been out after supper to put fresh straw in the pigpen and see that the henhouse door was securely fastened, and when he came in to remove his shoes and sit down, with a grunt of contentment, he found Mrs. Dolby with her hands folded on her lap and waiting to say:

"Samuel, Mrs. Winters was over here this afternoon while you were away. I have known her for fourteen years, and I know that she always speaks the truth. She is no woman to go tattling things around to make trouble between husbands and wives. She never tells a thing unless she thinks it her duty as a conscientious woman. She thought it her duty to tell me something about you."

The deacon had had a feeling for an hour past that some calamity threatened, and he was not taken by surprise. He let his eyes wander around the room for a moment and then took up a printed report on the agriculture of the state of Ohio for the year 1900 and suddenly became interested.

"Yes, Samuel," continued Mrs. Dolby, "she thought it her duty, but even then she was sorry for it. Three weeks ago yesterday you went over to help Ebenezer Clark put shingles on his woodshed. While you was working on the roof you slid off and fell head first into the rain barrel. Ebenezer pulled you out by the legs, and when you had got through gasping and choking and stuttering you started out and made use of such words that he ran to the barn and his wife ran down cellar. Mrs. Clark told Mrs. Winters all about it, and she said she had goose flesh for a week. She wouldn't tell me what you said, but I want you to. I want to know whether I am living with a pirate or a man who has rung the bell for Thursday evening prayer meeting for the last twenty-two years."

Deacon Dolby could have urged extenuating circumstances. It is not every day that a man rolls off a roof and brings up in a barrel of water, and when such things do occur the victim has certain rights in the case. He put in a plea, however. The volume of statistics in his hand informed him that the turnip crop of 1900 beat that of the year previous by 4,821 acres, and he was satisfied to let it go at that. Mrs. Dolby waited expectantly for sixty seconds and then continued:

"EBENEZER PULLED YOU OUT BY THE LEGS."

"Hiram Jackson called here the other day. He was looking awful solemn, and when I asked him if Miranda was dead he said he had come to ask me if you had gone to the bad. I had to coax for half an hour before he told me that when you were driving over to Joab Green's after cider vinegar last month you met a man with a dancing bear. Your horse got scared and ran into the fence, and you got out and lambasted the man till he could hardly crawl and then throwed his bear over the fence into the bushes. Yes, Samuel, you had a fight—a regular fight—and you whooped and hollered till they heard you half a mile away. Is it any wonder that the neighbors are asking if you are a lost man and that I sit here shivering in my shoes? You can't excuse it, and you needn't try to. It's too awful for any excuse."

The deacon didn't propose to offer any excuses. The facts in the case were about as Mrs. Dolby stated them, and a grim smile came to his face as he remembered the look of surprise bestowed upon him by that bear as the beast went sailing over the fence. And as the agricultural statistics before him stated that the farmers of the Buckeye State had fed 20,000,000 pumpkins to their stock during the winter of 1901-02 he accepted the statement without question and read on.

Mrs. Dolby shed a tear or two over the general situation and then remarked:

"When I went over to Mrs. Harper's to borrow some tea the other day, she looked at me so mournfully that I couldn't help but ask her if her sister Sarah was dead. It wasn't her sister Sarah, Samuel, but she burst right out crying and said it was all on account of you. One day three or four weeks ago our hog got out of the pen. I remember how you grabbed your hat and started down the road and was gone an hour or so, but I didn't know what happened while you were running the hog up and down. You was chasing him around the corner when he turned back and bolted between your feet and flung you on your back. Mrs. Harper stood at her gate and saw and heard all. You lay there a minute, dazed like, and then you sat up and looked around and—and—talked. And such awful talk! I'm no friend of the hog, Samuel, but I must say that the way you talked about that poor animal was as shameful as it was undeserved. You sputtered and stammered and waved your arms about, and when you got up you tried to pick up a whole rod of fence at once to hit that hog with. Samuel, can these things be? And if they can, how long will it be before I am driven to pack up my things and leave you?"

Deacon Dolby didn't know and therefore thought it best not to commit himself. The statistics, too, gave the number of hogs in the state of Ohio at 128,350,298, and he wondered if his porker had been counted among them.

"And what happened only yesterday morning?" sorrowfully queried Mrs. Dolby as her finger followed a tear down her nose. "You went out to nail a board on the henhouse, and after a few minutes I looked out, and you were holding your thumb and dancing around. I didn't hear you saying a word, but no man ever jumps up and down and kicks things over unless he's saying awful things to himself. You had hit your thumb with the hammer, and no doubt the pain was hard to bear, but you should have remembered that for over thirty years you have been held up in this community as a living example of morality. Samuel, I want to know exactly what you said as you danced around. I can't say that I will forgive you, but perhaps I can find excuses for you."

The deacon heard, but he didn't answer. As a matter of fact, he couldn't have repeated the conversation he had had with himself and been sure of doing both sides justice. He therefore ignored the appeal and interested himself in the beet and carrot statistics of 1900, and for ten minutes there was silence. Then he looked up to find Mrs. Dolby asleep in her chair, with her head fallen back and her mouth open. He allowed five minutes more to pass, then rose up, shook her by the shoulder and said:

"Come, Elizabeth; it's time to go to bed."

"I—I dreamed you fell into the well and was swearing about it," she exclaimed as she roused up.

"No, nuthin' doin'," he answered as he wound up the clock and turned down the lamp. M. QUAD.

Breakfast Food.

The Eskimo stood before his wife, wrapped in her furs, with a look of despair on his face.

"The blubber is gone, we've eaten the last dog and my boots are too thin to make soup of," said the citizen of the far north. "Starvation stares us in the face."

But Mrs. Eskimo smiled serenely. "Not yet," she answered. "I have been reading the advertisements in the magazines and know the value of patent breakfast foods."

The husband looked puzzled.

"We will have a nice dish of flaked snow for breakfast!" concluded his loving wife triumphantly.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

She Did It Once.

A comic opera prima donna was under discussion.

"She used to insist that it would be utterly impossible for her to throw her feet up with the abandon of a chorus girl."

"Has she changed her mind?"

"Yes."

"How did it happen?"

"It happened the first time she tried to skate alone."—Chicago Post.

Hiram's Loss.

Unpleasant Thought.

The Zoo Race.

The animals thought they would have a race;
The monkey was referee;
The bull was stakeholder, for, as he said,
It was his nature to be.
The camel got a hump on himself;
The lion ran with might and mane;
The tiger stood off, for a beast of his stripe
Was not let to enter again.
The elephant took his trunk along
In case he won the prize;
The peacock was starter and missed no one,
For, you see, he was all eyes.
Some spotted the leopard for winner sure;
The old ones chose the gnu,
While those who leap to conclusions quick
Bet on the kangaroo.
The ostrich plumed himself on his speed;
All tried the record to wreck;
The hippopotamus blew his own horn,
But the giraffe he won by a neck.

Little Fur Coats—Useful Cloth Coats and Dresses.

Squirrel makes a charming coat for a small girl, the turndown collar and cuffs being hemmed with ermine. More costly coats for the little ones are made of ermine, with little caps to match trimmed with white osprey and tiny replicas of the fashionable flat muffs.

For the child of moderate means, however, the most serviceable and smart material for a coat is fawn or blue broadcloth with a wide collar of lace or velvet and a wide furry hat to match. This hat can easily be trimmed at home, but the coat should know the touch of skilled hands and should be made loose and comfortable so that it can be worn another season.

Pretty children's dresses are made of that old fashioned material corded mull. These are made with a deep yoke and roomy bishop sleeves, the skirt displaying a hem surmounted by a cluster of tiny tucks.

Many of the large floppy beaver hats are tied under the child's chin by means of wide satin ribbons. Two huge feather pompons often serve as the entire trimming.

One of the latest skirts is shown in the cut. It is pretty made up in cloth or wool velling.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

Colonial Theatre.

An immense amount of interest is centered in the presentation of the Drury Lane Theatre, London, spectacle, "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast" at the Colonial Theatre, on Monday evening, February the 2d. This colossal entertainment was imported to this country a little over a year ago by Klaw & Erlanger, and scored such an emphatic hit that the theatregoing public can look upon Drury Lane spectacles as a fixture in the American theatrical world for some time to come.

The original cost of staging this spectacle at Drury Lane was over $100,000. Klaw & Erlanger expended an additional $70,000 in transferring the equipment from London to this country and importing several hundred English and French ballet dancers in addition to the Grigolatis troupe of aerialists who furnishes the startling surprise, "The Flying Ballet," which is the big feature of the Ballet of Seasons. During the Colonial Theatre engagement the curtain on the matinee performances will rise at 1.45 P. M., while the evening performances will be started precisely at 7.45 P. M. Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday during the Boston run.

Castle Square Theatre.

At the Castle Square Theatre next week a production of one of Clyde Fitch's most successful plays, "Nathan Hale," is announced as the attraction. This play was first presented by Nat. C. Goodwin and his company, four years ago, and has had no previous production, at popular prices, in this city. A more healthy mixture of tragedy and comedy than that presented in "Nathan Hale" is seldom seen upon the dramatic stage, and the rare skill shown by the playwright in planning the scenes and situations incidental to the plot was highly commended by the critics throughout the tour made by Mr. Goodwin. The revolutionary period—in which the twenty-one year old patriot figured—is made familiar by the action of the play, and the love story of the young American, whose only regret when about to be hanged as a spy was that he had but one life to give for his country, is told in the most effective fashion. "Nathan Hale" is announced for only a single week and the usual distribution of boxes of chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Arthur and Jennie Dunn, who have not appeared together for several years, are the underlined attractions of the Keith show for the week commencing Feb. 2, but are surrounded by a great list of other noted vaudeville entertainers, including: Stuart Barnes, the Chesterfield of monologue comedians and parody singers; the Millettes, a trio of wonderful acrobats; Wesson and Walters, in a laugh-provoking comedy sketch, this being its first time here; and Rae and Broesche, in a screamingly funny talking and singing specialty. As a special local feature, James A. Murphy and W. W. Bean will engage in contests, afternoon and evening, on bicycles mounted on cycle racing treadles, the same being geared for a minature track, on which two mechanical duplicates of the men are placed, sprinting for dear life, and showing how the contest stands at all stages of the race. Underlined for the week of Feb. 9 is Caroline Shepard, the noted oratorio singer.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.

This popular house will reopen on Monday, Feb. 2, with a brilliant musical comedy "The Little Host," with an all star cast of Boston favorites including Alexander Clark, John C. Slavin, J. K. Murray, Hugh Chilvers, Frank H. Nelson, Isabelle Underwood Clara Lane, Pauline Chase, Selma Mantell, Genevieve Reynolds, Emily Francis, Grace Spencer, and numerous, charming, well trained chorus. The characters are mostly Bohemiams of New York. Scenically the production will be of the highest order of merit. Many new songs will be introduced which are bound to make tremendous hits, while the chorus is the most beautiful that has ever been selected for a Columbian production.

Boston Music Hall.

In the run of successful plays this season none has met with any greater success than Marion Russell's story of heart interest, entitled, "The Little Church Around the Corner," which comes to Boston Music Hall next Monday for a single week's engagement. Everywhere this play has been presented this season it has drawn audiences which have crowded the theatres to the very doors. The plain simple tale unfolded as the play progresses, is one that should appeal to all classes of human nature. Miss Russell has struck the nail of public approval fairly on the head in her new play, and the play comes to Boston bearing the endorsement of press, public and clergy. "The Little Church Around the Corner" derives its title from the Church of the Transfiguration in New York City and the play deals with incidents more or less directly connected with that famous place of worship. The church itself has long been one of the many points of interest visited by sightseers in the great metropolis, and as an extra feature of the Tuesday, Thursday and Friday matinees next week the management has decided to present to every lady attending the matinee a splendid photograph of the Church of the Transfiguration. The Sunday night concerts continue to attract enormous audiences. The concert arranged for this Sunday evening will be given by a bill headed by the celebrated contralto, Jessie Bartlett Davis.

No Mistake.

Wife—Now, you won't forget, will you?

Husband—Oh, no; I've got it all straight—a spool of dress lining, half a pound of ribbon like the sample, a yard of white thread and three yards of sugar.—Chicago American.
